FIRST CHURCH, COUNCIL BLUFFS: The report for the observance of Rally Day in the Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. and the Second Anniversary of the Building Fund Campaign in the First Baptist Church of Council Bluffs, Iowa, showed an attendance of 370 in the Sunday School with $47.30 collection; $1,555.12 added to the Building Fund, making the total available in cash and bonds for that purpose over the $20,000 mark; fifty-four young people in the B. Y. P. U. In other words, every goal that had been set was excelled. As a climax to the day, there were buried with Christ in baptism, a young business man and his wife and a boy from the Junior Department in the Sunday School.

OHIO

Rev. Millard Brelsford, of the East Cleveland Church, entered on the third year of his second pastorate the first of May. The outlook is encouraging in every way. The church budget has been largely increased, and over $16,000 was raised last year on the New World Movement pledges. The church has adopted Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Latta, Thonze, Burma as its missionaries on the foreign field. In the Bible school emphasis is laid on grading and teacher training. During the past summer members of the teaching staff had special work in Western Reserve, Chautauqua and Syracuse University, and the church had the third largest delegation in the state at the Ohio Assembly at Granville. On Sept. 11 the morning service was in recognition of the young people going to college. The church has twenty members in eleven colleges. Denison leads the list with six and others are in Oberlin, Dartmouth, Case, Reserve, Ohio State, Lake Erie, Smith, Wellesley, Lafayette and Princeton.

The Evangelistic Campaign

The Committee on Evangelism of the Ohio Convention is planning a campaign to touch every church in the state with evangelistic meetings between November and Easter, and the outlook at the present time is most encouraging. The state is divided into four districts, each with a district superintendent, and these men will co-operate with Executive Secretary Chambers and the committee in carrying through the plans. Five conferences will be held; in Zanesville Oct. 4-5, Cleveland,

Oct. 13, Toledo, Oct. 21, Columbus, Oct. 31-Nov. 1, Dayton, Nov. 2-3. Dr. Stilwell, national superintendent of evangelism, will be present at each of these to assist in laying the plans and the pastors will work out arrangements for the meetings in the district. So far as possible pastors will assist other pastors in two weeks' meetings. The committee will pay their travelling expenses and provide a supply if needed for the Sunday they are away from their own pulpits.

In the plan we are centralizing on the South East District for simultaneous meetings in November. Reports at present indicate that forty or more meetings will be held during that time and pastors will be drawn from all parts of the state. Nearly all of the Granville men have volunteered their services to supply pulpits where pastors are away.

The details of the plan are being carefully worked out by Rev. C. H. Stull of Marietta, a member of the state committee. There is a splendid spirit of co-operation and great expectancy everywhere. Will Baptists in Ohio and everywhere join in earnest prayer that there may be a great outpouring of the Spirit on all our churches this winter. We are sure we are in accord with the will of God in planning this campaign. Let us go forward with confidence.—Millard Brelsford, chairman of the committee on evangelism.

Adams Association

The 100th annual session of this association was held August 26-28, with the Bush Creek Church, with the time-honored moderator, Rev. A. K. Murphy, in charge. The weather was ideal, the attendance large and the spirit of unity was fine. Some phase of every department of the Baptist work was profitably discussed, but evangelism took the lead. It is hoped that an evangelistic campaign may be put on in each church in the association.

The devotional half hour preceding each session gave a deep spiritual tone to the entire meeting.

A resolution, commending the Home Mission Board for accepting the $1,750,000 trust fund with "credal attachments," and urging the convention committee to recommend to the convention the policy of accepting all gifts and trust funds with credal attachments which are in harmony with the generally accepted doctrines of the Baptist, was offered and unanimously adopted.

This old association has sent out a number of fine workmen into the Master's vineyard, and has two young men in the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary this session. F. M. MYERS.

Doings in Cleveland

Cleveland pastors and their wives met at luncheon on Monday, September 19, to do honor to four of their number who are shortly to leave the city.

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. G. Evans have relinquished a very successful pastorate at the Trinity Baptist Church, to respond to a call to missionary work in Burma. Mr. Evans stirred the hearts of his brother ministers when he recounted the experiences through which he has recently passed, and which have led him to give up bright prospects in the homeland to go where he and Mrs. Evans now firmly believe God wants them. The Cleveland pastors and through them the churches will from this time on be more deeply interested in the establishment of the kingdom of God in that eastern land because a trusted brother and his wife have made great sacrifices in order to bear personal testimony to the saving power of Jesus Christ there. Mr. and Mrs. Evans sail early in the month for a brief visit to Mr. Evan's old home in Wales. From there they will take up their journey to arrive at their new home sometime early in December.

Dr. and Mrs. Bales were the other honored guests. Three years and a half ago Dr. Bales became the pastor of the Cedar Ave. Baptist Church at a time when its future seemed most doubtful. Now that it has become one of the strong churches of the city, and is looking forward to great undertakings, Dr. Bales finds himself unable to remain with the people to whom he has so endeared himself. Bronchial trouble has made it necessary for him to seek another climate, and he will become pastor of a leading church in Florida. His friends in Cleveland will follow his future work with great interest.

Dr. Stark, on the first Sunday of September entered upon the tenth year of his pastorate with the Glenville Baptist Church. In this decade he has with energy and success led the church, which owing to its peculiar position has had great difficulties to overcome. That his people recognize his fitness for his position was indicated upon his return from his vacation, which he spent in France, when at the opening of the communion service the chairman of his deacons board, in a tactful and firm way took charge of things. Under his direction the leaders of the several departments of the church came forward and with full hearts expressed to Dr. Stark their appreciation of what had been accomplished under his leadership, and pledged to him their devotion and service in the days to come. It is not often that a pastor receives so unanimous and heart-felt reception at the beginning of his tenth year.

Mr. George B. Enterline, who for some time has been district superintendent under the Ohio State Convention Board has accepted a position with the Cleveland Baptist Association as their missionary pastor. The first six months of his service is to be spent with the Immanuel Church in intensive work to find out the possibilities in that district.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

BREWER: Pastor Welsh and family spent the month of August at Rockland. During his absence the church maintained regular services. Rev. Gideon Mayo of Bangor, Rev. Arthur Armstrong of Bel-erica, Mass., Rev. Eugene Philbrook of Randolph, Mas., and Rev. R. B. Beatty of Waterville, Me., were the supplies.

OAKLAND: The pastorate of Rev. H. G. Kennedy is beginning under favorable auspices and with great mutual satisfaction. A Reception was given to Rev. and Mrs. Kennedy in the church on Tuesday evening. A fine musical program was rendered by choir and orchestra. The beautiful church, Sunday-school room and parlors had been finely decorated for the occasion. Appropriately, Rev. Benjamin Beatty who has been largely instrumental in bringing to pass the union of the two churches, was at the head of the receiving line. Secretary Mower brought the greetings of the State Convention and Dr. Whittemore spoke of the relations of the church to the world field. The church is well represented in missions for Rev. Vernele W. Dyer now in Burma is one of its members. Pastor Holman of the local Methodist church brought the greetings of the community. Pastor Kennedy responded in a way to indicate that the sound constructive work done by him at Houlton and Old Town will be continued at Oakland.

BRYANT POND: Rev. C. R. Upton who has rendered an important service at Bryant Pond retires from the active ministry. He will make his home at Goodwins Mills and will be available as pulpit supply for pastorless churches. His ministry has been one of great sincerity and faithfulness and will be permanently fruitful.

REV. F. S. LEATHERS, moved from Billerica, Mass. to Bowdoinham, Me., for rest. He found the Baptist church at the latter place pastorless, almost hopeless and with its house closed. He called the remnant together for services the second Sunday in July with eighteen persons responding. The first Sunday in September ninety-five were present at the morning service, and 125 in the evening. The church has requested Mr. Leathers to remain on the field.

VERMONT

THE ANNUAL CONFERENCE and school of methods for the ministers and missionaries and members of boards was held at Saxton's River in the Vermont Academy buildings September 5 to 7 inclusive. There were about 125 persons present, and all declared the addresses the most inspiring and helpful ever. Resolutions were adopted thanking the state convention board and the speakers for the help received. The report of the committee on findings set 1000 additions by baptism to the churches of the convention this year as the goal, and recommended that special effort be made to collect all pledges to the New World Movement and to secure a pledge from every member of a Baptist church and congregation who has not already pledged. The churches were urged to take up the study of missions in a larger way than ever before, and to have a graded school of missions for five or six Sundays during the year. The conference also approved the establishment of a summer school for religious education at Saxtons River in connection with Vermont Academy, providing the matter can be worked out satisfactorily by the convention board.

VERMONT ACADEMY opened September 12. Already 128 students are enrolled. Vermont Academy was founded in 1876 and ran for forty years, securing an enviable position among the educational institutions of the country. The school has been closed for the past five years, and now opens under entirely new management and with a splendid outlook for the future. Men and women of three generations returned for Old Home Week September 16, 17 and 18 and to celebrate the rebirth of Vermont Academy. All the buildings have been thoroughly overhauled and put in first-class condition—

What Christian Science Means
And What We Can Learn From It
BY
JAMES M. CAMPBELL
Its short chapters will appeal to the busy man and woman of the hour.
NET, $1.25, POSTPAID
THE ABINGDON PRESS
New York Cincinnati

A DICTIONARY OF RELIGION AND ETHICS
ONE VOLUME
Edited by Shailer Mathews and Gerald Birney Smith with the cooperation of a large number of specialists.
All words of importance in the field of religion and ethics are defined. Contains in compact form the results of modern study in the psychology of religion, the history of religions, the present status of religious life in America, Europe and the most important mission fields and the important phases of Christian belief and practice.
This volume is intended primarily for ministers, Sunday-school teachers and general readers who are interested in religion, not as technical students, but as those who wish to acquire accurate and compact information of the latest developments of study in the field. It will be an especially useful reference book for public and Sunday-school libraries, $8.00. Send for Circular.
Mrs. S. S. Teacher: See that Mr. Superintendent purchases this book for your school's Teacher library.
RELIGION AND BUSINESS
BY ROGER W. BABSON
Eighth Printing
Why not do as many parishes are doing, buy ten or more copies so that your whole congregation may be influenced by this stirring message? $1.50.
SELF-HELP IN TEACHING
BY HUBER W. HURT
A concise, analytical manual of self-help for teachers in public, private and parochial schools; for those engaged in teaching work in Sunday-Schools, Boy Scouts and other Young Peoples' organizations. $1.00.
WHAT AND WHERE IS GOD
BY RICHARD L. SWAIN
Seventh Printing
Every church heard from that has formed a group of ten or twenty or more adults for the study of "What and Where is God" is enthusiastic over the result. $1.50.
SUNDAY TALKS TO TEACHERS
BY HELEN WODEHOUSE
A book for folks who have spells of feeling that what they are doing does not count. There's real tonic in the way Miss Wodehouse deals with the dust and heat and drawbacks of the day's work and life. $1.00
ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER
Brown: The Religion of a Layman—Second Printing. Originally $1.25.....Now $.75
Cadman: Ambassadors of God—Fourth Printing. Originally $3.50.....Now 2.50
Pratt: The Religious Consciousness—Third Printing. Originally $4.00.....Now 2.50
Tracy: The Psychology of Adolescence—Second Printing. Originally $3.00.....Now 2.50
Swin: What and Where is God—Seventh Printing. Originally $1.50.....Now 1.50
Babson: Religion and Business—Eighth Printing. Originally $2.75.....Now 1.50
Abbott: What Christianity Means to Me.....1.75
Streeter: Message of Sachu Sundar Singh.....1.75
Higginbottom: The Gospel and the Plow.....1.25
Berry: From Genesis to Revelation.....2.25
THE MACMILLAN COMPANY
64-66 Fifth Avenue
New York City, N. Y.

even better than when the buildings were erected. Every room in the dormitories has a hard wood floor, a ventilator to carry off the dead air, and electric lights. A new water system, sewerage system, electric light system and central heating plant have been installed at an expense of about $90,000. A new and beautiful memorial window has been placed in the chapel by Leon S. Olin D. and Vernice Gay, all graduates of the academy, in honor of their father, Joseph Stearns Gay, long since gone to his reward, as a memorial to those who fought for peace during the recent war. Principal Raymond McFarland, a Christian gentleman of experience and ability, heads the faculty: with him are associated men and women of character, experience and ability, who are determined to fit young men and women for true life as well as for college.

REV. RALPH M. JONES, pastor of the First Church, Chester, since 1906, has tendered his resignation in order to accept a call to a church in Illinois. The church at first refused to accept Mr. Jones' resignation. However, at a meeting on September 11, after he stated that he was unable to reverse his judgment, which had already been well considered and carefully matured, to finish his work September 30, the church voted to accept the resignation and adopted resolutions commending Pastor and Mrs. Jones for their unblemished Christian character and Mr. Jones for his ability as a preacher and pastor. Mr. Jones has done splendid work, receiving an unusually large number into the church, and making for himself a place in the entire community.

RANDOLPH CHURCH, Rev. Frank S. Tolman, Ph.D., pastor, rejoices in that two of the young ladies Miss Eva M. Alden and Miss Laura C. Douglass—are going to prepare themselves for Christian service. Miss Alden will enter Gordon Bible College and Miss Douglass Boston University School of Religious Education. On Friday evening, September 9, a service was held in their honor, at which time Pastor Tolman, Pastor Moore of the Methodist Episcopal Church and Pastor Metzger of the Congregational Church spoke and others took part by singing. Light refreshments were served.

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise

Write for Booklet Z.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

Oriental goods to sell at bazaars, fairs, etc., sent anywhere. No investment necessary. Send for circular telling how to secure a fascinating assortment for your next money-raising undertaking. Vroom & Company, 14 West Twentieth Street, New York.

I have been in the West eight years and wish to change east or southeast. Will furnish references. Address W., c/o THE BAPTIST.

CONNECTICUT

THE ONE HUNDRED THIRTY-SECOND ANNUAL MEETING of the Hartford Association was held in the First Church, New Britain, September 20. Rev. Henry D. Coe, Bristol, and Dr. T. A. Varnador, West Hartford, conducted devotions. Rev. Frank B. Haggard, Hartford, preached the annual sermon. It was a strong plea for the church to recognize her mission. Miss Anna Prince spoke on her work in Burma. Rev. Wm. T. Thayer, Hartford, presented the "Educational Task" of the church in a convincing manner; "The Stewardship that Christ Demands" was forcefully set forth by Dr. H. J. White, Hartford. Dr. Hugh A. Heath, New York, in a heart searching address told how the New World Movement had gripped the hearts of men and women East and West. The evangelistic sermon was delivered by Rev. James McGee, New Haven. It was a fitting climax of a most interesting program calling for a rededication of life to the task of winning the world to Christ.

RHODE ISLAND

THE CROWNING EVENT of an herculean task took place Sunday, September 25, at Stewart St. Church. The vestry has undergone a complete transformation through the united effort of the beloved pastor, Rev. Hugh B. Carpenter, the superintendent of the Bible school, F. W. Morse and his band of workers. The church towers have also been repaired and the outside of the edifice re-painted, all at an outlay of over $2631. These figures in no way represent the faith and labor that made the raising of this amount possible in three months.

The program included appropriate ceremonies attending the unveiling of an honor roll, bearing the names of many departed saints of the church in whose memory gifts were made. Following an address by Miss Jeanie Short of the Dean St. Italian Mission, the exercises closed with each class presenting its slogan for the coming season.

DEACON T. W. WATERMAN completed forty-three years of continuous service as superintendent of the Calvary Baptist Sunday school, the largest Bible school in the state. Those who took part were Dr. W. H. P. Faunce, president of Brown University; Dr. E. P. Farnham of New York, Dr. Edward Holyoké, pastor of the Church; Rev. M. E. Bratcher, Ph.D., associate pastor; Mr. Waterman and Mr. Edward S. Donle the new superintendent. Mr. Waterman has rendered conspicuous service and has been identified with international and state Sunday-school work. A large portrait of Mr. Waterman was presented to him with a suitable inscription which will be placed in the chapel of the church.

SECOND CHURCH, East Providence, with the other Sunday schools of the town, has inaugurated a school of religious education for the entire community to meet one evening a week for the study of the Bible and for the training of teachers. The work of the church is progressing under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. Frederick L. Cleveland.

REV. S. L. NEIL, of the Publication Society, preached October 2, at the Second Church, East Providence, in the morning, and at the Roger Williams Church on Sunday evening. At the latter church he delivered his lecture on Scotland on Monday evening.

REV. J. DE SOUZA has completed a program for the Portuguese people which will include preaching services, prayer meetings, classes in English and industrial schools under the leadership of Miss Viola Olson at Union Church, Providence, and First Church, Pawtucket.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

TARENTUM CHURCH, Rev. L. F. Taylor, pastor, is making earnest preparations for an evangelistic campaign to begin early in November.

REV. CHARLES A. DECKER, pastor of the Bellevue Church, reports that the first evening of the mission study course on "The Faiths of Mankind," conducted by Rev. Z. D. Brown, was attended by sixty-one.

MONESSEN CHURCH gave a formal reception to its new pastor, Rev. W. W. Anderson, and wife, Friday evening, September 16.

REV. W. P. WHEELER, SALTSBURG, closed a happy and successful pastorate with the church, Sunday, September 28th.

THE PERMANENT COUNCIL of the Pittsburgh Baptist Association was in session Monday and Tuesday, September 19th and 20th, at the Sandusky Street Baptist church and an extended statement by Mr. Galpin for Pittsburgh, to review its course in relation to its former pastor, Rev. Frederick Tower Galpin. The church upon his confession of immorality, first before three members, secondly before five and, thirdly, before twelve officials and members, on which occasions full opportunity had been given Mr. Galpin for defense thereby, according to the belief of the church, satisfying every demand of justice and its own by-laws, had accepted his resignation and later unanimously cancelled his membership. After hearing both the official record of the church and an extended statement by Mr. Galpin, and following earnest and prolonged discussion, the Council voted to approve the action of the church in the following resolution: "Believing in the integrity and the judgment of the First Baptist Church of Pittsburgh which led to the severance of the relation between themselves and their former pastor, Rev. Frederick Tower Galpin, D. D., and their withdrawal of the hand of fellowship from him; but, in regard to the withdrawal of the hand of fellowship, they should have notified him of their intended action, in accordance with Article IX, Section 3, of their by-laws."

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE FOURTEENTH ANNUAL meeting of the Pennsylvania Baptist General Convention will be held in Franklin, October 17-20, 1921. The sessions will be held in the spacious edifice of the First Church, whose pastor is Robert M. Green, D. D. Entertainment will be accorded to all who present properly certified credentials. Copies of the program will be mailed to all the churches in the state within a few days, and with the programs will be found the necessary credentials. If additional blanks are needed, write, enclosing two-cent stamp for reply, to C. A. Soars, D. D., executive secretary, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, or to Rev. Chas. A. Walker, Recording Secretary, 314 West Union St., West Chester. Don't forget your credentials.

Abingdon Association

Abington Association, held at Carbondale September 20-22 was one of the best in its history. Interest and enthusiasm ran high. The attendance was good. The sermons and addresses of the highest order. Rev. G. M. Reid, First Church, Scranton, was elected Moderator, and Rev. James H. Carter, Jermy, was elected Clerk.

An optimistic note ran through all the letters: churches reporting double the baptisms over the previous year, special services being held in most of the churches during the year. Every pastor was present.

Not a discordant note was sounded. Associational Missionary Rev. C. Mason Jones was retained. The program adopted at the Northern Baptist Convention in Des Moines was endorsed. Resolutions committee urged the members of the churches to give full consideration to THE BAPTIST and Missions, as the official papers of our denomination. Evangelistic committee is working in harmony with the superintendent of evangelism of the state for this coming year, and evangelistic services to be held in every church, no matter how small, are being planned.

JAMES H. CARTER, Clerk.

Boston Letter

By CHARLES H. WATSON

Fall Openings

Not only the milliners and the modistes but the schools, churches, associations and conferences have "fall openings." They are sometimes called by other names, but they are displays—in the one case of goods, and in the other of tasks and opportunities. Both are to be expected at this season, and both are sure of their own interested clientele.

The stirring of the schools is impressive. Harvard, Boston University and the other big colleges open with record classes. Newton enters the largest class in its history, and there is distinct enthusiasm over its quality. It is a nationally representative body—quite a promising group of men from the South, and from the Maritime Provinces of course, while both East and West will also meet on Newton Hill. There is a large and wholesome fitness in this; for the broadening of a provincial accent, or the enrichment of a local color, by bringing into contact the wide apart sections of our big country, becomes an invaluable element in the training of Christian leaders. And this is Newton's specialty.

Associations and Churches

The associations are becoming more practical in their preparation and performance. They are more impatient of mere time-marking, and gradually are getting clear from old ruts. The former moulds that included conventional, and almost age-long features, are being broken, and clear-cut and urgent modern procedures in Christian enterprise are pushing into the programs. If the new departure will win to the assemblies that element in the churches that wants worth while results, and is ready to work for them, the association meeting will change from a contemplative gathering to one that is all alive. We are heading in that direction.

Easily first comes that of the ministers because it meets every week, and supplies a perennial opportunity for the brotherly touch and the larger inspiration. October 1 we indulge in a new president, no matter how charming the old one may have been. The new one is Pastor Frederick E. Heath, the veteran of Jamaica Plains. Past President W. H. Dyas of Somerville, in his closing word, spoke warmly of our democracy, not only in our fellowship, but presidentially as well. We seem not to be dazzled by new luminaries, but choose to honor our steady veterans; always we have one in the high chair.

September Meetings

We have had three good ones—unusual in fellowship, and in the charifying quality. First came the limbering up just after vacation, in which the best of the summer got into the meeting and sweetened us all up for the opening work.

Then came Dr. Raphael C. Thomas, our good medical missionary in the Philippines; son of Dr. Jesse B. Thomas. Some of us older fellows seemed to be hearing his father and his mother, as well as himself. But he was so completely himself, and so full of his work, that we soon forgot everything else. He made you feel that you had been following him around as he blessed the people, and as the people blessed him. The last meeting took us to Des Moines. Secretary Dolan, Dr. Vaughan, and Dr. Cummings, all of them in the sweetest vein imaginable, proved to us how men could differ and yet be all the more Christian and the more illuminating.

Arthur L. Snell

The sudden passing of Mr. Snell brought surprise to many, since he seemed in good health, and was only a little beyond his prime in length of years. Mr. Snell was a Lawrence boy, his father being a deacon in the old Second Church. Both sons were Baptist ministers, and men with the full training of Harvard and Newton. Perhaps Arthur L.'s chief service was rendered in three pastorates in Massachusetts—the first of three years at Foxboro, the second of ten years at West Somerville, and the third of ten years at Fitchburg. He was seven years the secretary at New York of our Foreign Society, and was at the time of his death, pastor at Dover, N. H., where he had served since 1918.

He had all the marks of a thoroughly consecrated and cultivated Christian gentleman, just such a minister as people respect and look up to. He was strong and solidly competent in every position that he held, and won good success. There was much of the old fashioned urbanity about him, making him especially considerate and courteous. He had all the qualities that wear.

A Rare Semi-Centennial

Very properly it was celebrated by an organ recital in the First Church, Arlington, Mass., on the afternoon of Sept. 25. It marked the fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of Deacon William E. Wood's service as organist, a service that has been unusually noteworthy, continuing with but slight interruptions, through the pastorates of Drs. Harris, Spalding, Watson, Wood and Potter. Deacon Wood was in his early youth a favorite pupil of the celebrated S. B. Whitney, and has long been one of the most accomplished organists in the metropolitan district. Always has he insisted that his service must be a labor of love, and always has this consecrated musician enriched the church life. One incident tells the story better than an argument could tell it. When the former meeting-house with its noble organ was destroyed by fire, during the long interim of building the present stone church, to keep himself in practice, he took the organ in a leading Somerville church, and turned in his salary to the church building fund in Arlington. Being a successful manufacturer he could do this, and be a generous giver besides. What wonder that at the recital the church should be filled with appreciative friends from all the churches who call him "the beloved organist!"

Making a Much Needed Correction

Your Boston correspondent is glad to straighten out a crooked paragraph in the last Boston letter. It is that about "the Inspiring Unitarian Leader." The writer got middle initials confused, and was mistaken in his "leader." He was told by those who were supposed to know, that Dr. Charles A. Strong, the psychologist, was the president of the Unitarian League. When the paragraph was in print, some doubted, then the writer sought to verify it as he should have done before writing it. He found that the League leader was Dr. Charles H. Strong, a prominent New York lawyer. Such slips bring regrets and ample apologies. Yet what's the harm mistakenly to rejoice when you think a former Baptist inspired the men of another faith to good works? "He that is not against us is on our part."

"The best book we have as yet on how to teach the child religion until he is of age to follow the way of Christ as a thing of course."—THE OUTLOOK.

HOW TO TEACH RELIGION

PRINCIPLES and METHODS

By GEORGE HERBERT BETTS, Ph. D.

Professor of Religious Education, University of Southern California

"It sounds a new note in religious education."—ANGLICAN THEOLOGICAL REVIEW.

"Fresh, vigorous, concrete in treatment, sound in principle."

—JOURNAL OF EDUCATIONAL RESEARCH.

"It is nothing short of a revelation; it is nothing short of a revolution."

—EXPOSITORY TIMES.

Price, net, $1.25; by mail, $1.35

Write for the Abingdon Bulletin of Religious Education

THE ABINGDON PRESS

NEW YORK

CINCINNATI

REVELL'S
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS
BOOKS

Latest Issues

AT YOUR BOOKSELLER'S

ROGER W. BABSON

Pres. Babson's Statistical Organization

Making Good in Business

The famous Business Expert here applies a fundamental knowledge of business principles to daily business life. The latest work by the author of "Fundamentals of Prosperity" is crammed with the most valuable sort of hints and suggestions for the attainment of a well-balanced, normal, successful, business career. $1.25

CHARLES M. SHELDON

In His Steps Today

What Would Jesus Do Regarding the Problems of the Hour?

"Read with eager interest. It will awaken many follow-Christians to see new fields in which to apply all the Christianity there is."—Chicago Record-Herald. $1.25

OZORA S. DAVIS, D.D.

President Chicago Theological Seminary

Evangelistic Preaching

Both Method and Message

"The best help on this important subject that we have ever seen. Sets forth with skill and completeness the method of evangelism that best appeals to the men and women of the present day."—C. E. World. $1.50

WILLIAM E. BIEDERWOLF, D.D.

Evangelism

Its Justification, Its Operation and Its Value

"It is a text-book and a call. Every chapter is full of value. It tells how to give the invitation and how to conduct the after-meeting. It is a book for every one who is interested in doing evangelistic work."—Herald and Presbyter. Net. $1.75

W. L. WATKINSON, D.D.

The Shepherd of the Sea

Introduction by S. Parkes Cadman, D.D.

"There is an amazing reaction of spiritual and intellectual uplift emanating from these discourses. They overflow with an inveterate optimism, and one comes from the reading of them 'like a giant refreshed'."—Christian Advocate. Net. $1.75

W. RUSSELL BOWIE, D.D.

Sunny Windows

"Five Minute Talks" to Children

"The advantage of this book lies in the fact that the preacher has had unusual success in his ministry with the children in which he has made use of all the materials here accumulated."—Christian Advocate. $1.25

MARGARET E. SANGSTER

The Island of Faith

"A girl's story and one that can safely be put into the hands of awakening womanhood, since it will not only give them the romance girls crave, but will show them what one girl's fine, high visions did for humanity."—Examiner. Illustrated $1.25

FLEMING H. REVELL COMPANY
New York, 158 Fifth Ave.; Chicago 17 N. Wabash Ave.

Exchange and Service Department

PASTOR AVAILABLE

PASTOR who has been in the West eight years wishes to change to the East or Southeast. Will furnish references. Address W., Care of THE BAPTIST.

STATED SUPPLY

REV. A. W. FULLER, who has been pastor of the church at Benson, Ill., is retiring from the pastorate. He will make his home in El Paso in the same state and will be free to preach for churches for shorter or longer periods as there may be opportunity.

EVANGELIST

REV. HAROLD STRATHEARN, evangelist, who has just returned from England, will be free to preach for churches for who are needing the kind of service he renders. His address is Elmhurst, Pa.

NEWSPAPER MAN

THERE IS A GOOD OPENING in Spencer, S. Dak., for a Baptist newspaper man. The plant must be sold on account of the death of the proprietor. The plant is modern and well-equipped for doing regular newspaper and job work. Spencer is a live South Dakota town of between 700 and 800, situated in a splendid farming section. Write Rev. J. O. Parrott, Spencer, S. D.

Books Received.

Missionary Stories for Little Folks; two volumes, First Series, Primary, Second Series, Junior; by Margaret T. Applegarth; George H. Doran Co., New York; each $1.75 net.

Miriam of Queens, by Lillian Vaughn McKimmon; George H. Doran, New York; 310 pages; $1.90 net.

Jess of the Rebel Trail, by H. A. Cody; George H. Doran, New York; 377 pages; $1.90. net.

Snowden's Sunday School Lessons for 1922, by James H. Snowden; the Macmillan Co., New York; $1.50.

Why I am a Baptist, by Wilder W. Perry; American Baptist Publication Society; paper, 25 pages; ten cents.

Jewish Activities in the United States; Dearborn Publishing Co., Dearborn, Mich.; paper, 255 pages.

The King's Trumpet, by Jasper Seaton Hughes; published by the author, Holland, Mich.; paper, 124 pages.

(What we think of these publications will appear in later issues of THE BAPTIST.)

A Blue Wash Day

(Continued from page 1149)

she comes back! She's what father calls 'efficient.' She's does all these things just as easy; and we took it for granted."

"We never will again," I said; "I'm going to thank her for every littlest ruffle she irons! A Wash Lady's life must be awfully full of ungrateful people."

Timothy spoke up softly: "I think I'll never slide on the kind of green gwass that comes off on me. She's an awfully nice friend, Mrs. O'Gwady is!"

And that night Timothy prayed: "O God, make Mrs. O'Gwady's ankle feel well soon."

And I took her a glass of jelly and some zinnias from our garden. For we miss her dreadfully.

Stand With the President

Following the meeting of the Administrative Committee, and the passing of its resolutions regarding Northern Baptist plans for Armistice Day, Dr. John Y. Aitchison communicated with President Harding, assuring him that the denomination is in deep accord with the desire for world peace, and telling him of the extensive Baptist program planned for November 11. The President's answer expressed his grateful appreciation of the action taken by the Administrative Committee.

MOVIES IN THE CHURCH

Think of illustrating the stories of the Bible in true life-like action—making a forceful appeal to man, woman and child at the same time. Think of the occasional showing of selected dramas in the church hall.

This is made possible by the purchase of a

De Vry Portable Motion Picture Projector

which can be attached to any electric light socket, operated on either A.C. or D.C. current. The DeVry takes any standard size film, throws a picture up to 9x12 feet, and is so light (weighs but 20 lbs) it can be carried anywhere.

With your purchase of a DeVry we furnish full information on films, how and where to obtain them.

Write today for catalog and full information on how others are using motion pictures in the church.

The DeVry Corporation

1231 Marianna St.,

CHICAGO, ILL.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

DO LITERARY MEN LIKE MUSIC?

"John o' London's Weekly," an English journal, recently amused itself and its readers by asking a number of leading English literary lights if and how they liked music. The replies were interesting—and illuminative. Joseph Conrad tells us he loves music "without knowledge, but with a great and profound emotion." G. K. Chesterton's attitude recalls that of Doctor Johnson. He is so ignorant of music he does not even mind it. Masfield, laconic, answers in four words: "Yes, I love music." H. G. Wells, the historian of the world, replied: "I like classical and some modern music very much—but not to the extent of going to the opera. Music has to come to me, and I don't want more of it than an hour at a time. Subject to these limitations, it delights and pleases and refreshes me." Galsworthy, after saying, "Affected by music? I should just think so!" adds, in the course of his confession, "I know not in the least why I can't bear Wagner and love the 'Songs of the Hebrides,' Gluck's 'Orfeo,' Cesar Franck's violin sonata or Ravel's 'Pavane,' or why I dislike Meyerbeer and love 'Carmen,' or why I should listen with equal rapture to Chopin and the Matthew 'Passion.'" W. W. Jacobs has a partiality for military bands, piano-organs, and the bagpipes. A humorist, even when in earnest, this Jacobs! The most intelligent reply came from Walpole, the novelist: "Music, literature and painting are so closely allied that it is always wonderful to me when an artist in one of the three can't appreciate the other two. I enjoy music immensely but I would always read a good book before I would go to a good concert. But there are more good concerts than there are good books!"

MUSIC REVIEWS

From the White-Smith Music Co., Boston, Mass.

O'er Flowery Meads (Berceuse)
.....M. Austin Dunn ($0.60)

An appealing simple organ number, likely to prove very serviceable for routine use, or for a relaxation selection on a recital program. Players whose instrument boasts the presence of chimes will welcome this short interlude, since the middle section has an optional chime obligato.

From the A. P. Schmidt Co., Boston, Mass.

The City of God.....Jones ($0.12)
Lift Up Your Heads..Wright ($0.12)
Bless the Lord, O My Soul
.....Lynes ($0.12)
I Will Pray the Father
.....Hollaway ($0.12)
Souls of the Righteous
.....Ambrose ($0.12)
O Holy, Holy Lord...Harris ($0.12)
Father, Hear the Prayer We Offer.....Scott ($0.12)

The choir-leader interested in preparing a repertoire of the best among the new sacred music issued this season will do well to carefully examine this sheaf of new anthems sent out by the Schmidt firm. Without exception the entire list can be thoroughly commended as practical, well-written, sincerely-phrased sacred music of the better type. The particular type of anthems listed can be gauged from the title—extended comment is not necessary; for no publishing house has a higher standard to which all publications must adhere than this fine Boston firm. Incidentally, the new Fall announcement, listing new anthems and choruses, recent issues of organ numbers, sacred solos and duets, is well worth sending for and filing in the choir library.

From the Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago, Ill.

My Savior, Source of All My Joys.....Otis ($0.15)

An unusually well-constructed anthem for mixed voices, with most effective incidental solos for all four voices; the music is individual and appealing, with some interesting bits to be done with voices alone. The organ part is, for the most part, free, most delightfully elaborating the voice parts. Altogether a finely conceived and successfully achieved piece of sacred music which should find a place in every choir library. Mr. Otis is a musical amateur living in Chicago, where he fills many positions of authority and responsibility in a musical way; his writings are always conceived on a high plane and so written.

A CREDIT OMISSION

The very interesting article printed in the issue of Sept. 17th, dealing with the music of the First Baptist Church of Syracuse, N. Y., should have been credited to The Diapason, that splendid magazine for all interested in music for the church. By some fell accident the credit line was left off the article, and the fact that it was a reprinted article, originally written by Rollo F. Maitland for The Diapason, was obscured. We are glad in this way to rectify this oversight. And are also glad of the opportunity to bring this fine journal to the notice of the constituency of this paper. The annual subscription rate is only one dollar, it is issued monthly and it is full of interest and value to all, professional or amateur, singer, organist, or listener. A more extended reading of such a valuable paper would aid greatly in creating a deeper appreciation and knowledge of music in connection with the church service. Incidentally, the magazine is the official organ of The National Association of Organists, and of the Organ Builders' Association, which fact serves to show its importance.

ITEMS OF INTEREST

On June 26th at the Tabernacle Baptist Church, Utica, New York, "The Creation," by Joseph Haydn was given under the conductorship of Homer P. Whitford.

• • •

The North Shore Festival Association of Chicago has offered a prize of $1000 for a symphonic work, open to composers of American citizenship, either native or naturalized. The prize-winning score will be performed at the festival next June, while five of the best works submitted will be tried out in public rehearsal and one of them, not necessarily the prize work, will be chosen by Frederick Stock for the popular concerts of the Chicago Orchestra.

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

OFFERS accredited work in Freshman and Sophomore College, Academy, Business, Religious Education, Normal and Music subjects. Christian atmosphere. The best instruction. Write for catalog and free scholarship offers. The ideal school for Baptist young people.
Victor Y. Craig, Acting Pres., Osage, Iowa

"A SCHOOL THAT CARES" THE COOK ACADEMY

MONTOUR FALLS, N. Y.
Only Baptist Preparatory School in State.
Christian Men Teachers.

In addition to the Academic Courses, The Cook Academy offers a four-year course in Voice, Piano, Violin, and Commercial branches. Bible is taught two hours a week for the four years. There are fine athletics under Christian coaching.
BERT C. CATE, Principal.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMoulin Bros. & Co., Dept. 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

THE DEMAND FOR CHRIST

By

BISHOP JAMES W. BASHFORD

These addresses discuss subjects that lie at the throbbing center of the world's life and hope.

NET, $1.50, POSTPAID

THE ABINGDON PRESS

New York

Cincinnati

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.
Electric Organ blowing outfit for organs of any make. Write, stating which catalog is desired.
Hinnners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

"The Only Way Out of the Dark"

An exercise especially prepared for the use of Churches and Sunday Schools in observance of Universal Bible Sunday

November 27, 1921

Free Copies Sent on Request

AMERICAN BIBLE SOCIETY
BIBLE HOUSE - ASTOR PLACE
New York City

"Buy from Your Own House"

Eight New Books of Distinction

Modern Money Methods for the Church

By FREDERICK A. AGAR

The object of the author is to suggest ways whereby the local church may be delivered from unwise financial methods, and to outline a plan adapted to provide adequate financial resources for both the local and the wider Christian enterprise. "Giving is not a matter of legislation, but of life." "Living and giving in a spiritual sense are synonymous." These two quotations show the atmosphere of this eminently practical book. $1.00 net

By-Paths to Forgotten Folks

By COE HAYNE

Mr. Hayne has not taken cross sections of fact, he has transplanted it alive. His stories of home mission work bring us into immediate contact with the living factors of human interest. It is as if we visited the homes of Indians, Alaskans, Nicaraguans, ranchmen, and foreign-speaking people, and made personal acquaintance with them and with the men and women who are the hand and the tongue of Christian concern for them. $1.25 net

The World Lighted

A Study of the Apocalypse
By CHARLES ED. SMITH, D.D.

A discussion characterized by great commonsense and striking insight. The interpretation is historical and yet it is broader than the historical. It is free from offensive literalism. The author steers remarkably clear of the absurd mixture of literalism and symbolism. Altogether it is the most rational interpretation that has yet appeared. In fact, it ought to be an epochal book in the study of the Apocalypse. $1.00 net

The Dutch Anabaptists

The Stone Lectures, 1918-1919
By HENRY ELIAS DOSKER

Professor Dosker has availed himself of the first-hand information concerning the Anabaptists of Holland contained in the scattered fragments of their own writings which survived the fires of the Inquisition. The origin of the Anabaptists, the stories of the radical and the conservative wings of their movement, their theology, internal conditions and views of life among them, and their later history, are all amply set forth in a narrative that teems with elements of thrilling human interest. $2.00 net

The Withered Fig Tree

Studies in Stewardship

By EDWIN M. POTEAT

The author's purpose is to make clear the fundamental principles underlying the Stewardship movement and to furnish a basis for the organization of local leagues or groups of Christian stewards. Authentic personal testimonies reinforce the argument. The book is arranged for the use of classes, questions that will stimulate discussion and afford themes for debate being attached to each chapter. $1.00 net

The Use of Projects in Religious Education

By GERTRUDE HARTLEY

A manual for parents and teachers of children and young people. Shows how to make religious education interesting by utilizing commonplace things in teaching. Tells how to vitalize handwork and memory work. It presents tested methods and illustrations of actual work by boys and girls in the Sunday school. $1.00 net

Planning Church Buildings

By HENRY EDWARD TRALLE, M.A., Th.D., and
GEORGE E. MERRILL, A. I. A.

A book that is original and constructive. Shows how to plan for the adequate housing of a modern church program. Shows how to build beautifully and economically. Shows how to build for preaching, for worship, for teaching, for recreation, and for evangelism. Shows how to build for a small church or a large church. Shows how to remodel an old building. Illustrated with architect's plans. $1.25 net

Principles of Christian Service

By HENRY F. COPE

A text-book in the Standard Course in Teacher training, outlined and approved by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations.

A unit in the third-year specialization series issued by the Teacher Training Publishing Association, intended for use in the Adult Department. It presents in vigorous readable style a program of Christian service by adults, together with the reasons for the features of service described. 60 cents net

THE greatness of a book has two makers, the author and the reader. Without readers Shakespeare is dead. The masters of the art of telling need the response of the hearing, reading public. We advertise books that readers may fulfill their part in the great work of making books worth while.

Gilbert W. Brink
General Secretary

SEND FOR OUR TWO NEW CATALOGS

"The Church and Sunday School Builder" (Church and Sunday School Supplies)

"Selected Books, Catalog and Holiday Bulletin" (Books and Holiday Goods)

Established 1824

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
(THE JUDSON PRESS)

Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Seattle, Toronto

"Use BAPTIST Lesson Helps"

"Order from Our Nearest Branch"

6.05
AD
Volume II

October 15, 1921

UNIVERSITY Number 37

OCT 15 1921

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

MICHELANGELO'S name is forever associated with the majestic dome of St. Peter's in Rome, which he planned, but which was completed after his death. It is here seen in the distance as one looks across the Tiber. Tradition says that Peter the Apostle was beheaded on the spot beneath the center of the dome.

Fresh from the Field

Rev. F. W. Steadman, our evangelistic missionary at Fukuin Maru, Japan, now in this country on sick leave, was a visitor to the headquarters of the General Board of Promotion on Tuesday, Sept. 27. We are glad to announce that he has improved in health and is looking forward enthusiastically to his return to Japan. He will be stationed at Morioka in the northern part of Japan upon his arrival there as physicians have advised against his living in the warmer section of that country.

A letter has been sent to the pastors of the Northern Baptist Convention, calling their attention to the plan to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." Enclosed with the letter is a pamphlet giving full directions as to what and where and when to send. A shipping tag has also been included. If additional shipping tags are required, the state promotion directors will be prepared to furnish them on request.

The First Church, Cambridge, Mass., Rev. Wm. D. Goble, pastor, will be glad to have parents and friends of students who are coming to Cambridge to study notify the pastor if in any way the church may be of service to these young men and women. Address Mr. Goble at 16 Ellery Street, Cambridge, Mass.

Rev. E. A. Gilmore, pastor of the First Church, Aberdeen, S. D., has accepted the call of the Windsor Park Church, Chicago. He will begin his pastorate this month.

Rev. Brewer G. Boardman, owing to the death of his wife and the removal of his son to Greeley, Colo., where he is to be professor of English in the State Teachers' College, is now on his way to Greeley where he will henceforth make his home. It is not his desire to settle again over a church but he will be available as a supply or as acting-pastor in the intervals between pastorates. Mr. Boardman has held pastorates in Waverly, Cooperstown and Geneva, N. Y., and in Newport, R. I., besides other places in the East. Dr. Alvah S. Hobart, who was his classmate in Colgate, warmly commends him to the confidence of the Colorado brethren, as does also Dr. R. N. Van Doren, of Chicago, another classmate, who says of him, "He is a right royal man and fine brother minister." We are sure that there will be much service in Colorado awaiting a man of the fine spirit and Christian character of Mr. Boardman.

Dr. Nehemiah Boynton, of Brooklyn, N. Y., has been presiding recently at the Geneva Conference of the World Alliance for the Promotion of International Friendship through the Churches. A short time before leaving America for Europe he took part in the Massachusetts C. E. Conference at Northfield, and was amused to see on the bulletin board one evening this announcement, prominently displayed:

REV. NEHEMIAH BOYNTON, D. D.
7:45 Sage Chapel.

Bonfire after this service.

Cleanliness will be not only next to godliness but also a nearer next than usual, a Siamese twin sort of next, on the approaching "Soap Sunday" at the Calvary Baptist Church in Hackensack, N. J. In its efforts to help "Fill a ship in fellowship" this church, reports Miss Helen Hudson, heading the White Cross work, will have a "Soap Sunday," a "Toy Sunday," and a "Clothing Sunday."

Miss Lydia Huber of Rio Piedras, Porto Rico, declares that she has a truly exemplary Sunday school class there, under the auspices of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, and challenges anyone to beat the record of the five girls who compose it. Not only did these five girls not miss a Sunday all year long in their attendance in Miss Huber's Junior department Sunday school class, but to win their record they gave up their two months' vacation out of town, because it would take them away from the class. Now who can improve upon that, demands Miss Huber?

Roselle Park, New Jersey, has an interdenominational school of religion, to foster religious education in the community. Rev. Harry S. Myers, head of the Stereopticon Department of the General Board of Promotion, was the chief speaker of the evening at a recent meeting of this school, on the topic of "The Message of the Sunday-schools." He was also a speaker at an impressive rally at the First Church of Elizabeth, N. J., Sept. 25, the occasion being the dedication of the missionary service flag.

They know how to welcome missionaries in Chaochowfu, South China, writes Miss Marion H. Boss, a new missionary under the auspices of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, who recently went to this station. "As we got off the train, there was a band with streamers, flying, and several hundred children. Mr. Baker said to me, 'This is all in your honor.' He was pleased because they did it all themselves. I nearly fell over, for I thought that some great official had arrived. As I came down past them, the boys stood at attention. All of the townspeople were out waiting to see what the band had brought with them from the station. The next day two groups of schools came to bring their greetings. It is almost pitiful to see how glad they are that someone has come to help. Mrs. Baker says that for twelve years they have been asking for more missionaries here."

The Bross Foundation Lectures will be given this year at Lake Forest University, Ill., from Nov. 3 to 6, in connection with the inauguration of Pres. Herbert McComb Moore. Speakers include William M. Ramsay, Paul Elmer More, James G. K. McClure, John Finley, Chas. Foster Kent and Robert Bruce Taylor.

The First Church, Seattle, Wash., Rev. Ambrose M. Bailey, pastor, has, in its regular order of service, both morning and evening, immediately preceding the announcement of the sermon this sentence: "The ladies will please remove their hats." People who are following the order as printed on the calendar cannot possibly miss it.

Herbert A. Leggett, a graduate of Mt. Hermon and of Princeton, is now instructor in Latin and gymnastics in the Suffield (Conn.) School for Boys. He is the son of Rev. and Mrs. C. H. Leggett, superintendent of the Rescue Mission, Springfield. Dr. R. S. McArthur, who has his home in Suffield, is a trustee of the school.

The staff of the two home mission societies were entertained on Sept. 17 by Mr. and Mrs. Mornay Williams at their home in Englewood, N. J. Among those present were Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall, Miss Clara E. Norcutt, Miss Eloise Downs, Miss Ina E. Burton, Miss Maria Medbery, Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, Mr. Coe Hayne, Mrs. Maud S. Dean, Mrs. Susan Keyes, Dr. and Mrs. C. L. White, Dr. and Mrs. G. R. Hovey, Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kummman and Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Detweiler.

In many ways, China really is an upside-down land, as we used to picture it when we were children and tried to travel there by an underground route. Witness the following from a letter from Miss Lettie Archer, one of the new missionaries of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society: "I simply can't refrain from mentioning it. I have to buy spoons to wind thread on, I see college students carrying their ink bottles around tied to a string, my Chinese teacher wears his cap and gloves before the class all day, I take a cross-country ride on a wheel barrow, and see a man pulling taffy by hooking one loop of it over a peg in the ground." In spite of all this, Miss Archer finds the Chinese so much like ourselves that she adds, "I believe that if our young people at home knew more about the life here, if it did not seem so intangible to them, if they could picture it as it is, more of them would decide to come."

All the young women employees at the headquarters of the Foreign Mission Societies are busy, during spare hours, in knitting sweaters and bonnets for the children in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Latvia. These will be part of the shipment of supplies which will go to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" in November. Here is a splendid idea which thousands of young women in Baptist churches of the Northern Baptist Convention would do well to follow. Sweaters and bonnets and caps will be urgently required during the severe winter months in these European countries.

The plan of the Foreign Mission Societies to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" is arousing considerable interest, not only among Baptists but also among others. Last week a party of Polish people, Roman Catholic, in New York made inquiries as to whether they would be permitted to include, at their own expense, a shipment of clothing to be placed on board the ship with the supplies from Baptists, and to be sent to their own personal friends in Poland.

Miss Martha Wenske has requested that a number of American flags be included in the supplies to be sent to Poland, in order that the people to whom the clothing and shoes are to be distributed may associate the land of America with the Baptists by whom these gifts are sent. This appeal will have a hearty response and Sunday schools are already complying with the request.

A national public ownership conference is called to meet in Chicago, November 19, 20, 21. Among subjects to be discussed are the Plumb plan, nationalization of nurses, hydro-electric development, the North Dakota program, municipal ownership, the money problem and state owned banks, and the interests of labor and the churches in the subject. Among the speakers are Wm. G. McAdoo, Warren S. Stone, Grand Chief Locomotive Engineers; Frank Hodges, secretary

(Continued on page 1164)

You ought to see the church calendars this fall. Scores, if not hundreds, come to our desk every month. This fall the majority of them have the liveliest kind of material setting forth the claims of THE BAPTIST and Missions on the members of the church. As far as we can recall there are only three reprinted sketches from this Kollum.

Fresh from the Field

(Continued from page 1162)

Miners' Federation of Great Britain; Glenn E. Plumb, Gov. Frazier of North Dakota; Robt. M. LaFollette, U. S. Senator Ladd, and others. Spokesmen from the church point of view are Rev. John A. Ryan, Catholic University of America, Washington, D. C., and Rev. Samuel Z. Batten, secretary Brotherhood and Social Education (Baptist), Philadelphia.

At the May meeting of the Board of Managers of the Baptist Children's Home at Maywood, Ill., it was decided to build a summer home on a farm of forty-two acres at the South West end of Lake Delavan. This property was given to the Home by Mr. Arnold of Delavan for a summer home. Because of its location on Lake Delavan and also its beautiful grove of ten to fifteen acres of timber, it is valuable as a summer resort. Dr. McNeill, the secretary and treasurer of the Home, his son and wife and the superintendent and his son spent two weeks in June and the first week in July building a summer home for the children, and a carpenter was secured to take the lead in the construction of a cottage 62 by 26 feet with cellar and attic. This gives ample room for kitchen and dining room and a couple of curtained off bedrooms under normal conditions, but during inclement weather when tents are disqualified for sleeping purposes tables are so constructed that they can be folded up and the entire building be made a dormitory. The building is located on the crest of the hill in the grove with the lake on either side, thus making it a place of beauty as well as comfort in the hot summer days.

Rev. H. S. Foster, for three years pastor of the Second Church, Bridgeport, has resigned to accept a call to the First Church, Cleveland, to be associated with Dr. David Bovington in his great work.

An effort is being made by the Committee for the Rescue and Education of Russian Children, to send twenty Russian students to Robert College, and twenty to the American University of Beirut. These men are to be selected from a large number of refugees at Constantinople. The group at Robert College will study engineering and those going to Beirut will be largely medical students. More scholarship funds are needed for Armenians, Bulgarians, Greeks, Turks, Syrians, Persians, Arabs, Egyptians and Jews. Five hundred dollars will cover the entire expenses of a boarding student for one year, but partial scholarships are very acceptable. The college office will be glad to receive any sum of money and apply it to individual students of any designated nationality for scholarship aid at either institution.

Rev. D. W. Hulburt of Wisconsin writes to express his approval of the recent article of Rev. J. J. Ross in THE BAPTIST, proposing the establishment of a Baptist Bible institution, as follows:

"Having had forty-four years' experience in the ministry and twenty-five of those years service as state superintendent for the Baptists of Wisconsin, I want to second with all the energy I can summon, the article by Dr. J. J. Ross on 'An Imperative Need,' appearing in THE BAPTIST of October 1, 1921. The Baptist Bible Institute for which he pleads cannot come too soon. It should have been founded here years ago. A call to the pastorate of 75 per cent of our churches would not receive second thought by our fully trained men. To supply three-fourths of our churches with permanently constructive leaders a Baptist training school is a crying necessity."

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Salem Baptist Church of New Rochelle, N. J. at its first fall meeting on Sept. 20, voted to become responsible for instructing a church school of missions, which will meet each Wednesday night for intensive study. Moreover, it will have an adept teacher, for Mrs. William A. Hill, the wife of Dr. Hill, who heads the Missionary Education Department of the General Board of Promotion, has volunteered to lead the classes.

REV. DAVID NATHANIEL BOSWELL

Special Assistant to Dr. Charles A. Brooks, technician in graphs, surveys and studies among foreign populations.

Dr. William Axling of Japan was a visitor in the offices of the General Board of Promotion at 276 Fifth Avenue, New York, on Saturday, October 1, on his busy way to speak at eight state conventions, one after the other. Anyone who has ever heard Dr. Axling speak on Japan and general conditions in the Orient will not be surprised that he is so greatly in demand at conventions.

The East Washington and North Idaho Baptist Convention announces that its great campaign to complete its share of the $100,000,000 fund opened with all the signs of victory in the air.

Dr. Hugh A. Heath, executive secretary of Conferences and Conventions, reports a stirring and inspirational time at the New Hampshire state convention, at Manchester, October 3 to 5. Dr. Heath was one of the speakers at the ministers' banquet on October 3, and delivered an address at the regular session on October 4. He was also present at an exceptionally interesting gathering of the Hudson River Central Association on October 5.

The popularity of the Stereopticon Department of the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention is shown by the fact that all its motion pictures are already booked ahead until January. Rev. Harry S. Myers, in charge of the Stereopticon Department, also announces that 150 lectures are booked ahead. Rev. L. W. Barnard of Brooklyn, New York, will make thirty-two of these, the most that will be made by any one individual.

Mr. C. Starr Barker, assistant to Foreign Secretary J. C. Robbins at the headquarters of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, is receiving congratulations on the arrival on October 1 of a seven and a quarter pound son.

At the very successful basket suppers which are being held by the women of East Maine and West Maine, to the great furtherance of general church interest in home and foreign mission work, Miss Clara Tingley of Burma and Miss Carmela Bienzi will be speakers in western Maine, and Miss Kate French of India and Miss Ethel Bowker of New York in Eastern Maine.

Teaching Chinese children to play with dolls is not one of the most important missionary problems in the Orient, but it is certainly about as difficult as any there, says Miss Lillian M. van Hook, recently arrived on furlough in Massachusetts, from Shaohsing, East China, which Miss Dowling has turned into a famous doll-centre. Even when a Chinese child receives a doll as a gift, its mother puts it carefully away, and later uses it as a gift in discharging some social obligation, Miss van Hook says, thus changing dolls from toys into almost legal tender.

"What can't you do with determination and a Ford!" exclaims Miss Florence H. Doe of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society in Nowgong, Assam. What she and two other missionaries did with the Ford there was in the space of twenty-four hours to fine-tooth-comb the place for two teachers, to fill unexpected vacancies on the staff of the Girls' School. They found them, too, thus saving weeks of negotiating by correspondence, and enabling the classes to continue with only one day's delay.

It isn't just in foreign lands that Northern Baptist workers must fight all forms of medical superstition, it developed at a meeting of Americanization secretaries in New York last week. Miss Ethel Bowker of Whitman, Massachusetts, secretary for New York state, told of having to dissuade a patient from the tried-and-true remedy of essence of snake-and-alcohol, which he had been faithfully taking for cancer. No wonder that these Americanization secretaries want to enlist 500 new workers during the month of October! They need them!

Miss Alice Brimson, national executive secretary of Americanization work for the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, addressed Miss Jessie Burrall's famous girls' class in Washington, D. C., on Sunday, October 9.

Friends of Rev. Archibald Adams, our missionary in Suifu, West China, now on furlough in this country, will regret to learn that he has just undergone an operation for appendicitis in the Post-Graduate Hospital, New York. Mr. and Mrs. Adams have done fine work in Suifu, during the past six years. He was born in Ningpu, East China of a splendid family of missionaries. One brother and two sisters are now bearing onward the torch their parents entrusted to them.

(Continued on page 1189)

The Baptist

A Call to Prayer and Consecration

THE coming Conference on Limitation of Armament brings to all Christian people a priceless opportunity. To all good citizens indeed, and to all lovers of humanity, it is a time of challenge and of hope, but supremely so to those who have seen in Jesus Christ a revelation of love and brotherhood as the true way of life. To bear convincing witness everywhere to this faith is our privilege and our duty in the present crisis.

With harrowing memories of more than ten million men who laid down their lives in the awful holocaust from which we have just emerged, of the countless homes bearing burdens of anguish and suffering, of the desolation and pestilence that have sprung from the war and still ravage whole peoples, and, most of all, of the aftermath of bitterness, suspicion and hate which pervade all lands, let us insist far more vigorously than we have ever done before, that war is an unmitigated curse to humanity and a denial of the Christian Gospel. Let us declare plainly that in every war the Son of Man is put to shame anew and that every battlefield is a Calvary on which Christ is crucified afresh.

Let us not shrink from proclaiming unequivocally that war is not a necessity, that the pacific settlement of every international question is possible, that a warless world can really be achieved. Our witness must be unmistakable that force is not the final arbiter among the nations, but that justice, reason and good-will can control their life as well as the life of individual men. To continue to point to the mailed fist as our ultimate reliance and to carry on a program of mutual distrust and fear is to undermine the very foundation of our Christian faith.

Let there be throughout the Church a fire of holy indignation not only against war but also against the mad competition in armaments which has nourished suspicion, ill-will and fear, and from which wars have always sprung and always will. Let us not allow the reduction of armaments to be regarded as an economic issue alone. The question is at heart a moral and religious one. Let us repeat from one end of the nation to the other the discerning words of our Government's official invitation to the Conference: "The rivalries of armaments are not only without economic justification, but are a constant menace to the peace of the world."

Let us pray unceasingly that the Spirit of God may guide our leaders assembled at the conference of the nations, that unselfish motives and wise counsels may prevail. Let us give ourselves unstintingly to cultivating a Christian public opinion so strong that it will make possible the richest results from their deliberations. We cannot be satisfied with a mild curtailment of our military expenditure. Nothing less than a far-reaching reduction in armaments on sea and land can suffice. It is not for us to dictate the specific plans by which the longed-for goal may be achieved, but insist we must, with all the passion of our souls, that rational and specific methods must now be found for the settlement of international disputes.

With a more poignant realization than we have ever had before of the terrible consequences of national selfishness, let us humbly confess our own share of sin in participating in the race of armaments, in seeking our own advantage regardless of neighbors, in adding to the world's burden of suspicion and distrust. Let us, as a people, open wide our hearts to the divine spirit of love and brotherhood revealed to us in its fullness by Jesus Christ. Let us dedicate ourselves anew to building in this war-ridden earth the City of God foretold by the mouth of prophets since the world began.

THE FEDERAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES.

Yes, It Seems to Be Right

THIS letter comes to hand:

"From the note in THE BAPTIST, entitled, 'Touch Lightly Here, Sir,' I am encouraged to ask a question or two. Is it right for a member of the Board of Promotion to spend at the rate of eight or ten dollars a day at the most expensive hotel between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains for room and meals, and ask the Baptist constituency to pay the bills? As representative of Jesus in this present world should we spend money contributed by men and women who give out of their poverty for the extension (as they believe) of the Kingdom of God, to pay salaries and expenses of men and women entirely out of proportion to what others get who work just as hard? In other words, do we elect persons to positions in order to be their slaves, or to have them, as Jesus said, be his servants?"

The writer is a Baptist pastor and he is speaking out of his heart. He has a right to be heard. Our answer:

No, we do not elect our leaders in order to be their slaves. They ought not to receive salaries and allowances for expenses out of proportion to the income of others who work just as hard. Yes, they ought to regard themselves as servants of Jesus and of the denomination. Again, if they can serve the denomination and the cause of Christ, in the particular service to which they are called, on a more economical scale of expense, and do so as effectively, they ought to do so. All of these points are clear.

But in order to do their best work, they must take the best possible care of themselves. Not to do so would be poor economy. It would be wasting the hard-earned money of our missionary contributors. When they have secured the very best accommodations the perpetual drag and fag of traveling are hard for any but the strongest to endure. The difference between fair accommodations and the best may mean the difference between being 75 per cent and 90 per cent effective. This is the actual fact of the case, and it is the reason and the only justifiable reason for their securing the best accommodations available. The denomination can well afford to pay the cost of this additional 15 per cent effectiveness of our executive officers.

If any officer should indulge in mere luxury at the expense of the denomination he ought to be discharged at once, and if he should keep it up long he would find himself out of a job. If this pastor will recall the hardest time he ever had in meeting his own bills, he will know the situation in which our executive officers find their treasuries almost constantly. They would be about as likely to permit a dentist to pull one of their best teeth as to allow an extravagant bill of expenses. And with the workers on needy fields always crying for a little more money for the absolute necessities of the work, administrative extravagance would start an insurrection from Dan to Beersheba.

The equitable adjustment of salaries among ministers is entirely another matter which has hitherto been placed largely on a commercial basis. Maybe, sometime, we shall find a better way.

With Our Contributors

FATHERS and mothers are now thinking of their sons and daughters in college and considering what influences are beginning to play upon their young and ambitious spirits. Into the homes of thousands of such parents Professor W. G. Spencer's luminous portrayal of the religious life of the college will bring a restful assurance. Thousands of earnest prayers will ascend to God from these homes, not only for the students but for the teachers in college or university who are to have so large a part in giving final character to these young people.

John Hus was burned at the stake nearly five centuries ago by the authority of the Roman Catholic Council of Constance. Through those long centuries the heel of Romish intolerance has trampled Bohemia into the earth. If relentless and forcible suppression could extinguish faith, the soul of Bohemia would have been dead long ago. But behold! no sooner is the power of the Austrian Empire, the agent of Romish despotism, broken, than the spirit of religious liberty springs into life as young and resolute as in the days of Hus and John Ziska. Stories of the revival, both national and religious, narrated in this issue of THE BAPTIST by Dr. Samuel Zane Batten and by Rev. Josef Novotyn. People of Bohemia, they tell us, are leaving the church of Rome by thousands. The movement is national and Protestant to the core. Morning papers report that the Pope has received a petition from the priests of Czechoslovakia for permission to marry, and has denied it.

How many readers of the beautiful story of a sublime Christian experience entitled "When My Feet Were Like Hinds' Feet," by Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, pastor of Fifth Avenue Baptist, New York City, will have a glowing memory of some such day in their own experience.

If a wave of such glory could sweep through life of the Baptist denomination, it would sweep away a thousand things that now encumber our lives and fellowships and clog our efforts to promote a worthy program.

* * *

A letter from a correspondent in Nebraska raises the question of the present status of the covenant meeting. She says: "For many years here the last Thursday before the first Sunday in the month was the time appointed for the regular business and covenant meeting of the church. For over two years there has been no covenant meeting and before that they were not always observed. I feel that calling to mind the covenant obligation tends to strengthen the bond of Christian fellowship between the members and is an incentive to higher Christian living." The letter leads us to inquire concerning the present status of this meeting in our churches. Is it being observed as it once was? If not, what was the reason for its discontinuance? Are there churches which are finding it an important feature of their spiritual work? It is easy to recall churches and times in which the covenant meeting was of great power. THE BAPTIST will welcome communications on this subject, especially if they contain definite workable suggestions concerning the covenant meeting.

* * *

Conventions are now in progress throughout the country. All three of the editors are in the field visiting the conventions as far east as Massachusetts and as far west as the Rocky Mountains.

The reception of the representatives of THE BAPTIST in these meetings is most cordial.

There is a manifest purpose to rally to the program of the Northern Baptist Convention and carry it to victory. No other denomination has found so much difficulty as the Baptists have found in trying to mobilize its people behind a larger program. But after we have fully talked over all of our problems, we shall find a way to join hands in our common task. And when we begin to move together, we shall move with tremendous momentum, all the greater because it will carry not merely the plans of a council of officers, but will carry the will and prayers of an united people.

* * *

Spiritual quickening is the great need of our people at this juncture. Without it our undertakings will be half-hearted and partial. Without it we shall not be in a fit state of mind to consider any of our problems. Ours is the culture of the spirit or it is nothing. We hesitate when we ought to be moving like a mighty army.

Call up all of the reserves of prayer. Let there be a common appeal to God from ocean to ocean. Crowd the prayer meetings. Forget all but God; and find him.

* * *

Whatever else must wait, the project of filling a ship for the sufferers in Europe cannot wait. Winter is at the doors. The naked must be clothed at once or freeze. All supplies must be in New York by October 30. Fill that ship.

* * *

Preparations and programs reported from all parts of the country give encouraging indications that this is to be a year of unusual evangelistic effort.

The Religious Life of a College

"Thank God for the denominational colleges, founded on conviction, reared with prayer and faith, frequent monuments of heroic sacrifice."—Over 6000 students enrolled in Bible courses

By W. G. SPENCER

Professor of Classical Languages and Registrar, Franklin College

PERHAPS a discussion of what the religious life of a College really is can assist us to a better understanding of what it ought to be. This article is a brief study of some of the elements which must enter into any sane judgment on every vital problem not only in our student world but in the world at large.

Many people think of any institution that gives degrees or grants certificates as a college, and the one name is used to cover a multitude of sins. But there are great state-supported institutions which as a part of the public school system of the state must not only preserve the democratic doctrine of an equal opportunity for all, but must also preserve the "ideal neutral" policy as far as religious affairs are concerned. The attitude of these institutions, religiously, must be colorless, however much individuals that are connected with them may be vitally interested in spiritual values.

College Origins

There are denominational institutions, endowed and independent, founded by men of profound religious conviction and maintained as great channels through which flows the current of our denominational religious leadership. The atmosphere here is charged and positive in its character.

There are institutions, outgrowths of economic injustice, called "poor man's" universities, practically the property of some one or two great hearted philanthropic educators presenting conditions peculiar to themselves.

There are the normal colleges, so called, the polytechnic institutes, and almost every variety and shade of educational interest is presented. We must therefore take into account the nature of the institution and in any discussion of such a subject as ours confine ourselves to some one group, or be individually lost in the mass of color, which they create when assembled. Let our interests be confined to the denominational college as a field.

Herein we find sufficient diversity of religious life to cause reflection. There are several distinct outlets through which it finds legitimate expression. Enumerated briefly they are as follows:— (1) The church activities, when the individual student is a church member; (2) The Y. M. and Y. W. C. A., under the same conditions; (3) The regular chapel service, conducted in the colleges under discussion practically without exception; (4) The Department of Biblical Literature, where one is maintained; (5) The creation of an intangible religious atmosphere, as the combined result of all the contributing factors. Let us consider these in order.

They Come as Young Rebels

When we come to consider activity in the churches two elements enter in at once, and both fortuitous—the character of the individual and the kind and condition of the church. We must never forget that the individual has unlimited freedom of action or non-action. In the type of college under consideration, many of the students come from homes where they at least have considered the religious restraint as oppressive. They have been "compelled," as they say, to go to Sunday school, to young peoples' societies, to church, and what not, many times when those organizations were so far from attractive that young life has been repelled by them, and now, for the first time away from the parental roof and voice, they are trying out a new-found freedom. Many times they react to the other extreme, and during the time of life when deep feelings though natural and indigenous are quite apt to be suppressed, they forswear the church and all its privileges and opportunities. These swaggering, blustering youths, so often mistaken by outsiders as typical of the "Christlessness" of the colleges, and as frequently misunderstood, find no place for religious development through the churches nor make any contribution there except the problem which they themselves create.

But spiritual values to be permanent must represent the self-determined choice of the individual, and not an expression under stress of stimulus applied by outside authority. Patience sometimes hath her perfect work, though the time be long.

These students however are not the only ones in our colleges. There are many others always active in the so-called "church work," as teachers of the Sunday-school classes, members of choruses and the like. No one can read of the work of the "Gospel Team," without a thrill of joy because of the positive and dynamic character of the religious life of the students. In many colleges of this character, missions and Sunday-schools are maintained for years by successive generations of Christian students, and many indeed are the folk that are finding their way into the Kingdom because of the devotion and consecration of college men and women.

"Town and Gown" Frictions

No more must we forget that the churches are sometimes hostile and not friendly and cordial to the abounding vitality of young life when assembled. The antipathy between "town and gown," however it may be an outgrowth of mutual misunderstanding, none the less is not a feeling that is any more apt to be thrown off by the individuals functioning through the church than elsewhere, but finds its expression many times in the very heart of the sanctuary. And while the older members of both "town and gown" may both fully realize the hopelessness of such folly, and refuse to allow themselves to be hindered or repressed in their Christian activities by it, the young, quick-tempered, self-reliant student, once subjected to its malign and warping influence is very apt to elevate his resentment to the saddle and allow it to drive his intelligence and his consecration both away—as a college chum once reacted to "infant baptism," when aroused at 2 A. M. by some sportive classmate and asked his opinion about it, "there is much to be said on both sides," and turned over and went to sleep. There is much to be said on both sides. The individual and the church may perhaps both be blameworthy, and often we say it and go to sleep in the saying; but the cold fact remains that the religious life of the college is too rarely treated as a vital matter by the church under whose shadow the college dwells. Far-reaching opportunities for abiding influences are offered up by many churches as a useless sacrifice on the altar of prejudice and ill feeling.

The hostile churches, however, are the exceptions that prove the rule. Many churches maintain special work among the students. They open their doors gladly for students to social functions, welcome them into every activity in which they may be interested. Some open up an "associate membership" so that the students can come under their care, while still maintaining their connection with the home church.

The denomination at large is interesting itself in this problem in a very sane way, in the introduction of student pastors where they are needed. These pastors have the students as a special parish and serve to bind them to the churches in a very real relationship.

Hot-beds to Sprout Workers

The Young Women's and Young Men's Christian Associations offer a unique opportunity. The college students who share the same ideals, aspirations, temptations and problems, can meet here as freely as elsewhere on the campus or in the classroom, or on the athletic fields, and discuss their own religious life—finding in many ways that here is the one great avenue leading to an open and frank avowal that their religious life is real. Here too in an organization of their own is found the chance for accepting responsibility in the religious or spiritual field—the surest method to growth yet discovered. The president of such an organization, and his "cabinet," composed largely of the heads of committees, study many times very intensively and thoroughly the religious conditions of their alma mater, methods of raising its level and the problems of the individuals concerned. Frequently here is found the "heaven that leaveneth the whole lump." As frequently too, this is the "hot bed" in which, often unknown to themselves, are generated the religious leaders of the rising generation, especially through some of its branches such as the student volunteer organizations. Many times these organizations maintain a hale and hearty and sturdy condition, act as a powerful molding force in the student body, and functioning steadily year after year, without their nature and disposition being recognized and appreciated outside the college walls.

Nor are these societies idealistic and impractical in their work. Their members have direct contact with and intimate knowledge of all the ills of college life and such realities, as the honor system, a high standard of morals, the fine character of student gatherings and celebrations often have their foundations laid deeply in the religious life of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A.'s.

They maintain a vital connection through their delegations with the larger organizations, and such outstanding men as Mott, Speer, Eddy and many others have had their "reach" multiplied a thousand fold in this way.

It is true that the opportunities opened up through this field have often "short-circuited" a good many men who had the ministry in view, but it is likewise true that they have recompensed this by the lives they have attracted to such fields through their earnest Christian work.

We must pause just for a moment to point out a real danger—the vital, spiritual power, essential in the heart of all this may be dissipated in its meaner expressions. To be more specific, a college Y. M. C. A. which interprets itself to the students only through a Y lunch counter, or Y movies, and only partially justifies itself by transient mission classes, or fraternity "talks" is in real danger.

Y. M. C. A. Bible Courses

On the other hand the Y. M. C. A. often takes over fields of elective instruction which the college should occupy. Where departments of biblical literature are non-existent, courses are often supplied from this source, varying from one to twenty-three. It has been estimated that some 6500 students are this year enrolled in voluntary courses in some eighty institutions under this undergraduate leadership.

Frequently the Y. M. C. A. conducts during the college year an evangelistic campaign, securing the services of consecrated men of God, and being instrumental in the saving and invigorating of a "troop" of fine young men and women enlisted for life service in the Master's Army.

In the regular chapel service as an expression of religious life, the undergraduate control ceases and the faculty assumes responsibility. Such services vary from the deadly and poisonous monotony of a song (omitting the third verse whatever it may be, or however much of the hymn poem may be crucified thereby) and the Lord's Prayer, both merely mouthed and not vitalized—under a leadership whose chief concerns have little to do with the spiritual—to the exalting and abiding results, produced when the song is treated as a hymn of praise, the scripture is read interpretatively and sympathetically and the prayer offered is from sensitive hearts direct to God.

Often the leaders of constructive thinking in the realm of the kingdom are presented to the student body from such platforms. High powered vehicle for the advance of religious ideals the chapel service then becomes, the receptive hearts and minds of the students blossom out under the warming sun of love shining down along the rays of intelligence, and the slow ripening fruit of the kingdom has its birth.

These exercises are frequently conducted by the president alone, in some institutions by certain members of the faculty in turn, and in others by a chaplain.

Chapel Opportunities

These services, because of the tremendous opportunity they afford, constitute one of the most blessed privileges of the college and recreant indeed to a sacred trust are those who treat them lightly. They ought to be prayed over, and prepared for with a high consciousness of their value. Not long ago, I talked with a student who said he had remembered for fifteen years a statement of his college president to this effect: "It is easy to measure a man. You do it by measuring the height of his ideals, the breadth of his sympathies, and the depth of his conviction."

The man who, when the opportunity offers, speaks only wittily, or only trivially, or only sneeringly or without adequate preparation from such a platform, has lost the power to evaluate privilege.

Government Bulletin No. 7, 1920, of the U. S. Bureau of Education, making a study of the requirements for the A. B. degree in fifty-one state universities and fifty endowed universities and colleges indicates that Bible is a prescribed subject for the A. B. degree at seventeen endowed schools.

George H. Betts in an article on "The Curriculum and the College Department of Religion in Religious Education" asserts that out of eighty church-founded colleges answering a questionnaire all but four are now offering courses in the English Bible.

(Turn to page 1172)

When My Feet Were Like Hinds' Feet

"There are golden days which are the secret of life's hope and achievement. Such a day frequently haunts my memory, when . . . I think I found the trysting place of the prophets"

By CORNELIUS WOELFKIN

MEMORY binds the leaves of our yesterdays together. Many pages record such commonplace experiences that they do not stand out in our consciousness. Monotonous routine, unrelieved by the interest of novelty, or the thrill of exciting adventure, is scarcely worth referring to. Hence many days in the career of threescore years and ten find no special mention in the contents of a biography, or even a place in the index. They have not sufficient interest to warrant our recollection of them.

There are, however, in every memory a few if not many days that are outstanding. They are the illuminated pages of personal memoirs. There are days which precipitate a crisis and become the molds of new experiences: days when we launch adventurously on a tide that bears us away to destiny. There are days that have in them the smiting blows of disappointment; whose very recollection becomes an eating sorrow; days of moral tragedies whose falls leave us, not with the limp of a victorious wrestler from the shadows of Penial, but with the crippled halting of a bad conscience and enervated will. There are days that men would give life itself to forget.

"O, Happy Day!"

But there are golden days which are the secret of life's hope and achievement. Rudyard Kipling once said, that all lives are molded in a few crises scattered along our years, whose decisive actions may all be compassed within a half or an hour's time. There are days of rebirth when we trample upon our baser instincts and "Rise on our dead selves to higher and to holier things." There are times that are born of holy aspiration, a passion for true loyalty to God, and an unreserved yielding of the spirit to the divine presence; and such days are filled with a holy inspiration which leaves a permanent deposit in life. Happy are they who have such golden days to which the memory may recur with the assurance that renewed faith and courage will burn upon the altars of recollection when we turn to revisit these "Bethels" in the pilgrimage of our days. It is true that over every separate and particular day, however dull with monotonous routine, or tragic with failure; however turbid with depression or painful with sorrow; there is written the promise, "As thy day, so shall thy strength be." But some days are peculiarly mystic with the sense of the divine Presence and His voice and face are distinct and clear.

Better Than October Glory

Such a day frequently haunts my memory,—a day when I think I found the trysting place of the prophets and preachers of God. The day falls in the calendar on October 10th, 1886. It was a beautiful, clear, crisp, autumnal day, when all nature seemed transparent and the worshipping spirit felt akin to Enoch who walked with God. The ripeness of the summer splashed its glory in all the hues and colors which nature develops in a perfect autumn month. The leaves of the forest were like the strings of an aeolian harp, and the winds became as music suggesting the Te Deum to God. But the beauty of nature—which I must leave to the imagination of the meditative mind—was not the emphasis of that day. That glory has been celebrated by a thousand poets against whose description my thinking would be at best a limping, crude troubadour. My story is one of an inner communion of the soul with God. It was to me what Bethel or Penial were to Jacob; what the Sinai tryst was to Moses, or the river Hiddekel to Daniel. It was like one of those retirements when Jesus went apart to pray. The experience was not so deep nor the issues so great, but it was along the trail of the glorious company of the apostles, the goodly fellowship of the prophets, and the inheritance of all who seek Him in spirit and in truth. I was following afar off and only stood on the outskirts of their experience. But that is better than not following at all, and to never know the assurance, that God is, and that He is the rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. The story of that day I can only trace in my own recollection. What is meant to others only the great day of all unfoldings will reveal.

It was in the beginning of my second year in the ministerial work. I did not have the background of an academic training. Whatever clews to learning and methods of study come to one working through the curricula of college and theological seminary requirements were not in my preparation. My entrance upon the gospel ministry was by another avenue and my preparation was in a different category. But that too is a story by itself. When I came to my pastorate in the church, which even then had a history of one hundred and thirty years, I was enthusiastic to do all manner of work. We had to work through some financial difficulties and the renovating of the building. Success put its imprimatur upon all these efforts. But,—and there comes the sharp and vital exception,—I did not witness any conversions among those who needed the new birth. I was preaching in the church, in homes, and in school-houses, but saw no conversions.

Theology on Fire

My theological reading was monotonous. Dr. A. H. Strong's Systematic Theology and Dr. N. W. Clarke's Outlines of Christian doctrine had not been published. I worked through Pendleton and Dagg. I labored amid the gigantic assumptions of Hodge and the markings of those books are to me interesting. Then I came upon Charles G. Finney's systematic theology. This treatise had for me a much freer atmosphere and challenged my own thinking. It brought me into touch with the autobiography of this great evangelist. That biography was the spiritual spur behind the experience I have pursued ever since. I think no Christian can read through those pages without being profoundly stirred. It is a classic upon the practice of prayer. It presents no discussion or apologetic upon the theme of prayer; but recites in a plain and direct form many of the author's experiences. The reading of that book compelled me again and again to turn down the page and retire to prayer. I spent the major portion of the week between that book and the prayer closet. By Saturday night my soul was deeply moved and I believed that if our church could and would pray as did Mr. Finney and his co-workers we too could have a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord.

Then dawned my memorable day. I arose before the horizon flushed with the oncoming morning. I sketched a hasty note explaining that I was going to the woods for prayer. "Please don't worry, I'll be back in time for service," was my word. The parish was in the country and the woods were very near. I had to go less than half a mile where I could be alone, free from any danger of intrusion, and pray aloud with only the ear of God to hear. Perhaps it was because Mr. Pinney so frequently mentioned the woods as his oratory that I went into the woods. I think the woods offer a unique mental atmosphere favorable to prayer. The sun was just touching the rim of my world as I knelt in that sanctuary. I cannot recall, much less describe, the experiences of those hours of intercession. They were not stilted or platitudinous formularies of prayer. I only know there was a feeling for God and a helpless clinging to the skirts of the Almighty. Time swept by without touching my consciousness. The sun was climbing toward its zenith—and suddenly the musical vibrations of the large churchbell swept over dales and hills, and recalled to my mind the hour of the day. It was nine o'clock. I had been three hours in the trysting place.

Was Not Three Hours Enough?

Was not three hours long enough? I had never spent so long a season in prayer before. The power of prayer is not gaged by time. Prayer must revive and perfect faith, and faith must have its perfect work. It is not faith to take for granted that God must work at the first challenge of human desire. That is a credulity which gambles on grace, and loses. Faith aims to furnish that vehicle through which the Spirit of God works. It seeks to cooperate with God and must await His direction. Three hours was not time enough for the work of that day. At ten o'clock another bell rang announcing the Sunday School session. Still my spirit had not that assurance which I earnestly craved. Indeed I resolved I could not go down until some sense of a divine sending should gird my soul with power. Three-quarters of an hour more passed by and the quarter before eleven o'clock bell tolled the approaching hour of service. Shortly after this there came to my mind, like "a still small voice," not audible but clear, the words "Thy Father Who seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Every sense of strain and burden fell from my spirit, the prayer was done, and the door of the oratory opened upon the further tasks of the day.

When the Strain Was Gone.

I had frequently read the Psalmist's words, "Thou hast made my feet like hinds' feet." I knew that experience when running down the hill through the woods, across the field to my home. The church was distant about four hundred yards. Perhaps forty carriages had brought the attendants from beyond walking distance, who with the villagers made up our exceptionally large congregations. The organ was already appealing to the worshippers as I entered the church and went into the pulpit. Was it imagination or had a sense of solemnity really settled upon the people? At least I felt an atmosphere around me eclectic with latent possibilities. I have no recollection of the details of the service nor any memory of the form of the sermon. But the text stands out in italics—"Wilt Thou not revive us again, that Thy people may rejoice in Thee? Show us Thy mercy, O Lord, and grant us Thy salvation." Psalm 85: 6-7. There was nothing oratorical in the delivery, but a sense of yearning that gave birth to the wooing note. I have always distrusted oratory as a vehicle of the Spirit. The sermon like the prayer came to its end with a benediction.

A Morning Prayer

*Guard me for yet another day,
For life is new with morning's ray;
And foes are strange, untrod the way;*

Guard me through this an unknown day.

*Gird me for yet another day,
Though guarded I must fight and pray;*

*Teach me to draw my sword or stay;
O gird while guarding me today!*

*Guide me for yet another day;
Guarded and girded, yet I stray.
Find paths for me and I obey;
Guard, gird, and guide me, one more day.*

*Guard, gird, and guide me every day,
So when all things of time decay,
In morn of heaven by grace I may Enter Thy perfectness of day.*

—FRANK W. GUNSAULUS.

In that church it was the custom of many people to linger in the vestibule and about the grounds for little visits. On this morning those who went directly home did so immediately and quietly. I remained in the pulpit until the last auditor had passed out of the church. Then I came down and went into the basement where perhaps half of the congregation had gathered to pray. I do not remember clearly whether I made any suggestion in that direction or whether it was spontaneous. But there they were. It was not a long season, yet intense and earnest. Several persons would begin to pray together and sometimes were so absorbed that they continued.

Looking Back to That Hill.

The story of that revival with its incidents cannot be rehearsed here for want of space. Suffice it to say there began a series of eight weeks preaching services resulting in the quickening of the church members and some conversions. Then the work extended and I preached in the surrounding country, sometimes in churches or a schoolhouse and in one case in a railway station. The spirit of revival lasted through the fall, winter and spring, and until I was called from that pastorate to my next field of service. I have frequently revisited the scene of my first ministry and often looked toward the woods on the hill which became the gate of heaven to me that glorious October day. Just a year ago the dear church called to its ministry a young pastor whom they wished to ordain to the service of our Lord. I was invited to the Council and asked to preach the ordination sermon and accepted both invitations. Between the afternoon and early evening sessions I had an hour and a half to myself. The sermon was not causing me any anxiety, so after thirty-four years I again climbed the hill and spent my time in prayer for the new young minister, standing on the threshold of what I pray may prove a great service in the Kingdom of God.

I wish that all young ministers might have early in their careers so definite and direct dealing with God as to give direction and an atmosphere to all their growing experience. This early experience became formative in my life and found recurrent emphasis with the passing years. And now in the twilight hours of my life and service, I think I can truthfully say that I have always desired to know the art of prayer more than the art of preaching.

Reconstructive Service in Devastated France

Pitiful efforts at reconstruction have been made here and there, but for the most part the ruins remain as the Germans left them. It is difficult to distinguish the better streets in the prevailing desolation

By P. H. J. LERRIGO

IF Northern Baptists could see the work of quiet, cheery, persistent reconstruction, both religious and social, in which they are assisting in the devastated areas of France they would feel that the portion of the New World Movement funds devoted to this work is producing most happy and worthwhile results.

Chauny, 124 kilometers from Paris, on the main line of the railroad to Brussels, Belgium, is a bewildering mass of ruins. After occupying the town for two years, the Germans before leaving, utterly demolished it, with the exception of a small section in which they gathered the women and children. The work is thorough and complete. Practically every building was dynamited, and where walls still remain standing they are broken and crumbling, and the interior completely gutted. But there are high lights amid the ruins, especially for the traveling Baptists—the old Baptist church, dilapidated but still standing, the little cottage where resides our representative, Mlle. Carrel, the new Baptist site on one of the main streets with the new brick foyer rising from the surrounding chaos, and finally the home of old deacon Dermont, the present gathering place of the little church.

Starting With Skimpy Huts

Pitiful efforts at reconstruction have been made here and there, but for the most part the ruins remain as the Germans left them. A few provisional huts have been erected of wood or corrugated iron, and when a building has suffered less damage than common the gaping holes may have been stopped up with canvas, or oiled paper substituted for the broken window panes, and part of the building occupied. The Baptist chapel of pre-war days is located on the outskirts of the town. Land was high and the members poor so that they had been unable to secure a more favorable site. The street upon which it stands has taken its name from the building: Rue du Temple. On account of its proximity to the cemetery the Germans spared this building although it is now in a state of extreme dilapidation. They utilized it as a hospital and later as a morgue.

The members of the Chauny church are scattered far and wide and such as are still in the neighborhood gather for their little meetings in the house of Deacon Dermont on the other side of town. At present a poor family of war-sufferers utilize the rear part of the building for a temporary home. Their few pieces of furniture and miserable bedding make a pitiful apology for a home. The building is ill-adapted for comfort and shelter, but such as it is they are given full welcome to it by the Baptists of Chauny.

Still the German Frightfulness

It is a lesson in German frightfulness to pass through the debris-bordered streets to the other side of the town. At the edge of the devastated area is a section devoted to the little houses of stucco erected by the municipality as a temporary provision for the needs of the returning citizens. They are built in plain rows without adornment. Windows are not abundant and the interior, divided into three or four small rooms, is gloomy. They are sparsely furnished with such few things as the inhabitants have been able to gather together since their return. All their pre-war possessions were stolen or destroyed with their former homes. In a single room in one of the little houses here described lives our own relief worker Mlle. Carrel. She is a woman somewhat past middle life, of a kindly and prepossessing appearance. She knows intimately the people with whom she is dealing and is prepared to enter with a sympathetic heart into their many sorrows. She told us of a young girl of 14 whom she had just seen. During the German occupation this child was compelled, though weak and ill from malnutrition, to carry on the severe physical labor of producing a daily stint of chopped wood. She had recently shown symptoms of incipient tuberculosis and with the depleted strength resulting from war privations it seems inevitable that she must succumb unless she can receive the careful treatment and adequate nourishment prescribed by the physician. This is one of the cases which, after proper investigation, Miss Carrel may find it possible to aid in the name of American Baptists. We parted from her after standing together a moment in prayer, and later in the morning encountered her again toiling along the sunlit highway in the prosecution of her labor of love, her kindly face beaming affection and sympathy above the Croix de guerre which had been pinned upon her breast by one of the Generals of France for bravery under fire.

It is difficult to distinguish the better streets in the prevailing desolation. But only a few steps from the centre of the town on what Mr. Brouillette assured us was one of the main thoroughfares is a large plot of ground which has been cleared of the debris of demolished buildings which encumber its neighbors. This is the new Baptist site. It will be impossible for any one to ignore the evangelical work in Chauny in the days to come, and it is fitting that among the very first buildings to arise in the stricken city should be the Gospel centre of sympathy and succor. On the rear of the lot the brick walls of a commodious foyer or community house have already appeared. They are constructed of bricks from old houses purchased by the committee from the reconstruction commission. The cost of lot and foyer together will be less than $5000 but the value of the plant of the community in the coming difficult days of reconstruction will be beyond words. The new pastor will be on the ground in a few weeks and the building will furnish both him and Mlle. Carrel a base from which to carry on their work, social and evangelistic.

Fan-trained Trees on the Garden Wall

We found Deacon Leon Dermont working in his garden. Such a remarkable garden as it was: every inch under cultivation and yielding produce. Its two marvels are the apple tree fifty feet long, trailed along the whole length of the plot with roots striking into the ground at intervals, and the heavily laden, perfectly flat pear tree, trained against the garden wall so that it possessed dimensions of breadth and height but no thickness to speak of. But the deacon and his wife are more remarkable than their garden.

The wife's mother has been a charter member of the little Baptist church started by an American Baptist three generations ago. The aged couple remained in Chauny all through the years of the German occupation and have seen unspeakable things. It has been theirs to comfort, sustain and encourage the weak and distressed. We sat in the little garden and talked of the coming days of blessing and the new hope which is dawning for the evangelical work in Chauny. When we were leaving the old deacon asked if he might lead in prayer and as he talked with his Father the old man's face was transfigured with a new light and peace.

Our Talented Brouillette

It is not alone at Chauny but at many another point, Ferguier, La Fere, Lens, etc., that our director of relief work, Rev. Oliva Brouillette, is reorganizing scattered Baptist forces. His special qualifications for the work are undeniable. A complete knowledge of French as well as English, an engaging personality which brings renewed courage and cheer to all whom he meets, the wisdom of years of experience in Christian service, all fit him admirably for the difficult task he has in hand. This is another example of cooperation in the work of home and foreign missions. Associated with the work of the Home Mission Society for years in the State of Massachusetts he proved just the individual needed to lead the relief work in France under the Foreign Mission Society and was released for this purpose by the generosity of the former. His complete familiarity with every branch of Christian work is enabling him to make our relief work a permanent factor in the reconstruction of the scattered Baptist churches of France.

The Religious Life of a College

(Continued from page 1168)

the least number of hours offered being three, the highest forty-four and the average twelve hours. Of these eighty colleges, thirty-two make Bible a requirement the lowest number of hours required being two and the highest fifteen. Between 6000 and 7000 students are enrolled in Bible courses in these institutions, the average being about seventy-five to the college. This department sometimes offers courses in fields related to the Bible as in the History of Religion, Missions, Comparative Religions and some phases of Ethics. Prof. Sharpless, in his book "The American College," published in 1915 states that 17 per cent of the students enrolled were to be found in the curriculum Bible courses.

Bible the Text Book

These facts indicate the development of the field of religious instruction into departmental work of tremendous scope. Not only in the majority of cases is the Bible itself being taken as a text book and handled sympathetically—treated no longer as "mere" literature—but such practical fields as the administration of Christian education are being entered. The problems of "building and equipment, support, curriculum, worship, departmental organization, supervision, training of workers, week-day instruction, education in the family, community co-operation, records and reports" outlined by George A. Coe "furnish rich subject matter." Too much making and oiling of the machinery for our churches has been laid on the preacher. The time has come when the denominational college should educate its laymen in these fields and though at first thought these topics may seem strange in a college, they certainly are as pertinent to the future welfare and happiness of the college men and women of our day as many of the subjects now offered soberly in our college curricula. They ought to be entitled to a place in the sun along with other and valuable courses on pure business administration.

Dr. Betts, in the same article mentioned above, indicates the demands of the student in this department: (1) A fund of religious information; (2) religious interpretation of life; (3) the application of religion to social relations; (4) training for participation in religious activities. Most certainly a wide sweep is outlined here and the "one man department" now so cautiously introduced and so carefully restricted must be expanded. What an opportunity in such a department to stir the imagination that the vision may be seen; to quicken the pulse so that the creative impulse may be translated into productive energy; to propagate the "power of God unto salvation," that operates so many times through human lives. In the life of many a youngster, the "On-going God" first becomes real in such a class room and discussions there provoked are continued till the thought is crystallized, the purpose strengthened and the commonplace made vital.

Intangible Atmosphere

There remains to be discussed the intangible religious atmosphere which results when all these diverse and varied elements are active. How real it is, only those who have lived in it know! It pervades the campus, it steals into the dormitories, it rules out certain topics from conversations, it drives profane language from the athletic field, it keeps certain pictures from the walls, it creates powers of inhibition hitherto little suspected, it tends to keep the eye clear and direct, and the hand steady and reliable, it makes the laughter hearty and wholesome, it lays the foundation of pure homes, it builds character as the bird builds its nest—we so frequently never discover it till it is done.

Not always to be sure is it at once and completely victorious, but it persists, so that many times this intangible something dares try its hand at educating our conscience, directing our thought, and molding our very lives.

Thank God for the denominational colleges, founded on conviction, reared with prayer and faith, frequent monuments of heroic sacrifice, wherein our boys and girls mayhap will sometime feel their souls stirred and their hearts aroused "to follow in their train!"

Fellowship

BY D. L. RITCHIE

*I found that when I walked with men in simple brotherhood,
I also walked in tune with God in joyous, filial mood.
The friendship was not two but three; the Lord and he and I,
When to his hungry look for love
my heart made swift reply.
The Father's House was very near alike to me and him
When in response to whispered woe
my eyes grew quickly dim.
And all the things that Jesus said were true to him and me
When he in gratitude replied with manly courtesy.
The kingdom of that Blessed One in both our hearts shone bright
When both of us with child-like faith rejoiced in love of right.
The Father's voice stirred in our lives the never ending song
When from ourselves we turned to help another man along.
And then a glorious company walked with us on the road
As in the love of men we found the purest love of God.
Montreal.*

Who's Who Among the Baptists

A Review of Contemporary Denominational Biography

By WILLIAM G. LIPPHARD

FEW men have been accorded a reception like that extended to John Alexander Frey as he stepped to the platform of the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines. He had just been introduced by Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, the Baptist Commissioner from Europe, who told that great audience the thrilling story of Mr. Frey's exile in Siberia and his experiences during the Bolshevik regime. Here is a Baptist made of the stuff that heroes are made of, whose experience because of his loyalty to the faith of our fathers reminds one vividly that the hardships and persecutions of the early Christians are occasionally bequeathed to succeeding generations of apostles.

In 1915, on only twenty-four hours' notice, he was sent to exile in Siberia by the government of the czar. Hundreds of pastors accompanied him, among them being Rev. S. Lehmann, one of the Foreign Mission Society's correspondents in Europe. The severity of a Siberian winter soon made the condition of these unhappy exiles most pitiful. The Foreign Mission Society made earnest efforts to send them money, but all letters addressed to them via Europe were invariably returned undelivered. Finally a letter with money enclosed was sent via China and reached Mr. Lehmann just in time to save the party from death by starvation. Mr. Lehmann, however, died a short time later. It was not until July, 1920, when Secretary Franklin met Mr. Frey at the Baptist Conference in London, that the Society learned how the money had eventually reached its destination.

In July, 1917, Mr. Frey was released and returned to Riga, but only in time to suffer the hardship brought on by the Bolsheviks. His property, consisting of a large publishing house, was destroyed, and all his personal effects appropriated by the Bolsheviks. Fortunately he was able to retain his wedding-ring and his watch by keeping them in hiding for many months. During this reign of terror in Russia, Mr. Frey witnessed scenes of cruelty which are almost unbelievable. Imagine the frightfulness of marching a group of victims to an open field, compelling them each to dig his own grave, standing them beside the graves, then a volley of bullets and their dead bodies falling with almost mathematical accuracy into the graves which their own hands had dug! When looking into the face of Mr. Frey we can hardly realize that those kind gray eyes have seen human misery and terror such as few men have been compelled to witness.

The food shortage became acute. In anticipation of the need, Mr. Frey had stored away for several years some black rye bread with the faithful janitor of his printing plant. When the extremity of their need finally forced him and his family to turn to this stale bread for food, it was found to be filled with worms. To overcome their natural repugnance, the family each evening at the supper hour turned out the lights and ate the bread in darkness so as not to see the worms! When the Germans arrived and drove away the Bolsheviks eight hundred

JOHN ALEXANDER FREY

A sufferer under both Czar and Bolsheviks, he lost all his worldly goods. For forty years he has led the Baptist movement in Latvia.

of them were executed in Riga after court martial proceedings. Notwithstanding his own fearful experiences, Mr. Frey heroically appeared before the German courts, and pleaded on behalf of many Bolsheviks who were Communists only in ideas, and who had not carried on propaganda or cruelty. Through his efforts scores of them were pardoned.

Until 1915 Mr. Frey was pastor of the Baptist church at Riga, in what is now known as Latvia. He served here for nearly forty years. He was originally a printer and during his pastorate was also the owner of a large publishing establishment. The income from this business enabled him to render large service to the Baptists in Latvia and to apply the modest salary paid by the church to missionary work. His printing press for years had published many religious tracts, periodicals and several of the denominational papers which circulated among Baptists in Germany and Northern Europe.

Since August, 1920, Mr. Frey has been in America. He is a modest, unassuming man of gentle personality, and well educated. He speaks four languages—English, German, Lettish and Russian. His book, "The Land Where Jesus Lived," has appeared in five languages in two editions and thousands of copies have been sold. During the year in which he has been in America he has addressed 357 public meetings, attended by more than fifty-five thousand people. He has made 450 calls, has written 1280 letters, and has traveled twenty-three thousand miles. He sailed from New York on September 22 for Latvia, where, under the direction of the Foreign Mission Society, he will have charge of a Baptist seminary for the training of Lettish Baptist preachers. One of his final words, just before the departure of the ship, was to express again, on behalf of his people, their grateful appreciation of the assistance rendered by Northern Baptists and their unspeakable joy over the ship-load of supplies which is now being collected for distribution in Latvia as well as in Poland and Czecho-Slovakia.

Before the war Mr. Frey was financially able to provide for his family a living in modest comfort. He has lost all that we commonly classify as worldly goods and is today a poor man. Yet who can measure his wealth in spiritual possessions, or count his riches toward God or weigh his treasures in deeds of mercy and service? Those who attended the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines will long remember the thrilling address of John Alexander Frey.

My Autumn Walk

On woodlands ruddy with autumn
The amber sunshine lies;
I look on the beauty round me,
And tears come into my eyes.

Beautiful over my pathway
The forest spoils are shed;
They are spotting the grassy hills
With purple and gold and red.

Oh, for the fresh spring-season,
When the groves are in their prime
And far away in the future
Is the frosty autumn-time.

The leaves are swept from the branches;
But the living buds are there,
With folded flower and foliage
To sprout in a kinder air.

—William Cullen Bryant

Peace Is Sending Forth Her Prophets

Readers of THE BAPTIST will have observed that this paper has not hesitated to call for an international program of justice, friendly understanding, organized peace and disarmament. The tide of sentiment in favor of such a program is rising throughout America. A few representative expressions follow:

"DAILY bread cannot come in time to Europe unless we in the United States make it possible not as a palliative through alms, but through real international friendship. Organized religion can help by giving leadership and voice to the understanding of our countrymen. This is the great opportunity for religion." —EDWARD FILENE in The Century.

"Thou Shalt Not Make the Next War Holy"

Mr. Norman Thomas, writing in The Nation, says:

"Even so, the writer considers that our poets, writers and preachers can render a distinctive service in accepting a new commandment, 'Thou shalt not make the next war holy.' It is not for such issues as Yap and the Mexican oil wells that men fight but for a menaced fatherland, for liberty, and for all the beautiful ideals which war betrays." Quoting Anatole France, he goes on to say that 'the worst wars are idealist wars. If you fight a man because he has what you want, some sort of settlement is possible; if you fight him because you consider yourself God's agent and him the devil's there can be no ground for peace.'"

The final test of the coming conference, Mr. Thomas concludes, may well be "the measure in which it conceals or reveals the truth that peace is neither the product of a diffuse sentimentality, nor attainable by some simple formula, but the consequence of a way of life which hitherto men have rejected in their social, economic, and international relations."

Agreement That Will End Armament

From an entirely different point of view the New York Times said editorially on September 19:

"It is policy that makes Government expenditure, and it is international policy that piles up military appropriations. Once secure sanctioned agreements between nations which make heavy armaments superfluous, and they will drop of their own weight."

Mild Curtailment Not Enough

Appealing to 150,000 churches of America to marshal their forces to seize the "priceless opportunity" offered by the International Conference on the Limitation of Armament, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has issued a call to Prayer and Consecration. The message is a frank statement of the responsibility of the churches and presents as a definite aim:

"We cannot be satisfied with a mild curtailment of our military expenditure. Nothing less than a far-reaching reduction in armaments on sea and land can suffice."

A program for a country-wide observance of special sessions of prayer and meetings of an educational character has been prepared. It presents concrete suggestions. The most important feature is a call to "observe Sunday, November 6, as a day for special prayer, self-examination and supplication for God's blessing on the International Conference on the Limitation of Armament; and to consider in a sermon on that day, 'America's International duty.'"

As requested by President Harding the Federal Council appeals to the churches to hold special services on November 11 at the time of the opening of the Conference and the national memorial service. It also suggests that special meetings in the churches be arranged for Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings, November 7-10, to consider the problems of international relations; or, if these dates be impracticable, to use the ordinary mid-week meetings for this purpose for a month.

Credit Men on Disarmament

The Board of Directors of the National Association of Credit Men have taken action in part as follows (as reported in the press of September 21):

"In the restoration of world affairs, and to prevent, if prevention is possible, a similar deluge, nationalism must give way to internationalism and armaments must be reduced. With this conviction we applaud sincerely the motives and intent that have guided the President of this great republic to seek a conference of nations for the purpose of reaching an understanding for the reduction of armaments and to control ambitions that might prove dangerous to the future peace and welfare of the world."

Better Build Roads

The Denver Post is clear and bold in its analysis of the economic argument in the following concrete instance:

"The cost of four modern battleships would build two national hard surface highways, one from New York to San Francisco, the other from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada; the four battleships will be obsolete in ten or fifteen years, the highways will stand forever. We have started a movement asking the government to build these highways under supervision of army engineers. This would give employment to several hundred thousand, disseminating the money generally among the people, increasing real estate values all over the country, starting a period of national internal improvement that would stimulate all values everywhere. These national highways are needed, will be built some day, why not now? The whole thing is sane, practical and wise."

Wichita Kansas Speaks

The Wichita, Kansas, Federation of Churches is promulgating "Ten Questions Intended to Stimulate Thought":

"1. What is the meaning of true neighborliness among nations?"

"2. Can an American citizen be an adequate Christian without being neighborly in his attitude toward such people as the Mexicans and the Japanese?"

"3. Is it Christian for America to spend more than 88c out of every dollar of its Federal taxes for war purposes?"

"4. Can international relations be Christianized without some sort of a League of Nations with America in it?"

"5. Can we believe in Foreign Missions and at the same time despise the 'backward races'?"

"6. On what conditions will a Christian American be able to forgive a defeated enemy?"

"7. Ought Christian America to be preparing for the 'next war'? Would it not be good statesmanship to spend at least as much in preparation for peace?"

"8. Ought the Christian Church to urge some 'moral equivalent for war'? May conscription be applied by the state for other than military service?"

"9. What has Christian America to do with 'Abroad'?"

"10. What is the Christian interpretation of 'America First'?"

Greater Boston Federation

The Greater Boston Federation of Churches has passed a resolution which "solemnly memorializes not only its own constituency but all persons with faith in God's Fatherhood and in human brotherhood:

"First, to make world disarmament and a righteous solution of Pacific problems by the conference subjects of constant prayer. . . .

"Second, to study for pulpit use and in adult classes and forums the great questions that are to be discussed in the sessions of the Conference and in especial America's relations with Japan and China. . . .

"Third, to observe Sunday, November 6 in all churches with public supplications for divine guidance in the sessions of the Conference with special sermons as to the Christian significance of this international gathering.

"Fourth, to set apart Armistice Day, Friday, November 11, the date of the convening of the Conference, as a Day of Prayer and Convocation. . . ."

Minneapolis Baptists in Line

"Upon the eve of the assembling at Washington of the international conference on limitation of armaments the members of this congregation desire to record their profound conviction of the importance of this meeting. Upon its action or inaction probably depends the weal or the woe of the peoples of the world for years to come. Agreements made and faithfully performed will minimize military burdens and lessen the danger of war. Failure to agree will emphasize international distrust and possibly make a bad condition worse. It is therefore the earnest hope and prayer of this people that charity shall prevail and that the conference may reach an agreement; also that friendly intercourse in the conference may so increase good will among men as to make easy and probable the keeping of the agreement for future generations."—Resolution of Trinity Baptist Church, Minneapolis.

DR. CRESSY AND BOTH TEAMS

THEIR ENTIRE LIFE IS ROMANTIC

A Summer in Southern Ohio

By L. H. MAYES

I WISH that I could take you with me into the hills of southern Ohio for a few days. It was about such hills as these that "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come" and "The Shepherd of the Hills" were written. I had always pictured them as very picturesque people, heroes who wandered about with a squirrel rifle on their shoulder all day long. But now I have been among them and naturally did not find some of the picturesque romantic part which I had expected. But in place of that we found deeper things than we had anticipated. There was a real romance there; the entire life of the people is romantic. If you could go into these hills you would find some choice souls, some men and women with a depth of character which would surprise you.

Missions and the missionary challenge of today were what called us into this work among these people. Last spring Dr. F. B. Cressey, director for the Ohio board of promotion, expressed his desire to send out two student volunteer teams of two men each from the Denison University student volunteer band. The men chosen for one team were Dave Voss and Charles Roadarmel, Geo. Cressey taking the place of Mr. Voss in midsummer. Mr. E. L. Exman and I comprised the other team. The first team travelled in Northern Ohio while our team covered Southern Ohio. During the summer each team travelled several thousand miles, visited about twenty-four churches and took the missionary message to several thousand people who rarely hear of such a thing as missions. With us we carried our own stereopticon lantern and two sets of slides covering the Baptist mission work as furnished by the board of promotion. Usually we spent the first half of the week in one church and the last half in another church, thus having three full days in each community.

I wish that you could see some of these young people. If they had the same advantages which our college men and women have, I should hate to see them in competition for the high honors of life. I fear that many of our sons and daughters of the city would be the worse for the comparison.

But there seems to be one great outstanding need among these people and that is the need of trained leaders. Most of these old churches are without preaching services, having just a Sunday school. Very seldom do you find a pastor supplying a single church; the circuit rider, ministering to four or five communities is the usual type of minister. One community in Lawrence County has sixteen churches within a radius of five miles, only one of which has a full time pastor. I admire these men who have had the courage to go into the ministry; you have to take off your hat to them. Many of them are ordained by the church in which they were raised and later become pastor of the same church. During the week they usually farm. This is not easy, to gain honor and respect in your boyhood church, working with the men who have known you as a boy. But these men do it and do it well. However, their day is passing in most places. The need today in these churches is for a trained ministry with a college and seminary education in order to lead the young people.

There are a good many religious sects to be found in Southern Ohio. The Holiness people are making headway and are presenting a challenge to the older churches in some places. The present plan among the churches is not providing enough spiritual life for those emotional people. Simply a Sunday school or preaching now and then will no longer suffice for these communities. Either our churches must get to work and satisfy their spiritual needs or else the church members will turn, a great many of them, to the sect which will give them the spiritual food which they crave.

We have referred a little earlier in this article to the young people in these churches. They are unwilling to follow in the footsteps of their fathers and mothers. Just as they ride in their car now instead of their old surrey, so are they demanding that the church progress and satisfy their enlarged needs. Unless the parents provide better church privileges they need not expect to keep their grip on the young people.

A SOUTHERN OHIO PASTOR'S HOME

Brotherhood in Prague

Central Europe is ready for the brotherhood message and organization. Millions of people have cast off from the Roman church. Brotherhood appeals to them.

By SAMUEL ZANE BATTEN

IT certainly was providential that the World Brotherhood Congress should meet in Prague this year, as it did August 27-31. For events have moved swiftly in that part of the world and the Brotherhood message fell on prepared soil. Perhaps a few words may be permitted in order that we may have a background for the picture.

Almost like a flash of light the new Republic of Czecho-Slovakia has appeared upon the map; but the people who compose the republic have an eventful past. Authentic history, in any detail at least, does not begin before the fifth century. In Caesar's time what is now known as Bohemia was inhabited by a warlike race known as the Boji. These gave way to the Marcomanni, and after these were extinguished or scattered the Czechs, a branch of the great Slavonic race, filled up the country.

The introduction of Christianity into the country in the ninth century is one of the romances of history. The accounts all agree that two priests from Constantinople, Cyrilus and Methodius, were the heralds of the Gospel. Cyril translated the gospel into their language and himself invented an alphabet for this purpose. The Cyrillac alphabet, as it is called, is still universal in Eastern Europe.

Hus and Bohemia Inseparable

The history of Bohemia will ever be associated with the name of John Hus. Various causes co-operated to drive Hus into revolt against the Roman Church and the injustice of his day. In England John Wycliffe was translating the Scriptures and sending out his preachers to evangelize the people. Hus came to know the writings of Wycliffe and his soul was fired. From his high position in the university Hus protested against the sale of indulgences and the corruptions of the church; with rare eloquence he pleaded for truth and liberty. By priestly intrigue Hus was brought before a council summoned by the Pope. This council at Constance pronounced him a heretic and condemned him to be burnt. This infamous decree was carried into effect; but the flames of his fire kindled a torch in old Europe. John Ziska took up the torch and flung it in the face of the enemies of truth. So successful was he as a military leader, so devoted were the people to the truth, that by the middle of the fifteenth century not a priest of the Roman Church could be found in Bohemia or Moravia.

For four hundred years Rome has waged an unceasing warfare against the spirit of this people. When Bohemia came under the power of Austria every effort was made to suppress the Czech spirit. Count Lutzw closed his brief but interesting history of Bohemia with these gloomy words: "The policy of the present Austrian prime minister is more hostile to Bohemia than that of any of his predecessors. Dark clouds seem to surround the future of Bohemia." Those words were written in 1909.

Then came the world war, started by the Austrian government. During the war the men of Bohemia and Moravia, the Czechs and Slovaks, were compelled to fight in the armies of the central powers. But because of their opposition to Austria they were a source of weakness rather than strength. As the war was closing the people of these countries revolted from Austria and declared their independence. On October 26, 1918, representatives from the Czechs and Slovaks met in the old state house in Philadelphia and gave their Declaration of Independence to the world. When the war ended Professor Thomas G. Masaryk returned to Prague as the life-long president of the new republic.

The new republic starts out under favorable auspices but it has serious problems to face. It is true that the people are fairly homogenous and are mostly of closely allied nations. But they are untrained in democracy and are not used to co-operation. It is true, also, that they are surrounded by unfriendly nations who are dissatisfied with the treaty of Paris. But the people possess a high degree of intelligence; there is practically no illiteracy among them, less than one and a half per cent; they possess remarkable independence of judgment and take an interest in public affairs. Beyond all, the people have a most valuable leader in the President of the Republic. President Masaryk is a man of tried convictions and sterling character; in fact, he is clearly one of the world's few gentlemen.

Since the war a marked change has come over the spirit of the people. The oppressive load of Austria is lifted and the souls of the people are free. We all regret the sufferings of the women and children in Austria, and especially in Vienna; but the passing of the Austrian Empire is a great gain for humanity and religion. For five hundred years Austria might almost be called the official cut-throat of the Roman Church, and more than once it has driven a liberty loving people to death.

Leaving the Church by Thousands

It is not strange that the people of Czecho-Slovakia by hundreds and thousands should be leaving the Roman Church. In fact, the movement away from Rome has almost become a national movement. People by the thousands are renouncing the Roman Church, and whole towns are going almost en masse. In the city of Prague one Protestant church has received over six thousand converts this year, and another has gained twenty-five hundred additions.

Then the World Brotherhood is a well-known word amongst the people. There are some eight different religious bodies and all bear the name of Brethren. It is true that these various bodies have not always practiced brotherhood across denominational lines; but a better day is dawning. This emphasis upon brotherhood created a favorable atmosphere for the congress. And this interest in brotherhood brought to the congress many pastors and workers from all of the churches and from many sections of the country. The splendid Municipal Hall was placed at our disposal and here the meetings were held. On Saturday, the 27th of August, there was a reception to the delegates by the American ambassador, Mr. Richard Crane, who proved a most generous host and extended a most cordial welcome. On Monday afternoon there was a reception by the British ambassador, and he was equally cordial. Sunday, the delegates spoke in a large number of churches in and around Prague. The people were most cordial and attentive. Dr. Rolvix Harlan preached to a large congregation in the English-speaking church. This is a historic church built in 1158 and associated with many events in national history.

On the second day much of the time was given to addresses from representatives of the different religious bodies in Czecho-Slovakia. This was a most interesting service, as all of the speakers while describing their own church doctrines, yet emphasized the unity of their common faith. Steps are being taken toward a national brotherhood federation in Czecho-Slovakia.

Europe is Ready for Brotherhood

On the closing night most cordial messages were received from President Masaryk, from Prime Minister Benes and Dr. Fajnor, Minister of State. President Masaryk was unable to attend on account of illness; but his splendid words were most heartily cheered.

One of the most significant and interesting meetings of the entire congress was the open air service in front of the John Hus monument. A number of speakers from America, England and France addressed the large and attentive audience. The expositions of brotherhood, the appeals for devoted and sacrificial living on the part of all, were well received. After the speaking ceased the audience joined heartily in singing the stirring national hymn. It may be noted that Hus has become the one great national hero. He was the champion of liberty and justice, and after four hundred years he is coming to his place in the hearts of the people.

Central Europe is ready for the brotherhood message and organization. Millions of people have cast off the Roman Church; many are suspicious of all churches, but the brotherhood message appeals to them. A wide door of opportunity is open before us, and the brotherhood council at a meeting held on September 9th in London, considered these calls and planned its work.

Dr. Harlan and myself held several conferences with our Baptist workers in Prague. It was a pleasure to meet such workers as Mr. and Mrs. Kolator, Rev. Joseph Tolar, and Rev. Joseph Novotny. On Sunday afternoon I had the privilege of addressing a large audience in the Baptist church. This is a well equipped building in a fine residential section. There are many things to encourage the men in our Baptist work. On Thursday evening I addressed a large audience in a public hall at Roudnice, that had been arranged for by Rev. Joseph Tolar and the pastor, Rev. F. Henous.

Dawn of a New Religious Movement in Czechoslovakia

By REV. JOSEF NOVOTNY

(Originally printed in the London Times and Freeman, and forwarded by the author to THE BAPTIST.)

WHEN Czechoslovakia was liberated from national oppression by Austria, it seemed only natural that the Czechoslovaks should desire that their national liberation should be crowned by a religious liberation. There was more than one reason for it. When the kingdom of Bohemia lost its independence to Austria three hundred years ago, from the capital city of Austria, Vienna, came a twofold oppression: national and religious. The Protestant Czechs were Germanised and Romanised by force. Now, as Austria could not Germanise all, she could not Romanise all. After the world-war, when the oppressed nations could breathe again and the Czechs spent their first two years in national establishment, came the time to face the other enemy as well. As the Czechs tried, after the liberation, to cleanse the national life from all Austrian influence, so now they are trying to cleanse themselves from all Romish influence. They cannot forget that their country was the cradle of the Reformation, that they are the nation of Hus, Jerome and the Bohemian Brethren; that they have the honour to have the first printed Bible in the living tongue; that they sent the first missionaries of Reformation ideas to many countries (even to Great Britain); that Roman Catholicism was pressed on them by force through the Austrian enemy, and that their Reformation was interrupted by a three hundred years intermezzo.

Now, what is the story of the new movement?

Our government prescribed for the first time in our new state a census. Everybody had to say to what nationality he belonged and what kind of religion he professed.

In the old Austria it was not easy to leave the church, but now the conditions are different. And here starts the new movement. Many a Czech, who was even only a nominal Roman Catholic, was ashamed to put down that he belonged to the church which burned the greatest Czechoslovak that ever lived, John Hus, the Church which robbed our greatest men of their property and either killed them or sent them abroad as beggars, and which, with this dishonest property, made the cruel propaganda of their "faith" in our country.

Leaving the Church That Killed Hus

"We do not wish to be any longer in a society of executioners and robbers," said many. "Our leaving is a protest against keeping our name in the statistics of that church to which we never belonged. We cannot read the history of our nation and not feel ashamed that we still belong to those people who destroyed the whole life of our nation."

Now the statistics will show how many people left the church. But many experts say that about 20-30 per cent of the population left the church and the movement is only in the beginning yet.

It starts formally, it is true. But there are signs already of a pure religious movement. Some of these people remained "without confession." But not all, and not even the majority. Great numbers and many the new Czechoslovak church. This church broke all ties with Rome, recognises the great men of our Reformation as its spiritual leaders, uses the Czechoslovak language in the church, and is growing in numbers as well as in inward evolution daily. There are Protestant churches which have accepted in the last few weeks more members than their own church had formerly. One Protestant church in Prague, which had 500 members, accepted in a few days 4,000 new members. In the west of Bohemia, in a big village with a big Romish church, all the population left the Romish church, and all joined the Protestant church; in the Romish church there remained only three members—the priest, his lady-cook and the janitor of the church. Our own church in Prague has accepted several hundred new members in the last few days.

In the Protestant churches are many people who appeal for deepening of our spiritual life. Denominational polemics have ceased, dogmatic battles are at an end; but everybody feels that we must start to be more pious, better, deeper, nearer to Christ. A professor of dogmatics in our Theological Faculty, a young and very liberal theologian, started a movement by a sermon in which he practically condemned his own life and by his earnestness in many articles and speeches awoke many brethren and sisters. The Protestant churches resolved joined the different Protestant churches in their last conference to send their pastors from the lukewarm churches to those regions where there is the greatest work and the deepest movement in order that they may be influenced by that movement and bring it home.

There is no doubt it means a great responsibility for all the Protestant churches. They feel it and they have conferences in which they discuss what to do with the new members. It is true they cannot in one night become full-blooded Protestants, but it is touching to see how eager they are to learn and to know what they ought to do to be real "Bohemian Brethren."

And again, it has a great effect on the Protestant churches. Many a lukewarm church became a living force because of the new opportunity. The greatest movement is in the South West of Bohemia, just where there was the greatest stronghold of the Romish church, but it is holy ground—it is the birthplace of John Hus and the Czech Reformers.

The movement is just at the beginning. On the 21st of June we shall celebrate the 300th anniversary of the martyrdom of the 27 Czech Protestant noblemen, the leaders of the Czech nation, who were beheaded in the chief square in Prague by Roman Catholic Austria, after the sad battle in which we lost our Independence. Great preparations are being made to fulfil the great movement.

The Pacific Conference

By CHARLES L. BROMLEY

The Pacific Conference, bearing with it the possibility of world peace, should find the Christian church awake to its opportunity. War is the offspring of greed, it breeds hate, and creates hell, and Christian people everywhere should join in hope, prayer, and endeavor to make the conference a success, for its failure will lead only to increased friction, more rivalry, greater armament, and the inevitable result—War. There is a general feeling in America that Japan is the outstanding obstacle to peace, at least in the Pacific Basin. There can be no doubt that at present Japan's policy toward her weaker neighbors is the most dangerous element in the situation, but a factor that is too often overlooked is that Japan's present policy was shaped by the policies of European nations in their dealings with the weaker peoples of Asia. Japan can hardly be expected to change her present policy unless there is a radical change in the attitude of Western nations toward the East, Near and Far. And in order to be convincing, such a change must be accompanied by a willingness on the part of leading European powers to give back conquests made in the days of ungodly imperialism.

The Pacific Conference cannot begin with a clean slate, there must be some attempt to right past wrongs if real progress is to be made. That such wrongs exist can be gleaned from every leading writer on the Far East. To give an example, Osborne, an English writer, in a recent book, "The New Japanese Peril," says, "Foreign intervention has brought China to what she is today, namely, a land torn by faction, verging on bankruptcy, impotent to oppose force by force, a complex of divergent tendencies that are not permitted to unite or to attain uniformity. A virile, intelligent, thrifty, and hard working people have been rendered impotent to realize, and put forth their full strength. They have in turn been hood-winked, bargained with, coerced by force of arms, lied to, cheated and even drugged and narcotized in order to keep them in leading strings, to bind them to the paying of tribute to their unscrupulous oppressors, and to prevent them from rousing themselves from their slumbers and throwing off their tormentors. Indeed what the Far East, and in particular China, needs is a fresh breeze, perhaps a cyclone, to drive out the poisonous gases which threaten to destroy its very life." (pp. 119-120.)

That Japan is not the only party referred to in the above quotation is evident from the fact that Russia, Germany, France, and England each had holdings in China before the war.

Against the aggressive policy of European nations toward Asia and China in particular, America has launched feeble protests that so far have proved themselves "scraps of paper."

Ningpo, China, Aug. 30, 1921.

Young People's Work

Topic for October 30.

THE BIBLE TRANSPORTED AND TRANSMITTED

Isa. 55:6-13

Text Book: "The Bible and Missions," by Helen Barrett Montgomery

"It is the great destiny of England and America to carry the Bible to the earth's remotest bounds." Choate.

1. Bibles expensive and scarce. In the opening of the nineteenth century Bibles were scarce and quite expensive. Outside of America and the Protestant nations of Europe they were almost unobtainable by the laity. Such destitution existed in the pioneer sections of the United States.

2. The oldest national societies. It was in 1804 that the British and Foreign Bible society was founded at the London Tavern in the presence of about 300 people. The influence which brought about the organization was the story of a little Welsh girl's search for a Bible. She walked twenty-eight miles only to find that the last copy had been sold. One laid aside for a friend was given to her. Fatigue and hunger were forgotten, as tightly holding the book in her hands, Mary Jones hastened to walk the long miles between her and home.

3. Difficulties and obstacles. They came thick and fast. Indifference and sectarianism hindered. War had a blighting effect. But these stormy times were no bar to missions. William Carey launched the modern enterprise of foreign missions. The first American societies were founded in 1812.

4. Rapid extension. The expansion of the work to all parts of the country was rapid. The atheism following the French Revolution was a mighty challenge to the Christian forces. The Welsh people got their Bible; it found its way into the Highlands of Scotland; in Britain the book was translated into five languages. From Great Britain the work was extended to continental Europe.

5. The Bible and founders of the Republic. The founders of this Republic recognized the great value of the Bible. Once in 1777 and in 1782 Congress took official action toward obtaining and supplying copies of the Bible. 20,000 copies were ordered in 1777. The first English Bible printed in the United States in 1782 was put under the auspices of Congress by the passage of the following resolution: "Resolved, that the United States in Congress assembled . . . recommend this edition of the Bible to the inhabitants of the United States."

(Signed) Charles Thomson, Secretary.

6. In our day. The Bible is today the most popular book in the world. The great denominations have interested themselves in the transporting and transmitting of it until it is now published in many languages throughout the earth. From the frozen North to the extreme South the colporter and missionary have gone giving the book to the people in their own tongue. Our young people's leaders should write to our own house the American Baptist Publication Society, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. asking for information as to what is being done in our own denomination in all parts of the earth. Secure a copy of "Bible and Missions," price 60 cts. from your nearest book store. The story of the book is more interesting and fascinating than any novel.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS

The first meeting of the new Executive Committee of the B. Y. P. U. of America met in Chicago, Illinois, on Friday afternoon and evening, September 9th. The attendance was large including representatives from Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan. Serious consideration was given to the activities of the Union in various parts of North America.

The great advance of the work in the last few years along the line of tithing and stewardship and Life Service presents a very difficult problem. Inadequate finances will in all probability materially affect progress for the years 1921-22.

The following recommendations will perhaps be of interest to our constituency at large:

1. Voted: That General Secretary White be instructed to act officially for the Executive Committee as a member of the Interdenominational Young People's Commission. Mr. White is at the present time serving as chairman of the Education and Service Activities Committee of the Commission.

2. Voted: That we institute a program of economy which will bring us within our budget and clean up outstanding obligations by the end of the fiscal year. Since the travel expense budget is about the only one which can be cut, it is recommended that the field work be reduced to a minimum.

3. Voted: That the Baptist Young People's Union of America promote for the remainder of the present fiscal year, the present Standard for Baptist Young People's societies, this promotion having been discontinued by the American Baptist Publication Society.

4. Voted: That the General Secretary be instructed to enter into conference with representatives of various young people's organizations looking forward to a definite statement of policy as over against the proposed plan of the International Sunday School Association and the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations taking over the whole program of religious education in the local church.

A brief study of the report of General Secretary White as submitted to the Executive Committee showed that the biggest problem of the Union was that of taking care of the response by our constituency to the program of the Union. With but little overhead machinery and a very limited budget the Union has been enabled to make a great contribution to the whole denominational program.

Some Specials.

Mr. Lester E. Stearns, president of the Claim St. B. Y. P. U., Aurora, Ill., has worked out some unique contest plans, etc. He will be pleased to pass them on to all young peoples societies interested. Write him.

Chief Laughing Water, who attended the International B. Y. P. U. convention in Cincinnati, upon request of the young people, had his picture taken. A number paid for these pictures. Unfortunately, the original list was lost. Those who are interested should write to Miss Mary Gleiss, 3864 Merrick Ave., Detroit, Mich.

From Rangoon, Burma: "In answer to your notice in THE BAPTIST, I hasten to accept your helpful free offer of a package of 16 leaflets on tithing. If you can spare them, you had better send me three sets. I am in the midst of a tithing campaign and the Lord has answered our prayers by giving us nine. I offered to tithe and to put half of my tithe on the church books on the condition that seven of our members would do likewise. We shall keep right on increasing the band, if possible. We shall need all of your ideas and help. As a result, we are going to be able to make our Church entirely self-supporting without any more help from the A. B. F. M. S. It is the only way to put a church on a sound basis. I was only converted to tithing within the last year or two."—V. W. Dyer.

Mr. Dyer is pastor of our English speaking Church, Rangoon, Burma. If there are pastors in the homeland interested in a tithing campaign, write to B. Y. P. U. of America, 125 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago, for a set of free pamphlets.

MONTANA young people under the leadership of Director C. H. Burrill are planning for a summer assembly in July, 1922. For the first session of the assembly, a large tent has been rented and will be used as an auditorium.

OVER THREE HUNDRED THOUSAND Baptist young people are enrolled in societies within the territory of the Southern Baptist Convention.

THE B. Y. P. U. BEACON is the name of a monthly sheet published by the Tacoma District B. Y. P. U. Mr. Roger E. Elder is editor in chief. The young people up in that neck of the woods are certainly live wires.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for October 30

STRONG DRINK IN A NATION'S LIFE
(World's Temperance Sunday)

Isaiah, 28:1-13. Golden Text, Heb. 2:15.
JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

Isaiah prophesied over a period of nearly fifty years covering the reign of four kings, viz., Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz and Hezekiah. These were years of prosperity in the main, and drunkenness which always accompanies prosperity was much in evidence. This was true of both the northern and southern kingdoms. By Ephraim, Isaiah has reference to Israel, and by "even these" in verse 7 he means Judah. Both are warned of the approaching judgment of God which will fall upon them at the hands of Assyria, — a judgment which surely came with swift retribution upon a people who refused to be warned by the word of God on the lips of Isaiah.

The Lesson Taught

The practice of drunkenness, the problem of drunkenness and the prohibition of drunkenness are three age-long topics which never lose their interest to the student of temperance.

The Practice of Drunkenness

The practice of drinking fermented fruit juices began about as soon as man discovered the stimulating effects of such beverage. Noah brought across the flood the habit of the antediluvians, and was found drunk in his own vineyard. Throughout all generations and among all races getting drunk on some form of intoxicant has been the practice. It remained however for the modern scientific age to mix drinks and to concoct beverages of which the ancients never dreamed. With scientific brewing and distilling came by slow degrees the organized liquor traffic and its manufacturing plants, wholesale houses, retail business, and all its ramifications into transportation and politics. The personal practice of drunkenness which the ancients followed became an organized process with publicity costing millions of money and with all other means utilized to make the practice universal and permanent. In Great Britain the liquor trade was respected and brewers became peers of the realm. In the United States the brewers were represented in congress indirectly, but always represented. In these two great countries the practice of drinking intoxicating beverages was becoming almost as common as the practice of eating food.

The Problem of Drunkenness

There was a simple problem of drunkenness when Isaiah wrote the lesson. The people of that day lived the simple life when all the complexities of modern civilization were unknown. In Samaria a man could get drunk in his own home on wine from his own vineyard without contributing to an organized liquor traffic or without endangering his own and other lives by driving a high-powered locomotive. But in our day the problem of drunkenness is complicated. It is necessarily involved with our laws, with our highly organized business system, with our powerful industries where safety first is the unalterable rule, with our awakening social conscience which calls for public welfare, and with our churches which have come to see that Christianity can make no compromises with organized or personal drunkenness. All these things are arrayed against drunkenness. If the law has ever protected the rum traffic, it was only by sumptuary legislation providing for its regulation and never by constitutional legislation acknowledging its natural right to exist. Both business and industry found out that drunkenness was a liability and never an asset. Of course that cleared the way for the simplification of the problem, because the social conscience of the people when wholesome and the religious convictions of the churches when intelligent have always tackled the problem directly. The problem is being solved in the United States; but in Europe the age-long custom of drinking and the well-established property interests involved in the liquor business retard the solution.

The Prohibition of Drunkenness

It may be said at the very beginning that drunkenness can never be fully prohibited. Neither can theft or arson or murder or the more minor offenses of violating automobile regulations or failing to pay taxes when due. The majority of the people of the United States are law-abiding, and no minority of speeders or pimps or booze-hoisters should through all the free publicity given them discourage the great mass of respectable citizens with reference to the success attained in the enforcement of law. Moreover the majority should create such public opinion against the law violators that beer-smuggling and beer-guzzling would be reduced to a negligible measure. Prohibition is no experiment in this country. Sovereign states like Kansas have had prohibition for more than a generation, and it has proved to be an unmixed blessing to the people. All the arguments and all the means now being used to break down national prohibition have been used to break down state prohibition, and when the man from Kansas reads all the publicity given to the cry for a return to the licensed saloon and sees other evidences of the same movement in certain directions, he just smiles, because with him it is old stuff. The captains of industry and the great mass of men engaged in the industries do not want the saloon; the big business men are strong for prohibition; the women who preside over the homes of the land are arrayed against the drink traffic; the churches may be divided on many things, but on this one thing, the maintenance of constitutional prohibition, they are united. Let us strengthen these forces in standing together for a better enforcement of the law; let us demand the open windows without obstruction in the old saloons which still maintain the old signs and the old atmosphere; let us provide more fully and efficiently for the social wants of the men who lost the poor man's club when the saloon closed.

One hundred and twenty-five happy youngsters, lined up two by two with their bags of cloth swung over their shoulders, and singing in perfect time at the top of their voices—

"Everybody's getting fatter, up here at Old Oak Farm,
Everybody's getting fatter, there's reason for alarm,
Everybody's getting fatter, I'll tell the reason why,
We get the eats than can't be beat, up here at Old Oak Farm."

Can you imagine it? Then you have some idea of the happiness which the Baptist Fresh Air Home at Somers, N. Y., brings to the tenement children of New York City who live among brick walls and stone pavements. Miss Hazel Illsley, a missionary of the Woman's Home Mission Society, escorted over 100 of the Judson neighborhood children home after their two weeks of fun in the country. Through Grand Central Station, down into the subway they sang their songs about Old Oak Farm, interspersed with "Holy, Holy, Holy," "Stand Up, Stand Up for Jesus," and "Brightly Gleams Our Banner." They had hundreds of listeners for everytime the train stopped, crowds thronged at every window to see what was happening. No one knows what lessons those kiddies taught that day!

At the opening of Brown University on the 28th of September, it was found that over 400 had registered in the new Freshman class, by far the largest number in the history of the University. All buildings are crowded and the students have had to overflow into the homes around the campus. Among the new graduate students is Mr. Thomas T. Ling, who comes to America under the auspices of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. He is a graduate of Shanghai College and will specialize in chemistry during his stay in the United States.

The Chimney Corner

Have You a Little Fairy in Your House?

ARTICLE I "THE CHATTER BOX"

It had come to the point where Peter was always directly underfoot. All over the house he would shadow her from morning till night—attic, cellar, kitchen, parlor, sewing-room—they were all one to him if She were there! And since he was a Why-Child, this perpetual shadowing and continued questioning grew to be—ah! well, no doubt you know! So when she read about the Chatter Box she smiled happily to herself, and took Betty into the delights of the secret, so that after school she could make the simple contents for the box.

On a certain morning she brought it out and laid it on the table. Possibly you would have said: "Why it's just a square, blue box, the kind in which kitchen alarm-clocks come home from the store!" But its obvious source was camouflaged with painted lads and lassies, cut from magazines and pasted all around the sides and top—dear little "Lux" individuals who, alone in all the world, seem able to wear party clothes to play in!

Peter pounced on it at once, and gleefully rubbed friendly fingers over all their pleasant little faces, and as he rubbed there came a most suspicious rattling sound inside the box.

"There's something there!" he breathed in a small awed voice.

"There is!" agreed his mother, and smiled to see him whisk the cover off and bring to light a—

"Look, muvver! it's a ambulance, for awful sick folks, muvver!"

How could he help but know right off its significance, for was there a red cross on each side? And although in your sophistication you could have diagnosed it as the bottom of a little box such as visiting cards need, with a sheet of heavy white paper curved to form the "canvas awning," held in place by brass paper fasteners, with two empty spools for wheels—simplicity itself; yet Peter overlooked its home-made qualities, and straightway began to pull it by its long, red string around the room in stunned delight. But presently the inevitable questions chattered forth.

"Muvver, what makes that funny box have ambulances insides?"

"Because it's a Chatter Box, Peterkin, and a Chatter Box will always have something inside it for you to play with, dear, if you listen hard to the story about the little new plaything and never ask a single foolish question. So if you remember all I tell you about the ambulance and put it away in the Chatter Box tonight, then tomorrow there'll surely be another present in it, and a new story about that other present, so that the playthings can chatter to you all day long. But ah, me! if you forget the stories and come chattering to me, then I fear you'll find the Chatter Box entirely empty the next day—not one littlest bit of a toy! So, listen with all your ears, dear."

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Peter fairly glowed, like rare sunsets in July. "Oh muvver, muvver!" he cried ecstatically. Such is the romance of suspense, and the mysterious charm of boxes, even if it's only spools attached to very little ones.

He sat spell bound as she wove the first story from sheer imagination: about an ambulance in faraway India where all the people have very brown skins.

"Brown all over?" gasped he, entranced. "All over," she nodded.

"Doesn't it hurt to be brown all over?"

"Oh! no, it's just exactly as nice as being white all over, or else God would never have made so many little brown children. But tell me, does it ever hurt you to be white all over, Peterkin?"

He nodded gravely and placed a whimsical hand on his stomach: "hm'm, when you're sick inside the white it hurts!"

"Exactly! And my dearest, it hurts the little brown children, too, oh dreadfully! And for a longer time, because there are no doctors there, so what do you suppose?"

"Dunno," gasped Peter, breathless.

"Why, we sent them a doctor—you and I, and father and Betty, and everybody else in our church who puts money in the collection plate on Sundays."

"That's nice," sighed Peter. "I like doctors."

So from this point she wove a tale of doctors in the place called India, and of bullock carts to carry them all over town and country to give medicine. Instantly he caught the application of it, and became the yoke of oxen to pull it here and there around the place called India.

The next day the Doctor Doll was found inside the Chatter Box, together with the ambulance, and he listened to the story of this lady's splendid skill and tireless love for all brown people, how she pretended not to mind being jolted to pieces in a bullock cart with wooden wheels. Peter trundled her as gently as he could all day, and it made no least impression on him that she was a paper lady, cut from a fashion book, for that evening of his own accord he prayed with tender emphasis: "God bless our Doctor Lady, and help me not to jolt her hard tomorrow!"

The third day the Chatter Box contained five Hindu paper dolls (mere pictures cut from "Missions," their faces browned by Betty, their turbans and their saris colored gaily). The game became more graphic then, for the dolls lived all over the sewing room floor and would keep getting sicker and sicker, so that the Doctor Lady led a life that would have shone in statistics—not to mention the noble service of the yoke of oxen!

The fourth day, oh, joy! there was a small glass bottle in the Chatter Box, with a red cross on the outside. As for the inside, you might have called it empty, since, uncorked, no pills emerged. But to Peter, missionary medicine for all mortal ills was there, and every Hindu doll was cured twice over. He wagged his yellow head in consternation at the stories of their funny ignorance. How one patient found her bottle read "Shake Before Using," so she had a neighbor come and shake her hard before she took her drops of medicine! And how another patient wore a tube of vaseline around her neck for weeks, and rubbed the metal tube upon her sores, but never once unscrewed the little top and used the healing ointment. Solemnly he listened, and quizzically. Then took his Doctor Lady around the well known route to see that none of her patients were making such sad mistakes.

The following day three little toy beds were in his Box, and this was Peter's happiest find. "We can have a hospital!" he smiled, "then they won't go making mistakes!" So he chose his site (underneath a chair, set up the beds, collected his patients in the bullock cart, and put in a few ingenious touches of his own by making small inch scrapbooks for the

THE DESIRE

GIVE me no mansions ivory white,
Nor palaces of pearl and gold;
Give me a child for all delight,
Just four years old.

Give me no wings of rosy shine,
Nor snowy raiment fold on fold,
Give me a little boy all mine,
Just four years old.

Give me no gold and starry crown,
Nor harps, nor palm branches unrolled;
Give me a nestling head of brown
Just four years old.

Give me a cheek that's like a peach,
Two arms to clasp me from the cold;
And all my heaven's within my reach,
Just four years old.

Dear God, you give me from your skies
A little paradise to hold,
As Mary, once, her Paradise,
Just four years old.

—KATHERINE TYNAN.

littlest patients, folding paper into screens to separate the beds more privately, and cutting out pictures of hot water bottles for the very sick!

There were no hardships in preparing any of these contents; yet for the trifling work, behold what rapt employment! And what a deepening sense of vital interest in the dear brown heathen folk across the sea!

The Young Reserves

The Pets of Famous People.

By PEGGY

OVER since our family began adopting grasshoppers, bees, ants, daddy-long-legs and moths as "pets," Bill has been "collecting evidence" about the pets of really famous people, and it is rather astonishing to find what curious animals are connected with various well-known persons. Bill has started a notebook about them, and here are some of the things he has in it: To begin with, we wondered if any famous characters in history are associated in people's minds with grasshoppers! No sooner had we asked Uncletim than he said: "Why, of course; John the Baptist lived on locusts (grasshoppers) and wild honey!" Since bees were Bill's specialty, he was curious to know if anybody else had the same hobby, and what do you suppose? A saint named Ambrose, who lived in Milan in the year 397, always, always, ALWAYS, had his picture painted with a bee-hive nearby, because it is said that while he was a baby, lying in his cradle, a swarm of bees settled on his lips without injuring him!! And he thought it was a prophecy of his future eloquence. This very same story is also told of Plato, an ancient Greek philosopher. So Bill feels he is in very good company indeed!

Uncletim told us an interesting thing for Bill's "Book of Pets," namely, that when the Prince of Wales recently took his trip around the world he had three peculiar pets given to him: a young koala or Australian bear, a mountain devil, and a barking lizard. And he also told us that King Alexander of Greece is said to have died from the bite of a pet monkey, only this year.

Mother told us the famous story of Dick Whittington's cat which was sent to sea and won her poor little master a fortune by killing the rats that worked such havoc on the dinner table of a foreign king.

We had always connected lambs with Mary, but now we have discovered someone else, whose name means "Lamb," who is always pictured in the old pictures with a lamb at her feet, and that is Saint Agnes.

Uncletim told us about another famous saint called Jerome who is always pictured with a lion nearby, and this is one of our favorite stories now. For it seems that one day as Jerome was sitting at the gateway of his monastery in Bethlehem, about the year 400, he saw a perfectly huge lion come limping toward him holding one front paw in the air. The good man did not move until the lion crouched at his feet and held his paw before him! On examining it, Jerome found that a sharp thorn had been run into the paw, so he carefully removed it and then, applying some healing ointment, he bound up the wounded foot and let the lion lie down in his own cell, where he took care of him until his paw was well. And the story goes that from that time on the great lion became the saint's constant companion, following him everywhere he went. Then one day the lion was told to watch over an ass which the monks used to carry their firewood; but while the ass grazed in a meadow, the lion went to sleep and the ass strayed out of sight. Although the poor lion searched and searched, it was in vain, and he went back to the monastery with his head drooping in shame! Whereupon Jerome of course thought the lion had devoured the ass, and ordered

A Zig-Zag Zoo.

Can you straighten out these misspelt animals?

- |                |              |
|----------------|--------------|
| 1. nerrhosioc? | 6. shore?    |
| 2. neredier?   | 7. lutter    |
| 3. pahnelet?   | 8. tensper?  |
| 4. eodrapl?    | 9. toga?     |
| 5. argoonak?   | 10. naphert? |

Not what thy friends or those around me ask:

What God requires, who knoweth well thy frame;

Not ceaseless bustle and the over-strain,
Or self-imposed task.

Be not of careless or of anxious mind,
But let His gracious peace thy spirit fill,
With quiet diligence to find Just time to do His will.

—CAROLINE TICKNER.

The wonder of the mighty pyramids,
The stateliness of Athens' noblest shrine,
The majesty of Taurus, grim and old,
The grandeur of the castles by the Rhine—

I quite forget them all, if I may hear
The purple martin's note of friendly cheer.

46

Young Reserves answered the "Hidden Treasure" Contest and 37 of them received prizes. Don't forget the new contest ending November 1st.

The Baptist Who Interests Me the Most.

Reward for the best!

that from that time on the daily burden of firewood should be packed on the lion's back, to which the beast humbly submitted. This went on for a long while. Then one day when the lion's duty was over for the day he set out again to search for the ass; and behold, a caravan was passing just then headed by an ass whom he recognized; the ass also remembered the lion! At once the lion drove all the camels and the merchants, too, inside the monastery gates, where the merchants at last confessed to having stolen the ass. We think it is a very thrilling story, and what do you think Timothy said about it? "I think it must be 'The Cozy Lion,' muvver!" For he has a little story book called "The Cozy Lion," by Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett, about the pleasantest sort of lion who was tired of being feared when all the time he was really feeling so beautifully companionable inside! Surely Timothy was right that St. Jerome's lion belonged to the cozy variety, don't you agree?

Mother told us another interesting thing about Jerome, that he translated the Bible into Latin, so that all the people living in his day could read it for themselves; you see, before that it was only written in the Greek and Hebrew languages, which one had to be a scholar to read. His translation was called the "Vulgate," which means "made public," just as our word "Vulgar" means "a little too common," you know! Mother said the day would soon come when we would be considered very wise to know about this "Vulgate," so Bill has tucked it into his Book of Pets, side by side with the cozy lion.

In the Middle Ages it was very fashionable at one time for the people who lived in Florence, Italy, to keep lions; and the natives of Pisa used to tame eagles. One of the most interesting bird stories Bill has collected is about a pet hawk belonging to Genghis Khan, which three times in succession dashed a cup of water out of the hand of its master in order to save his life. Genghis Khan had been hunting with his hawk and was terribly thirsty, so he had set his cup below a cliff where drop by drop water would fall into it from a pool on top of the cliff. When the hawk had knocked the cup from his hand for the third time, and sent it spinning off among the rocks, the master was so provoked he drew his sword and killed the bird. Then very wearily he climbed up the steep cliff to get his drink of water, but what do you suppose? At the bottom of that clear pool of water lay the dead body of the most poisonous snake imaginable! And because his hawk knew this, his life was saved!

Underneath this hawk story Bill has put "Elijah and the Raven." We used to think that raven was the brightest bird in the world to bring food to a tired prophet whenever he needed it. But mother says if we only knew more about birds we'd adopt every one of them as a special pet—although never, never to cage them! Do you know any other stories of famous people who are connected with animals? Bill would love to have more to list in his Book!

Our Own Folks

Questions on Women's Work.

By HELEN B. MONTGOMERY

Several inquiries have come to me about the women's work. The following is a fair sample:

"Now I know we give through the duplex envelopes, but who decides what part of the whole amount is to be credited to the women's work? I believe all the women in our churches are considered members of the Missionary Society, but some of them may not think they want to be. Is all the money given by the women credited to the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society? Is the church treasurer or missionary treasurer to keep a list of the women givers and credit their gifts?"

I am very glad to answer these questions. (1) For purposes of voting in the Northern Baptist Convention, every man and every woman who is a member of the church is regarded as a member of every one of the co-operating boards and societies. Every delegate may vote on any question. For practical purposes, in reckoning who are members of local societies, it is wise to make a much closer definition. This each church is free to do. Many define membership on the women's societies to mean all those who actively contribute to the support of the society. Any woman who contributes regularly through the duplex envelopes, is giving to the support of woman's work. She should be entitled to membership in the woman's circle, to be eligible to be sent as a delegate, and to all privileges of membership. A woman, even though a member of the church, cannot claim to belong to an organization whose meetings she never attends and whose work she does not support. The provision in the Northern Baptist Convention was made simply to avoid questions as to who was entitled to vote, from arising in the Convention. It is hardly conceivable that one would be sent as a delegate who was not in reality an active member.

(2) The women give through the duplex envelope to the support of the entire work of the church, local, state, national and world-wide. Their gifts are all pooled and sent to headquarters in New York, where they are divided according to a percentage agreed upon when the New World Movement was launched. The Woman's Foreign Mission Society about which you ask, gets about six per cent of the whole, hundred million dollars.

You can find the exact amount which each board and society is entitled to, by writing to your State Board of Promotion.

(3) The church treasurer should keep a list of every pledge made, follow it up, and see that it is paid on time. If he is a busy man who can not give the time to this, many churches appoint a woman treasurer who does this very important follow-up work. All pledges ought to be so followed up. One of the secrets of the success of our own women's work in the past was the very close follow-up work that was done with all pledges. Many churches are losing large sums in the aggregate, because they do not have any one who follows each pledge and reminds the donor when it is due, and sends to another church a record of the pledge, when the person is dismissed.

I think this answers the questions which you have raised. If it does not, please write again and I will try to answer. There never was a time when it was so absolutely necessary that each woman's circle do its best, as now. Don't disband. Pray as you have never known how to pray. Work harder than you ever dreamed. Our women's task will share in the prosperity of the whole enterprise.

A Call to Baptist Women.

That the women of the denomination intend to do their part to make Armistice Day a success is shown by the following valiant call to prayer which is being sent out to Northern Baptist women by the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society and the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society:

"He hath showed thee, O man, what is good; and wath doth the Lord require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

Micah 6:8.

In keeping with the request of the Administrative Committee of the Board of Promotion and the Federal Council of the Churches, it is urged that the women be much in prayer that the right spirit prevail during all sessions of the Conference; that they arranged for prayer groups and neighborhood prayer meetings, that at noon each day during the Conference they pause for a moment of prayer, asking God's blessing on the meetings, the results of which mean so much to women all over the world. We know that God hears and answers prayers. Through prayer women may have a large share in establishing world peace.

In behalf of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society,
MRS. H. E. GOODMAN.

In behalf of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, MRS. GEO. W. COLEMAN.

Baptist Summer Assembly of Northern California and Nevada.

The Baptist Summer Assembly of Northern California and Nevada, held at Asilomar, California, August 15 to 25, 1921, passed all records. The paid registrations reached 190 and the attendance 403.

The educational work was of a high order. The classes and teachers follow: Bible, Dr. J. F. Mills, Pastor First Baptist Church, Fresno; B. Y. P. U. Methods (using "Our B. Y. P. U." as text-book) Dr. M. L. Thomas and others; Elementary Work and Story Telling, Miss Pauline Whiting; Church Vacation Schools and Week-day Bible School, Rev. Thos. Gale, Sunday-school worker in Northern California; Home Missions, ("Playing Square with Tomorrow") Dr. S. J. Skevington, Pastor Hollywood, California, Baptist Church; Foreign Missions ("The Kingdom and the Nations") Mrs. Carrie A. Robinson, Assistant Director of Promotion for Northern California; Baptist Principles and History, Dr. Skevington; Young People's Work, Rev. Thos. B. Frizelle, Philadelphia, director of summer assemblies; Stewardship and Evangelism, Dr. Thomas.

The Vesper Services on the beach at sunset were led by different young people. A platform meeting was held each evening in the beautiful chapel, with instructive and inspirational addresses. One evening a pageant was given, directed by its author, Mrs. M. L. Thomas, depicting the purpose history, and development of the B. Y. P. U. of A. in an impressive manner. The progress was shown by banners, songs, and spoken words, from the meeting in which it was voted to organize until the present time.

The assembly combined work with an ideal vacation among the pines and sand dunes on the shores of the Pacific Ocean. Swimming, hiking, tennis, baseball, and other sports were enjoyed during the afternoon hours. The "night caps" in the large social hall each evening following the platform meetings were happy times of fun and frolic. This group of young people of strong character and purpose worked and played together with equal enthusiasm. The annual banquet, with 235 seated around the tables, was a gala occasion. A brief sketch of the past ten years' work of the Northern California B. Y. P. U. was given, showing that much has been accomplished. After-dinner speakers considered the top "Playing the Game."

To Dr. Millard L. Thomas, director of religious education and dean of the assembly, and Mr. Harry A. Kern, president of the Northern California B. Y. P. U. is due much praise for the successful assembly and convention this year.

The devotional life was an inspiration to all. A climax was reached on Sunday, when at the close of the morning service twenty young men and women stepped forward eagerly, thus declaring their purpose to give their lives for definite Christian service. This group with twenty others who had formerly volunteered for service formed the California-Nevada Volunteers, an organization for mutual helpfulness. They will also be enrolled in the Life-Service League of the B. Y. P. U. of A.

The objectives of the B. Y. P. U. A. as adopted at Cincinnati were included in the program for the work of this year. The slogans adopted are: "Every One Win One" and "United Service."

New England Baptist Conference.

THE New England Baptist Conference held its annual school of methods at Ocean Park, August 24 to September 3, with the largest number of registered delegates in its history. There was a 34 per cent increase over the attendance of last year, with 200 taking the first year's work, sixty-two the second year, and thirty-nine receiving graduating diplomas for completion of the course of study for three years. The distribution by states shows for Maine 154, New Hampshire 42, Vermont 25, Rhode Island 38, Connecticut 31, and Massachusetts 245, with many other states and provinces represented. Pastors were present in larger numbers than ever, with forty-one enrolled. Never before have the camps been so popular. Thirty-eight were enrolled for the girls' camp, and thirty-two for the boys'. This splendid group included many college students and leaders of the local church. A thorough-going camp, with permanent equipment, is under consideration at the present time. The only lack is sufficient financial support to purchase land and erect buildings. For the first time in its history the conference had a central dining-hall for all delegates not accommodated in house parties. Over 7000 meals were served in the ten days. The board was kept at $13. with a special rate to the campers who waited on tables. Bethsalom, the new building, was used to the very last room. Besides the faculty, thirty-four guests were accommodated, including the house party from Bennington, Vermont. The total investment for use of the conference is now over $25,000. The chief task for the future is to keep pace with the growth from year to year. Already the class-room facilities have been taxed to their capacities. A number of the first year sections had an attendance of over 100, and the daily devotions average 600. Two notable days were the Sunday of the conference when Dr. C. N. Arbuckle of Newton Center, Mass., preached to over 1,000, and the life work night when four young men enlisted for the Christian ministry, eleven volunteered for home and foreign missions, nineteen dedicated their lives to special work, and 119 made some forward step. The offerings and special pledges taken during the school amounted to nearly $1500. That the school is achieving its aims is evident not alone from the number of life decisions made, but also from the many testimonies presented voluntarily. A pastor's assistant says, "I fail to see how anyone could take the courses offered, and attend the evening gatherings without feeling like Paul, 'Woe is me' if I do not make my life count for righteousness and the advancement of God's kindom this winter." A pastor: "I came back from Des Moines utterly discouraged, but this institution saves the situation." A professor of a seminary: "Ocean Park, in numbers, in intellectual standards, in spiritual power, it is something to kindle gratitude, pride and joy." A college professor: "The quality of work done is equal to the best in our colleges in these departments." A father: "Our daughter eighteen years of age has been at Ocean Park for three summers and comes home each year more enthusiastic to do Bible school work. The Christian influence is great there. Many of the young people who have attended the school have visited my house, and they are a fine crowd." What more needs to be said regarding the influence of such a place upon the church life of New England? The problem of 1922 will be, how not to have 700 delegates present.

A Vacation Experiment in Maine

Ash Point is one of the many spots on the coast of Maine ideal for summer vacations. It has there a little chapel built a number of years ago as a result of a revival conducted by two devoted women workers, Miss Nash and Miss Whittier, and alongside, a parsonage. About ten years ago, I bought a little cottage at Ash Point and have been spending my summers there ever since. I am sending a brief account of a work carried on there in the chapel and parsonage this summer as a suggestion for city churches of a way in which they might make a slight contribution at least to what we often speak of as the rural church problem. The chapel has been for the most part closed in recent years and a group of children have grown up in the community who have had almost no knowledge of the Bible and practically no direct religious training. Four young women from our church decided to spend their vacation at Ash Point, to live in the parsonage, and to organize and conduct a Sunday School. Dr. Mower, state secretary, approved the plan and the few people in the community who felt responsibility welcomed it. The experiment has been in every way successful. One of the summer residents, Mr. H. E. Edwards, who comes all the way from Michigan made a very generous gift and joined me one afternoon in visiting other people who owned cottages there. They were all interested in the project and as a result of the afternoon's visitation, we turned $150 into the treasury of the little church.

The parsonage was made a sort of community center and the boys and girls could be seen there almost any time during the day, or evening. A basket ball outfit was purchased, a boys' club and girls' club organized, sales and suppers were held by them from which more than $100 was raised. Practically all the available children were registered in the school, and best of all, a group was secured and organized who pledged themselves to keep the school going through the winter and spring.

The young women did more than organize the Sunday school. They conducted services themselves on Sunday and Thursday evenings and on Sunday morning with one or two exceptions, ministers summering there were glad to preach for them. As a result of their work, several of the young people were led to take a forward step in their Christian life and six of them were baptized. Most of these were young persons who walk eight miles a day to go to high school. Work among such young people is certainly worth while.

The young women from Fall River Church were Miss Amy Anderson, church secretary; Miss Myra T. Borden, superintendent of the junior department; Miss Gladys Chadwick, intermediate superintendent, and Miss Mary E. Holt, who has been chairman of the young people's committee. They all come back richer by the experience of this unique vacation with a larger degree of consecration for their work and confidence in themselves as workers.

There must be in Maine and elsewhere many places that are similar to Ash Point. Here is something for pastors, state secretaries and young people's societies to think of and plan for. Many remote and religiously neglected communities might in this way receive new impulse and the young people rendering the service might look back on what would be the nearest approach they have ever known to an ideal vacation.—EVERETT C. HERRICK, pastor First Baptist Church, Fall River, Massachusetts.

A Day for Veterans in Providence

Sunday, September 25, was a notable day in Calvary Church and Bible school. It was Rally Sunday, but that was not the most significant feature of the day.

Forty-three years ago, when the church was located on Friendship Street, and known as the Friendship Street Baptist Church, Thomas W. Waterman, an inexperienced young man, became the superintendent of the Bible school, which numbered in the neighborhood of 200. Under his leadership the school has grown constantly, until today the enrollment passes the 1200 mark.

Although past seventy-two years of age, he has maintained his youth, and is today one of the youngest and most active (in business and Christian work) of the membership of the church. His influence has gone far and wide. Thousands of children have come to know him in the Bible school work. He is a friend to all; is most sympathetic toward all in need or trouble, and ever stands ready to render any needed service. He retires on this, his forty-third anniversary, in order that, as he says, a young man may be trained to fill such an important office.

The Fort Scott, Kansas, Baptist Church will send fifty rag dolls in its Christmas Boxes. The dolls are sixteen and twenty inches high; are made of muslin; stuffed with cotton, and painted with water color paints. The clothes are made of wash material and are fastened either with snappers or buttons and button holes so they may be taken off or put on.

A special program was prepared for the occasion. President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, who, as a student in Brown University, was a teacher in the old Friendship St. Sunday school of which Mr. Waterman was superintendent, and who was frequently in the Superintendent's home, was one of the speakers. Also Rev. E. P. Farnham, of Long Island, N. Y., who was pastor of the church at the time Mr. Waterman became superintendent, was present, preaching at the morning service, and delivering an address at the Bible school session. Rev. Edward Holyoke, the pastor of the church for the past thirty-four years, made appropriate remarks, and presented an enlarged photograph of Mr. Waterman, which is to be hung in the chapel of the church with a number of photographs of former pastors and deacons. After the presentation of the picture, Mr. Waterman was unanimously elected honorary superintendent for life. Rev. M. E. Bratcher, associate pastor, presented to Mrs. Waterman a bouquet of roses, after which she responded most appropriately.

Mr. Edwin S. Donle, a young business man of sterling Christian character, succeeds Mr. Waterman as superintendent of the Bible school. Though Mr. Waterman has retired from the active superintendency, the church is assured that his interest will not in the least wane, and that he will yet render great service in the interest of the Bible school. As Dr. Farnham said, "He will be superintendent of the school for at least one hundred years to come," for his spirit has become so interwoven in the work of the school that it cannot soon be forgotten.

Deacon Frank S. Congdon, who has been Mr. Waterman's co-worker during all the forty-two years, was remembered in appreciative resolutions.

Few men in the United States have served so long and well. And it is given to few men to come to such an age with efficiency in service unimpaired.

State Conventions of The Northern Baptist Convention for 1921.

Names of states in which conventions are dated, places where they will be held, dates and speakers representing the National Board of Promotion, appear in the following list:

- COLORADO, Canon City, October 18-20; Dr. J. Y. Aitchison, Dr. L. C. Barnes, Historical address.
- CONNECTICUT, Danbury (First Baptist Church), October 17-19; Dr. Brink, Dr. Anderson, May Covington, missionary.
- DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Washington, November 16; Dr. Franklin (Joint meeting with Southern Baptists).
- ILLINOIS, Rockford (First Baptist Church), October 17-20; Mrs. Montgomery, Mrs. G. C. Moor, Mr. Vinton, Zo. Browne.
- INDIANA, Peru, October 11-13; Dr. Clarence Barbour, Dr. William Axling, Mrs. G. C. Moor, Rev. C. L. White.
- IOWA, Waterloo, October 26-30; Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, H. R. Greaves, Evelyn Camp, missionary.
- KANSAS, Topeka, October 11-13; Dr. Aitchison, S. R. Vinton.
- MASSACHUSETTS, Worcester, October 25-27; Dr. Heath, Dr. Anderson, Mrs. Peabody, Mrs. Coleman. (All invited by Local Com.)
- MICHIGAN, Pontiac, October 17-20; Dr. C. A. Barbour, Dr. Stillwell, Allyn K. Foster, Miss Hudson, Evelyn Camp, missionary.
- MINNESOTA, Duluth (First Baptist Church), October 10-13; Dr. C. A. Brooks, Miss N. Prescott, Dr. Agar, Evelyn Camp, missionary.
- NEBRASKA, Norfolk (First Baptist Church), October 8-13; Dr. Stillwell, Dr. Aitchison, Dr. Axling, Mrs. Montgomery.
- NEW HAMPSHIRE, Manchester, October 4-5; Prof. Vaughn, Dr. Heath, Dr. Neil, Mrs. Goodman.
- NEW JERSEY, Atlantic City, (First Baptist Church), October 24-25; Dr. Axling (25th), Mrs. C. A. Brooks, Dr. Harlan (rural), Dr. Heath (24th), Allyn K. Foster.
- NEW YORK, Rochester, October 25-27; No requests.

PENNSYLVANIA, Franklin, October 17-20: Mrs. Smith T. Ford, Dr. Heath (19th A. M.), Dr. Axling (19th P. M.), Dr. Harlan, Dr. Franklin.

SOUTH DAKOTA, Pierre, October 5-9: Pres. Emory Hunt, Dr. C. A. Brooks, Miss Prescott, Evelyn Camp, missionary.

WEST VIRGINIA, Fairmont (Baptist Temple), October 11-14: Dr. Heath, Dr. Neil, Dr. Axling, Mrs. Goodman.

WISCONSIN, Beloit, October 10-13: Dr. Barnes, Miss Prescott, Dr. T. S. Young, Elsie Kappen.

Church News by States

MAINE

IN REV. F. F. FOSHAY, the Fairfield Church has a scholarly, practical and progressive pastor whose ministry is increasingly successful. Just now a whole week of rallies that take in several departments of the work of the church is in progress. One of the features was a reception to the more than thirty new members who have recently united with the church. The Sunday school, under the direction of Hon. Harry Plummer is continuing its record of efficiency and achievement.

TWO YOUNG MEN of the Central Square, one a senior in Bates, the other in Colby, have recently decided to prepare for the ministry.

THE BOARD OF EDUCATION has come into touch with a much larger number than usual this fall of young men who are thus giving themselves to world service.

WORK AT CENTRAL SQUARE never stops. Mr. Frank Lorimer, son of Pastor A. B. Lorimer, supplied the pulpit for two Sundays during the summer and preached several Sundays at Stroudwater. He is doing post-graduate work in the Divinity School of Chicago University. Rally Sunday brought an attendance of over 400. Several persons were received in new membership into the church.

SOUTH PORTLAND: The church building has been repaired at an expense of over $700, which has been paid. The ministry of Rev. Henry G. Clark is of great value to the community.

SOUTH KENNEBEC ASSOCIATION held a quarterly meeting recently at West Gardiner under the energetic leadership of Dr. T. J. Winslade, who makes the West Gardiner service a kind of by-product of his very successful ministry at Gardiner. Repairs on church building and a new vestry, new members and new enthusiasm all evidence the new prosperity that has come to this the oldest Baptist church in Gardiner. Rev. C. E. Young of Hallowell was moderator and Rev. L. F. Cook of East Winthrop preached. Rev. S. M. Thompson of Windsor, Rev. C. A. Watkins of Litchfield and Rev. C. F. Fredrick of Richmond, new pastors, led devotional services and helpfully shared the work of the session. Mrs. T. J. Winslade gave a group of stories that were much enjoyed by young people of all ages. In the evening Rev. H. H. Brown of the Penney Memorial Church, Augusta, gave one of his inspiring sermons. In November another meeting will be held at Litchfield and the rural problem will be discussed on its native heath in an atmosphere of facts rather than theories.

CUMBERLAND ASSOCIATION: A largely attended and very successful semi-annual meeting of this association was held in the Westbrook church on Wednesday, September 28. Dr. A. B. Lorimer, moderator presided. Pastor Walsh gave an evangelistic note at the opening of the session which was carried on in the strong sermon by Rev. R. H. Cary and other exercises of the day. Promotion Director Whittemore spoke upon "The Spirit of the Church in Face of its World Opportunities." Dr. Birney S. Hudson gave a very forceful and comprehensive address on "Stewardship." The prayer meeting was discussed from different aspects by Dea. C. W. Morton and Dr. R. R. Kennon. Rev. J. H. Thompson gave an exposition of Romans 6, 7, 8. A conference was held on evangelism with addresses by Rev. S. A. Evans, Dr. George H. Hamlen and Rev. A. A. Walsh, also a White Cross exercise by the World Wide Guild of the Central Square Church, and an address by Secretary I. B. Mower on "The Divine Appeal and the Human Response." By a hearty vote the association endorsed the goals set before the state by the Promotion Board.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

THE ANNUAL BUSINESS MEETING of the South Church, Laconia, was held on the evening of September 12, with a large attendance. The reports from every department showed marked progress, and the people are working most harmoniously with the pastor, Rev. Howard H. White. Mr. White has put in a year without a vacation, and the church has been open all the time. He has made hundreds of calls, married twenty-nine couples, officiated at forty funerals, taken into the church mostly by baptism twenty-eight new members and in addition to attending about all the services of the church he has conducted Sunday afternoon services and weekly prayer meetings at the Sanbornton Bay Baptist Church. Finances are over $500 ahead of last year with all bills paid to date and a snug sum in the treasury. Sunday school has an average attendance of 161, home department a membership of 125, cradle roll fifty-one. Two young people are fitting themselves for work as foreign missionaries.—ETHEL M. DINSMORE, Clerk.

Wolfeboro Association

The ten associations of the state concluded their meetings September 28 with sessions of the Wolfeboro Association meeting with the Jackson Church. This is our smallest association but the program was a good one. Rev. O. P. Eaches preached the annual sermon. There was an address on "Baptist Progress" by Rev. D. S. Jenks and a timely address by Rev. J. L. Clark, pastor of the church in Exeter.

Special interest was attached this year to the meeting of this association for the reason of the meeting of an ordination council holding its session the same day to consider the advisability of the ordination of D. S. Brooks, pastor of the Jackson Church. The council voted unanimously in favor of ordaining Brother Brooks. The services of ordination were held in the evening. Rev. T. H. Scammon was moderator. The ordination sermon was by Rev. D. S. Jenks, the ordaining prayer by Rev. H. E. Wyman. Rev. W. P. Robinson was clerk of the Council.

MASSACHUSETTS

MELROSE, FIRST—Phileters H. McDowell, pastor, held its third annual conference and supper Sept. 28, with over 200 at tables. The church is thoroughly organized and has a complete program of work.

ESSEX ST. CHURCH, LYNN, has just been re-dedicating a lot of improvements. They built on an extension that enables them to readjust their entire plant for work, and comfort, and much needed facilities; and they are all delighted that sixteen thousand of their dollars can make them so happy. Rev. Thomas Cain is leading them.

REV. PAUL M. CAYER who for three years has been pastor of the South Church, New Bedford, also for nine years the leader of the French Mission in the City, has just accepted a call to the Feller Institute Church, Montreal, where his bi-lingual facility will come well into play. His long experience in French Mission work in Waterville, New Bedford, and other places, and his growing power as leader and preacher, will command him to the Canadians.

REV. A. A. RIDEOUT, FORMERLY ELEVEN YEARS pastor of the Blaney Memorial Church, Boston, has accepted the call of the First Church, Waltham, which was a long time served by Dr. A. A. Hobson now of Milwaukee. Waltham has the "A. A." habit.

REV. HENRY E. HODGE, who for nearly twenty years was pastor at Winchester, and recently has served the Board of Promotion in New York, is supplying the strong First Church, Everett, and the many friends of both are expecting that the relation will speedily ripen into something permanent. Pastor Hodge is a jewel.

REV. N. B. ROGERS, eight years pastor at Canton, accepts the call of the church at Nantucket. Pastor Rogers has busily pursued courses in religious education and will be a good leader on high levels in Nantucket.

AT EAST BOSTON, Pastor A. P. Wedge on account of temporary physical disability, is taking a respite from work, and the church is being well cared for by Dr. F. B. Greul. He will keep everything in running order.

CONNECTICUT

A MISSIONARY CONFERENCE AND INSTITUTE was held in the First Baptist Church, New London, Sept. 22, 23. Study books were presented by Miss May Huston, New York, Miss Mary Noble, Buffalo. Rev. Floyd Carr, Wilkinsburg, Pa., and Miss Evelyn Cranska spoke on interesting children in missions. The pastor of the church, Chester H. Howe, gave an interesting presentation of "The Kingdom and Nations" in picture. Devotions were conducted by Revs. G. W. Borden, L. W. Richardson, and J. A. Elder. Two inspiring addresses, one by Rev. Floyd Carr on Thursday evening, and the other by Dr. D. A. Pitt of Norwich Friday evening on

"Sharing Our Best with the World," were exceedingly helpful.

THE NINETY-SEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING of the Ashford Association was held in the Memorial Church, South Willington, on Sept. 27. The attendance was large, and the program unusually interesting. The devotional periods were taken by Rev. F. W. Tholen, Stafford, Rev. F. W. Klein, Mansfield Depot, Rev. H. D. Baker, East Woodstock, preached the annual sermon—subject: "The Mission of the Church Today." The speakers at the Woman's hour were: Miss Marlon Lathrop, Norwich, Americanization secretary for the New England District, and Miss Annie Prince of Burmah. Raymond E. Allen, Danielson, a layman, spoke on "The Stewardship Christ Demands." "The Church School We Need" was discussed by Rev. W. T. Thayer, Hartford. Mr. H. W. Hicks, Hartford, representing the State Christian Endeavor Society, talked about "Young People's Work That Is Worth While." The work of the state convention, board of promotion and pastor-at-large, was presented by Dr. A. B. Coats, Rev. H. B. Sloat and Rev. E. E. Gates. The evening session was given over to evangelism, Rev. J. C. Stoddard, Putnam, spoke on "The Church Organized for Evangelism." He said: "The church should be organized with living organisms having the spirit of Christ." Rev. James McGee, New Haven, closed a most interesting program with an evangelistic sermon of unusual power. Officers elected: Raymond E. Allen, Danielson, moderator; clerk, Rev. H. D. Baker, East Woodstock; Rev. J. C. Stoddard, Putnam, vice-moderator.

THE FAIRFIELD COUNTY BAPTIST ASSOCIATION held its eighty-third annual meeting with the First Baptist Church, Stamford, Wednesday, September 28. The following topics were used in the devotional periods: "God in His Word," J. W. Grainger; "Christ in Prayer," W. J. Barnes, pastor entertaining church; "The Holy Spirit in Soul Winning," W. R. Richardson. After the usual formalities and business routine, Rev. H. S. Foster preached the annual sermon—subject: "Releasing Spiritual Energy." Various phases of state convention worked were discussed by Revs. A. B. Coats, E. E. Gates, W. T. Thayer and H. B. Sloat. Rev. James McGee, who is chairman of the state evangelistic committee, preached the evangelistic sermon. Miss Albertine D. Bishcoff represented the A. B. H. M. Society at the woman's hour. The closing address was given by Rev. David Miller, Brooklyn, N. Y. Officers elected: Rev. D. B. MacQueen, Bridgeport, moderator; Rev. F. S. Clarke, Rowayton, clerk. It was one of the best associations in years.

NEW YORK

GENEVA, N. Y., Harvard Griffith, pastor. Sunday, October 2, the church again occupied its auditorium, which had been in the hands of the decorators for the past six weeks. About $1,500 has been spent in changing the lighting and redecorating the entire interior. The opening services were in the nature of a home coming, and large audience attended. The church is going to unite with the other churches of the city in conducting a Week Day School of Religious Education. The pastor has announced his series of Home Making Sermons; the subjects are as follows: Powder Puffs and Mirrors, Choosing a Husband, Finding a Wife, Days of Courtship, Married Life, That Home. Mr. Griffith is just closing his third year with the church.

AT CAZENOVIA, on Sunday morning, Oct. 2, a memorial service was held as a tribute of respect to Mrs. J. J. Keyes, whose death occurred recently. For nine years, during her husband's pastorate here, Mrs. Keyes gave herself unreservedly in service among the members of this congregation. Thus she greatly endeared herself in the hearts of the people by noble character and a beautiful life.

THE SARATOGA COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION met September 27 with the First Church, Corinth, the Rev. W. A. Karraker, pastor; 276 delegates were enrolled from forty-five of the ninety-eight schools of the county representing twenty-six different communities. The convention was pronounced one of the most successful in many years.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

NORTHUMBERLAND ASSOCIATION was royally entertained by the Bloomsburg Church, Rev. E. J. Radcliffe, pastor. Mr. S. W. Heller was chosen moderator. Rev. R. M. Hunsicker was appointed pastor-at-large of the association. The program of work for the year outlined by the Northern Baptist Convention, was adopted.

REV. SINGLETON NEISSER closed his pastorate with the Memorial Church, Reading, Sept. 1, and with his family has moved to Philadelphia. Ever since the beginning of his illness last December the church has continued to stand loyally by him, and only consented to accept his resignation because there was no prospect of his being able to resume the work within a reasonable time.

REV. J. C. MADDEN has closed his work with the John Corbley Memorial and Brown's Memorial Churches of the Ten Mile Association, and has begun his pastorate at Clifford.

THE ANNUAL MEETING of Wayne Association was held this year with the First Church, Damascus, the church commemorating the one hundredth anniversary of its organization. Mr. G. H. Knapo presided. Rev. Arthur B. Strickland presented an interesting address on evangelism. Mr. Russell, director of the board of promotion, called attention to the special emphasis which is being placed this year on missionary education and stewardship. The association approved the program on evangelism and stewardship, accepting definite goals for itself along these lines. The doctrinal sermon was preached by Rev. Walter C. Garrison and Mrs. A. B. Strickland gave an impersonation on Italia Redeemed. The contributions of the churches of Wayne Association last year toward the New World Movement were $2,867.24; an increase of a little over 100 per cent.

TOGA ASSOCIATION met this year with the church at Covington, Rev. James Smith, pastor. Rev. C. W. MacGeorge, moderator, presided. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. W. A. Stevenson of Cherry Flats and Charleston. The doctrinal sermon was preached by Rev. David J. Griffiths of Mansfield. The association accepted the program as suggested by the state board of promotion and voted approving the general missionary objectives as outlined by the Northern Baptist Convention. Definite steps were taken to promote evangelism in the association this year. The offerings toward the New World Movement in this association increased from $2587.07 for 1919-20 to $5711.34 in 1920-21. Rev. Andrew Turkinton was elected moderator for the coming year.

WYOMING ASSOCIATION met this year with the Nanticoke Church, Mr. W. J. Burnett, moderator. The introductory sermon was preached by Rev. Maurice H. Davis of Plymouth. Dr. C. A. Soars and Dr. Leroy Stephens represented our state work and made addresses. The work of the board of promotion was presented by William G. Russell. Dr. R. M. West made a stirring address on "The Stability of the Church." Rev. F. C. Wilcox of Ningpo, China, spoke of the urgent necessity of completing the New World Movement in order to increase the opportunity for our missionaries abroad. Contributions from the Wyoming Association toward the New World Movement in 1919-20 were $3375.67 and in 1920-21 $14,282.86. The association expressed its interest in the work of evangelism and the furtherance of the missionary objectives and stewardship plans of the state board of promotion.

Mississippi Valley

WEST VIRGINIA

Storer College Has Plans

The junior college idea has taken root in the minds of Storer students and friends. The result is that more students, are desirous of returning or of entering for the first time than the college can possibly care for.

The college Freshmen number nine. There would have been more, but for the bad industrial conditions. This number is a good beginning.

Storer's strategic location on the midway from north to south will continue to bring students in increasing numbers.

In order to get ready for them, additional dormitories must be had. A domestic science building is needed now. The dining room (100 normal capacity) has 150 in it at this time. Then there is the proposed gymnasium. Students are paying pledges. They want and need that building. Enrollment has gained 140 per cent in five years and is now 128.

Prof. B. S. Cassell, Science, and Prof. Frankie Mexson, History, are valuable faculty additions. Word just comes from Miss Kate J. Anthony that she will add five $1000 scholarships to those at present available.

OHIO

TOLEDO, FIRST, Albert King Morris, pastor, has adopted a comprehensive program of preparation, organization, education, evangelism and conservation, covering the year October, 1921-June, 1922.

Dayton Association

The seventieth anniversary of the Dayton Association was held last month with the Third Street Church. Pastor Sloman and his people entertained the messengers royally. Judge B. F. McCann, the moderator, through all the session kept before the audience the exaltation of the Christ. The participants on the program all left a lingering presence of Jesus. Rev. Peter Quartel conducted the music and sang several solo selections. The Biblical part of the devotions were in the hands of

Dr. R. B. Smith, of Springfield, who took us on walks with the Master in the garden. Rev. G. W. Johnson, of Linden Ave., preached the annual sermon, an earnest appeal for soul saving. Rev. B. F. Patt, of Sidney presented an interesting discourse on Baptists in Relation to Interdenominational Movements. Rev. F. F. Fenner directed the reading of church letters.

The woman's session was presided over by Mrs J. C. Early. This program had many interesting features, among which were the messages of Rev. W. G. Evans, who will soon sail for Burma. The day closed with an inspirational address by Dr. W. W. Bustard of Cleveland.

The new pastors were introduced by Pastor Albert Read of Xenia, who is pastor of the ministers' association. It was effectively and scripturally done. Rev. W. H. Thompson of Granville spoke of the training and intelligence needed to solve the problem of the country church. Rev. L. L. Long gave an interesting report of his work in the south-west district.

The afternoon was devoted to Sunday-school work. This brought to our program W. H. Holmes, Ohio's Sunday-school man. He conducted several conferences. The Messrs. Currier, Strange and Koeker contributed much to the success of the afternoon.

The association was brought to the close by a great rally of young people under the presiding direction of Pastor Sloman. The church was crowded with an enthusiastic audience. National President C. W. Atwater made the address of the evening.

The affairs of the association were so well conducted that the messengers by vote requested that Judge B. F. McCann be moderator again; B. F. Patt, vice moderator; Rollin Beck, clerk; W. E. Smith, treasurer.—PHILIP BAUER.

ILLINOIS

Quincy Association

Quincy Association met at Kinderhook, Sept. 20-21. The meeting was the most interesting and best attended in the history of the Association. There were 145 delegates from the churches of the Association, and 30 visitors from the outside. An orchestra composed of members of the Plainville and Barry Baptist church orchestras, an address by Rev. Anderson of Griggsville, and a reception by the B. Y. P. U. of the Kinderhook Baptist Church were features of the closing session.

The Association will be held at Barry next year. Rev. L. C. Taylor, pastor of the Kinderhook Church, was elected moderator, and Rev. J. T. Finnan, pastor of the Pittsfield and Mt. Sterling churches, was elected clerk of the Association.

MICHIGAN

RALLY DAY SERVICES at Marshall Baptist Sunday school were a great success. The enrollment last spring was about 360. Three hundred and fifty were present at the Rally Day Service, of which about fifty were visitors.

WISCONSIN

GRACE CHURCH, Milwaukee, gave a reception to ten young people upon the eve of their leaving for the State University at Madison. The young people's society is very much alive and takes a great interest in the work of the church. Pastor S. W. Phelps has just closed the fourth year of his pastorate. During these four years there has been a steady growth in all departments, the fourth year being the best in the history of the church, with all bills paid and a good balance in the treasury. The missionary offerings have increased many fold. Last year the church gave almost as much to missions as to home expenses and paid the pastor's expenses to the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines.

IOWA

OHIO CHURCH, Central Association. E. L. Field, pastor, ordained to the deaconate John Brushka and E. M. Carpenter, Sept. 28.

MINNESOTA

A CHURCH BUILDING has been dedicated at Leander, a rural community in North-eastern Minnesota. With the help of the Home Mission Society and Convention, the entire cost is provided for. Rev. P. Ryden is pastor.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2, a chapel was dedicated at Graston. For a number of years there has been a Swedish Church between two and three miles from the village. This building was torn down and a new one erected at a cost of nearly $7,000. Rev. J. Franklin of Connecticut will be pastor. During the dedication meetings, addresses were made and sermons were given by Rev. Carl Vingren, formerly pastor of the First Swedish Baptist Church of Minneapolis; Dr. Frank Peterson, E. R. Pope, and the pastor. Dr. Peterson led in the money raising and sufficient was secured so that the indebtedness on the property will not be over $1,200. Rev. C. E. Bergfalk, missionary among the Swedish Baptists, has cared for this enterprise and brought it to successful completion.

OLIVET CHURCH, MINNEAPOLIS, now called the University Baptist Church, has started a new building. It is intended to finish the social part of the church, and the gymnasium as rapidly as possible.

REV. E. L. HOLLAND, of Page, North Dakota, has begun his work as pastor at Minnesota in the Southwestern part of the state.

REV. C. S. MARSTON, formerly a pastor in the state, has now taken charge of the work at Laporte in Hubbard County. Here, with the assistance of the Home Mission Society, the Convention expects to develop a modern rural church.

MISS KATHERINE PATRICK, from Youngstown, Ohio, on September 1, began work among the Slovaks of Minneapolis, in connection with the Slovak Baptist Church.

EVANGELIST I. D. ALVORD is now holding meetings with the Lincoln Baptist Church in Blue Earth County.

THE GOAL SET FOR MINNESOTA Baptist Churches is 3,000 additions by baptism, restoration and experience. The following churches have had baptisms recently: Five at Storden Danish, three at Little Falls, ten at Blooming Prairie, five at Bemidji, nine at Springdale, and two at McIntosh.

AT BLOOMING PRAIRIE DANISH CHURCH, Rev. C. H. Bolvig and Rev. W. A. Wesgaard held meetings, which were productive of much good.

REV. A. PAULSON, recently pastor at Lake Elizabeth, has taken the pastorate at Brainerd Swedish Baptist Church.

MONTANA

THE ANNUAL SESSIONS of the Teton Baptist Association were held with the First Church of Great Falls September 22-23 with more than a score of delegates, three field workers and a missionary in attendance. The churches of the body while conservative in doctrine are most earnestly and enthusiastically supporting the New World Movement and passed a resolution to that effect.

Pacific Coast

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

Oakland

Dr. and Mrs. John Snape returned the forepart of September from a 4200 mile camping trip to Portland, Spokane, Seattle, and on to Yellowstone Park, returning via The Dalles, Pendleton, and Portland. At Seattle, they went over to Burton, Vashon Island, where Dr. Snape served on the Faculty of the West Washington B. Y. P. U. Assembly. Since their return home, Dr. Snape has been capitalizing his vacation experiences by preaching on the special subjects illustrated by his vacation experiences. A number of people have taken a public stand for Christ.

"Promotion Day" was observed in the Sunday school on Sept. 25. The number of pupils promoted from one department to another far surpassed any previous record. A. E. Caldwell has just been re-elected to serve for the twelfth year as the efficient superintendent of this large school.

The four B. Y. P. U.'s sent 33 delegates to the B. Y. P. U. Assembly at Asilomar, the church paying part of the expenses of the intermediates. Eight of these young people have consecrated their lives for definite Christian service.

A "School of Religious Education" will open on the evening of October 19th and continue for eight successive Wednesdays. The "Fellowship Supper" will be served at 6:15 P. M., followed by classes in "Doctrine," "Teacher Training" Bible study entitled, "Your Church," "Missions," "Young People's Methods," etc. Over 200 were enrolled in these classes in the 12 weeks' course held last Spring.

The Women's work has reached such large proportions than an Evening Circle has been organized for the benefit of those employed during the daytime. A large amount of "White Cross" work is being done by all as well as definite Missionary activities.

The teachers and officers of the Sunday-school held an unusual and entertaining meeting recently based on the idea of a trip on the "T. B. C." railroad.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

First Church, Berkeley, held its annual meeting September 28. Four hundred attended. President C. M. Hill of the Baptist Divinity School presided. Telegrams of greeting were exchanged between Dr. Pitt, former pastor, who is now at Norwich, Connecticut. Reports given at the meeting showed an addition of 164 members, forty-five of whom were by baptism. Eleven thousand dollars has been raised during the year for current expenses and $14,000 for benevolence. The church expects to have its new pipe organ in place sometime in December.

Fill a Ship in Fellowship

(The churches all over the country are busy collecting clothes and other supplies to fill the Baptist ship for European relief. Full instructions are given here. Let everybody move at once. This service of love must not fail and will not if all do their part.)

Through the courtesy of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad Company, a car load shipment of supplies, contributed by the Baptists of Colorado, will be transported free of charge from Denver to Chicago. Our Colorado Baptists evidently are doing their part in helping to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship."

* * *

The following letter from a Baptist pastor in the Middle West was received at the office of the Foreign Mission Society last week:

"Brethren:

"I am sending you today via parcel post, prepaid, a package containing a man's bathrobe and a pair of shoes. Enclosed you will find remittance to meet the cost of ocean freight. No doubt there are suffering people in Europe who will be glad to use these articles. They belonged to our only son, a lieutenant in the American Army, who gave his life during the war."

* * *

Baptists on the Southern Pacific Coast are quite in advance of the Foreign Mission Society headquarters in co-operating with the European relief program. They have collected their supplies and instead of shipping them by express or freight across the continent, they are baling them and transporting them by steamer from San Francisco and Los Angeles by way of the Panama Canal to New York. The Southern Pacific Baptist ship will leave the Coast about October 9 and is due to arrive in New York late in October. Immediately upon arrival arrangements will be made to have these supplies transported to the ship which is to take them on the final lap of the journey across the Atlantic to Europe.

* * *

The Chicago Baptist Association is collecting supplies for the relief program in Europe and will send a car load from Chicago about October 18. Through the courtesy of the railroad company, this will be transported free of freight charges from Chicago to New York.

* * *

Tuesday, October 25, will be "Donation Day" at the denominational headquarters, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York. All the workers in the various denominational offices will bring their gifts for the relief program and the entire assortment will be transported that afternoon to the warehouse, to be included in the shipment for Europe.

* * *

A recent inquiry from Michigan offers a valuable suggestion to those interested in co-operating still further in the plan to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." This friend asks to what extent garden seeds will be acceptable. The Foreign Mission Societies are glad to announce that garden seeds in any quantity will be accepted. They should include only the more common varieties of beans, peas, beet, carrot, etc., and care should be taken that the seeds are of recent origin and good reasonable assurance of germination.

A Final Reminder—

Have you sent that package?

"Fill a Ship in Fellowship"

WANTED

in large quantities for the suffering people in

POLAND—CZECHOSLOVAKIA—LATVIA

Clothing, Shoes, Stockings, Underwear, Caps, Mufflers,
Blankets, Towels, Soap for Men, Women, Boys, Girls, Infants

SHIPPING DIRECTIONS

1. Pack all supplies securely and send by parcel post or express Fully Prepaid.
2. Address all packages to European Relief Warehouse, 348 East 23rd Street, New York City.
3. Send to White Cross Department, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, a remittance amounting to 5 cents per pound of your shipment, to cover the cost of ocean freight.
4. All packages must reach warehouse before November 10.
5. Secure shipping tags from White Cross Department or your State Promotion Director.

American Baptist Foreign Mission Society
Women's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society

White Cross Department

276 FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK CITY

Fresh from the Field

(Continued from page 1164)

Pastor Howard Kirthley of Silvis, Ill., was ordained on the advice of a council of Rock Island Association, Sept. 20, 1921.

At the First Baptist Church, Mitchell, S. Dak., an interdenominational spiritual life conference will be held October 16-23.

Rev. Ernest J. C. Love, who is just completing his Ph. D. degree at Chicago University, has received a call to become pastor of the First Baptist Church, Sioux Falls, S. Dak. At the close of the pastorate of Rev. G. Elton Harris, the church passed warm resolutions of appreciation of both him and Mrs. Harris.

The First Annual Christian Council of the Christian Evangelistic Union will be held November 7-10 in the building of La Salle Avenue Baptist Church, Chicago. The congregation was unanimous in welcoming the council. Rev. C. H. Rawson is superintendent of the union.

Highland Baptist Church, Portland, Ore., held its annual business meeting on the evening of Sept. 29. The ladies of the church had provided a supper. About 200 were present. The reports showed eighty-seven received into membership, over $8000 raised for all purposes, and $7,778 expended. Rev. Walter L. Riley has been with the church as pastor just a year. The aggressive spirit in the church gives promise of a fruitful year.

Mrs. Ballington Booth, who founded the Volunteer Prison League, pleads for little children who will suffer cold and hunger, will be poorly fed and in many instances have no Christmas toys because the father is in prison. She says: "For years I have tried to help them, and through their fathers in prison I have come into touch with thousands of these families throughout the country. In the name of the Christ Child I ask your help for them. Will you help me get shoes for the little cold feet, warm clothing that they may go to school protected from the inclement weather? And will you help me get dolls and toys for these little ones who should have the right to happiness and joy at the glad season? Any contribution will be most welcome. Please address the same to Mrs. Ballington Booth, the Volunteers of America, 34 West 28th Street, New York City."

The first meeting of the International Missionary Committee, representing the missionary boards and societies of all home base lands, was held at Lake Mohonk, September 30 to October 6. Sitting with the members from North America, Europe, Australasia and South Africa were one missionary and two nationals from India, China and Japan respectively; these being the mission countries in which there are federated national Christian councils in position to appoint member-delegates.

Professor James Q. Dealey of Brown University, professor of Social and Political Science, has just returned from five months of lecturing in China and Japan. He had four regular classes for four months at the Shanghai Baptist College. He traveled all over Eastern China, delivering eighty-two addresses outside of his college courses. He was greeted by large assemblies everywhere, as China, now in a plastic state, is eagerly looking for basic principles for the reorganization of the family, the city and the state. Professor D. H. Kulp, who was taking Professor Dealey's work at Brown, has now gone back to the Shanghai College.

Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, Baptist Commissioner for Europe, in a recent letter to the Foreign Mission Society, writes that "conditions in Latvia are terrible. During the war the population of Riga, for example, was reduced from 600,000 to less than 200,000, and the country districts suffered enormously. Throughout the period of the great struggle, the country was plundered alternately by Russians and Germans. When the main fighting had ceased and the independence of Latvia had been proclaimed, the land was still swept by robber bands under the leadership of Von der Goltz and Bermond and others and for some months the country was subject to the horrors of Bolshevik terrorism. Obviously with such conditions there is an urgent need of supplies of shoes and clothing, especially warm underclothing for men, women and children. The ship which Baptists are to fill for these needy people will certainly bring them an abundance of Christmas cheer. Dr. Rushbrooke writes further that conditions in Poland seem to be passing from bad to worse. The cost of living has risen appallingly and distress of the most acute kind threatens the entire country, especially the crowded city populations in such centers like Lodz and Warsaw. It is proposed to distribute fully half of the shipment of supplies which will go to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" among the destitute people of Poland.

An Illinois correspondent notes the suggestion that a cake of soap be enclosed in each package of clothing for our Baptist ship, remarks that postage from many places in the West will almost equal the value of the soap, and suggests that, instead of the actual soap money be sent so that soap can be purchased in New York. If each woman in a church gave ten cents or more this could easily be done. The suggestion is respectfully referred to the elect ladies.

The annual meeting of the executive committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will be held in Chicago, Dec. 14-16. Word has just been received of the death in China of the chairman of the committee, Bishop Walter R. Lambuth, of the M. E. Church, South. The first vice-chairman, Rev. Frederick W. Burnham will therefore be acting chairman.

Believing that Christian citizenship should express itself in efforts to enforce the law, the 117 young men holding membership in the Human Interest Bible Class of the First Church, Knoxville, Tenn., have tendered their services to Chief of Police Ed. M. Haynes, as special policemen in ridding the city of lawlessness and vice. The class also offered any other service it can render.

Probably the first special train ever run to a baptismal service in America consisted of five cars run recently from a lumber camp in Polk County, Texas, to a creek near Livingston, where 49 new members of the little Baptist church at the camp were baptized by Rev. L. S. Cole. The converts were won in an old-fashioned arbor meeting at the camp, but as there was no place at the camp suitable for a baptism, the foreman of the camp, whose wife and five children were among the converts, arranged to run a special train of five cars to the creek, thus accommodating the entire community. Hundreds witnessed the ceremony. Over forty candidates for baptism were adults, with seven other candidates awaiting the ordinance at a later date. The total number of additions to the little church, which worships in a school house, was 69.

The First Church of Springfield, Mass., has recently called Rev. Warren P. Grant to become assistant to the pastor, Dr. E. M. Lake. Mr. Grant is a graduate of Colgate University and for a year was chaplain in the U. S. army. The First Church now has a membership of 1574. With the coming of Mr. Grant this important church is looking forward to an era of growth and prosperity.

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Robinson have just finished a series of lectures, with moving and still pictures, in the First Church, Seattle, Wash. Dr. A. M. Bailey, the pastor, writes: "Dr. Robinson is a titling evangelist and has a message of high quality that all the churches of the convention should hear. I am writing this personal word because I think the denomination ought to know about him, and churches can make no mistake in engaging him. He is a Baptist."

The Bible Teachers Training School, New York City, opened on Sept. 29, with an attendance of 211 students, including twenty-seven missionaries on furlough. The name of the school has been changed to "The Biblical Seminary in New York," and will develop still more in the immediate future its department of theology which is planned for college graduates.

In conjunction with the Chicago church federation evangelistic movement, October 3, a representative group of about seventy Chicago Baptists, pastors and laymen, met for an evangelistic luncheon at Morrison Hotel. Dr. Stillwell, the National Secretary on Evangelism for the Northern Baptist Convention, was the guest of honor and main speaker. After a general statement outlining the evangelistic movement, by the chair, followed

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

Oriental goods to sell at bazaars, fairs, etc., sent anywhere. No investment necessary. Send for circular telling how to secure a fascinating assortment for your next money-raising undertaking. Vroom & Company, 14 West Twentieth Street, New York.

I have been in the West eight years and wish to change east or southeast. Will furnish references. Address W., c/o THE BAPTIST.

Seminary student, college graduate, experienced preacher, good personality, strong adherent to the historic Baptist fundamentals, would like to get in touch with student pastorate within 100 miles of Chicago. Address S. C., c/o BAPTIST.

Ministerial Student, Baptist, wants small church within one hundred miles of Chicago. Salary no object. O. T. L., 153 Institute Place, Chicago, Ill.

LEM T. ROOT, Gospel Evangelist. Twenty years' experience from Pacific Coast to Kentucky. References. Mail addressed 3206 Sixth Ave., Tacoma, Wash. is forwarded.

Evangelist Singer A. H. Lovett is at his home in Davenport, Ia., this month. He is available to assist pastors or evangelists in special meetings after October 1st. He may be addressed at 1230 Arlington Ave., Davenport, Iowa.

Rev. Geo. L. Collins, Nainaimo, B. C., having resigned is open to a call.

by the introduction of the speaker who was heartily greeted, Dr. Stillwell with soul-stirring words, and passionate appeal, brought into clear relief the essentials for successful evangelism. Stressing the need of the positive message of Christ's redemption for the lost—a soul passion inborn in the heart of the minister, begetting like passion in the hearts of his people—together with the potent operation of God's Holy Spirit, purifying the hearts and lives of His people. The open conference which followed Dr. Stillwell's address was productive in a number of timely suggestions relative to more efficient methods in the promotion of evangelism within our relative constituencies. After a devotional season in which Drs. Freeman, Boynton and Hoyt led in prayer, the conference adjourned in a spirit indicative of the heartiest co-operation in this movement of evangelism throughout our churches for the present church year 1921-22.—ALBERT G. JOHNSON, Chairman on Evangelism.

The fall church social at the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, Rochester, N. Y., took the form of a tribute to Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, of this city, in recognition of the honor that had come to her in her election as president of the Northern Baptist convention.

Four hundred members of the church congregation and friends of Mrs. Montgomery gathered for an informal reception to her, which was followed by a dinner served by the women of the church.

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department

Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured. No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

BOOK OF PRAYERS

Complete Manual of several hundred terse, pointed, appropriate Prayers for use in Church, Prayer Meetings, Young People's Society, Sunday Schools, Missionary, Grace and Sentimental Prayers. Question of How and What to Pray in Public fully covered by model, suggestive and devout Prayers. Vest Pocket size, 128 pages. Cloth 25c. Morocco 35c. postpaid, stamps taken. Agents Wanted. GEO. W. NOBLE, Monon Building, Chicago, Ill.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

CEDAR VALLEY SEMINARY AND JUNIOR COLLEGE

OFFERS accredited work in Freshman and Sophomore College, Academy, Business, Religious Education, Normal and Music subjects. Christian atmosphere. The best instruction. Write for catalog and free scholarship offers. The ideal school for Baptist young people.
Victor Y. Craig, Acting Pres., Osage, Iowa

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise

Write for Booklet Z.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

Some Aspects of International Christianity

The Mendenhall Lectures

Fifth Series

Delivered at DePauw University

By JOHN KELMAN

Pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York

Net, $1.00, postpaid

THE ABINGDON PRESS,

New York

Cincinnati

Among the Books

What We Think of These

More Hunting Wasps, by J. Henri Fabre, translated by Alexander Teixeira de Mattos, Dodd, Mead and Co., New York; 376 pages.

Here was a man who loved insects, lived with them, knew them as intimate acquaintances. He knew them with the sympathetic knowledge of friendship, with the exactness of a scientist, with the insight of a poet. He was of the generation and spirit of John Burroughs, except that insect life was to him what nature as a whole was to Burroughs. Bees, wasps, flies, beetles, grasshoppers and caterpillars were more to him than empires. He sketches their world; tells how they eat, fight, get their prey, propagate, play. The story has the interest of a novel. M. Fabre died six years ago at the age of ninety-two.

"At One With the Invisible."

By F. C. Porter and others, edited by E. Hershey Sneath, Professor of the Philosophy of Religion and Religious Education, Yale University; The MacMillan Company; 293 pages, $3.00.

This is a student's book, a product of associated efforts in a seminary. It presents the results of investigations into the mysticism of all of the great religions, the purpose being to gather material for a reinterpretation of mysticism as a typical phase of religious development. It is luminous, bold, often provocative of question or dissent; neither interesting nor profitable for indiscriminate popular reading; but to the trained thinker who knows how to maintain his own balance and who can find the subject itself interesting, it is valuable and stimulating.

"Graded Lessons in English for Italians."

By Rev. Angelo di Domenico; the Christopher Publishing House, Boston; $2.00.

Teaching English to Italians has been greatly simplified by a unique method, devised and written by the Rev. Angelo Di Domenico, B.D., a graduate from the Yale Divinity School, and pastor of the First Italian Baptist Church of Philadelphia, working under the auspices of the Baptist Home Mission Society.

This method has grown out of the long experience the author has had in the course of twenty years, in which he has endeavored to teach English to his fellow-countrymen in connection with his church work.

Will-Power and Work, by Jules Payot, translation by Richard Duffy; Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York; cloth, XL+422 pages; $1.75 net.

Thoroughly modern and scientific, and at the same time intensely practical, here is a compendium by a ripe scholar and independent thinker on the culture of the will in its method and in its fundamental relation to one's life work. Keen, but delicate criticism of individual habits, educational methods, religious beliefs and institutions, and almost the whole range of social life, entertain and quicken the reader. Many a false ideal, habit and practice is punctured by a shaft of wit so cleanly that one wants to laugh in sheer ridicule at his own folly. And yet entertainment is the last thing the author had in mind. He is delivering a serious message in a vital way.

Exchange and Service Department

PASTORS AVAILABLE

An excellent and cultured minister who has been doing half-time work in a college town while educating his children, is now ready for a full-time settlement.

Rev. Leroy Collins, of Nauvaimo, V. I., B. C., who is recommended as a sound and effective Baptist pastor, has just resigned his present charge and is available for a pastoral settlement.

Rev. Thomas H. Scruggs, a Baptist minister of extensive experience in pastoral, district missionary, evangelistic, financial and educational work, after a period of rest is open for service, and can render practical and executive service in any department of our denominational work. Brother Scruggs is well known to many of our denominational leaders in the Northwest, and he will answer any letters addressed to him at Hill City, Idaho.

CENTRAL BAPTIST CHILDREN'S HOME

The annual reception and sale of fancy and useful articles will be held at the Home, 504 First Ave., South, Maywood, Ill., Tuesday, October 25, 1921. The managers are endeavoring to make this reception the best in the history of the Home. The object is most worthy and we ask your co-operation. Tag day also an annual institution for Children's Homes, occurs Monday, October 17, 1921. Our Home shares in this and all Baptist women are requested to help.

EVANGELISTIC SINGING

Mr. Leonard Saxon is available for He has had several years' experience. Is married. Address 1137 N. Kline St., Oklahoma City, Okla.

BACK NUMBERS WANTED

for the June 4 number, which it is unable to supply. It will greatly appreciate the courtesy of subscribers who have no further use for the number and who will mail it to this office.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Thousands of young people are this month beginning the serious study of music. They are dreaming of the success that is to be theirs and are eager to learn the means by which others have climbed to the positions they covet.

Mary Garden, the prima donna who combines managerial ability with musical genius, gives as her formula—"Patience, incessant work, ability to seize an opportunity and make the most of it, together with some power of interesting an audience so as to hold a position once gained—these are the things that make success."

Henry T. Finck, in his book on "Success in Music," makes the keynote the substitution of brain work for hand work. This is, in his opinion, "the short road up Mount Parnassus," and he is not alone in his belief that "an hour of thinking is worth more than ten hours of mechanical practice," for he cites Harold Bauer who "encourages his pupils to do as much work as possible away from the instrument," and Fannie Bloomfield Zeisler, who says, "The moving of fingers is not practicing, for in piano work the fingers accomplish one-fourth and the brain three-fourths of the result."

If, in the vast army of musicians, there were more who used their brains there would be fewer complaints of lack of opportunity for the struggling young artists whom the public and the managers conspire against so that they cannot secure a hearing.—Musical Leader.

SUCCESS OF COLE'S "ROCK OF LIBERTY"

Rosseter Cole's elaborate cantata, "The Rock of Liberty," for solos, mixed chorus and orchestra, which the Arthur P. Schmidt Co. published last July, has established the unusual record of having twelve performances during its first season by choral societies of more than a hundred voices, and probably a still larger number of smaller choruses and church choirs. Four of the performances were with orchestral accompaniment. In April it was given by the Duluth (Minn.) Choral Union, the combined Glee Clubs of the Hartford (Conn.) High Schools of 125 voices, Ralph L. Baldwin, conductor, and the Peoples Choral Union, New York City, Edward Marquard, conductor. On May 24 it was given in San Jose, Cal., as the opening concert of the Festival of American Music by the San Jose Choral Society and Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra, Dean Howard Hanson, conducting.

From the Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago, Ill.

I Ask No Dream..Knowlton ($0.60)
Unfolding Faith.....Miles ($0.30)

Two more songs from this enterprising Chicago publisher. The first named is a somewhat unconventional "ballad-type" song, vocal in its broad melodic outline, devotional and aspiring as to textual mood, and not too complex for the message involved. It should be very valuable for church use. The other title is a smaller song, more akin to the general run of sacred songs. No vocal difficulties are presented, and the accompaniment is equally modest in its demands. The melody is an appealing one; the song is issued in two keys.

From the Rodeheaver Co., Chicago, Ill.
Rodeheaver's Gospel Anthems,
No. 6 .....($0.35)
Rodeheaver's Gospel Anthems,
No. 7 .....($0.35)
Rodeheaver's Gospel Anthems,
No. 8 .....($0.35)

Within the covers of these three generous-sized volumes will be found a wealth of material for the use, primarily, of volunteer choirs of comparatively untrained voices, though much of the contents could be used to good advantage by much more "musicianly" quartets and choirs—a liberal use of simple, heart-appelling music is a fine lubricant in most church services, and often induces a much more neighborly attitude on the part of the congregation toward the musicians at those times when the latter enjoy a "high-brow" flip all of their own. Of necessity, the selections included within the covers of the above designated books are simple; but they are, for the most part, well written, and grammatically expressed—a compliment that cannot always be truthfully rendered much material designed for such use. The modest price charged for these well-bound books, and the variety of the contents no doubt will ensure a large sale and use.

"He Maketh Wars to Cease," the sacred song by John Prindle Scott, which was widely sung after the signing of the Armistice, has again come into demand by church singers due to the recent signing by President Harding of the resolution establishing peace between Germany and the United States.

Announcement is made of another, the seventh, series of arrangements for women's voices by Deems Taylor. The numbers are intended for the first of their this season's concerts to be given by the Schumann Club of New York, Percy Rector Stephens, conductor. The list includes four works with Latin words only, by Palestrina, Vittoria, Gallus, the same number by Bach, and eight Hungarian and Czecho-Slovakian folk songs. J. Fischer & Bro., New York, have been chosen as the publishers for this very remarkable group.

OUR ANNUITY BONDS

furnish you an opportunity to help a great work and also to receive an income during your life. We supply immigrants, sailors, the blind and the poor with Bibles.

Every kind of Bible for sale. Scofield, Oxford, Bagster, Cambridge, Holman, Nelson, at special discounts.

NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY

5 East 48th St. (112th Year) NEW YORK

A Book on the "Salient Experiences that Create Character"

Steps in the Development of American Democracy

The George Slocum Bennett Foundation Lectures, First Series. Delivered at Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut

By ANDREW CUNNINGHAM McLAUGHLIN
Professor of History, University of Chicago

Net, $1.50, postpaid

THE ABINGDON PRESS

New York

Cincinnati

Van Duzen Bells

formerly Van Duzen & Tift
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS COMMUNION
INDIVIDUAL SERVICE

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES
Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer.
Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

THE NORTHFIELD—A Fine Winter Home

THE satisfying homelikeness of this modern country hotel, and the entrancing scenic vistas from our cozy sun-parlor make The Northfield a real home for those who wish to avoid the city during the cold season. We have a fine cuisine, service that pleases thoroughly, and rooms so cozy and restful that they make indoors on stormy days a delight. Outdoor lovers enjoy plenty of tobogganning, skiing, snowshoeing, and sleighing. Our moderate rates make city living expensive. Write us for folder.

AMBERT G. MOODY, Mgr East Northfield, Mass. E. EVERETT MARTIN, Asst. Mgr

"The ablest and most influential religious paper in America"—says the London Westminster Gazette

A New Day is Dawning for the Awakening Church!

NEVER in the history of American religious journalism has there been so eager and generous a response to a program of complete freedom in the discussion of religious themes as that which The Christian Century is receiving. It is clear that the invaluable and consecrated service rendered by the denominational press may well be supplemented by discussions which have no reference to denominational interests and horizons.

The discovery—and it has been a discovery—that a periodical can be positively religious and at the same time liberal in its hospitality to all enlightened points of view; that it can be loyal to the church, devout and evangelical, and yet free as a university classroom, has seemed to thousands of unsatisfied hearts like coming upon a refreshing spring of living water.

Thoughtful churchmen, lay and clerical, in all communions are ardent readers. The subscription list is in an album of the signatures of the religious leaders of the nation. To a multitude of Christian folk, whose mood respecting the future of religion has been pessimistic, the Christian Century is bringing hope and a new vision.

It is also gripping the minds of thinking men and women, of earnest convictions, who make no religious profession. They are astonished to learn of the church's progress in open-minded thinking, in the deepening sense of its social responsibility, in the quiet passing away of sectarian strife and the coming of a new spirit of Christian unity. Such people, awakened from their prejudices, are amazed to find themselves actually enjoying a religious paper! No thoughtful Christian man or woman can afford to be unacquainted with this champion of the church in these perplexing times.

The CHRISTIAN CENTURY A Journal of Religion

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON and
HERBERT L. WILLETT, Editors

FOUR DOLLARS A YEAR

Some Recent Contributors—Each An Authoritative Writer

Charles E. Jefferson, Robert E. Speer, Richard Roberts, Rufus M. Jones, J. H. Garrison, Edward Scribner Ames, John Spargo, Alva W. Taylor, Jane Addams, Harry F. Ward, Vida D. Scudder, Lloyd C. Douglas, Charles A. Ellwood, Albert Parker Fitch, Edgar De Witt Jones, Joseph Fort Newton, Scott Nearing, William Adams Brown, Reginald J. Campbell, Katherine Lee Bates, Edward Shillito, H. D. C. MacLachlan, Peter Ainslie, Lynn Harold Hough, Joseph Ernest McAfee, William E. Barton, William E. Gilroy.

Fill out one of these coupons and mail today. Addresses outside U. S. must provide for extra postage.

The Christian Century, 508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Please enter my name (a new subscriber) for a year's subscription to The Christian Century at your regular rate of $4.00 (ministers $3.00). I will remit upon receipt of bill and you will please send me without extra charge a copy of [ ] "The Daily Altar," by Willett and Morrison, or [ ] "The Next War," by Will Irvin, or [ ] What and Where is God? by Swain, or [ ] "What Christianity Means to me," by Lyman Abbott, or [ ] "Princess Salome," by Burris Jenkins, or [ ] "The Master of Man," by Hall Caine.

Name..... Address.....

Baptist, 10/15

The Christian Century

508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find $1.00 for a twelve weeks acquaintance subscription to The Christian Century.

Name.....

Address.....

(Use title "Rev." if a minister.)

Baptist, 10/15

26.05
DAP

Volume II

October 22, 1921

Number 38

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

ON the site where Delhi in India now stands, a city is said to have been founded thirty-four centuries ago. City after city has been reared and has fallen. The present city arose about the time of Christ. It is one of the proud centers of Hindu civilization, and here the British government has established the throne of the Kaiser-i-Hind. One of the beautiful mausoleums of India, the Tomb of Humayun, is shown as it stands in Delhi.

Fresh from the Field

Dr. Geo. W. Truett has just entered on his twenty-fifth year of his pastorate at the First Church, Dallas, Texas. And the work is constantly enlarging.

A note from Wm. Remington, San Diego, Cal., says: "On Sept. 11 our Sunday-school lesson was, 'Paul at Athens, a Centre of Learning.' A member of the adult class thought that San Diego had more idols than Athens and brought a list from the daily papers which included: Christian Science, Harmonical Philosophy, Spiritualist, Theosophical, Annie Besant Lodge, Unitarian, United Lodge of Theosophists, Isis Theater, Katherine Tingley. This kind, or these kinds of 'Modernism' have no more Christ in them than ancient Athens. We have modern Pauls to combat them."

Dr. John Marvin Dean, lately connected with the Calvary Church, New York City, has received a call to the First Church, Pasadena, Cal., as the successor to Rev. S. W. Cummings, now of Boston. He has not yet indicated whether or not he will accept.

At the recent Annual Meeting of the First Baptist Church, Shenandoah, Iowa, Rev. Charles A. Carman, pastor, reports showed eighty-five additions to the church during the year, forty-five by baptism, making a total membership of 501. The expenditures for the year, including missionary giving, was $8,283.56. The clerk's report indicated that it had been the best year in the church's history. The pastor will have rounded out five years the first of December.

The New York Bible Society announces that word has been received from President Harding that he will be glad to accept a Bible presented by the society for the Disarmament Conference. The Bible is beautifully bound in morocco and with large type. It is one of the finest copies of the Scriptures published and will be engrossed on the outside within a panel, as follows:

"This Bible is presented to the Conference for limitation of Armaments and is Dedicated to the Promotion of Good Will among the Nations by the New York Bible Society.

"November 11, 1921."

Rev. J. L. Watson has been holding special meetings recently in Newark and St. Francisville, Mo. He is now giving his entire time to revival work, and pastors and churches desiring his services can address him at his home in Spillivan, Ind.

A Child Welfare research laboratory whose facilities are available to the parent-hood of the land—that is what is provided by the Iowa State University in its Child Welfare Research Station—the first of its kind in the United States—to the maintenance of which the National Woman's Christian Temperance Union has voted a gift of $50,000, payable $5,000 every six months for five years. The state of Iowa contributes $25,000 annually to the support of this station. The idea of the research station is to give to the normal child the same scientific study, by research methods, that we give to crops and cattle; to study his inheritance, racially, physically, socially, then temperamentally; study his development through infancy, childhood, adolescence and youth. The three branches of work pursued by the station are: (1) The study of the best scientific methods of conserving and developing the normal child, (2) the dissemination of such information acquired, and (3) the training of students for such work in such fields.

A recent writer in El Mundo Cristiano, the organ of several Protestant denominations in Mexico, writes as follows: "The number of Protestants in Mexico may seem small to those who judge the worth of a thing by quantity and not by quality, but the truth is that the moral, social and religious influence of this small number of people is felt so clearly and effectively that Roman Catholics are compelled to acknowledge it. A few days ago a Catholic daily of Puebla said in so many words that the Romanists no longer demand of the government of Mexico privileges of any kind but only ask that they be treated with the same respect

Avoid Inevitable Delay

In view of the threatened railroad strike it is of the utmost importance that packages for the Relief Ship sailing in November be delivered to the Post Office or to the Express Company at the earliest possible moment. The Foreign Mission Society urgently requests all churches or individuals who have not yet forwarded their packages to do so immediately, thereby avoiding any inevitable delay of transportation or congestion which might be occasioned by the strike. "Fill a ship in fello-ship."

and deference with which the Protestants are treated. As a matter of fact Protestant Christians never have been molested by any of the governments which have existed in our country and everybody knows that today there are Protestants in public office, in public schools, in both chambers of the legislature and that they have even come to occupy the position of governor in two of our states. However small the number of evangelical believers in Mexico may be, their influence is felt in all parts of the republic from the most insignificant villages to the largest cities."

Dr. Theodore M. Hofmeister, of First Church, Greenfield, Ohio, goes to Norfolk, Virginia in January for a return evangelistic engagement. He was there four years ago in a great tabernacle campaign. Dr. T. F. Chambers, State Sec., and Dr. Vernon S. Phillips, Tenth Ave., Columbus, and Rev. B. D. Profilo of Colgate University, will occupy the pulpit during the absence of the pastor.

A mammoth petition urging reduction of armament signed by more than a million women voters of the United States will be presented to Secretary of State Hughes, Chairman of the American Delegation to the Disarmament Conference, shortly before the meeting of the Disarmament Conference, November 11. These petitions are being circulated by the Woman's Christian Temperance Union through its 20,000 local unions. They will be signed not only by the one-half million members of the W. C. T. U., but by as many more of their friends and acquaintances. The petitions will be forwarded to Washington, D. C., and presented by the president of the National W. C. T. U.

Madam Kaji Yajima, for over thirty years president of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union of Japan; Madam Chiyo Kozaki, its newly elected president, and Miss Azuma Moriya, leader of its work for children, are on their way to the United States with a message of peace from the women of Japan to the women of the United States. This is the good word they are bringing:

"Japanese womanhood prays for the success of the Washington Conference and the dawn of a new epoch of higher and better understanding between nations."

Representatives of the student bodies of twelve countries became signatories to a world student federation against alcohol in a three day conference held the last of August at Lausanne, Switzerland. Coming immediately after the sessions of the Sixteenth International Congress against Alcoholism, this action is most significant in the international struggle against the alcoholic traffic. The countries represented in the new federation are—Austria, Sweden, Switzerland, Esthonia, United States of America, Belgium, Germany, France, Great Britain, Holland, Bulgaria and Czecho-Slovakia. This conference was called by the provisional Committee appointed in the summer of 1920 at Karlstad, Sweden, at a similar international meeting.

Dr. Frederick A. Agar has just returned to the General Board of Promotion headquarters, after being present at the New Hampshire State Convention, and at a gathering of Northern Baptists in Somerville, Mass., both distinguished, he says, by very lively questionnaires.

Miss May Covington of El Salvador led an especially inspirational session of the usual Friday Board prayer-meeting at headquarters on October 7.

Dr. H. R. Greaves, business manager of the General Board of Promotion, will be one of the chief speakers at the Iowa State Convention on Thursday, October 27, on the subject of "The Claims of the New World Movement."

Dr. Charles H. Sears, executive secretary of the City Missions Society, reports that he has received an appeal from the General Committee of Immigrant Aid at Ellis Island, of which the American Baptist Home Mission Society is a constituent society, for men's and babies' clothing in the Social Service Department, and for funds for the kindergarten and nursery work.

Mr. and Mrs. William G. Evans of Cleveland, Ohio, will sail on Tuesday, November 1, for Moulmein, Burma, where they will begin their work as new missionaries under the auspices of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

A delightful new booklet fresh from the press which all Northern Baptists everywhere will want to read is "True Tales from the Western Plains," ten

(Continued on page 1221)

The Baptist

Vol. II

October 22, 1921

No. 38

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE

MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS

MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS

PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
REV. FREDRICK E. TAYLOR
PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY

HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cent extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	1194
A MOST SIGNIFICANT MEETING, by J. H. Franklin....	1197
THE ROLL CALL OF RATIONALISM, by Geo. E. Bur-ingham .....	1199
COMMUNITY SELF-DETERMINATION VS. DENOMINA-
TIONAL DIRECTION, by G. Clifford Cress .....	1201
THE STUDENTS' CHRISTMAS NIGHT, by Albert F. Johnson .....	1203
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	1208
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1211
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	1212
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	1214
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....	1215
"THE LADY FROM THE ENGLISH: MY FRIEND," by
Blanche Brace .....	1220
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	1223

It Might Be Worse

It is great to sit over against the treasury when the receipts are on the increase. We have already shown that THE BAPTIST received from Jan. 1, 1921, to Sept. 1, an average weekly increase of $227.54 over the weekly subscription receipts of 1920. It might be worse and the average for the full calendar year will be much better. The first fifteen days of October, 1920, THE BAPTIST received in subscriptions $1170.02 and in the same period this year $1741.34, a gain of $571.32. It might be worse and it is going to be better.

Killam's Kollum

Take Warning

We have been told of a certain road which is paved with good intentions. We are not headed that way. We want to save you from its perils. You know that you and your church should be back of THE BAPTIST and Missions in a bigger way. You fully intend to do your part toward making their circulation 100,000 each. Better transform those good intentions into specific actions. Catch the point?

And Nimrod Was A Mighty Hunter

THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists. Its editors do not occupy the secure place of the editors of private papers who may remain ten, twenty, or even fifty years, if they own a controlling interest in the corporation. With them the tenure of office is not a question of service but of control. The editors of THE BAPTIST and Missions are the servants of the denomination just like our secretaries. When they no longer serve the best interests of the denomination they may be killed off. There is no closed season and no limit to the bag. Head hunting promises to become a favorite denominational sport. Good sportsmen may kill but they do not slaughter.

We Assume That You Never Received One

A polite notice calling attention to subscription expirations of THE BAPTIST carries the request for suggestions as to changes in the character of the material or of its emphasis. The last question is, "Should Killam's Kollum be killed?" One questionnaire came back thus: "Should Killam be killed?" Answer: "Lord, let him alone this year, also." Such an exhibition of mercy brings the tears to our eyes.

How Did He Do It?

Rev. W. H. Wilson, pastor of the church at Byesville, Ohio, during the past week sent his check for $85 for subscriptions to THE BAPTIST. Byesville is a village. The church has 160 resident members. No outside canvasser did the trick. We have asked Pastor Wilson to tell us how he did it. We think, however, that the soles of his shoes will tell the story.

"What Handsome Men!"

In the issue of Sept. 10 THE BAPTIST published double-page spreads of two great classes of men. We overheard our office girls say, "What handsome men!" Handsome is that handsome does. Dr. F. A. Stiles, teacher of the class at Middletown, Ohio, in sending in a list availed himself of the special rate for churches making up lists equal to at least ten per cent of their membership. This means that the girls were right.

Williams Centenary Celebrated by Y. M. C. A.

By HOWARD B. GROSE.

A HUNDRED years ago—October 11, 1821—a boy was born on a farm in Somersetshire, England, the youngest of eight sons of Amos and Elizabeth Williams. On that date in this centennial year that boy's name was honored and his fame was celebrated in all parts of the world. It will be worth while to learn why, and the study of personality is always interesting.

There was no special mark about the boy's life for the first thirteen years, spent on the farm, with such schooling as the time and place furnished. Short of stature and not large of frame, he was physically fit, as his long life proved. But he had no liking for farming, and at fifteen he was apprenticed to a draper at Bridgewater. He says he was at that time a "careless, thoughtless, godless, swearing fellow."

God Had Plans for Him

But God had his plans for this life. It was not by chance but by divine appointing that Rev. Evan James of the local Congregational Chapel, a great friend of young men, found George Williams, and under his influence and ministry George found Christ as his Savior. His conversion was complete. He took for the keynote of his new life "to live not unto himself but to the glory of God and in the service of men." He united with the church in Bridgewater in 1838.

Apprenticeship completed, at nineteen we find the young man in London, in the employ of a draper's firm on Ludgate Hill, in St. Paul's Churchyard, at a salary of £40 a year. He was a competent clerk, as he proved by going on till he became head of the great house and a rich man, incidentally marrying his employer's daughter in due time. But what was it that was to single him out from the thousands of other clerks in London, and finally gain him jubilee and centennial celebrations?

His story gives the answer. George Williams was filled with the evangelistic spirit. He saw the condition of his fellow clerks and wanted them to know the happiness he had found in his faith in Christ. One by one he put the personal touch upon his comrades and won them to the Saviour. Soon he had a little group with him. He started a prayer meeting in his little third-story bedroom in the big warehouse, and there was the center of prayer and Bible study—the birthplace of the Y. M. C. A. also. As the work developed, the employees were formed into a simple organization called the Young Men's Society. By 1843 the religious movement thus started had changed the entire establishment, with its staff of 140, from the head to the youngest apprentice. Seldom has the power of a spiritual personality had finer illustration.

Then came to George Williams the idea of a larger work for young men. Why would not the thing that had worked such good in Hitchcock & Rogers' establishment accomplish the same results in every drapery establishment in London, and why should it not be extended to them all? He was crossing the famous Blackfriars Bridge one day with his close companion, Edward Beaumont, when this idea inspired him, and he told his dream. "All right, you lead and I'll follow," said Beaumont. The result was a meeting of twelve young men on June 6, 1844. Three of them were members of the Church of England, three Congregationalists, three Baptists, and three Methodists. They agreed to form an organization whose object was "to influence religious young men to spread the Redeemer's Kingdom amongst those by whom they were surrounded." And that was the beginning of the institution known the world around as the Young Men's Christian Association. The twelve were the vanguard of a great army.

From that day to the end of his life, sixty-one years later, George Williams devoted a large part of his time and energy to the organization he founded. He built up a large business, and always conducted a young men's Bible class, but he was never too busy to give the Association his best effort. And before his death he saw wonderful results. As early as 1851 the movement was brought over to North America, associations starting in Montreal and Boston the same year. Then it spread to Australia and New Zealand and later to Continental Europe and on to the Orient, carrying blessing to all lands and peoples. The jubilee of the founding, celebrated in London in 1894, was made the occasion of paying signal honor to the founder. Queen Victoria conferred on him the honor of knighthood, the freedom of the City of London was bestowed on him, and deputations and messages from all parts of the world greeted him.

Like a Triumphal March

When the fiftieth anniversary of the Association's organization in North America was celebrated in 1901, Sir George visited this country, and his journey was like a triumphal march. And in Paris in 1905, when he attended the jubilee of the World's Conference of the Y. M. C. A. in Paris, he received such a demonstration of regard and affection as falls to the lot of few men. In November of that same year he died, and was buried in St. Paul's, among the great of England, and not far from that little upper room in his warehouse where the Association was born. He kept that room as a sacred shrine, and as such it has been visited by Association leaders from many lands. The last message he sent to the young men of America by Mr. Wanamaker was this: "Be faithful to Jesus Christ, keep together, pray much, go forward, keep sweet." At the age of 83 he passed to his heavenly reward, after a lifetime spent in the service of his fellow men, and in winning them to Christ.

When the founder died in 1905 there were 7,773 Associations in the world list, with 722,000 members. These world totals have now grown to over 9,000 Associations with more than 1,500,000 members, and a property ownership estimated at $143,407,595. The Y. M. C. A. has girdled the earth with centers of Christian influence and helpfulness for young men and boys. Its leaders have held true to the evangelical principles and purpose of the founder, and to that fact it owes its power. Since the war special emphasis has been laid upon the religious work, with gratifying results. The report for the last year shows that there was an attendance on the Association religious meetings of 8,860,000 men and boys, a gain of nine per cent; while there was a Bible class membership of 180,808, a gain of thirty-three per cent.

Growth in America

The growth of the Y. M. C. A. in this country has been steady and remarkable, the latest figures giving 2,195 Associations with 935,581 members, 4,608 employed officers, and property worth $123,548,900. This includes Canada. The war gave the American Y. M. C. A. an opportunity for world service which it was well equipped to undertake. This service was rendered in a manner recognized by the Allies and our own Government as of inestimable value to the morale of the American and Allied armies. This service also opened up avenues of approach to foreign nations not usually receptive to a Protestant organization, and thus Christianity has been brought home to multitudes of men. Indeed the Y. M. C. A. has exerted a strong international influence and made for good will and better understanding of the United States among many peoples.

In addition to the work at home, the American Associations are carrying on work in more than twenty countries, and their activities under other national auspices nearly double that number.

The foreign work in the Far East has been signally helpful during the trying period since the war, the Associations proving a stabilizing force and giving a trained leadership where most needed. The immigration department, with headquarters at Cherbourg, and stations at six other continental points, is helping in the process of selection and Americanization. The educational work has grown until Dr. Mott states that more young men and boys were enrolled in the classes of the Association last year than in all of the Protestant Christian colleges of North America. Taken altogether, a mighty engine for righteousness and the building of character is the institution founded by the young man, George Williams, who gave his heart to Christ in the Bridgewater Chapel, and determined then to devote his life not in getting for himself, but in seeking to win others to the service of his Master and Lord.

Have Faith

By NEWELL MCINTYRE MEADE

*Be still, and know that I am God,
A God who loves and cares for thee,
And loving much, spares not the rod,
Tho' why, 'tis hard for thee to see.*

*When passing through the waters deep
Thou seem'st almost from sight to sink,
Place in my hand thine own to keep,
And to my strength thy weakness link.*

*Whate'er betide thee, good or ill,
Have faith in me, dear child of mine;
Remember I am faithful still,
E'en tho' you murmur and repine.
Atlanta, Ga., July 25, 1921.*

The Baptist

A MOST SIGNIFICANT MEETING

Perhaps the readers of THE BAPTIST will allow me to invite their careful attention to the report, appearing in this number of the paper, of the first meeting of the International Missionary Council held at Lake Mohonk, New York, September 30 to October 6. It has been my privilege to attend numerous interdenominational conferences in various parts of the world, but the recent meeting at Lake Mohonk was of greater significance, in some respects, than any other similar gathering of which I am informed. One could not sit for a week with missionary leaders, representing many countries, denominations and races, and listen to their reports of conditions in their own lands and a recital of lessons learned in their experiences during the last seven years, when like gatherings were hardly possible, without feeling profoundly grateful that, at such an hour as this in the history of the world, the missionary agencies may receive streams of information and inspiration from the ends of the earth for their guidance in the days to come. It had been my purpose to attempt a comprehensive report of the first meeting of the International Missionary Council, but the one which is being furnished to THE BAPTIST is so excellent that I prefer to urge its careful reading. At a later time I desire to comment on certain very interesting aspects of this significant meeting.—JAMES H. FRANKLIN, Foreign Secretary.

The First Meeting of the International Missionary Council, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Sept. 30—Oct. 6, 1921

INTERNATIONAL missionary fellowship and co-operation reached their highest pre-war expression in the World Missionary Conference held in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1910. By common consent of Christian leaders throughout the world that conference was epochal in missionary history. It was a truly great gathering. Yet its one creative act was the appointment of a continuation committee, charged with the duty of carrying on the spirit and investigations of the Edinburgh conference, and, when conditions permitted, to bring into being an international committee.

The continuation committee accepted its commission, held annual meetings, now on one side of the Atlantic and now on the other, launched various inquiries having large international significance, and its chairman, Dr. John R. Mott, made on its behalf in 1912-13 a long journey through Asia, holding eighteen regional and three national conferences with missionaries and native leaders. Continued co-operation on the part of the missionary leaders of all the principal home base lands and between these leaders and the missionary and church forces on the field seemed most hopefully assured.

Then came 1914 and the war. The continuation committee with a membership partly on one side and partly on the other side of the "front," inescapably became quiescent. For a time an emergency missionary committee, formed to provide some method of ad interim international functioning, did its work, but with the coming of the armistice and thereafter, the effort to re-establish broad international relationships in missions must needs be made.

The story of all the preliminary steps taken to this end, culminating in the meeting at Crans, Switzerland, in 1920, need not here be told. Suffice it to say that at Lake Mohonk, New York, during the period September 30 to October 6, the great achievement was brought about: the International Missionary Council, as it is called, was made a reality, chosen representatives from national missionary organizations in fourteen countries adopted a constitution, elected officers, studied vast problems and projected a program, all done with unanimity of spirit and of decision and with confident assurance that they were discovering a providential plan and were following an unseen Leader into larger realms of Christian achievement. The war was unthinkably destructive, but it had not destroyed Christian internationalism in the realm of co-operative endeavor to make the kingdoms of this world to become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ.

Lake Mohonk is a well-nigh matchless place for the holding of such an international gathering. To the beauties of that gem of a lake, of the purple mountains and the spacious valleys, were added at this time the changing tints of the brilliant autumnal foliage. The traditions of the place, connected with a multitude of conferences having significance for the uplift of nations and races, were stimulating and inspiring. Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Smiley of the Mountain House were gracious and helpful hosts. The hotel provided an equipment fully adequate and satisfying. The great drawing room containing a specially built table in the form of a hollow rectangle, furnished facilities for the carrying on of conference and discussion under the best possible conditions.

Across this hollow rectangle a Church of England bishop, formerly of Madagascar, looked into the eyes of a Japanese Methodist bishop. Bearing like titles, they represented opposite poles as to ecclesiastical theories of the episcopacy. A Dutch baron and an English baronet looked across to the son of a West African chief. Representatives of Australian and South African societies looked across to those of Norway, Sweden and Finland. Yellow and brown and black of Asia and Africa looked into the eyes of blonde and brunette of Europe and North America. A Burmese woman doctor of medicine from Rangoon faced an American woman doctor of laws from Kentucky. Dr. John R. Mott, of New York, who presided, as he had done also at Edinburgh, looked across to Dr. Karl Fries, of Sweden, for a quarter of a century chairman of the World's Student Christian Federation and now general secretary of the World's Committee of the Y. M. C. A. At Dr. Mott's right sat the two secretaries of the meeting, Mr. J. H. Oldham, editor of the International Review of Missions, and the Rev. Dr. A. L. Warnshuis, formerly of China, and at his left the chairman of the business committee, Dr. John R. Ritson, secretary of the British and Foreign Bible Society. Many able representatives of the Christian missionary forces of the world who had had extraordinary world contacts sat about that table. Some members had traveled thither for a few hours only. Many had crossed the sea to be present. One had been journeying for forty days to reach Mohonk.

Six days of deliberation and of prayer were shared in by these men and women of different races and of different Christian communions who dealt with baffling questions on which at times any unanimous expression of judgment seemed to be beyond possibility. Yet prayerful perseverance, purposeful thinking, and mutual trust and consideration brought this group of more than threescore persons from the ends of the earth to common judgments and to corporate action based on unanimous purpose. Let him who would explain this as the result of other than the supernatural working of the Spirit of the Most High do so if he will. He will not find agreement with his point of view among those who sat about that table at Lake Mohonk.

What is the nature of this new world missionary organization that has come into being? Is it some new super-board or super-society that is likely to arrogate to itself administrative functions which will arouse suspicion and distrust here and yonder? Have the missionary organizations, brought into being by ecclesiastical bodies for particular ends, sold their birthrights? Will it embarrass missionary leaders with respect to those matters of faith and order which are so inextricably intertwined with rock bottom religious convictions in each of us?

Not so. The Council is established on the basis that the only bodies entitled to determine missionary policy are the missionary societies and boards, or the churches which they represent, and the churches in the mission field. It is recognized that the successful working of the International Missionary Council is entirely dependent on the gift from God of the spirit of fellowship, mutual understanding and desire to co-operate. The Council is constituted by the national missionary organizations in the different countries. The term "national missionary organization" is used to describe the interdenominational conferences or committees in which in different sending countries the missionary societies are united for common consultation and co-operation, it being noted, however, that the Foreign Missions Conference of North America is international, including the mission boards both of the United States and Canada. Except as may be determined otherwise by subsequent action of the Council, representation is to be as follows: Foreign Missions Conference of North America (United States and Canada), 20; Conference of Missionary Societies in Great Britain and Ireland, 14; Australia, 2; New Zealand, 1; South Africa, 2; German Missions-ausschuss, 6; France, 4; Dutch Committee of Advice, 2; Swedish General Missionary Conference, 2; Switzerland, 2; Norway, 2; Danish Missionary Council, 2; National Joint Missions Committee of Finland, 1; Belgium, 1; Japan Continuation Committee, 3; China Continuation Committee, 3; National Missionary Council of India, 3. Two out of three representatives each from Japan, China, and India are to be nationals of these countries.

The functions of the Council are the following: (a) To stimulate thinking and investigation on missionary questions, to enlist in the solution of these questions the best knowledge and experience to be found in all countries and to make the results available for all missionary societies and missions. (b) To help to co-ordinate the activities of the national missionary organizations of the different countries and of the societies they represent and to bring about united action where necessary in missionary matters. (c) Through common consultation to help to unite Christian public opinion in support of freedom of conscience and religion and of missionary liberty. (d) To help to unite the Christian forces of the world in seeking justice in international and inter-racial relations, especially where politically weaker people are involved. (e) To be responsible for the publication of the "International Review of Missions" and such other publications as in the judgment of the committee may contribute to the study of missionary questions. (f) To call another world missionary conference if and when this should be desirable.

Recognizing that the International Missionary Council has been brought into being as representing the national missionary organizations of the various countries, for the purpose of investigation and co-operation within the appropriate sphere of these organizations, and, therefore, is not to be considered as representing churches or ecclesiastical organizations as such, the following declaration as governing its deliberations and as conditioning its commendation of other conferences of a missionary character, was adopted:

"No decision shall be sought from the Council and no statement shall be issued on any matter involving an ecclesiastical or doctrinal question, on which the members of the Council or the bodies constituting the Council may differ among themselves."

No representatives from Germany were present at the Lake Mohonk meeting. The German leaders were not yet ready to accept the urgent and repeated invitations to rejoin the international fellowship in missionary endeavor. But German missions, missionaries and home leadership were never out of mind at the meeting of the Council. Intercessory prayer, discussion, and informal conversation were redolent with unfeigned and eager yearning for the renewal of relationships with the German brethren.

With respect to the exclusion of German missionaries from many fields the Council declared its belief that this "inflicts deep injury upon the spiritual life of Germany by preventing the expression of vital spiritual forces, weakens the bands of international spiritual fellowship, deprives non-Christian peoples of help otherwise available, and retards the development of abiding friendship among the nations."

(To be continued next week)

The Roll Call of Rationalism

Labels make or mar men. Dr. Burlingame here analyzes an attempt to use the names of great men with insufficient regard for facts—an attempt to make rationalism respectable by a parade of respectables in its honor.

By GEO E. BURLINGAME

THE "Biographical Dictionary of Modern Rationalists," by Joseph McCabe, is frankly antagonistic to Christianity and to all revealed religion. It is avowedly a glorification of unbelief.

"Although the churches have repeatedly sought to elicit expressions favorable to themselves, they have failed signally to compile an impressive list of adherents."

This alleged humiliating failure of historic Christianity to make a creditable showing in now accentuated by the presentation of a list of nearly three thousand names of "distinguished men and women" from 1600 A. D. to the present, who represent "a revolt of modern culture against churches."

The author of the work under review is an English writer, educated for the Franciscan priesthood, and now an agnostic strongly inclined to materialism. This we learn from his autobiography included in the Dictionary.

Where is the Dividing Line?

Mr. McCabe confesses a difficulty in locating the dividing line between rationalism and Christian faith, because of the growing tolerance manifested by the churches toward rationalists, whom they not only endure, but whom they even solicit for membership:

"The Christian and Rationalist worlds, which were once so sharply divided, have enlarged and softened their boundaries until classification seems in some cases to be difficult. Theologians who reject the idea of miracle and revelation, and even the divinity of Christ, as so many eminent theologians do today, do not substantially differ from many of the Deists. Rationalists who maintain that the existence of some Power which they may call God survives all rational criticism, and who highly appreciate the moral teaching of Christ and the action of the Christian religion, are freely invited, or even entreated, to describe themselves as Christians. What has happened in our time is, not that some legendary wave of Materialism has subsided, but that the churches have lowered their qualifications, so as to embrace the less advanced types of Rationalists."

Mr. McCabe declares, however, that he has included in his list no one who belongs to any Christian communion. He defines rationalists, for the purpose of his Dictionary, as those who "discard the idea of revelation as a source of truth." He says further of the modern rationalist: "His characteristic is that in the ascertainment of fact he affirms the predominance and validity of reason over revelation, authority, faith, emotion or instinct."

Historically, rationalists since 1600 A. D. may be grouped in three classes. The deists of the seventeenth century believed in a Supreme Being and in immortality, but rejected revelation and miracle. In the succeeding period, leading to the French Revolution, positive atheism asserted itself in the discrediting of "natural religion," and in a denial of the existence of God and of the future life. The modern forms of rationalism are scientific agnosticism, secularism, and "materialism which discredits theology by ignoring it and which seeks to interpret the universe without its aid." The sentence just quoted is apparently the view of the author himself.

Three Thousand Immortals

In this list of Three Thousand Rationalist Immortals—though it were incongruous to employ that word "immortal" which Rationalism has relegated to innocuous desuetude—three thousand, all of whom are presumed to represent "a revolt of modern culture against the churches," we find a rather remarkable and variegated congeries whose underlying trait appears to be—or is alleged to be—in the fact that "they discard the idea of revelation as a source of truth." Ellen Key and Robert Ingersoll and Voltaire and Rousseau are all here, of course; and Tom Paine and Edgar Allan Poe and Blatchford. Jack London is here, and Marat of French Revolutionary terrorism, united in this revolt of modern culture against the churches. Frederic Harrison, leading exponent of Comte's Positivism; Hegel and Schleiermacher, Amiel and Renan, Luther Burbank and David Starr Jordan, are in the list. The two eminent authorities in the psychology of religion are included, Leuba and Starbuck. An array of noted names of authors and poets, living and dead, is found in the Dictionary: Walter Besant, Walter Bagehot, the essayist Hazlitt, Arnold Bennett, George Meredith, Nathaniel Hawthorne, James Russell Lowell, and Oliver Wendell Holmes. In the category of cultured unbelievers we find the historians Hubert Howe Bancroft and John Lothrop Motley, and even J. R. Green.

Some Snapshots at Rationalists

A few snapshots of the pages of this Dictionary will serve to indicate its method and spirit. Of Hazlitt we read: "a Theist but did not believe in immortality." Lafcadio Hearn: son of an Irish father and Greek mother; educated a Roman Catholic and became an atheist; married a Japanese woman; "rendered great service in proving the moral superiority of Buddhism to Christianity." Joseph Le Conte, American scientist: "not even an orthodox Theist." Renan: "he was really an agnostic and he never believed in immortality." Prof. J. H. Leuba of Bryn Mawr College: "he thinks that belief in a personal God seems no longer possible." Prof. E. D. Starbuck: "like Prof. Leuba, an expert on the psychological study of religion, and is outside all the creeds . . . adopts a pantheist position. 'There are,' he says, 'no distinct divine and human beings'."

Mr. McCabe has a very definite distaste for alleged death-bed renunciations of rationalism, and conversions to Christianity. Indeed he intimates that it is not uncommon for Christian priests and ministers deliberately to fake tales of death-bed conversions in the vain effort to bolster up a decadent and impossible belief. He assures us that although both Leslie Stephen and Swinburne were buried by the church, yet both are to be included in the protest of modern culture against the church. "That final profession of faith, put upon the lips of a dead man, has in hundreds of cases hidden from the public the thoughts of a distinguished sceptic." Of William Pitt the younger he assures us that the story of his death-bed avowal of the Christian faith is "merely one more pious fabrication about an infidel's death-bed." And for a death-bed scene which really inspires and charms and convinces, he points us to the finish of Ernest Renan. "In a beautiful account of Renan's last days" (written by his son-in-law) "we are told that when he lay dying he said, 'I know that when I am dead nothing of me will remain'."

Despite his doughty denunciation of the priestly fraud perpetrated over Rationalist death-beds, Mr. McCabe is exceedingly tolerant of a certain prudent and clever handling of the Christian doctrines as material for camouflage, which he thinks he finds in the utterances of some of the distinguished rationalists listed in his book. For example he tells us that when W. H. E. Lecky (undoubtedly a freethinker) published his "History of Morals" he gave much pain to his unbelieving contemporaries by his very flattering appreciation of the influence of Christianity in European morals. Mr. McCabe adroitly draws the sting of this concession to Christian superstition and error by saying that Lecky's "tendency to flatter Christianity was due merely to policy, or a desire to conciliate, not to any wavering of Lecky's agnosticism." That is, what Pitt said favorable to Christianity on his death-bed is a clerical fabrication, and what Lecky said while in health is a species of cajolery. We deduce this literary and critical principle which apparently guided the compiler of the Dictionary: casual words suggestive of doubt or misgiving concerning Christian doctrines, and death-bed forebodings or anxieties, are alike to be accepted as proof of Rationalism. On the other hand utterances implying belief in Christianity or appreciation of its doctrine and action, may be explained away as having been uttered merely for effect.

This principle enables Mr. McCabe to dispose of the serious difficulty in the case of Abraham Lincoln, whom he associates with his three thousand cultured protestants against the church. It is conceded that Mr. Lincoln often employed the colloquial of church folk and gave some ground for the inference that he actually prayed and worshipped and believed and read his Bible just like Christian people. But Mr. McCabe deftly disposes of all this just as he disposes of Lecky's embarrassing admissions. Mr. Lincoln was simply fooling the Christian people and, in street phrase, stringing them along. For, says Mr. McCabe, "prudent regard for his position induced him to use rather exaggerated expressions of his Theism in his speeches."

Lincoln the Rationalist is not without good company of a congenial sort; for Mr. McCabe includes in his honor roll of those who "represent a revolt of modern culture against the churches," such familiar names as Longfellow, Robert Browning and Tennyson. When we encounter these names in a list of those who "discard the idea of revelation as a source of truth," we suspect that Mr. McCabe has fallen a victim to the tendency which he deprecates in the churches—to ignore the line of demarkation between Christian faith and rationalism, and to claim fearlessly all debatable ground. He seems to find it an easy matter to pass over the barrier and embrace

The Time for Prayer

When is the time for prayer?

With the first beams that light the morning sky,

Ere for the toils of day thou dost prepare,
Lift up thy thoughts on high;

Commend thy loved ones to His watchful care:

Morn is the time for prayer.

And in the noontide hour,

If worn by toil, or by sad cares oppressed,

Then unto God thy spirit's sorrow pour,
And He will give thee rest;

Thy voice shall reach Him through the fields of air:

Noon is the time for prayer.

When the bright sun hath set,

While eve's bright colors deck the skies;

When with the loved at home again thou'st met,

Then let thy prayers arise;

For those who in thy joys and sorrows share,

Eve is the time for prayer.

And when the stars come forth—

When to the trusting heart sweet hopes are given,

And the deep stillness of the hour gives birth

To pure bright dreams of heaven;

Kneel to thy God—ask strength, life's ills to bear,

Night is the time for prayer.

When is the time for prayer?

In every hour, while life is spared to thee;

In crowds or solitude, in joy or care,

Thy thoughts should heavenward flee.

At home, at morn and eve, with loved ones there,

Bend thou the knee in prayer!

—Central Christian Advocate.

men whom the world had counted as champions of Christianity and exponents of the hope of immortality. The author however assures us that he has a valid claim to his prey. Of Tennyson he says: "He never leaned on the Christian doctrines. . . It is clear that he lived and died a Pantheist." Of Robert Browning: "After the death of his wife in 1861 the last relics of his Christian orthodoxy disappeared. In 'La Saissaz' (1875) he professes a pure Theism: 'Soul and God stand sure.' He plainly intimates all else has gone."

Roger Williams, whose statue represents Rhode Island in Statuary Hall at the National Capitol, and who has been claimed by American Baptists as one of their pioneers, occupies a niche in the Rationalist Hall of Fame, and of him Mr. McCabe confidently affirms: "He seems to have been little more than a Theist."

Within a week of this writing we had the privilege of interviewing an eminent English scientist and publicist who is enrolled in the "Dictionary of Modern Rationalism" as one of those who "represent the revolt of modern culture against the churches." This gentleman was greatly surprised to learn, for the first time, that he had been listed as a Rationalist. "I believe in the use of reason," he said, "but I certainly have never thought of myself as a rationalist." To this statement he has added the following affirmation which I quote from his letter verbatim:

"I come of Quaker stock and that is my connection. I assuredly avow myself a Christian, though an evolutionist, as Tennyson was. I believe in the human reason, but I think McCabe had no more right to include me in his list than Browning and Tennyson and Lincoln.

C. W. Saleeby."

If all of these alleged Rationalists were living and were to voice their convictions as Dr. Saleeby has done, we are confident that the Three Thousand Distinguished Names compiled by Mr. McCabe would suffer very material diminution. His work provides indeed much biographical data of interest and value; but he has been surprisingly generous to his cause, and his obvious and unrestrained bias vitiates the book as a trustworthy work of reference.

It has been said of Mr. H. G. Wells' "Outline of History" that it makes very delightful reading, but is not history. The "Dictionary of Modern Rationalism" makes delightful reading, but—

Community Self-Determination vs. Denominational Direction

The statement of a typical case in a Montana town

By G. CLIFFORD CRESS

THE by-products of the World War are recognized on every hand. They appear in the populous centers and on the lonely frontiers. The lowered sense of repugnance in the contemplation of moral weakness or utter spiritual bankruptcy is felt everywhere. There has been a recrudescence of evil in many parts of the world which for lack of a better term we designate "crime waves." There are many reversionisms to former and lower types of ethical distinction. Strained social relations mark the emerging of crude ideas concerning the purpose of democracy. There is confusion on every hand regarding the relation of personal liberty and that social restraint imposed by the will of the majority. The breaking up of ancient forms of autocracy carries away much of the former reverence for time-honored institutions and legitimate exercise of authority even when such authority is the expressed will of democratic groups. But not all the products of this struggle are undesirable. Many hitherto undiscovered values have emerged. We are unconsciously absorbing these into the life of the race. Some of these, as the new emphasis on race solidarity, democratic cooperation, the judgment pronounced on militarism, the new emergence of the ideals of Jesus, the failure of materialistic bases for life for individuals or groups, and many others are heralds of a better day and world order.

Learned Co-operation in War

An interesting expression of a war-product is to be seen in some of our Montana communities. Democratic cooperation being the cardinal principle in the program which won the war for the allies, has been seized by certain people and applied in unexpected fashion. For example: in many of our small frontier towns of from three hundred to twenty-five hundred population you will find two to six churches. These organizations usually have separate edifices and parsonages. General missionaries and superintendents of missions have been eager to plant churches of their faith in places which gave promise of growth and importance. And every frontier town in its early years is featured as an embryonic metropolis. Each of these towns has been combed for funds to erect these ecclesiastical plants and to support a regular ministry.

Now it so happens that many a town laid out originally to be the home of ten thousand people, the site of ten or more great factories and at least one college, and platted for the sale of lots for a mile in every direction beyond the last shack on the street, has seen the wave of settlement pass it by, leaving it desolate and solitary in the engulfing waste. Without question many of these places are over-churched. Fewer pastors could care for the needs of these communities more efficiently. Everyone on the field will readily agree to the general indictment. But who will withdraw?

War Economy in Pastors

During the war many of these communities had only one or two resident pastors. The others were in the war game somewhere. Those left were powerful in organizing the whole community for Red Cross, food conservation and local drives of every sort. Denominational lines were forgotten and every loyal person cooperated. During this period prices began to rise, living conditions grew more acute, and Montana had drought after drought from 1917-1920. To Montana pastors on the majority of our fields (all denominations) enlarged grants of missionary funds were made by the boards of home mission administration. The Baptist increase runs from 100% to 200% on these Montana fields. It has also been increasingly difficult to raise funds for local budgets in our state.

The Inter-Church World Movement came into prominence as a direct product of war conditions. Probably no movement of a religious type ever secured such publicity as this, gripped the popular mind more potently or produced greater chagrin through its debacle. To multitudes of people in our state today and especially among the non-churchmember class, the Inter-Church Movement was a definite step toward the "one big church" idea with its related ideas of the elimination of denominations, greater financial economies, and the unifying of American Protestantism. We know the Inter-Church did not stand for organic union, but in the popular mind guileless of ecclesiastical policies its failure is much lamented and one hears it frequently announced that its failure cannot be taken as final. The war record of the Y. M. C. A. is cited to prove that one organization can do effectively what several could not achieve. These and divers other contributing causes have developed an irritation under existing methods which is quite general over the state. It is acute in many communities. Men who formerly gave generously to individual churches, now give grudgingly in lesser amounts or refuse to give at all.

A typical case may be cited. It is in an average Montana community, a county seat and on a trans-continental railroad. It has twenty-five hundred people and had six major organizations of a religious sort not to mention several union groups. There were Roman Catholic, Protestant Episcopal, Methodist Episcopal, Norwegian Lutheran, Congregational and United Brethren. Each of these maintained a resident minister. At least five of these have edifices and there are several parsonages. Each denomination has invested many thousands of dollars in developing its work. Be it said in fairness that most if not all of these churches regarded this town as a central point and from it these ministers went out to points in all parts of the country and beyond the county.

Pay and Service Ordinary

Of necessity these churches employed ordinary men and paid them salaries that scarcely provided the decencies of life. They were not men of such polish as would appeal to churches paying twice their salary. Their preaching and parish work could only be thought of as ordinary and plain. Yet they were good average men such as everywhere and always have laid the foundations of the Kingdom of Christ.

In this community a movement was launched a year ago and perfected in July this year to rid the city of all the Protestant churches and put in their stead a single countrywide organization known as "The Grace Chapel of — County, Montana." It is incorporated, has a set of principles, a creed, a covenant, bylaws and provides a very comprehensive program for the county field. This is headed by a former pastor of one of the denominations. He is paid a salary equal to that of the largest city churches in the state. This new organization has asked all churches to close their doors, sell their property and place the proceeds in the building fund of the new community project. On September first the community church reported a larger membership than the total combined membership of all the churches in the county a year ago. How has this affected the churches? As follows: (1) One church reports that perhaps twenty-five per cent of its members have united with the community church. They will not try to support a local minister this year but will send supplies regularly. They will not sell their property. (2) The second church and smallest in the group voted unanimously to unite with the community church and turn over their property. But their state organization refused to acknowledge validity of local action and are paying a pastor $1,500.00 per year to "preach if need be to empty benches." (3) The third church reports many members leaving to join the new organization. These they term "backsliders." They will not sell property and a district missionary will care for this church. (4) The fourth church voted unanimously to sell its property, disband its membership and let the community church have the field. The state board approved the course adopted. (5) The oldest and largest church reports that ninety per cent of its members have left and united with the new church. The state board of this church will not permit property to be transferred and has voted $1,000.00 toward salary for a resident minister.

What Has Been Gained

In conclusion we ask what has been gained by the new plan of organization? It seems very apparent that unity in this town is lessened. Bitterness such as never was known exists. Families are divided in their allegiance. There are still five churches in the city to be supported, four denominational and one which owes no allegiance to anything or anyone outside its own body. The community church born of reasons avowedly utilitarian and not upon convictions of great spiritual principles and building its present life about the magnetic personality of its pastor, will in all human probability end as many of its predecessors have done, in disintegration and final collapse. For it is apparent to any thoughtful person that a church in isolation unless it feeds on the products of regular churches, will, like isolated members of society, develop morbid views and habits and will perish childless at last.

Could Easily Wreck 100 Churches

We recognize in the widespread protest against the old order, a vital though incoherent call for the correction of ancient evils. And let not the reader think this case cited is a sporadic symptom. With a few men gifted in giving publicity to the community church idea it would be a very easy thing to wreck, at least for the present, one hundred Protestant churches in Montana in a twelve month. We must not close our ears to these clamors at our gates. It is vain to counsel these restless spirits to abide in peace in the old order. This inarticulate, unorganized protest for local rule and complete self-determination is a slowly rising tide in the rich life of the human spirit. We may brand it as "red" by attaching to it such names as I. W. W.-ism, ecclesiastical anarchy, sovietism and the like but this indicates either ignorance or the spirit of the reactionary.

My own conviction is that the answer to this insistent call in our state is found in the Home Missions Council of Montana. This council organized by all the Protestant denominations in the state in July, 1919, and meeting frequently, must frankly face the conditions and study them with open mind. This Council can make many adjustments that will be mutually approved. That we are not organizing new churches on a competitive basis now for over two years is commendable. This policy must be maintained and its future application be studied with candor and mutual trust. It is apparent that only as all the denominations face this condition together can any adequate and satisfactory solution be discovered. As denominational Christians, we cannot approve the isolated community organization. By the same reasoning then we must seek positive and aggressive methods of bringing relief to communities upon which our past zeal and present stupidity have fastened an undesirable and intolerable burden. Adjustments are costly and painful but the larger life demands them. Indifference can only lead to revolution from without whereas God's plan in this as in all his universe is evolution from within.—G. Clifford Cress, Corresponding Secretary and Superintendent of Missions, Montana Baptist Convention and Secretary of the Home Missions Council of Montana since its organization, July, 1919.

The Children of Esau

From the dreamless sleep of the well-fed
They rise at the morning time.
They feel no joy at the glory of the sunrise;
They see no heaven reflected in the drop of dew;
They hear no God clear-speaking to the heart of man
In the freshly-blown rose.
What care they to be called "sons of God,"
If the appetite of sense be satisfied?
What care they for Bethel dreams,
If only the forests are full of venison?

What profits it to think?
Grows not the body lean with much thinking?
Why speculate on future years?
May not life's present good be lost in speculation?
This is the end of life: To eat, to drink, to sleep;
To feel no gnawing of the appetite;
To strive not after things far distant.
Soon cometh death, Much more then must we haste
To find the good this world can give.
Spirit? The word falls dead upon our ears.
Flesh, let the flesh be satisfied!

The Student's Christmas Night

(A one-act playlet written by a high school boy and presented in a number of churches in Southern California)

By ALBERT F. JOHNSON

Characters

ROBERT.....Captain of the Skating Club and a leader in Belldale Academy ELLEN.....Robert's Friend, and School Reformer
TED.....A Popular Student
GERTRUDE.....Ellen's Chum
RUTH, ELIZABETH, and any number of other young people.....Students
JONES.....One of the Villagers
FREDSON.....Another Villager
MOTHER ALCARE
Several other villagers.
A mixed quartet or choir that does not appear on the stage.

Scene.—Just outside the village church, two cedar or pine trees, which are on each side of church, and the church roof, are all covered with snow. The church is in the back center of the stage and through the boughs of the tree on the left side of the Church the moon in its last quarter shines. The stage is dark at first except for the moonlight effect given by blue globes or dim light.

As the curtain rises the "Skating Song" is heard in the distance off right of stage. The music grows louder and louder and on the final strain several students (any number) led by ELLEN, GERTRUDE, and TED with BOB and others entering last, rush upon the stage.

"SKATING SONG"

(Music to "A Merry Life," by L. Denza)
Some think the world is made for fun and frolic,

And so do I, and so do I.
Some think it well to be all melancholy,
To pine and sigh, to pine and sigh,
But I, I love to spend my time in skating
Across the ice, across the ice.

For all our skating pranks are worth relating,
They are so nice, they are so nice.

Skating, skating on a winter night,
Skating, skating when the moon is bright,

Tra-la-la-la,
Tra-la-la-la,
Tra-la-la-la-la-la-la-la.

Jolly students skating on a moonlit winter night.

BOB: What do you say, we give five rahs for Belldale Academy? All right, come on.

ALL: Belldale, Rah-Rah-Rah, Rah, Rah, Belldale.

ELLEN: (Startled) Mercy, I've dropped one of my skates somewhere along the way.

RUTH: Goodness, it's probably lost in the snow.

BOB: I'll find it for you. (Exit off right of stage.)

TED: Come on, fellows, we'll all look.

(All boys follow Ted off right.)

GERTRUDE: I hope they find it soon.

RUTH: Captain Robert is a splendid fellow, isn't he? See how quickly he volunteered.

ELIZABETH: A real hero in Belldale Academy.

GERTRUDE: At least Ellen thinks so.

ELLEN: He is a real leader, but—(Lights in church go on and students turn to see the beautiful lights.)

RUTH: Oh, look the lights are on in the church.

ELLEN: Isn't it beautiful.

ELIZABETH: We'd better go before they ask us in.

ELLEN: Oh, I wish they would.

TED: (As the boys enter) The old boy, Bob has found the skates already.

RUTH: Oh, good, for Captain Robert!

TED: Let's give five Rahs for Bob.

ALL: (Give five Rahs—Ted leads them.)

SEVERAL: Speech, speech.

BOB: Ah! Why the speech?

ELIZABETH: Come on, let's hear from you, Captain. Isn't that right, Ellen?

ELLEN: It seems appropriate.

BOB: Well, here goes then. (All students give their attention to Bob.) For the past four years it has been the custom of the students in Belldale Academy to celebrate the Yuletide night with a skating party. We do honor to our school with what is known as the Midnight Skating Prank, when all the party hold high glee. (Church bell begins to ring.) It is a real pleasure to be Captain of our skating club this year. And I promise you all a night of hilarious sport that will send us back to Academy Hall the happiest, jolliest, merriest students in all the state. (All give applause.)

RUTH: Listen, there is the church bell.

ELIZABETH: Let's hurry away. (Organ starts playing Christmas music as church bell ceases.)

TED: (As the students exit off left.) Those pious church folks are liable to call us in.

BOB: (As he follows after them.) We'll skate, and skate till the moon goes down. (All have made exit except Gertrude and Ellen, who stand listening to the music.)

GERTRUDE: Well, Ellen, aren't you coming?

ELLEN: It's beautiful, I'd like to listen longer.

GERTRUDE: What's beautiful?

ELLEN: Why, the music. Don't you hear it?

GERTRUDE: Yes, but it's awfully solemn.

ELLEN: All of beauty is not in hilarity.

GERTRUDE: Ellen, you have the blues.

ELLEN: No, it's something more substantial than the blues.

GERTRUDE: What's wrong?

ELLEN: This school—seems to be going wrong.

GERTRUDE: Going wrong! In what way?

ELLEN: Well, in many ways, but chiefly in spirit. The general interest of the student body seems to be, "good time."

GERTRUDE: Happiness is what we all desire.

ELLEN: True—but do you not realize that we are leaving out the very essence of happiness?

GERTRUDE: Well, I think we have had a very good time today.

ELLEN: Ah, yes, but that is what hurts me. Last night they danced till after midnight and today not one of them has remembered the sacredness of Christmas. I'll admit I'm opposed to dancing, but a Christmas Eve Ball is worse than ever. It's wrong, Gertie, absolutely wrong. And tonight they are going skating. . . . I may be queer but I feel that this night, above all other nights, should be hallowed, and we should pay reverence—to Him.

GERTRUDE: The music has made you pious.

ELLEN: Maybe it has. It is beautiful. I'd love to sing those Christmas songs again. The ones I used to sing in Sunday school when I was just a little girl. You remember them don't you? "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear" and that glory song,—what is it now?—Oh, yes, "Glory to God in the Highest, Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

GERTRUDE: Those songs were pretty then, when we were children, but ideas have changed in the last few years.

ELLEN: But, Gertie, the meaning of those songs will never change. Oh, I long for the time when old Belldale Academy will seek a nobler standard and the cliques and clans of the students will all blend into one harmonious fellowship—that of Christian love.

GERTRUDE: You are blowing bubbles in the air. Come, I'm getting cold here, let's hurry away to the lake, and join our merry throng, then you'll forget your troubles. (Ellen follows Gertrude off left giving a longing look toward the church. Again the organ plays and several villagers enter left stage and stroll into the church.)

(Enter Jones at the right as Fredson enters left.)

FREDSON: Merry Christmas, Brother Jones!

JONES: Well, hello! there, Fredson. Merry Christmas to you!

FREDSON: Have a pleasant Christmas?

JONES: Fine, couldn't have hoped for a better. And you?

FREDSON: Splendid, I'm hoping we'll have a good crowd to the services this evening.

JONES: So am I, Brother Fredson, our little church is doing splendidly, isn't it?

FREDSON: Yes, quite well; but I'm wishing we could do more for the young people of our vicinity.

JONES: You mean those academy students?

FREDSON: Yes.

JONES: They're a lively bunch all right.

FREDSON: They're off down there to the lake tonight having a regular hinks on their skates and they will probably be there till after midnight singing, laughing and hollering, all forgetful of this great night.

JONES: It's too bad, but I guess we can't expect much more from such youngsters.

FREDSON: We ought to expect more, Jones. They are the youths going out from our college to be the men and women of tomorrow. Are we going to let them go out to take their places in the world without the knowledge of the gospel and the love of Christ in their lives? You know as well as I do how a few such people could harm our nation, to say nothing of the church.

JONES: Well, that's right, it's a pity that the faculty can't do something.

FREDSON: I guess the faculty tries hard enough, but it is a difficult proposition. The young people have their ideas of a good time, and they are determined to carry them out.

JONES: Of course, we can't deny them their pleasure.

FREDSON: By no means, but their pleasure should always have a worth while motive. Then, too, they should be led to know that the church is a good place for them to be and that it isn't filled with old fogies.

JONES: Yes, you're right. This is a serious matter. We must do something.

FREDSON: I was hoping that our lights might attract them tonight and they would come in, just out of curiosity. But when I saw them down on the lake having their wild good time my hopes flew clear up among the stars and I suppose it isn't worth while to try and bring them back again.

JONES: This looks like good old Mother Allcare coming.

FREDSON: (Turns to look.) I believe it is. Bless her! She is a good old soul.

JONES: (As Mother Allcare enters left stage.) Merry Christmas! Mother Allcare.

FREDSON: Merry Christmas! Mother.

MOTHER ALLCARE: Good evening, folks, Merry Christmas to you. Have the services started yet?

JONES: Not yet, Mother Allcare.

FREDSON: We were just talking about our young friends, the students of the academy.

MOTHER ALLCARE: Oh, the dear young folks, I think the whole church has been praying for them.

JONES: At least we are all interested in them.

FREDSON: Dr. Woods, the president of the academy, told me once that it was his great desire to see the school come under a Christian influence.

JONES: That Captain Bob of theirs, who has such an influence, is pretty wild I guess.

MOTHER ALLCARE: And that girl, Miss Ellen, that he is so fond of, is entirely different. She is a good Christian girl and has the interest of the students at heart. She told me so once.

JONES: I guess she can't do much alone though, and I suppose most of the leaders of the students have viewpoints that differ from hers.

FREDSON: Those are the leaders down there tonight. (Points off left.)

JONES: There is a lot of enthusiasm and pure life if it could only be directed.

MOTHER ALLCARE: And there they are, with the thought of frivolous pleasure as their only aim, skating and gliding, gliding and slipping out to their cold reward, with their eyes blinded to the light of true happiness and their backs turned on the warmth of holiness. Oh! if my prayers could only be granted those dear young lives (voice trembles) would think of the Christ child tonight and would turn to their Savior. (Singing from church, "It Came Upon a Midnight Clear.")

FREDSON: Well, well, Mother Allcare, have courage and faith. Your prayer may be answered this very night. Come, let's all go in now, they've started to sing. (Exit all three into church.)

(Ellen has entered to hear the last lines of Mother Allcare's speech, and has stood behind the tree. The music changes to the "Heavenly song" and Ellen sings the verses as the choir sings. At close of song Bob enters left.)

BOB: Why, Ellen! What are you doing here?

ELLEN: Listening to the music.

BOB: This is a funny place for you to be on a night like this.

ELLEN: It may seem so but all my interest is in there tonight.

BOB: We missed you on the ice so I started out to look for you but I never dreamed of finding you here—and alone!

ELLEN: Yes, alone. I knew that none of them would care to come along, so I slipped away alone, just to listen.

BOB: I'm sorry if I disturbed you, but you're missing a lot of fun.

ELLEN: I'm afraid fun is cheating Belldale students out of something tonight, something that is essential for their success and pure happiness. In there, they are keeping this night holy, and that is what I want to do.

BOB: We would hate to lose you from our crowd. I should think you'd want to be with the students on the Annual Yuletide Skating party.

ELLEN: Bob, do you know what Christmas is? I don't think you do. To you and to most of the students it is a mere holiday, but to the great mass of Christian people it is the most sacred day in all the year. The Christian world commemorates in reverence the birth of that Babe in Bethlehem who came to be the Savior of men. Did you ever stop to think that all time is dated either to or from this event? Christmas is Christ's day.

BOB: I hadn't thought of it like that before.

ELLEN: Not many of the students have, I guess. They lose themselves in worldly pleasure and think the church a joke. They're ignorant of the value of Christian life. But it is because they do not understand. It's because they've never tasted of the sweeter things in life.

BOB: I've often wondered how it seemed to live the other way, I mean the Christian way—your way—but I've been raised outside the church and have naturally cared nothing about it. I suppose there isn't much chance for me to ever change.

ELLEN: (Reflectively) Life is choice, Bob, not chance. So it is with Belldale. She will either choose the better or the worse and she is choosing all the time, even tonight.

BOB: Do you think she is choosing the wrong?

ELLEN: You are a friend of mine and a leader in Belldale, so it is to your interest that I give you my honest opinion. My three and a half years in Belldale have not been spent in vain so believe me, Bob, when I say, though I say it with regret, that Belldale Academy is on the down grade, and unless some one reaches for the brakes there is nothing before her but a crash—and a mass of wounded characters.

BOB: That is hard for a leader of Belldale to swallow.

ELLEN: And hard for a lover of Belldale to say but I have spoken sincerely.

BOB: That makes it even harder, when you hurt my school, Ellen, you hurt me.

ELLEN: If I could look through the clouds of winter into the heart of next spring and, on the fair commencement evening see happy students saying good-bye to a Christian Belldale and know that two seniors, who's hearts were hurt on that cold Christmas night a few months before, were happy again, then my hopes would be realized. I'm going in now and if this means the loss of student friends, then I'm sorry, but I'm setting a pace that I hope many will follow. Before I go I will give you these few words that I learned a long time ago, "Whosoever will may come." Good-night, and shall I say good-bye?

(Exit Ellen into church, Bob watches her go, then hangs his head. Gertrude enters left.)

GERTRUDE: Where is Ellen?

BOB: Gone into the church there.

GERTRUDE: Foolish girl.

BOB: No, I think not, at any rate she has given me something to think about.

GERTRUDE: Has she been telling you of her desire to make Belldale better?

BOB: Yes, she says we are on the downward grade and are choosing the wrong tonight.

GERTRUDE: Do you think she is right?

BOB: I do. Ellen is usually right about such things but I have never thought seriously about it before.

GERTRUDE: Well, I wish her desire might be granted but it seems almost impossible.

BOB: It is largely my fault and I am ashamed of it. My life has been a great mistake. I have been a leader but a leader in the wrong direction. I have led the students to have wrong conceptions about pleasure and piety through my foolishness. Ellen has hurt me, but she's hurt me to my own good. She has created an ambition in me to turn to the real right. But it's hard for a leader to change the things for which he stands. Oh, if I only knew what to do, whether to make the change or not. (Aside) If I change I may lose the leadership of the students but if I remain the same where will I lead them?

GERTRUDE: It's a serious matter, Robert, I wish I could help you, but I'm afraid I can't.

BOB: No, it's my own battle and my own choice—choice. Yes, life is a choice; I never realized it before. But Oh, for the power to choose, Gertrude, I'm a wretched sinner.

GERTRUDE: I'm sorry for you Captain. You shall have my friendship either way you choose. (Music from church, "Jesus Lover of My Soul.")

BOB: Listen, they are singing,—Ellen's voice is among them. Oh, the sweetness of that song—. Gertrude, if you are a friend of mine, go and summon all the students to this little church yard. Tell them to come and listen and if they believe in the spirit of those songs and in Christmas and the Savior to enter.

GERTRUDE: My Captain, I obey. (Salutes and exit off left.)

(Bob joins in the singing as he enters church. Enter all the students led by Gertrude. Music is soft off stage.)

GERTRUDE: The captain of our student band has called you to this little church. After a struggle for choice he has turned to the right, and is going to live the spirit of those songs and Christmas carols. He said for you all to listen and if you believe in Christmas and the Savior, for you to go in too.

(The choir sings "Silent Night." Lingeringly, one by one, the students hesitate a little and then each follows his fellow student into the church. Curtain.)

"The Average Country Church"

"Things can't wait any longer. The last bell has tolled. It's time for the service to begin. The minister is getting fidgety."

By T. H. ALVORD

IN a preliminary way, simply to show that if I have any prejudices at all they are in favor of the Christian church, I want to say that I am a member of the Baptist church in a village of about 1000 population and that I am genuinely interested in church work in general and in the future of my home churches particularly, an interest due almost, if not quite, solely to my early home training. In this village are a Methodist and a Catholic church, in addition to the Baptist. In the township, however, with a population of about 3000, are nine Protestant churches—all small and comparatively weak, of course,—and two Catholic churches.

The bell has not quite finished tolling, and the janitor has been importuned to pull the rope a few seconds overtime, if necessary, in the hopes that another member of the choir will appear. The four or five members who are present are in the basement glancing hurriedly over the anthem which was practiced at the last choir rehearsal, when one-third of them were absent. Yes, the hymns are all old ones; no one need worry about these. But if the bass doesn't arrive it will be a pity to try to use that anthem. In fact, it can't be used, for there is a bass and tenor duet (the prettiest part of the whole piece), and the tenor is either stubborn and won't sing alone or can't sing solos and is wise enough to know it. Mrs. X rushes to the door and glances nervously up and down the street, but no indications of more choir members. It must be they are not coming, though they gave every assurance they would be on hand—early—when they were called on the phone last evening.

When the Minister Fidgets

But things can't wait any longer. The last bell has tolled. It's time for the service to begin. The minister is getting fidgety. The organist snatches her books, goes upstairs and slips onto the organ stool quite noiselessly, while the remainder of the choir in the basement begin to form in line of march for the weekly parade to the choir box. When at last the organ begins to sound the procession proceeds and the choir members assume their respective places (with a few more or less subdued but entirely uncalled-for whispers). An empty chair is left for the bass, suggesting a hope, likely to be long-deferred, that he may yet come in time to save the anthem.

This passing in review pleases some of the participants; others it embarrasses; there are a few whom it disgusts. To all it gives the opportunity to be surveyed comprehensively, and any curiously observant persons in the pews may get a complete resume of the make-up of the gowns, the style of millinery and the character of the shoes and hosiery. * * * But what of it? Let that be passed by.

The congregation consists principally of middle-aged and elderly women, a part of whose very existence has been since early childhood to attend church services and support church activities. This small number is slightly augmented by a few middle-aged men and young people, and a hardly noticeable smattering of children.

The minister rises.

The congregation rises.

The doxology is sung—mostly by the choir.

And the invocation follows.

"We will turn for our responsive reading this morning to selection forty-three on page seven hundred and forty-six; selection forty-three on page seven hundred and forty-six." Some do and some don't. The minister often reads his verses understandingly, but somehow the responses sound strangely weak and unfamiliar and meaningless. By the time the last response is read there is better team work, so to speak, and the impression left upon the young traveling man, who has meantime dropped into the back seat, is more favorable than it would have been at the outset.

A Hesitant Hymn

"Let us continue our morning worship by the use of hymn three hundred and twenty-seven, omitting the third verse; hymn three hundred and twenty-seven"; and two stanzas are read from the pulpit while those of the congregation who have books and feel inclined, are finding the place.

The singing goes very well. The hymn tune is a familiar one. Some of the singers, to be sure, are not certain which stanzas are to be sung and which, if any, omitted; they wait for the second measure to see how the majority begin. But the music, as well as the words, has devotion in it and the atmosphere created is, for the older members of the congregation at least, one of continued worship.

The minister now asks his congregation to give their attention to the announcements of the week, which usually refer exclusively to a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society and the "regular mid-week prayer meeting." (Very seldom anything about a monthly church-night at which a general good time will be had; or a free stereopticon lecture, informative and entertaining; or an affair of some particular interest to a group of young men; or various other things that might be developed in the church life to make the institution something more than a mere building where certain routines are gone through with two or three times a week, and the lock in the door turned the rest of the time). Following these two notices the minister reminds his hearers in an unforgettably captivating and impressive manner that the Sunday School will meet at the close of the morning service, frequently adding for the encouragement of any dubious ones who may be present (perhaps the young traveling man in the back seat) that "there are classes for all" and that "all are cordially invited to remain."

And these notices from the pulpit constitute practically all of the systematized publicity (if they may be called system-atized) that the church gets, aside from a free notice which is published by the good-will of the editor of the local weekly paper—no regular paid display advertising, which might put the church on a more business-like basis in the eyes of the community (for though paid display advertising and window cards and other forms of publicity may be perfectly legitimate and proper for business firms, for some strange reason they should not be resorted to by the church of God).

The next number on the program is the morning offering. There may be a slight delay, because it is not always absolutely certain just who will pass the boxes until they start. But after the brief hesitancy and exchange of glances they get under way, and if the envelopes are not too many the coins of the loose collection may be heard jingling embarrassingly against the sides and bottom of the lightly covered boxes or plates. The choir members usually watch this operation—if they are not still preoccupied worrying about that anthem—not especially out of curiosity, as it seems, but because if they look ahead of them it is difficult to look anywhere but at the congregation. Yet what one is there of the latter number who does not feel for an instant as the box is passed before him, that the eyes of the entire choir are curiously and eagerly watching to see just what he drops in, especially if a couple of the members feel called upon to pass a few remarks at this particular time, as they do quite generally?

Only a few minutes are consumed in taking the offering, and then the minister rises and, lifting his hands, speaks three words which, by all rules of right and reason, should cause every knee to bow and every tongue to confess—"Let us pray."

Praying Four Ways at Once

But as a matter of fact these words are the signals for four different lines of conduct: A few do devoutly bent the knee and confess in true humility. A few more try to do so, but have trouble in keeping their minds off of the financial and social affairs of the week. Still a few more unconsciously but fervently thank the Lord for the "long prayer," because it gives them a chance to shut their eyes and snatch a few snoozes before the sermon, when they long to do this same thing but are ashamed to get caught napping. And yet a very few more—these in the choir—take the period to twist and turn and buzz quite considerably and audibly relative to that anthem (if the bass has appeared) or to decide upon its substitute in case he has not. And so as the minister pronounces his "Amen" there are varied feelings among the several groups of our morning's congregation.

Then comes that anthem—for the bass has slipped into his place during the prayer. It goes very well; as well as could have been hoped; better, in fact, than might have been expected. The main drawback, if that may be called such, is that it had a sort of warmed-over taste, for the hurried basement rehearsal just as the bell was tolling had been perfectly audible in the auditorium. And a great many people really prefer their anthems moderately well done and fresh at the first serving.

One more hymn is announced and the number repeated a time or two. It is assumed, apparently, that the congregation cannot get this at one speaking.

Then follows the sermon—except in the rarest cases an effort backed by the most genuine sincerity; often really suggestive and spiritually stimulating; too frequently lacking in interest and minus those elements of zeal, concreteness and personal application which can impress the hearer with one truth and inspire him to retain it and make use of it after he leaves the church building. (Let me say right here that I am not telling or attempting to tell any one how to sermonize. I do not know how to preach and do not pretend to know how. But I do know the kind of sermons that appeal to me and to a great many other people, and it is sometimes a fact that the preacher fails to get any one's view point but his own, which in many cases is likely to be a narrow one, and not unnaturally so.)

An Eternal Half-hour

For thirty minutes the minister talks, going his limit in an endeavor to set forth forcefully what he has at heart. And yet some of that congregation, regret it as they may, cannot keep their eyes open or their heads still. Others do better, seemingly, yet they do not sense what is being said. Way in the back seat the young man has pretty thoroughly taken in the mural decorations and the electric fixtures, and has slyly peeked at his watch now and again after the minister has given false hopes of being at the end of his discourse. Half-hour sermons are not very long—in point of time,—but frequently if they were condensed to twenty-minute sermons and made more concentrated, the impress would be more lasting. But as all things have an end, so does this sermon in question; and—

"Let us conclude our service by the use of hymn number five hundred and eighty-nine, the first three and last verses; the first three and last verses of hymn number five hundred and eighty-nine." The four stanzas are gone through with, the benediction is pronounced, and another "regular Sunday morning service" is over.

There is a feeling somewhat akin to relaxation and relief. Some linger and converse. Others, including the young traveling man, slip out of the door before the preacher can get to the back of the room to meet them. (No one seems to have been specifically detailed to engage these people for two or three minutes, so out they go.) And most of the few young people present, not to omit some of the older ones, too, hope unconsciously that every day will not "be Sunday bye and bye."

* * * * *

Now if there were not a lesson to be brought out by the foregoing picture, realistic or not as it may have been in your own experience, the lines would be a sacrilege. But there is a lesson, a vital one. And it is found in the regrettable fact that the majority of Sunday services in the average country church are often a bore and in scores of cases have about them hardly one feature of attraction for young people. This condition is bearing its natural fruit every week, as the personnel of the congregation shows. I have wondered how many of the regular attendants at church services—those who have been brought up to go to church, in whose lives it is a matter of course—ever stop to question what there is in the average service to attract and hold young people. A few years ago, it did not matter so much, I suppose, whether or not the service was interesting. Religious home training had not then become so much of a lost art, and the parents themselves did not stay at home so generally, divorcing themselves from things pertaining to the church, leaving their children to follow their own inclinations. This deplorable lack of religious guidance in the home no one has yet been able to overcome. And then to aggravate this condition is the nature of the church services, the failure of the institution to meet the social and recreational instincts of young men and women, boys and girls during the week, and too often, unfortunate as it is, the unappealing individuality of the pastor. Particular reference is made to young people, because any one who gives even a little serious consideration to the situation must wonder who is to constitute the membership of the country church twenty-five years from now if present tendencies continue.

What remedy?

A critic, to be just, must offer a solution, I suppose. I have nothing new to advance, however. But I want to suggest in all candor and sympathy that with the changing of the times the growth of the Christian religion is being retarded through the country church by the methods of some of the men who occupy country church pulpits. This is no reflection on their sincerity or religious enthusiasm. They are doing their best; no man can do more. No doubt they regret their limitations more than any one else possibly can. They are to be admired and honored, for the country church pastor's task has been and is a sacrificial one.

Must It Always Be So?

Yet, bearing this in mind, it is true that many of the country churches lack the inspirational leadership which means a prosperous and growing body of religious workers. How to get these leaders, and enough of them, is the problem. I am not wise enough to solve the conundrum. I am simply putting down some of the questionings that come to me off and on. But I wonder if it must always be that the country church, which by all rights should feed the city church with young men and women as long as young men and women continue to migrate to the bigger centers, shall continue the harbor of ministers who have passed their more vigorous days, or the training ground for the theological seminary graduate, and that the country church which is unfortunate enough to be located near a seminary city must keep on serving as a convenience for students until they finish their course, and then move on to "larger fields," leaving the church to shift as best it can while another student comes to serve his apprenticeship. Not all country churches suffer this way, to be sure. But too many do.

As I have not studied the history of this movement, my calculations may be awry; but from the viewpoint of one who has seen rather intimately the working of country churches, it seems that there must be a uniting of forces by the various denominations of many communities—for example, in a village with two or three churches, one or more of which is weak—so that there will be financial and other inducements to men who have had experience plus training to go to a country community church and make a power of it—men who possess the ability to lead, to inspire, to enthuse, to make their Christianity a living thing in the community's existence.

You ask at once, and so do I, where these very men would have obtained the experience referred to. I don't know. Perhaps as assistant pastors of city churches—a very foolish suggestion, maybe. But the one conviction which I do have, although perhaps my judgments are false, is that if the individual churches of a country community are weak, either each church must get hold of a leader who will set it high upon a hill—almost an impossibility for little churches these days—or else all of these churches must get together through some system of co-operative organization that will enable them to stand forth as one united agency and hire and support properly one man as pastor, who has the spiritual enthusiasm, the Christian consecration, the personality, the knowledge of human nature, and the business sense to change the church from a matter-of-course time-honored institution to something with a living, ringing, magnetic and challenging appeal.

Livonia, N. Y.

Y. M. C. A. Conference at Atlantic City.

The keynote of the Conference of the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. and its secretaries at Atlantic City, Sept. 23-25, was the spiritual. The fact was impressed again and again that the primacy of the spiritual motive and attitude in Y. M. C. A. service must be maintained and emphasized. This was the motive of Sir George Williams, the founder, and this is the motive today. The war activities of the Association inevitably put to the front the material service of the organization. The personnel rapidly gathered of necessity included some who were not familiar with Association fundamentals. It was also recognized that the continued growth and multiplication of activities have increased the burdens upon secretaries, emphasized departmental duties, and too frequently overwhelmed secretaries in executive and administrative work. All this involved the peril of minimizing the force of spiritual service essential as a constructive factor in the practical problems which face the Y. M. C. A. in its present worldwide relations. The keynote was sounded at the outset when Mr. Alfred E. Marling, chairman of the International Committee, in opening the conference, said that each one must review and renew his life in the light of the life of our Lord, and declared that the character and work of each man must testify actively to the spiritual calling and responsibility which are basic in the movement.

In the vigorous discussion of perils facing the Association the same note was conspicuous. Spiritual slackening, lack of democracy within the movement, satisfaction with present achievements, must be avoided as fatal to the high standards and future effectiveness of the Association program. Welfare work and spiritual service cannot be separated.

—HOWARD B. GROSE.

North Shore Dedicates

Sunday, October 9, was a day of triumph for the North Shore Baptist Church of Chicago. For fifteen years the house of worship has been a beautiful little chapel, erected in what was then a sparsely settled residential suburb known as Sheridan Park. In the intervening years the district, now known as "Uptown Chicago" and "The Wilson Ave. District" has become a most densely populated region of fine apartment buildings, magnificent apartment hotels and business houses. The little ivy covered building became "too strait" and a location more central for the congregation was sought. A beautiful lot was purchased two years ago, in a more settled residential place a few blocks farther north. A year ago, under the leadership of Dr. F. H. Divine, the church with a total membership of 425, pledged $100,000 for the erecting of a new building. And in one year, a year of strikes and industrial unrest, a splendid and adequate house of worship has been dedicated.

REV. WM. H. JONES

The building is Tudor-Gothic in design, of vitreous faced brick, trimmed with Bedford stone. The seating, including the balcony, is 610. The interior woodwork is white oak, fumed. The architect, Mr. S. M. Seator, a deacon of the church, and the architect of several fine churches in and near Chicago has wrought out a place of beauty, convenience and utility. The auditorium has an air of restfulness, reverence and satisfaction.

The rooms of the building are of interest. A handsomely furnished ladies' parlor, a kitchen furnished with every modern hotel equipment, a fine gymnasium with locker room and shower baths; a young peoples' social parlor furnished with kitchenette, the finest Boy Scouts' room in Chicago; a cheery attractive prayer room; an inviting men's club room, furnished with books, magazines and games. The Bible School is fully departmentalized, each department having its own organization and rooms. The dining room will seat 400.

MAIN FLOOR PLAN

CH. Seator, architect
CH. Seator, architect
CH. Seator, architect

In addition to the memorial organ, friends of the church have put in other memorials. Three memorial drinking fountains are in the Community house. The pulpit and communion furniture were presented to the church on Sunday as a memorial to Deacon James B. Carter by Mrs. Carter and daughters. The Bibles were furnished by Mr. Carter before his death. The Boy Scout room is equipped as a memorial to Palmer Clark, a scout who recently died.

Dedication Sunday dawned bright with sunshine. The first thing in the day was a largely attended prayer service. We closed the old building in prayer, the new one was opened in prayer. Dr. W. W. Bustard of Euclid Ave. Church of Cleveland came to preach the sermons of dedication. The house was crowded to capacity at both services. In the morning, that the church might adequately cover the cost of carrying the building project and equip the house, Dr. Bustard led the church in raising $25,000. In the evening, after an inspiring sermon of dedication, about $10,000 was pledged toward purchasing a memorial organ. The total value of our church property, fully provided for by pledges running four years and by the sale of our old property is over $200,000.

Monday evening the church welcomed the Baptist Minister's Conference of Chicago as guests. Rev. Louis J. Velte was chairman. Brief addresses were made by Dr. A. E. Peterson, representing the Illinois Board of Promotion, and Mr. Jas. G. Elsdon, representing the Baptist Executive Council. Dr. Bustard stayed over to address the Conference. His theme was "The Old Church in a New Age." The pastors of the Conference inspected the building and pronounced it good.

Heroic and sacrificial giving has marked the church whose membership today does not exceed 450. Thus lies before the church, in this splendid field, with the daring and talent and enlarged vision so

(Turn to page 1219)

THE NEW NORTH SHORE CHURCH

Our Own Folks

Wisconsin Baptists Get Together

(At the last meeting of the Wisconsin Baptist Convention held October 11-13 State Superintendent LeGrand, on behalf of the Board of Managers presented, in his annual report, a call for co-operation which follows.)

"There are two things we need to stand for today:

"1. Churches led by pastors who stand firmly for the word of Truth. Our Wisconsin leadership should be in the hands of men who know how to present a constructive redemptive message—not a destructive message of any nature.

"2. We need a leadership which will mean that our churches will cooperate in our great denominational tasks; for after all, the leaders (and these are generally the pastors) are the formative influence. If the United States and Canada have equal opportunity and equal responsibility, and one of our citizens chooses to aid Canada in its objectives rather than thus to aid the United States, we are sure such citizen is not a loyal, patriotic citizen, and as such can ask no favors from the land of his citizenship. If we Baptists and other organizations have equal opportunity and responsibilities, and some of us Baptists choose to help the other organizations in their objectives rather than thus to support our own denomination, we are sure that there can be but one verdict; namely, that by so doing we declare that we are not loyal or patriotic Baptists, and should ask no help nor favor from the denomination with which we will not co-operate. We are certain that all agree with the President of the Northern Baptist Convention when she says:

"I have an ambition that Baptists should support their own missions. Why go outside for missionary objects? We have as spiritual, as consecrated, as devoted missionaries as there are in the world. They are preaching the gospel, they are winning souls to the obedience of Jesus. If we do not support our own orphanages, hospitals, seminaries, colleges, schools, our own ministers, and Missionaries' Benefit Board, who will? No one else is responsible for them all, except us. We talk a great deal about our Baptist principles, and how important they are for the world; but the only way to make Baptist principles prosper is to support Baptist institutions and agencies. How can a pastor who advises his people to send their missionary money to independent agencies expect the denomination to care for him in his old age? Is he not doing all in his power to tear down the denomination? I have heard it said that almost as much money went for undenominational and independent missions as was given to all our own missions. Can't we take all this money and send it to our own Board of Promotion? There it will be divided and go to all our agencies according to their needs. Let's believe in our own agencies."

"We Baptists have always believed in the Word of God. We have held it before the world. We must still co-operate in so doing. We reaffirm therefore our historic position—that the Holy Bible was written by men divinely inspired, and is the supreme standard by which all human conduct and opinions should be shaped; that there is only one living and true God, an infinite, intelligent Spirit, the Maker and Supreme Ruler of heaven and earth, omnipotent, omniscient and omnipresent; that in the unity of the God-head there are three Persons, the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit, equal in divine perfection, and executing distinct but harmonious offices in the great work of redemption; that the Scriptures teach that man was created in holiness, but by voluntary transgression fell from that holy and happy state; that "all have sinned and come short of the glory of God," but that there is a way of escape, not by our own righteousness, but through His mercy, through the mediatorial office of the Son of God, who, according to the will of the Father, became man, yet without sin, honored the divine law by His personal obedience, and by His death made a full atonement for our sins; that having risen from the dead, He is now enthroned in heaven, and is "in every way qualified to be a compassionate and all-sufficient Saviour"; that "He is able to save them to the uttermost that come unto God by Him, seeing that He ever liveth to make intercession for them"; that "this same Jesus who was taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven; that "there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust"; that the unjust "shall go into everlasting punishment, but the righteous into life eternal"; that the visible Church is a company of baptized believers associated by covenant in the faith and fellowship of the Gospel observing the ordinances of Christ, governed by His law, and exercising the gifts, rights and privileges invested in them by His word; that its only Scriptural officers are bishops or pastors and deacons, whose qualifications, claims and duties are definitely set forth in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus; that Christ into the name of the Father and Son and Holy Spirit; and as we hold high the Word of Truth, we reaffirm our belief that "every human being has direct relations with God and is responsible to God alone" in all matters of faith; that "each church is independent and autonomous, and must be free from interference by any ecclesiastical or political authority."

After the reading of the report which was adopted by the Convention, the two following resolutions were presented from the floor and adopted:

We rejoice in the historic principles of the Baptist denomination as outlined in the report of the Board of Managers, and we desire to express our confidence that the Board of Managers and the State Superintendent will carry out these principles in the spirit of the New Testament."

"Moved, that the Wisconsin Baptist State Convention urgently invites every Baptist pastor and church in Wisconsin to co-operate wholeheartedly in the denominational tasks as presented in the report of the Board of Managers of the Convention."

Detroit Doings.

BY ALBERT H. FINN

The Council of Churches held an inter-denominational Conference on Evangelism at the First Baptist Church on Thursday, Sept. 22, when Dr. Goodell and other denominational secretaries, including our own Dr. H. F. Stillwell, were the speakers. It was well attended, especially by our Baptist ministers and laymen. On Monday, October 24th, our Baptist Conference on Soulwinning will be held in the Temple Baptist Church with an engaging list of speakers including Dr. S. G. Neil, of Philadelphia, General Director Hudson, of the Michigan Baptist Convention, and Evangelist Stough, who opens a series of meetings at the First Church on October 16. Thus the evangelistic note is ever kept to the fore in Detroit.

The new house of worship for the new Jefferson Avenue Baptist Church was fully occupied on Sept. 25th when the Bible School numbered 467. Mrs. C. M. Carter has been acting as Superintendent. Dr. and Mrs. Carter have wrought wonders since the amalgamation June 5. They expect to spend the winter in southern California where he will endeavor to regain his old time strength and vigor. A delightful farewell was given Dr. and Mrs. Carter at the Jefferson church, Thursday evening, Sept. 29. They have done a fine piece of work. Dr. H. C. Gleiss is now directing the work.

At Beulah Baptist Church, on Friday evening, Oct. 14 will be held the fall get-together of Detroit Baptists under the auspices of the Detroit Baptist Forum. It will be Baptist Bible School night with Rev. A. V. Allen, Mrs. West and Dr. W. Edward Rafferty as star attractions. Dr. Rafferty will speak on "The Church that Makes Good in Religious Education." Detroit Baptist churches have made a distinct advance along religious educational lines since Rev. A. V. Allen has been with us.

The Detroit Baptist Union has done a remarkable work among the Negro Baptists. Eight congregations have been adequately housed within the year and now a Negro Christian Center is to be opened this month on Russell Street, in the center of the congested Negro population downtown. The ladies of our white Baptist churches are furnishing the building and even the civic authorities are earnestly co-operating. Dr. and Mrs. Moore of the American Baptist Home Mission Society are to be present at the dedication.

The Temple Baptist Church was dedicated Sunday, Oct. 2, with an addendum lasting through the week. Temple Church is a consolidation of the Grand River and Fourteenth Avenue churches, the property of the Fourteenth Avenue Church having been extensively overhauled and improved. A pipe organ added, new heating and ventilating systems and other improvements added, all under the leadership of Rev. Llewellyn Brown, pastor of the Grand River Avenue Church. The Temple Church is located something over a mile north of the Grand River Avenue Church in a splendid residential district. It is expected to build later a church house, educational and social center adjoining the present building. Rev. J. G. Brown, D. D., of Toronto, Ont., brother of the pastor, was the dedicatory preacher Sunday. Monday was Sunday School night; Tuesday, Young People's night; Wednesday, Church night with Director Grant M. Hudson, of the Michigan Baptist Convention, as speaker; Thursday, Denominational night with Dr. Sumner R. Vinton, of New York, as speaker for the City B. Y. P. U.; Friday, as Community night with Dr. Jones of the Central Christian Church as speaker. The Temple Church has a membership of 1,200 and a Sunday School enrollment of 1,500. The property is valued at $150,000. We are looking for great results from this union.

Thursday evening, Sept. 29, the pastors and especially selected delegates from the various city churches dined with Director Hudson at the Warren Avenue Baptist Church and listened to his stirring appeal for the New World Movement. Facts and figures of a very searching character were given that sent every one home with a new consecration to the great task before us as Baptists. It is believed that the next sixty days will show a large increase in Detroit's contributions to our General Promotion Board.

Royal Oak is one of the most aggressive of the several choice suburbs of Detroit. The Baptists have been on the map there for over 75 years, but with new will and vision since Rev. Geo. E. Dawkins came to this wonderful field. The crying need has been a worthy and adequate building. These trying times are not conducive to church building but further delay could not be thought of. The American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Detroit Baptist Union are both alive to the need and are co-operating with the church. Plans have been adopted and work begun which will speedily bring to this fine congregation at least a part of the housing it so much needs.

The old Second Church, organized in 1876, was the first Negro Baptist church in Michigan, and has ever since maintained its premier position. Here is a people who love to go to church. It requires three services a day to accommodate them. This week they are celebrating the eleventh anniversary of the coming of their pastor, Rev. R. L. Bradby, a truly remarkable man of God and a great preacher. In addition to his large duties as pastor of a church with 3,000 members he is superintending the work among the more than 30 Negro Baptist churches of this city, under direction of the Detroit Baptist Union.

Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. John Wellington Hoag, D. D., pastor, had a great rally day October 2, with a distinctive missionary flavor to it all. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Raymond were dedicated to missionary work in Burma and were the special guests of the church and their great Bible School. It is estimated there were 1,500 in attendance at the Sunday School services. Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, England, occupied the pulpit in the evening. This great down-town church is doing a wonderful work in this difficult field.

Judging from the reports that came in from the churches the work has opened most auspiciously all along the line. The Bible Schools are more largely attended and each church has a real aggressive program. Springwells Avenue Church has called Rev. Geo. E. Barnard and he is already upon the field. Birkett Memorial had a happy home coming week—that of Sept. 25. A new Mission School has been opened on the Nine Mile Road and John R. Street, principally manned by the Highland Park Church.

Dr. H. C. Gleiss, superintendent of the Detroit Baptist Union, is almost omnipresent among the seventy-five churches and missions of the Detroit area. He also gives generously of his time to the work of the Michigan Baptist Convention of which he is one of the vice presidents in charge of the department of city evangelism. Muskegon is enjoying his inspiring presence this week. He is also an important factor in the larger work of the denomination. He has the confidence and respect of our business laymen which, in a large measure explains the remarkable accomplishments of the Detroit Baptist Union, even during these trying times.

Clark Sent to Mayo Hospital

One of the recent appointments by The American Baptist Home Mission Society, is that of Rev. Willis G. Clark, whose ministry is to be chiefly to the Baptist patients in the Mayo hospitals at Rochester, Minn. His commission covers a variety of activities. The need of Baptist work on this special field was an urgent one and the sending of Mr. Clark to Rochester was the result of a conference between Dr. Rolvix Harlan, representative of the Home Mission Society and Secretary E. R. Pope of the Minnesota Baptist State Convention. The work carried on there is a co-operative one. In 1920, 60,645 people were registered at the Mayo Clinic, about 35 per cent of these were operated on and spent from one to six weeks, often longer, in the hospitals. It is impossible for the local pastors to give anything like adequate ministry to these people. The Methodist Episcopal Centenary has commissioned the Rev. Mr. Gillis, who has heretofore given all his time to the ministry of the sick, confining his work for the most part to Methodists. The Lutherans maintain a half-time social worker to look after their people. The Evangelical pastor is also commissioned by his denomination to care for the spiritual welfare of the patients. The Evangelical Church has begun the erection of a convalescent home to cost $150,000, which will be open at cost of services to all denominations up to its capacity. The Masonic bodies have decided to employ a full-time professional social service worker, the Secretary of the Lodge having heretofore given practically all his time in service to those of his fraternity. The Odd Fellows have a paid secretary who looks after the needs of those of his order.

Mr. Clark, the Baptist appointee, will give his attention first to those for whom he is responsible but will minister as he may to all who need comfort, consolation and the services of a Christian friend and minister. The church, which is splendidly located, will furnish a room for office and conferences of this worker, and will give moral support and voluntary co-operation. The work will be supervised by the Minnesota Baptist State Convention in conference with the Social Service Department of the Home Mission Society.

Things in New York

By FRANK M. GOODCHILD

The Pastors are back in their places from their summer vacations. Two or three of them were in their own pulpits all summer. They are apt to take a snatch or two of rest during the winter. The people of the churches are coming back gradually. Our congregations do not reach normal before the middle of November. The Churches in the metropolis do not have a long working year. The Pastors are in their pulpits ten months out of the twelve. But many of their members are home for only six months of the year.

The schools of the city are in full operation again. More than nine hundred thousand pupils are in the public schools here. The city's colleges have unusually large entering classes. Columbia University boasts an enrollment in all departments of over twenty-two thousand.

Bible Training Schools are making conspicuous announcements of the work they do. The Bible Teachers Training School, with Dr. Wilbert White as President and Dr. J. Campbell White as Vice-President is doing a notable work. Our own Orrin R. Judd, is Treasurer of this school. He and Mrs. Judd are among our most devoted Baptist workers. But the interdenominational schools know a good man when they see him. Since 1901, 3,873 students have been enrolled. The number of students now in the school is 394. Twenty-one countries are represented, 34 States, 168 Colleges, Universities, Seminaries and Normal Schools. 29 religious denominations. The number of missionaries in the student body is 91, representing 16 different countries, and 14 Mission Boards. Special courses for Pastors are offered this year, with free tuition.

The National Bible Institute, more familiarly called "Don Shelton's" has opened classes in the evening for Christian workers. The Fall term began with a Bible Conference the sessions of which were open to the public.

Dr. Walter Laidlaw, who manages our Federation of Churches, runs the affairs of the Clergy Club also. He is so associated with all denominations that few know what his denominational affiliation is. His program this year started with an address before the Club by the Rev. Adolf Keller of Switzerland on "Protestantism in Europe." On October 17th there is to be a Club banquet at the Hotel Astor at which the guests will be Professor E. L. Goonasakara of the University of Colombo, Ceylon, and Professor H. G. F. Jayasuriya of Southern India. The latter will make two addresses, one in the morning on "Britain's service to India" the other in the afternoon following the luncheon on "Christianity in the Eyes of a Former Buddhist." Later a special luncheon in honor of the new bishop, Dr. Manning, is planned.

Columbia University also has announced a Community Training School for Church Workers. Dr. James C. Egbert is at the head of it. Among the members of the

(Turn to page 1216)

Young People's Work

Topic for Nov. 6.

THY WILL BE DONE V. WITH MY MONEY
Matt. 6:7-15

"The gold and the silver are mine."

"What are you?" I said to a freshly minted dollar as I held it in my hand.

"In a word I am money. Most thinking people describe me as a 'measure of value.' Some call me 'concentrated value.' Others a 'medium of exchange.' I prefer to think of myself as the agent, the representative, the servant of whoever has me in his or her possession."

"I did not know you could talk."

"I am the most effective talker in the world. I mean for people who use me. You are talking now with your vocal organs; when you use me to talk with you do more than talk; you act—you do things."

"You speak of yourself as my agent; do I not own you?"

"No; God created me and God owns me. At the mint men changed my shape and appearance, but I am the same metal that God created. He owns me, you possess me."

"Do not possession and ownership the same thing? Do I not own what I possess?"

"No; God says 'The gold and the silver are mine' and 'the earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof.' He has a right to say this because he made us, he created us."

"Please be more definite. I want to be honest. I do not want to be in possession of anything I do not own."

"Yes you do, and you are now. You earned me honestly and I am in your rightful possession. When you exchange me for something else I will be in the possession of another, but God will still own me."

"I understand you to say that so long as you are in my possession you are my agent, my servant, and that you will obey my orders. Have you no power of your own? Cannot you do as you please with yourself?"

"I do not have power. I am power; this because I represent value and value comes from God."

"You say you are power, and yet while in my possession you must obey my orders. Are you helpless so far as doing your own will is concerned?"

"Yes, I am absolutely helpless except as I am used. You can exchange me for food, or clothing or shelter, in short, for anything you want whether for your good or for your harm; I must obey your will. You can throw me away or you can bury me in the earth or in a safety deposit vault if you want to."

"You say you represent value. Have you no value of your own?"

"Very little. Of myself I am as you see only metal, and I am neither plentiful nor, as metal, nearly so valuable as steel, which is very plentiful. You cannot eat me, you cannot wear me and I cannot shelter you; yet if you say the word I can procure all these things for you."

"I doubt it, at least not much of either; you are only a single dollar."

"You forget your first question, 'What are you?' and my reply, 'I am money.' I am not speaking as a silver dollar; I am speaking as money. I may be represented by gold, silver, paper, nickel or copper. I am used in all these forms to measure value; in other words to measure power, and remember that both value and power are spiritual forces."

"To listen to your talk and reasoning one would think you too are spiritual."

"I am spiritual. In material, substance and appearance I am metal, but as metal, as I have already explained, I am of little value; much less, in fact, than such metals as iron, steel, copper and aluminum, which are both cheap and abundant. In content, in essence, I am spiritual."

"Is there such a thing as tainted money?"

"Absolutely no. The possession of me may be acquired by tainted and dishonest methods. I may be stolen outright. All sorts of crimes may be committed to obtain possession of me, but I remain as pure and clean as when my owner, God, created me." (Adapted from "Talks With Money.")

On request to the B. Y. P. U. of America, 125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, enough of the above named pamphlets will be sent free to supply one for each member of your society.

"Returning to the Wall"

By MARY LATHROP BISHOP

Vacation days are over and from mountain and seashore, village and farm, they come, "every one unto his work." New life stirs in the city street, men walk as if intent upon reaching some unseen goal in the shortest space of time, as if they might even run and not be weary; women with "morning faces" and with eager, alert step, hurry to and fro; and children shout gleefully for the very joy of living.

Watching the surging crowds, and noting the delight with which old and young return to their tasks, the ancient story of the Builders of the City Wall comes to mind, and we hear the words of Nehemiah as he told of the home coming of his helpers; "we returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work." These builders were co-workers. They knew the joy of united effort, they realized the effectiveness of laboring together with a great objective before them, and when Nehemiah had told them very simply of what God had put into his heart to do, they said, "Let us rise up and build." To them, the one great task was building the city wall. The high priest, his co-workers, the men of Gibeon and of Mizpah, the goldsmiths, the merchants, and the apothecaries, even the rulers of the land all had a share. Each had a definite piece of work to do. To the various gates, went the different groups at roll call. They builded gates, set up doors, put on locks and bars thereof, and laid beams. They which builded on the wall, and they that bare burdens with these that laded, every one with one of his hands wrought in this work, and with the other hand held a weapon, for they knew not when their enemies might attack them.

When dangers threatened and the foes pressed hard, Nehemiah cheered the toilers with the words, "Be not afraid, remember the Lord."

We have returned all of us to the wall, every one unto his work. The wall is our combined task as a Baptist family. The gates and doors and beams, the locks and bars are parts without which the whole could not be complete. Each part needs workers, leaders, tools, the prayers of faith, and the songs of victory, that the builders for tomorrow may have a wall that can never be broken down.

How grows the picture on the canvas, the workers absorbed in their task, the scattered stones seem to leap to their places on the wall, the broken doors rise from the ground, the hinges walk to their appointed grooves, and the building of a wall becomes a living vital service into which every one is putting the best of himself—the preacher, the teacher, the singers, the men and women of prayer, workers in many handicrafts, all are building.

When the wall was set in these far off days, and the work of their hands finished, there came the singers, and the names of all that had had a part were written in a register. The great congregation were numbered, and they gave gifts, after having first given themselves in service. When they were gathered together as one man, they called for the Book of the Law of Moses. As Ezra read, he blessed the Lord, and the people answered, "Amen." So ends the record of a great unified task with thanksgiving from those who had borne the burdens of the day.

Out on the fields of India, in Africa, in China, and in suffering Russia, are the Kingdom builders separated one far from another. In city or town or desert, are men and women toiling, working at the building of a gate, or in putting up a door, or bringing new stones to repair the breaches. Their comfort and courage come from a knowledge that other builders are at work, and that if they fail not, soon shall be heard the joyful news of a completed task.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for November 6

PAUL'S EXPERIENCE AT JERUSALEM
Acts 21:18-23:24. Golden Text: Psalm 46:1
JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text:

Paul according to his plan reached Jerusalem about the time of Pentecost. He immediately reported to the leaders there of whom James was the chief. The gist of Paul's report was concerning the coming of the Gentiles into the kingdom of God. As much of the opposition of the Judaizing Christians to Paul was due to this phase of Paul's work he was advised by James now that he was in Jerusalem to do as the Jews do. Accordingly Paul shaved his head, took his vow and performed it with religious loyalty. But things did not turn out as James anticipated, for in spite of Paul's accommodation to circumstances, the Jews from Asia started a false report concerning him which led to mob violence, and Paul was saved from lynch law only by the merest chance and by the slightest margin.

The Lesson Taught

The compromise of concession, the power of prejudice and the test of the temple are three points which may be well illustrated by this lesson.

The Compromise of Concession

Concession for the sake of averting trouble is often wise, but always dangerous. Paul was a man of fiery conviction and yet on points of indifference he could yield with the most consummate grace. However, at this point he yielded too much to the politic suggestion of James. It is true that Paul preached a spiritual gospel wholly free from the obligations of circumcision, but apparently this gospel was confined to the Gentiles. If James correctly described the custom of Paul in his work, Paul did not interfere with the Jewish Christians who continued to circumcise their children. And yet it is difficult to see how Paul could keep from being misunderstood, or how he could have one gospel for the Gentiles and another for the Jews. Possibly he desired to prove to James that concessions to Jewish customs would never succeed even if a man went in his concessions beyond the line of wisdom and reason. Whatever may have been Paul's motive in conforming to Jewish customs at this particular time we are not informed, but we glean from the narrative that Paul would better have remained away from the temple altogether. It is always a serious question how far we shall go in our attempts at conciliation. In the evangelical denominations today there is almost as serious a division on matters of doctrine as there was in Paul's time between those who were determined to make the religion of Christ a reformed Judaism and those who like Paul saw in it a new spiritual movement for all humanity. How far shall concessions go on the part of the so-called liberals to the so-called conservatives? Is not the Jerusalem experience of Paul a suggestion at least that conciliation with people as set in their views as were the orthodox Jews is a waste of good time and energy? On the other hand we must remember that Paul was not that Egyptian who stirred up sedition. He was a progressive as compared with the conservative Jewish Christians, but he was not so progressive as to wholly discard his Jewish lineage. Paul was not an extremist.

The Power of Prejudice

When Paul was converted he was saved from his prejudice, but not all of his countrymen were so soundly converted. They carried over with them into the Christian church much of their Jewish customs and doctrines, and many who had caught a vision of the spiritual religion of Christ were turning back to Judaism as we learn from the epistle to the Hebrews. There is nothing quite so unreasonable as religious prejudice. Conviction is quite another thing, and yet conviction may become so intolerant as to be abnoxious. Prejudice as the word signifies is to render judgment on insufficient evidence; it is to jump at conclusions; it is to yield to force instead of being led by reason. The Jews who stirred up the riot concerning Paul were moved to it by pure prejudice. Someone reported a lie saying that Paul had taken a Gentile into the sacred precincts of the temple reserved for Jews only, and as this was an offense punishable with death, they proceeded to be judge, jury and executioner. Only by the timely interference of the Roman captain with his temple guard of soldiers was Paul saved from death.

The Test of the Temple

After all the test of the temple was not its feasts, its equipment, its functionaries, its architecture, its symbolism, its traditions. According to Christ the temple was made for man as the Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the temple or the Sabbath. It is a serious reflection on the religion of the temple that there was any court in it more sacred than a human soul. It is little to the credit of a religion that professed to have a monopoly on the true God that it segregated the men from the women and the Jew from the Gentile in separate courts divided by long flights of stairs and stone walls. It was a great day for the world when the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom and the way to the holy of holies opened to all men and women irrespective of sex, race or religion. That was the vision Paul caught,—a vision that made him the greatest spiritual democrat the world has ever known.

National Sunday School Convention in Brazil

The Fifth National Sunday School Convention of Brazil was held recently in the First Presbyterian Church of Rio de Janeiro. The pastor of that church is Rev. Alvaro dos Reis, who with his wife attended the World's Sunday School Convention in Japan. The convention in Brazil is considered by educational leaders to mark a new era in the development of Sunday-school work in that vast country which for so long a time has not made the Bible an open book for all the people. There is a growing consciousness on the part of evangelical leaders of all denominations of the supreme place which religious education through the Sunday school must have in the life of the Christian church, if the latter is to make progress against the tremendous forces which oppose it.

The statistics of Sunday-school work in Brazil presented at the World's Convention in Tokyo gave an enrollment of 57,000 officers, teachers and pupils in the 1300 Sunday schools in Brazil, an increase of about 250 per cent during the seven years since the World's Convention in Zurich. Representatives of these schools to the number of 138 registered delegates came together in Rio for this fifth national convention. The object was to consider the means for the greater development of the work. Among the delegates were 27 pastors, 34 superintendents, 44 teachers, 13 school secretaries and 20 pupils. Five Protestant denominations were represented and the delegates came from eight different states of the Federal Union. In addition to the delegates registered, the sessions were attended by large numbers of visitors, the attendance at several of the evening sessions taxing the capacity of the church which seats nearly 1000.

The resolutions and recommendations adopted by the Convention called upon the pastors to develop their Sunday schools; all classes to open with prayer; organized classes to be promoted; to train pastors, officers and teachers through a National Institute of Methods, extension of Normal Courses to all the provinces, their introduction in theological seminaries and evangelical schools; promotion of sports, diversions, scouting and social service work in intermediate classes; better equipment for primary workers; employment of a Sunday school field worker; introduction of week-day Bible courses in summer for two hours daily, including catechising, diversions and Bible teaching; promote temperance lessons and program; approve school Standard of Excellence covering organization, normal courses, organized classes, Decision Day, Missionary Instruction, etc.

The Chimney Corner

Tattooed on Tulu's Heart

Tulu looked over his shoulder, and shuddered. For someone—or something—had certainly said to him, as clear as day: “You ought not to have done it, Tulu!” Yet when he looked, around not a thing was to be seen but the slender tree-trunks and the tall grasses at the edge of the forest. And who in all that forest could possibly know of the secret, stealthy thing he had just done? Had he not crept into the White Man's hut like some shadow cast by a tree in the moonlight, and had he not reached out his five black fingers like more silent shadows as he clasped them on that small square object which he had grown to dread? Curious that a little square thing should have such an uncomfortable way of making him wince. All the white man had to do was to open that creature of his, flap its white leaves covered with tattoo-marks, find the particular marks he wanted, read them aloud, and, behold, Tulu would want to run far away! He hardly knew whether it was pain or joy or disgust or plain trouble that upset him so completely whenever that Creature-of-the-Tattoo-Marks appeared. Certain it was that he had stood it as long as he could. So he had stealthily crept to the white man's hut and stolen it.

“Ha! Ha!” he had grunted to himself, “I have been clever. Now he cannot prick me, now he cannot worry me as a lion worries a sheep.” But even as he ran swiftly along the little trail toward his own hut, the Creature-with-the-Tattoo-Marks seemed to burn his very fingers.

“Alas! Alas!” he cried to himself, “what am I doing? Am I actually taking this white man's strange, powerful medicine into my hut? If my fetishes did not protect me against it when it lay in his hut, what possible help can they be to me now that the thing is to lie in my hut? Somehow I must get rid of it forever. Let me see. . . .”

Ah, the silvery gleam of moonlight on a sheet of dazzling water answered his question for him. Of course, he would drown the wretched thing. Down at the bottom of that forest pool everyone of those teasing tattoo-marks should be silenced forever and ever. Then he never need be uncomfortable again.

With fast-beating heart he tossed it into the center of the placid silver pool. Splash! and it had sunk. Immediately a series of little bubbles rose in gurgling protest against being disturbed from sleep. Then ripple after ripple started up in circles from that bubble, radiating out and out until they lapped against the reeds at the edge of the pool, and made the dry stalks rustle against each other. Tulu watched the series of ripples, fascinated. “They look like the tattoo-marks with which my body is tattooed,” he groaned. For curiously enough his own body was elaborately tattooed with intricate circles within circles.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

“Alas!” he shuddered to himself superstitiously, “the patters on my flesh will always remind me of this midnight pool, and I shall constantly remember that in the center of the smallest circle lies the thing I stole from the white man. But I shall laugh—bah! how I shall laugh! For it is lost forever.”

So with confident stride he continued along the trail. And then had come that mysterious voice: “You ought not to have done it!” Yet not a human being was in sight. He ran all the rest of the way back to his own hut and crept in to sleep beside his brothers on the floor. But whether he slept one hardly dares say; for in the morning one brother said: “Troubles kept coming to your head all night, poor Tulu. For you kept muttering: ‘Why must those ripples look like my tattoo-marks?’ Now that is a puzzling word to say in the blackness of night, my brother.”

Tulu looked sternly at him. “You babble foolishness. A youth like you should close his ears in the dead of night.”

But as for himself, he walked straight to the witch-doctor to seek a new fetish. “Give me a charm that will protect me from things lying at the bottom of a forest pool,” he begged, his voice like that of a frightened boy.

The witch-doctor was sly and crafty. “Ah, but that is the most difficult of all charms,” he whined; “I should need much goods in payment of it. Perhaps a big piece of new cloth, some beads, a dog-bell or two—things like that.”

Tulu looked discouraged. “I am not a man with possessions,” he groaned, “but I will go and see what can be found; I must have that fetish.”

“You shall have a good, strong, powerful fetish,” agreed the witch-doctor soothingly; “but there must be plenty of goods in exchange.”

Tulu walked to his hut wrapped in gloom. Full well he knew that cloth and beads were out of the question. But there was his sister, a little slip of a maiden; possibly he might barter her in exchange for a fetish. He would approach his father on the question. But his father said that someone was already giving large goods for the little Ze, and he would soon be handing her over to this buyer.

“Ah, me!” groaned Tulu, and hung his head in despair.

Then came the one day in seven when the white man walked from the near-by village to speak to the men of this village about the things of God. Tulu saw him coming and was cheered. “Well, his words cannot prick me today, since the Creature-with-the-Tattoo-Marks lies deep buried in the forest pool. So I will go and be amused at his shame-faced-silence. Ha! Ha! And he will never know how it is all my doing.”

So Tulu crept into the back row of the group of those who gathered around the white man. He wanted to hear with his own ears the stammering confession that there could be no story today, because . . .

But, behold, the white man stood up unashamed, saying: “Some one of you has been pricked in his soul by the words I have read about the Lord Jesus, and you have planned to stop any more of these stories by stealing my Bible away from me. Oh, foolish man who did this! Did you think you could destroy the words of the Lord God, when they are written on my heart even as you have patterns tattooed on your bodies. So today, without the Book, I will continue the life of the Lord Jesus, where I left off last time.”

Poor Tulu! Black thoughts raced around inside his head. Evidently there was no stopping a white man who belonged to the tribe of God! And, alas, the new spoken story began pricking him just as sharply as the story that the white man used to read. He crouched there grinding his teeth and muttering: “I am as a little child in the presence of these stories.”

“I also,” whispered a neighbor. “And I would gladly torture that thief who stole the white man's Bible.”

“Ah!” moaned Tulu, and moved away as the final hymn was sung. But who was he to manage to escape from the white man's eye? Above all the chatter of that little group he heard a well-known voice call out: “Tulu, my friend, there is a word I would say in your ear if you will linger a moment.”

Tulu waited.

Presently the white man said: “The others are gone; let us sit down so that we may palaver slowly together as friends may do. Are you well, Tulu? I seem to see you shivering.”

“No, white man, Tulu does not shiver. He is well.”

“Ah, I wondered. Indeed, I have been wondering many things these past few days, ever since I saw a shadow creep into my hut one evening and steal my Book of God! I have wondered what that shadow did with the book. For as the shadow slipped out of my hut, behold, the moon shone upon its bare shoulder, and there I saw circular tattoo-marks such as my brother Tulu has upon his shoulders. But I said: 'No, it cannot be my brother, for he would never treat me so.' Yet, alas, the shadow turned its face to see if I were still asleep, and lo, it was indeed my brother Tulu. So I have wondered many things these past days. Did you steal the Book for love of it, Tulu?"

Tulu would have denied all knowledge of the deed, but without a special fetish he felt utterly unprotected. "No, no, white brother," he cried, "I stole that Book from hatred of it. Ah, that Book! It has haunted me day and night. How shall I tell it?—but it was making me into an old woman, white man! Were the feet of Tulu to be found upon the war-path with the other young men of his tribe? No, he sits spellbound listening to stories from the book of the black tattoo-marks. I ask you—Is that a brave thing for a young warrior to do with his strength? Well, I stole it, and I buried it deep down in a forest pool where neither you nor any other man, nor God himself, can ever find it again. And tomorrow the witch-doctor is to give me a fetish to overpower the strange influence of that book."

The white man sighed, but not as one in pain. "Tulu, listen! Do you remember how when I first came to your tribe I had to learn to speak your language? how I would point at a chicken, at a tree, at a man, at a child, and get you to say the words for those things in your language so that I could write down on paper the way they sounded to me? You never knew before that words could be set down on paper, so you looked at them in terror, crying, 'Behold how this man from the tribe of white men covers a leaf of whiteness with black tattoo-marks that speak our language!' Ah, Tulu, I was lonely in those days. I had just come to Africa, and I listened for the sound of men who could speak in my own tongue, but there was none to speak. I looked for the comfortable things I was used to seeing, but before, there was no comfort for a white man. So while I learned your strange new words I made chairs to sit on and tables to write on and a bed for sleeping. I explained these curiosities to the men of your tribe in the few broken words I could speak, and they proudly called me 'brother.' You called me 'brother,' too, and I was comforted down in my heart for the lack of men from the tribe of white men. I lived in a simple hut of palm leaves and mats like yours, but I was happy. Long after you went to sleep I would sit up learning your language, and night after night I covered new leaves of whiteness with black tattoo-marks, translating the Book of God into the tongue spoken by men of your tribe. Night and day I worked for months on months, then I sent it off to a town of white men near the coast so that they might print enough copies for every family in my parish. But meanwhile I kept my one copy and used it for teaching you the things of God. And now you tell me with glee that my Book of God lies deep in a forest pool. I ask you—is that the way to treat a brother?" Tulu had never felt torture like this. "Ah, white man," he cried, "it cuts me deep to have hurt you. But the hurting

I give you—is as nothing compared to the way that man, Lord Jesus, hurts me. You tell about him, and I sit spell-bound. (Turn to page 1214)

The Young Reserves

I Saw A Ship A-Sailing!

By PEGGY

Perhaps you remember that several weeks ago I wrote you about Miss Too-Tall, and the Hand-Me-Downs which our family packed and sent to New York, so that from there they could "Fill A Ship In Fellowship" and sail to Europe to the people who will be half frozen this winter unless we do something.

Well, when my friend Polly Primm heard about this ship, both she and her brother Peter were so excited that they knew they simply must do something, too, so they rushed up to their attic and began sorting over their winter clothes. Peter and Polly have no mother, poor dears, and their father has to be away from home on business so much that he has a housekeeper to look out for the children, and do all the things that a mother does. This housekeeper's name is Mrs. Riddleby, and she is old enough to be their grandmother, and nice enough, too, for merry little twinkles live inside her blue eyes, and her mouth is always askew with smiles. We like her very much. And when she heard Peter and Polly rummaging up in the attic she climbed up there herself and heard all about the Baptist ship.

"You see, Riddle dear," said Polly, "our mother was such a very Baptist mother, we know she would want us to do all we could to fill that ship."

"And what's more," added Peter, "our father ought to be a far more Baptist father than he is, so 'this will give him a way to be, won't it, Riddle dear?"

"We'll see!" said Riddle dear (isn't that a perfect nickname for the jolliest housekeeper that ever lived?) And she let them put aside their smallest pairs of stockings, and their outgrown mittens and tams and leggings. She found a suit of Peter's that could go, and a dress of Polly's, and those two Primm children were excited as could be. Then Riddle dear read THE BAPTIST about this Baptist ship, and at breakfast the next morning she said the most delightful thing: "Tomorrow is Saturday, so I'm going to give a ship party, and you can ask all your friends."

Well!!!! You may be sure Peter and Polly loved that idea, especially as she told more and more about it,—how every one who came was to bring one article to go in the box to New York. "For I notice," she said, "that the Baptists want soap, and toys, and baby clothes, and I really think every one of your friends could contribute something!" And we did!!

Peter got Bill to come over Saturday morning and they rigged up a ship out of a wooden packing box and a torn sheet, with a broom for the mast. It was really very great fun, for Peter was the Captain and Bill the First Mate, and Polly and I were sailors. "Aye! Aye, sir!" we would shout whenever they gave an order. (In our sailor suits we really looked the part, of course.)

Riddle dear had the jolliest plans, for as the boys and girls came she had them all stand on the "wharf" to wave goodbye to the Baptist ship, and Polly and I began to "load" it with the things the Primms were going to contribute. Then one by one the guests came up to put their gifts on board, and it was a rule that they had to sing a little song beginning

"I saw a ship a-sailing,
A-sailing on the sea,
And it was full of—(for example) Christmas toys
To make real Polish glee!"

Whatever you were going to contribute had to be sung into the song:

"I saw a ship a-sailing
A-sailing on the sea,
And it was full of baby clothes
To warm Czecho-Slovakians wee!"

Another was:
"I saw a ship a-sailing
A-sailing on the sea,
And it was full of woolen socks
To warm both toe and knee."
Bill and I brought soap, so we chanted a duet:

"I saw a ship a-sailing
A-sailing on the sea,
And it was full of laundry soap
A sad necessity."

Some of the boys simply could not think of rhymes, so we made them do all sorts of stunts. And it was great fun. Peter's box ship grew full to overflowing, and we packed it then and there ready to send to New York. The only refreshments we had at this party were oblong brown cookies, into every one of which Riddle dear had stuck a toothpick with a small paper sail attached, on which she wrote various remarks and conundrums about ships and sails and fellowship. It was the nicest party in the world; and Miss Applegarth wonders if you won't each pack a box of your own and send it to New York right away! Surely you have one or two perfectly good toys, or a pair of socks or mittens, and a few cakes of laundry soap which you could spare. She hopes that all Young Reserves will want to "see a ship a-sailing" full of the Christmas joy which they helped send across the sea.

DO IT NOW!!
Look for correct mailing address in this paper!

The Bulletin Board

They Found a Way to Employ the Unemployed

Two splendid highways, more than thirty miles long, which were built by the American Red Cross as a means of saving the lives of 120,000 Chinese famine victims were turned over recently to Shantung province in the presence of a distinguished assemblage.

The keynote of the speeches made by the Chinese authorities was deepest appreciation of the timely aid of the Americans which not only saved directly many thousands of lives, but also set an example which warded hundreds of thousands of famishing Chinese from death by starvation.

As the result Shantung province owns one of the finest highways in China which, with the new road now being built from Yuchang to Haifeng will open this section to a new route from the sea which greatly will facilitate grain distribution in the event of another famine.

Hundreds of thousands of American dollars went into construction of the road and only famine victims were employed, and these were paid in rations sufficient to provide food for their families.

A Pacific View of the Japanese

Dr. A. W. Anthony, Executive Secretary of the Home Missions Council gathers these impressions respecting the Japanese situation from a recent visit to the Pacific Northwest:—

1. As a people the Japanese are peaceable and inoffensive. In trade Americans usually prefer to deal with them, because they are neat, civil and obliging, and sell at reasonable prices.

2. Economically they are a help and not a hindrance to American industry. Their labor is needed.

3. The social danger arises from their persistence in continuing their national habits and religion. Partly this is their misfortune and not their fault. Yet they send their children to the priests after school hours and maintain an intense nationalism.

4. Many western people are hoping that the stream of Japanese migration, already large in its flow toward South America, will be increased thither, and the Chinese will be substituted for the Japanese in the United States.

5. The Japanese American News, a paper published in San Francisco, has a page in English each Saturday. It is trying to promote good feeling between the races. Under date of July 30, 1921, its leading Editorial, headed "For Amity between Americans and Japanese," is entitled "Curb Irrational Talk"—We Americans surely should be restrained and rational.

6. Too much politicians for selfish purposes have strained these issues. Christians must become informed, must think, and must be heard.

Can Folly Further Go?

The following is from a statement presented by the Secretary of Labor at the Babson Labor Conference August 29.

It would seem that we are more interested in housing automobiles than in housing ourselves. I am informed by Mr. Ethelbert Stewart, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, that in the 196 cities with over 35,000 population from which returns were received $1,204,490,764 was expended in building construction for the year 1920. The population of these 196 cities was 34,572,904, or 32.7 per cent of the total population of the United States. There were 68,637 one-family houses constructed at a cost of $296,124,063, or 24.6 per cent of the total amount of money spent in all kinds of building. There were only 5,402 two-family houses built; but while in all the one and two family houses combined there were but 81,103 families provided for, there were 93,121 garages built. To be sure, an unknown number of families were provided for in the 1,494 apartment houses built with stores combined. Still, making liberal estimates for these, automobiles fared better than families. There were 426 moving picture and other amusement places built in these cities during the year at a cost of $40,522,240, or considerably more than the cost of churches and hospitals combined; and while these cities constructed 547 school houses; their cost, $50,023,140 was but little more than half the money spent on garages.

Ku Klux Unpopular Here

According to a recent survey of foreign elements in Chicago there are: Slovaks, 60,000; Poles, 231,000; White Russians, 25,000; Lithuanians, 60,000; Croatsians, 15,000; Ukrainians, 30,000; Hungarians, 15,000, and Bohemians 200,000.

A New Way of Killing Doughboys

—In Chicago there is a hospital which has just been completed at a cost of $10,000,000, with a capacity for 1,000 beds, with only five patients. With two miles of spotless white corridors and all the equipment of a brand-new hospital at their disposal, five wounded doughboys are "sitting on top of the world," with three majors, three nurses and two orderlies at their service. "It's pretty hard in some ways on us five guys in this place," said one of the boys. "They are killing us with kindness."

—Texas Baptist Standard.

A Leg Afire

—An Indiana peddler has filed suit for $10,000 damages against an autoist that ran into his three-legged horse and broke its wooden leg. The peddler alleges that his horse was "bruised and humiliated" to that extent by the accident. The horse, which has worn the wooden leg for five years, has had a troubled career. On one occasion his wooden leg caught fire and the entire fire department of Hammond, Ind., was called out to extinguish the blaze. —Texas Baptist Standard

Tattooed on Tulu's Heart

(Continued from page 1213)

I am no longer a fighter, a fearless fellow, I am as a little child. So that the men of my tribe laugh at me. 'Tulu is as an old woman for gentleness!'

The white man leaned over. "Tulu, I see fine things with my eyes. Did I not say that even though my Bible was lost I could read the story of it which lies written in my memory? Tulu, is it not written on your heart, too?"

In a smothered tone Tulu cried: "Ah, it is as if every word were tattooed on my heart, white man. You with your smooth flesh, how should you know the pain of tattooing, the torture of the little prickings that must go deep into the skin to form the pattern? Well, it is even so with my heart—those stories of the Lord Jesus were stabbing my heart, tattooing a pattern. . . . Could I stand being marked forever, different from other men in my tribe? I had to throw that bewitching book deep into the forest pool, so that now I can be safe forever."

But the white man smiled. "Ah, a secret is on my lips, Tulu. For today carriers came staggering along the trail with heavy packages which they left in my hut. Behold, they are copies of the word of God in the language of the men who walk these forest trails—thousands of copies, one for every family. Well, will you drown all those Bibles, too? They would choke that forest pool! Or will you, being a man of strength, use your iron muscles in carrying those books from my village over the forest trail for the men of your village? For I see a vision—I see you, the brave leader, telling others what the Lord Jesus has tattooed on your heart; I see you making the other men in your tribe eager to learn how to read for themselves God's Bible. For the Lord God has said a true saying, Tulu: 'Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my word shall never pass away.'"

Tulu stood up quietly. "Tulu is only one man," he said, "so how should he hope to block the God of heaven forever. Tulu destroyed one little book, and lo the God of Heaven sends a thousand others to your hut. Ah, white man, am I not tattooed with his pattern? Am I not a little child once more? Show me those books so that I may carry them to men in my tribe."

The Devotional Life

Looking for Men.

BY CHARLES L. WHITE

THE angel of God stood before the tent of Abraham, looking for some one whom he might trust, and to whom he might commit his work. God spoke to Moses through the burning bush, and commissioned him to go down into Egypt and to lead his people forth from bondage. God came to Joseph in his prison and gave him power to interpret the dream of Pharaoh. God stood by David and gave him skill to slay the lion and later reign acceptably over Israel. God taught him to write the Psalms, to which we turn instinctively in the crises of our lives. God spoke to Daniel in the lion's den, called him forth to new service, and made him a useful servant through three successive dynasties. He is looking now for men and women whom He can trust. He is passing up and down the world to see if there be any who have faith and who He can push forth with firm assurance that they will be faithful servants and do a day's work and a life's work well.

Where School, Mill and Meeting House Grew Together

A few years since I was speaking at Crozer Seminary and the following day was driven by a son of its founder through the borough of Upland, where the institution is located. On a part of the estate still owned by representatives of the Crozer family is an old house where William Penn used to live when visiting in that community. This house is located in the very heart of the community where Mr. Crozer, when a young man, started in business. It would almost seem as if the clearness of vision with which William Penn saw the work that he ought to do in the world left its impress on the heart of Mr. Crozer. For near by is the little mill which Mr. Crozer first built, and in that mill he provided a room where the workmen might worship God and where the modern flourishing church of the community was begun. On the other side of the Penn house he built a school where the children of the workmen might be educated. As God prospered him, he gradually improved the educational institution until it has grown to be a seminary richly endowed. By slow degrees under his fostering care the church grew, until it is a well appointed modern building. Mr. Crozer must have early said to himself: "In the accumulation of my fortune I will use my means and my influence constantly in the furthering of religion and education in the lives of all."

The next ten years will be decisive in most of our lives. We shall find our limitations, pass through at least one crisis, and know ourselves far better than we do today. To live these ten years well we must have a better faith than Abraham had. The Christ whom he saw in type far superior to that which the most we see in reality. The day which he saw far off we live in. We must have also a better faithfulness than Abraham had. We must have a better knowledge of God than Abraham possessed. We must be better and greater in every way than Abraham was. John the Baptist was greater than Abraham or any of the prophets, and yet Jesus asserted concerning John the Baptist, that he who is least in the Kingdom of God is greater than he.

Centuries Look Down Upon Us

With the message of the New Testament waiting to inspire us, with nineteen

I'd Give a Good Deal.

I'd give a good deal to tread over again

*The miles that are stretching behind,
To know all the smiles of the good folks of Then,*

*And the speech that was never unkind.
To dream all the dreams and to scheme all the schemes*

*That the head of a small boy can do,
To start splendid ships upon wonderful trips*

And patiently wait for them, too.

*I'd give a good deal could I only go back
To the boy that I was over there,*

When life stretched ahead in a wonderful track,

*And I knew not the station of Care;
When I knew not the bad and the sordid and sad,*

*When vice hadn't entered the scene,
And life was a joy to a barefooted boy,
And never a thought was unclean.*

*I'd give a good deal could I only return
To the marvelous things that I planned*

And yearn as a small boy of old used to yearn

*The plaudits of all to command,
To stretch out and gaze with wide eyes at the blaze*

*Of the wood on the hearth, and to see
My plume shining bright in the thick of the fight*

That some day was going to be.

*I'd give a good deal to tread over again
The miles that are stretching behind*

To go back to the wonderful country of Then,

*Where never a heart was unkind.
To start anew as the boy that I knew,
With his visions of splendor still bright,*

*With his courage untamed and his body unmaimed,
And the plume on his helmet still white.*

—ROBERT FREEMAN, in the Continent.

centuries of Christian history looking down upon us, vindicating the life and teachings of Jesus Christ which have become a part of our mental possessions, with such spiritual advantage, every one of us should have a knowledge of God favored of the Old Testament men and women possessed.

"We Must be Better Than Our Fathers to be as Good as They"

In this modern age we have a better preparation for service than any who have ever lived. We must be indeed "better than our fathers to be as good as our fathers." We have lived under the fostering influences of a Christian civilization. We have been stimulated by the presence of a Christian church. We have been enriched by the environment of Christian educational institutions. As we face an earnest life of work the numerous facilities of this modern age are placed in our hands with which to make our life count tenfold more than it could have counted at any time in the past. We find at once marvelous and high-gearred organizations which will direct our material, intellectual and spiritual endeavors. Unless we, therefore, accomplish something definite and constructive in the extension of the kingdom of God, we shall be ashamed of ourselves when we come to die. How to place one's life in the hands of the Lord—this is life's problem.

Let the Maker of the Organ Play It for he Knows How

A stranger came to the door of a cathedral and asked to see the organ. Standing before it, he requested the privilege of playing it. The sexton refused permission, saying that no one but the organist of the cathedral was permitted to play the instrument. And yet the stranger renewed his request, until at length the sexton went to the bishop and explained the situation, and the privilege was granted. It was early in the morning and the sexton went about his work in the cathedral, when the stranger sat down at the organ. But a few minutes had passed when the sexton concluded that he had never heard such music, and he hurried to the bishop's house to tell him that a master was playing the organ. Before an hour had gone by the capacity of the cathedral was taxed to its utmost by those who had learned of the wonderful music that was flooding their sanctuary with its heavenly strains. After a long time the music ceased. The bishop had stood near the organ, and as the musician stopped playing he said: "How beautifully you have played the organ. We have never heard it give such wonderful music before." And the stranger said: "Why shouldn't I play it well? I made the organ."

Home Mission Rooms.
New York City.

Our Own Folks

(Continued from page 1209)

committee on training are the Rev. Stanley B. Hazzard, director of religious training of our city mission society, and Rev. Albert C. Thomas, pastor of our Creston Avenue Church. The sessions of the school are held in the buildings of the Union Theological Seminary.

Rev. Stanley B. Hazzard, of our City Mission Society, is offering to our churches a course of fifteen or twenty Community Nights of Song, Story and Motion Pictures at no cost to the churches. This opens up a vast opportunity to reach the un-churched people, old and young, about our churches throughout the city.

The Executive Committee on Fundamentals Conferences have adopted as their official hymn, "Faith of our Fathers," and have also devised an emblem bearing the inscription "The Baptist Faith," "The Baptist Fathers," "The Baptist Tasks," "The Fundamentalists of the Northern Baptist Convention."

REV. TILLMAN R. BRADY of Chicago became pastor at Glasgow on August first.

REV. R. D. BRITTAIN closes his successful pastorate of three years at Kalispell on November first and returns to his father's home in Missouri and Rev. E. F. Judson will become stated supply for this field at once.

Mississippi Valley

IOWA

FIRST CHURCH, LAKE CITY, is entering upon its second year's work under the pastorate of Rev. M. C. Powers. There is a growing interest in all of the departments of the work, and the finance committee reports that a sufficient amount was pledged before the first day of the new church year to provide the budget for the coming year. The Baptist Laymen's Class of the S. S. recently gave a banquet to their wives. The gentlemen planned the menu, and did all the work from start to finish. Thirty-six people were present.

KANSAS

LYONS church has received 19 members, 9 of whom were by baptism during the last year. Pastor Walter Davenport has resigned.

Progress at Wichita

The First Baptist Church, Wichita, Kansas, just closed its first year's work under the pastorate of Dr. John Bunyan Smith. During the year there were 311 additions to the church, 109 of this number being received by Baptism. The total membership September 1 was 1522.

The average attendance of the Sunday School during the year was 631, a gain of 149 over the preceding year. Rally Day, Promotion Day and Home Coming Day was observed last Sunday, October 2nd. There were 1000 present at Sunday School and about 150 who received diplomas having finished a required course of study. The slogan of our Sunday School is "W U G 2000," meaning "Watch Us Grow to 2000."

A Vacation Bible School of five weeks was conducted at the close of the public school term with an average attendance of 175. There were 48 boys and girls who gave their hearts to God at the close of this school.

Five B. Y. P. U. Societies have been organized with a gratifying attendance in each.

An anniversary picnic was held in September, which was a joint social of the church, Sunday School and all of the organizations of the church. There were 800 present to join in the celebration of the first anniversary of our Pastor, Dr. Smith.

We are helping to foster a Mexican Mission, which was organized in August. Rev. J. J. Cota, a Mexican Baptist preacher, came to take charge of the Mexican work in the north section of our city.

There were five conversions during a revival meeting just conducted by Rev. Cota.

Two valuable assistants have been added to the working staff of our church: Rev. Walter J. Mead of Richmond, California, who is the Director of Young People's Work; and Miss Goldie M. Putnam, a graduate of the Northwestern

Church News by States

Pacific Coast

OREGON

SCIO just closed a series of meetings under the leadership of Rev. Milo J. Bentley, state convention evangelist. There were 125 conversions. Seventy have already been received into the church. The pastor's salary has been raised $300 and a free will offering taken for the convention amounted to $400. Mr. Bentley goes next to Aloha and then to Calvary Church, Portland.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

ONTARIO FIRST: The annual election and business meeting of the church was held on Sept. 28th. There were splendid reports from all departments. The church school especially showed an increase in interest and attendance. All the current expenses of the church are paid with a small surplus in the treasury. It was voted to give the pastor, Rev. W. Earle Smith, an increase in salary. A library is being installed in the church containing books especially helpful in religious education, by each member of the church contributing one volume.

Rocky Mountain States

UTAH

REV. J. SHERMAN WALLACE closed his three-year pastorate with Immanuel Church September 1, accepting the call tendered by the University of Wisconsin Church, Madison, Wis. Dr. Wallace, accompanied by his family, left September 2, making the journey by automobile via Yellowstone Park. Rev. A. G. Alderman, D.D., who was actively engaged in the Inter-Church World Movement throughout the Inter-Mountain States, has been temporarily secured as acting pastor. All communications or applications for pastorate should be addressed to—

DEACON J. E. BERKLEY,
723 Kearns Bldg.,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

MONTANA

REV. DANIEL BRYANT closes his work at Great Falls on October 15 to become associate pastor of the East Side Baptist Church of Portland, Ore., with Rev. W. B. Hinson, D.D.

REV. C. G. BAYLESS after accepting the pastorate at Polson was stricken with serious illness causing him to give up the work there and to return to his home at Springfield, Mo.

REV. A. A. LAYTON, after two years with the First Church at Anaconda, closes his work on November first.

EVANGELIST H. E. MARSHALL, who has held two hundred and fifty different evangelistic meetings on the Pacific Coast, became state evangelist for Montana on October 1 and is scheduled for meetings at Roundup, Havre, Valier and other points.

EMMANUEL BAPTIST CHURCH, NEGRO, of Great Falls have a new edifice under construction and are meeting all obligations as they fall due by cash payments. This church is ably lead by Rev. D. L. McGriff, formerly of Cincinnati, Ohio.

DIRECTOR C. H. BURRILL of the department of religious education has been voted a leave of absence that he might take short graduate work in the University of Chicago. He will return to his active duties about November 20.

REV. J. A. HOFFMAN, superintendent of evangelism, is pressing a state-wide program which calls for the organization of personal workers' groups in each church. The goal of the campaign is to have at least five hundred personal workers enrolled by December 1 and to secure a net gain of twenty-five per cent in the membership of our Montana churches during the current year.

THE BUTTE CHINESE MISSION reports the largest attendance of Chinese students during the past five years. Missionary E. J. Bracken and his wife have set their goal this year at twenty Chinese students won for discipleship.

THE SEVEN ASSOCIATIONS held their annual meetings during September. The speakers' team consisted of Director of Religious Education, C. H. Burrill; Superintendent of Evangelism, J. A. Hoffman; state secretary, G. Clifford Cress and Mr. Paul R. Hackett of Burma, representing the General Board of Promotion. One of the forward looking steps taken was the vote to hold the Yellowstone Association hereafter at a place providing two auditoriums where the entire program will be translated through interpreters for the body of delegates from the Crow Indian churches. These churches, six in number, are growing in members and influence.

DR. JAMES H. SPENCER is acting as stated supply for the Baptist Church at Miles City and reports a notable progress.

Bible and Missionary Training School of Minneapolis, Minnesota, who is serving in the capacity of Pastor's Secretary. Miss Kate T. Lee, another member of the staff, is now beginning her seventh year with the church as Visitor and Membership Clerk.

KATE T. LEE, Membership Clerk.

MICHIGAN

Reception at Waterville

FIRST CHURCH, WATERVILLE, recently gave a reception to Pastor Quarrington. Cecil M. Daggett of the Board of Deacons presided. Mayor Finnemore extended the welcome of the city, Dr. I. B. Mower, Executive Secretary of the United Baptist Convention the welcome of the State. President Roberts brought the greetings of the faculty and the students of Colby College and Principal Harthorn represented Coburn Institute. Rev. W. A. Smith brought the felicitations of the Congregational Church and Rev. C. A. Knickerbocker the greetings of the Universalist. Rev. H. J. Tetreault in a witty speech declared the loyalty of the daughter, the French Mission to the mother church and its pastor. One of the features of the evening was the reading by President Roberts of resolutions passed by the Detroit Ministers' Association with reference to the character and the service in Detroit of Rev. and Mrs. Quarrington.

A feature of last Sunday evening service was the fireside talk given in the Sunday school house by President Roberts, at the close of Pastor Quarrington's sermon in the church. The evening ended with a social hour.

REV. J. M. REMICK, pastor of the Free Baptist Church at South Berwick becomes pastor of the church at Warren.

ILLINOIS

Frances Shimer School, Mt. Carroll, Ill.

The total enrollment to date is 150. Of these 71 are graduates of a four-year high school and have at least fifteen units. These come from eighteen states and China, and represent fourteen different denominations.

The Faculty now numbers nineteen, who give instruction, and a trained Librarian and Nurse. Of these instructors, nine have a Master's Degree. New courses have been added in History and Home Economics, and substantial additions have been made to the reference books in the Library. Enough applicants to fill another dormitory were turned away for lack of room, and plans are in hand for building another dormitory next year.

The Y. W. C. A. sent four delegates to Lake Geneva. Four voluntary Bible classes which meet during the week have been organized and the registration for these is large. A number of the college girls have entered the Teachers' Training Superintendent is an instructor and six Class at the Baptist Sunday School. The other teachers and pupils teach in the Sunday School.

Much interest is being shown in the sports, especially in the five-mile and ten-mile hikes. A new clay tennis court was built during the summer, and more than seventy of the students are signed up for tennis as one of their sports, and forty play golf.

OHIO

REV. A. J. CROY, formerly of Vernonia, Ind., has accepted a call as pastor of the Spring Creek Church near Piqua. He came on the field Sunday, Oct. 8th.

Italian Baptists in Ohio.

Rev. Vito Cordo, Italian worker, under the direction of The American Baptist Home Mission Society, in Ohio, gladly reports an interesting phase of the foreign-speaking work in Cleveland. During recent months, four members of the Italian Baptist Mission in this city, have with their own hands and money, practically erected a church building. Not only that, but they have gone so far as to put mortgages on their homes to insure the successful completion of the work. The church is worth $10,000, all but $2500 being taken care of by the members of the church. "It seems like a dream," writes Mr. Cordo, "and yet it is a fact. We have good reason to thank God for this remarkable Christian spirit which these four men showed. My aim is to establish not less than twelve missions in the state of Ohio. The one in Canton, Ohio, is going forward under the care of Mr. Piccardi."

The Italian Baptists of the Northern Baptist Convention are making progress in self-support. Indeed, "self-support" is being made the subject of discussions in many of their conferences. This is a direct outgrowth of the heroic efforts which these people have made to reach the goal of the New World Movement.

FIRST CHURCH, GREENFIELD, began her fall work in a beautiful redecorated building with new indirect lights. Dr. Theodore M. Hofmeister is pastor.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

FOR MANY YEARS MORRILL CHURCH had the advantage of the unique service of that great Christian layman, Dr. Thomas N. Pearson. He was in the front line of Sunday school workers and his automobile sent for long distances on Sunday morning brought the children to the school who otherwise would have had no religious advantages. Naturally, after a while the parents followed. Not long before his death he built and presented to the church a beautiful and up-to-date home for the pastor. Mrs. Pearson has just now had the parsonage thoroughly painted. As a memorial the children of the parish insist that their missionary contributions shall be known as the "Dr. Pearson Missionary Money." The church is small but has contributed $200.00 during the year for outside work.

ALNA, one of the typical rural churches of Maine, is served by Rev. Frederick Emerson. Rev. J. F. Jones of North Livermore, a son of this church has been spending his vacation at the old home. Alna made very liberal pledges in the New World Movement.

WATERVILLE: The new pastor, Rev. Walter Quarrington, is conducting a month of rallies that are calculated to bring every group of church workers to the line for immediate advance. On "Go to Church Sunday" in the College, Pres. Roberts and the faculty with nearly 500 Colby students marched in procession to the several churches in the city.

CHINA: Alexander Douglass, pastor of the China Church. Sec. Mower preached the sermon, Dr. Hamlen offered the ordaining prayer, Rev. S. M. Thompson gave the charge to the candidate. Rev. H. G.

Kennedy the charge to the church and Dr. Whittemore the welcome to the ministry.

CHARLESTON: Dr. T. J. Ramsdell is preaching to large congregations. Higgins Institute opens with a strong faculty and over 100 students. Dr. Ramsdell will give regular instruction in the Bible.

MASSACHUSETTS

DR. C. P. MACGREGOR, three years pastor of the Second Church, Lawrence, begins his pastorate of the First Church, Manchester, N. H., Nov. 1. Dr. MacGregor has had two strong pastorates in Massachusetts and is President of our State Convention.

PROFESSOR WILLIAM H. ALLISON of Colgate University is spending a part of his Sabbatic year among the haunts of his boyhood in Cambridge. He expects to use the libraries there in pursuing historical investigations.

PRESIDENT CLARENCE A. BARBOUR of Rochester, N. Y., was the speaker at the October meeting of the Social Union. He gave a charming study of James Whitcomb Riley the "Hoosier Poet." It was a welcome variation from the beaten paths of usual social union discourse.

Barnstable Association

The Ninetieth Anniversary of the Barnstable Baptist Association was held with the First Baptist Church, Edgartown, Mass., Sept. 14-15.

There were representatives from every church in the association although some of the churches did not send their full number of delegates.

The association was called to order by the Moderator, Rev. Ben F. Lindsay, of West Harwich, at 11:30. Wednesday morning and a preparatory service was conducted by Mrs. Eva M. Tedford, the new pastor at Pocasset.

At the afternoon session the Annual Sermon was preached by Rev. Joseph D. Matthews of West Harwich, his subject being the "Cross of Christ." John 13:32.

There were four new pastors, introduced: Mrs. Eva M. Tedford, Pocasset; Rev. Sidney Cahoon, Pondville; Rev. Henry L. Bell, West Harwich; and Rev. Christian A. Mars, Gayhead.

The missionary address was by Mrs. Deering of Japan. This was a most instructive and interesting account of twenty-five years missionary work by Mrs. Deering and the late Dr. Deering in Japan.

Rev. F. F. Peterson followed with a soul stirring address on "Missionary Education for the Local Church," followed by an address by Miss Gertrude Hartley on "Summer Vacation Schools."

The devotional service Wednesday evening was led by Rev. William Loughton, Oak Bluffs. Then followed an address on the State Convention work and denominational program by the Rev. F. F. Peterson. And an address by Rev. York A. King, D.D., on "Church Evangelism." At the close of the session Dr. King met in conference with the pastors and laymen on church evangelism when a committee on State and Associational Evangelism was announced with Rev. Ben F. Lindsay as chairman.

Thursday morning was business session. The reading of church letters revealed the fact that the association had not any additions to announce this year, but on the other hand there was a total loss among all the churches of twenty-three, no baptisms being reported from any of the churches.

At the close of the business session there were three ten minute addresses on Sunday school work by Mr. Chester Wright, Pocasset, Deacon Bernard Lovell, Hyannis, and Mrs. E. M. Tedford, Pocasset.

Then followed in the afternoon, at the closing session, addresses by Rev. F. F. Peterson and Miss Gertrude Hartley on young people's work.

The closing moments of the association were given over to remarks by the moderator and the singing of the hymn "God be with you till we meet again." The session was brought to a close with prayer and the benediction by the moderator. The moderator elect is Mr. Chester Wright, Pocasset. The next place of meeting at West Harwich, Sept., 1922.

WILLIAM LAUGHTON, Clerk.

CONNECTICUT

ALL MEMBERS of the W. W. G. throughout the state are to hold a house party at Wangum Lodge, near Hartford, October 14 to 16.

New Haven Association

The ninety-sixth annual meeting of New Haven Association was held in the Grand Avenue Church, New Haven, on Wednesday, October 5. The morning session was given over to business. The Annual Sermon, on the subject, "The Mission of the Church of Today," was delivered by Rev. D. M. Lovett.

The general topic for the afternoon session was "Meeting Our Common Task." The speakers from within the state were Revs. W. T. Thayer, W. C. Sampson, D. P. Gaines, Mrs. J. D. Rough, Rev. E. E. Gates, Rev. H. B. Sloat and Dr. A. B. Coats. The A. B. F. M. Society and the W. A. B. H. M. Society were represented respectively by Rev. Wm. B. Lippard and Mrs. Mary E. Bloomer, New York. Evangelism was stressed at the evening session. Rev. A. D. Carpenter, Williamantic, spoke on "The Church Organized for Evangelism," and Rev. James McGee, New Haven, preached the evangelistic sermon.

A MISSIONARY CONFERENCE was held recently in the First Church, Stamford, the churches of Fairfield Association co-operating. Mrs. Frank M. Goodchild, New York, Miss Helen Crissman, New York, and Dr. William Axling, Japan, addressed the conference. At the devotional periods Mrs. Charles Hopkins, Danbury and Rev. W. J. Barnes of the entertaining church brought stimulating messages. Mrs. Alford Stokes, of the Stamford Church, was in charge of the literature table and spoke in behalf of our periodicals and the study books. Rev. H. B. Sloat conducted a conference on stewardship.

REV. GEORGE H. STROUSE, for eight years pastor of the First Church, Norwich, has resigned to accept a call to the First Church, Waterford, this state.

NINE CONVERTS from the Italian Mission were baptized recently into the fellowship of the First Church, Ansonia.

DR. T. A. VARNADOR of West Hartford is conducting special evangelistic meetings with his brother, R. G. Varnador, as soloist. Already there is a deepening of interest. Three have been baptized.

THE FIRST BIBLE and MISSIONARY CONFERENCE of the Baptist Church, Deep River, Rev. J. Havergal Sheppard, D.D., pastor, was held September 25 to 28. The speakers for this Conference were: Rev. George Caleb Moor, D.D., pastor of Madison Avenue Baptist Church, New York City; Rev. W. F. Thomas, President Karen Theological Seminary, Insein, Burma; Rev. E. H. Emmett, Dean of the school of Missions and stated preacher at Manhattan Congregational Church, New York City; Rev. Anton Hok, Czechoslovak tenor and lecturer; Miss Lucinda Johnson, Field Worker for the Board of Promotion, New York; Rev. A. E. Pero, Essex; Rev. S. W. Delzell, Chester, and Dr. Sheppard.

NEW YORK

MAIN STREET CHURCH, BINGHAMTON, has been holding a supper every Wednesday evening for the teachers and officers of the Sunday school, after which the lesson for the following Sunday is studied. An every member canvass is being conducted. A series of sermons for special ages is being preached by Pastor Robert B. Pattison on Sunday evenings.

Rev. John M. Moore, pastor of the Marcy Avenue Church, Brooklyn, has outlined four series of sermons for the year, to be delivered on the first, second, third and fourth Sundays, respectively of each month. The four series all deal with the subject, "The Progress of the Christian Spirit." The first series, entitled "From Jerusalem to Rome," is a study of the Acts and deals with early church history. The second "From Pentecost to Patmos" is a study of developing doctrine. The third series deals with heroes of church history and the fourth is entitled "From Conflict to Co-operation," a "Study of Modern Christian Adventure," and takes up the phenomenon of co-operation in all phases of life. The introductory sermon was published in the Brooklyn Eagle.

Colgate University

Colgate University entered upon the 103rd year of its career Sept. 22, when the convocation exercises were held in the James B. Colgate Memorial Chapel. An impressive religious service was conducted by President Melbourne S. Read, Ph. D., and convocation address was delivered by James C. Colgate Esq., '84, president of the Board of Trustees, who spoke most interestingly and helpfully. Of all the speakers who are heard from time to time at Colgate, none receives a heartier welcome than Mr. Colgate, and his presence at the opening exercises was especially appreciated by the students and faculty.

Approximately 440 applications for admission to the Freshman class were received this year. Of this number the authorities of the University could admit only 200 men in the entering class. This number, added to the students in the other classes, crowds the equipment of the University to its utmost capacity. The total enrollment in the College is 620. In the Theological Seminary there are 47 students, 19 of whom are new men. The total attendance in the university is 667.

Several changes in the administration offices and faculty are noted. Dr. M. S. Read is president pro tempore, Dr. E. B. Bryan having resigned to become president of Ohio University. Professor Alfred E. Alton has been appointed secretary of the university, Prof. H. T. R. Aude, assistant dean of the college in place of Dr. John Greene, who has resigned this office but continues his work as head of the department of Latin.

Prof. F. M. Jones has been made registrar of the College. Professor Eugene P. Sisson, connected with the university for 33 years, has resigned, and Dr. D. F. Estes, since 1891 professor of New Testament Interpretation in the Seminary and librarian of the university, has also resigned. The position of librarian has been taken by Dr. Charles W. Spencer, who comes from the University of Nevada.

The opening exercises of the seminary were held on the evening of the 27th, the address being delivered by Dr. George R. Berry who had as his subject, "The Significance of the Development of Thought in the Old Testament."

The religious activities on the campus have been organized for the year. The reception to the freshmen by the University Y. M. C. A. was held Saturday evening in the gymnasium and was attended by practically the entire student body and by many members of the Faculty. The Eaton Hall Fellowship an association for all students for the ministry, has been established, the object of which is to promote fellowship and maintain ideals among the ministerial students of whom there is a goodly number at Colgate. Another organization for the men who are to become ministers is the Hascall Chapter of the Corinthians, which has as its objects: to promote higher scholarship among all theologians, to unite the college and seminary in good fellowship, to advance an active interest in college activities, and to promote a spirit truly Colgate.

The Student Volunteer Band, an organization of young men preparing for foreign mission service, has a membership of twelve at Colgate. At the present time Colgate men are serving as pastors in 690 churches in the United States; and there are 52 Colgate men serving as foreign missionaries.

Sunday Bible classes for students have been organized in all the village churches. In the Baptist church 36 freshmen have signified their intention of becoming affiliated members. The curriculum Bible study courses in the College have been elected by 195 men.

New College for Women Opens

Keuka College for women opened Sept. 22 with a freshman class of nearly forty. The college formerly was a co-educational institution, having a large preparatory department. During the war the preparatory school and college suspended instruction. The college has been re-organized, and now opens as a college for women. More than $75,000 has been expended during the past year for repairs and new property. The institution opens with a good equipment and property valued at nearly half a million dollars. The institution is backed by the Northern Baptist Convention, and the Baptist Missionary Convention of the state of New York, which organizations have secured in pledges and cash more than $400,000 for endowment.

The faculty numbers ten, and instruction is being given in twelve departments which lead to the degrees of Bachelor of Arts and Bachelor of Sciences. Freshmen only are admitted this year. Nearly six hundred volumes have been added to the library and important contributions have been made to the physical equipment. Keuka College as a college for women opens with every promise of success.

New members will be added each year to the faculty until the full four years of college work is offered.

Saturday afternoon, Sept. 24, the owners of cars at Keuka Park gave the faculty and students a trip to Bluff Point. The day was perfect and all were enthusiastic about the scenery and greatly appreciated the courtesy extended to them by the community.

Saturday night in the college chapel a reception was given by the Keuka Park Church in honor of Dr. Homer C. Lyman and Mrs. Lyman, to which the students were invited. Nearly everybody in the community was present, and a thoroughly good time was enjoyed. Dr. Lyman is to be the college pastor as well as pastor of the local church. He is at the head of the department of Bible and Christian Leadership.

A valuable contribution has been made to the library by friends in the First Baptist Church of Rochester, N. Y.

The young women's Bible class has been organized with Miss Mae Baker, professor of Oral English and Physical Culture, as teacher. Miss Baker is a graduate of the White Bible School in New York and of the Emerson College of Oratory in Boston.

The formal opening of the college was observed Oct. 7. Dr. Augustus S. Downing, first assistant commissioner of education, Albany, N. Y., delivered the address of the evening.

DELAWARE

BETHANY CHURCH, WILMINGTON, received four new members at the last communion service. A large number of men are in regular attendance at church services. The singing band, a group of children marching in procession singing hymns is a feature of the service. Six babies were dedicated to God and the church Oct. 9.

North Shore Dedicates

(Continued from page 1207)

largely tested and proved, the prospect of a great and victorious ministry to the community, the kingdom and denomination. The pastor, Rev. William H. Jones, has been with the church three and a half years.

* * *

Tuesday evening was Woman's Session. Mrs. Smith T. Ford of Wheaton, Ill., gave the address—"God's Triumphant Dream." A brief reception followed the program.

Wednesday evening was observed as "Church and Community Night." Brief addresses were made by Alderman E. I. Frankhauser and Mr. J. L. Kraft. The honored guest of the evening was Dr. Wm. M. Lawrence, for twenty-five years pastor of the Second Church, now of Colgate University. The occasion was one of great joy. Four hundred persons sat down to dinner.

Thursday evening was "Educational Night." Dr. J. Scott Ebersole of Buffalo, a former pastor of the North Shore Church was the guest and speaker of the evening.

The Massachusetts Baptist Anniversaries will this year be held with the First Baptist Church, Worcester ("The Heart of the Commonwealth") Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, October 25, 26 and 27. Evangelism will be the key-note throughout the three days.

An Appeal to the 150,000 Churches of America

1. To observe Sunday, November 6, 1921, "as a day for special prayer, self-examination and supplication for God's blessing on the International Conference on Limitation of Armament," and to consider in the sermon of that day America's international duties.

2. To hold special services on November 11, 1921, as requested by President Harding at the time of the opening of the Conference and the holding of the Memorial Service.

3. To provide for special meetings in every city on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings (November 7-10) to study the problems of international relations, methods for their solution, and limitation of armament; or if these dates be impracticable, to consider these questions at mid-week meetings during successive weeks.

4. To unite in every city in the latter part of October or in November in holding a public mass meeting on a real reduction of armament.

5. To co-operate as churches with other national and local movements promoting the demand for a real reduction in armament.

6. To emphasize afresh in the services on Thanksgiving Day the Christian belief in a Warless World and in a sweeping reduction of armament as an imperative and immediate step toward the ultimate goal.

7. To continue throughout the sessions of the Conference to study its proceedings and to pray for its success.

The Federal Council has cabled to the Church Federations in England, France and Japan, suggesting similar observance of November 6 and 11 by the churches of those countries.

The World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches which met at Geneva, September 14, 1921, comprising twenty-three National Councils, the President being the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Vice-President being the Archbishop of Sweden, and the chairman of the International Executive Committee being Dr. Nehemiah Boynton of the United States, is appealing to Christians in all nations to observe Sunday, November 6, as a day of prayer for the Conference. The Twenty-three National Councils of the World Alliance are those in America, Great Britain, Denmark, France, Germany, Holland, Italy, Norway, Sweden, Switzerland, Finland, Belgium, Estonia, Greece, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Roumania, Jugo-Slavia, Bulgaria, Japan, Turkey, Spain and Portugal.

Is It Worth While?

BY FREDERICK B. IGLEN

A FRIEND in whose judgment I place a great deal of confidence asked me pointedly just recently: "Don't you tire of this student work? Don't you miss the opportunities of the pulpit? Is the work you do in this university connection worthwhile?"

"Is it worthwhile?" he repeated.

Listen to me friend of mine and then you answer for me your question, "Is it worthwhile?"

Do you remember your first days away from home—a poor, green freshman at the university? Is it worthwhile to visit these new students in the first days and welcome them to a church of their faith and to the better things on the campus? (They are out so frequently when I climb flights of stairs and ring doorbells.)

Is it worthwhile to have the students join the church of their faith by affiliate membership and thus have a "church home" during their university course? (Why disturb the serenity of the local church people by this transient membership?)

Is it worthwhile to conduct a Bible discussion group for students only on Sunday noon where religious and moral and social problems are discussed freely? (Students are daily in attendance at classes in Human Anatomy, Engineering, Dentistry, Science and Literature.)

Is it worthwhile to feed 125 Baptist students once a month at a Sunday evening "Open House" and provide an interesting program of missionary pageants, Xmas trees for orphans and deep spiritual talks? (It takes too much work to feed so many and furthermore it is making of the church too much of a social center.)

Is it worthwhile to cultivate missionary interest among the students to the extent of their giving about $100 to Baptist Foreign Missions? (It requires a lot of personal work and my—the letters one has to write! Too, they give through their home churches.)

Is it worthwhile to have an annual Baptist student banquet in the fall of the year when 175 students listen to challenging appeals by men like Dr. Joseph Robbins, President Emory Hunt and Rev. Ray Petty and thus help to create a Baptist student consciousness? (The money it takes for this annual banquet! and why the necessity of a banquet when this money might be given to one of many worthy causes!)

Is it worthwhile to hold that little prayer group each Tuesday morning at 10:30 on the third floor of a campus building where men drop in to be quiet and to pray? (There are not fifty at this meeting—only an average of nine.)

Is it worthwhile to gather picked students around the luncheon table to listen in a very intimate way to searching and compelling appeals from Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, President Clarence Barbour and Dr. Huntley from China? (No, they do not all volunteer for the mission field or decide to become ministers.)

Is it worthwhile to entertain at dinner in your own home 135 university students from many parts of the country and a number of others at parties? (It is expensive and tiring and wearing to us and it denies us much privacy which we would appreciate.)

Is it worth while to pick out certain students and urge them to attend the Silver Bay student conference or a conference on the ministry or a Student Volunteer convention? (Yes, I frequently

(Turn to page 1221)

"The Lady from the English; My Friend"

An afternoon with Miss Alice Brimson, our National Americanization Secretary

By BLANCHE BRACE

If all the stairs our Baptist Americanization workers climb were placed on top of each other, flight upon flight, they would reach right straight to Heaven. But I don't see how the workers would ever find time to stay. That was the conclusion that I came to after one strenuous upward afternoon in Chicago with Miss Alice Brimson, our National Americanization secretary.

Such details stand out in my memory of that afternoon as an atomizer screwed together for a pneumonia patient, a pattern properly laid for a pair of purple pants, a prison cheated out of a boy, the mother of a dead baby comforted a little, such things as that. The life of an Americanization worker isn't all smiles and easy English for beginners, by any means. And yet if you could have been with Miss Brimson that day, a good many of you would have wanted to be among the 500 new volunteer Americanization workers that the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society is asking for this month.

Our first call was made at the four flights up to the home of a young Chinese woman, her little boy, and her husband's very old mother. Their faces lit up like electric bulbs when someone presses the button as Miss Brimson came into the room. The young woman, proud of her English, began to tell Miss Brimson about her husband, who was in the hospital. The old mother, who could not speak a word of English, hurried to bring us lychee nuts, in token of hospitality, her little brown, withered face, rather like a lychee nut itself, beaming. Then she sat down next the Americanization worker, tightly holding Miss Brimson's hand in her own little thin, brown fingers, and laughing constantly, by way of keeping up her end of the conversation. Since then the husband's ailment has developed into tuberculosis, his wife and little son have gone to the country with him, and our Americanization workers are the old mother's sole link with the world.

It was in the next home that we played a part in the trago-comedy of the purple pants. We found the young Italian mother draped in grief and purple velvet, because she was unable to make her dream of her small Tony in beautiful American trousers come true. The pattern was worse than Greek to her, who could not read a word of the printed directions. Miss Brimson taught Americanization then with her mouth full of pins, and her hands full of scissors, but none who watched the young mother's face, could have doubted the efficacy of the lesson. A neighbor came into the room. "The lady from the English; my friend," the young Italian woman proudly introduced Miss Brimson.

We went to a home where the husband had been stricken with pneumonia. The doctor had told the elderly wife, who was without friends in this country, to spray the patient's throat every few minutes with an atomizer, and to give him a teaspoonful of one medicine once an hour, and a tablespoonful of the other. The atomizer wouldn't screw together, and no one had ever taught her the difference between "tea" and "table." We found her in terror and left her with a far lighter heart.

While we were still on the stairs we heard the sobbing at the next home. The four-year-old girl had been burned to death that day, while the father had gone to the hospital to bring home the mother, who had been taken there with an infected hand. Now she turned her face to the wall, and refused comfort. They hadn't ought to took her away from home, she said; she had told 'em she couldn't go.

"You must think of your other children—such nice children," said Miss Brimson, and brought the baby, and put it in its mother's arms. That argument worked when all others failed. The mother wept, and tended the child, and allowed herself to be comforted a little. She clung to Miss Brimson as we were leaving, and begged her to come to the funeral the next day.

They made a startling request at the Italian home we visited next.

"You take Armadella to jail," urged the eleven-year-old girl, and the mother, weeping, added, "Please." It seemed that Armadella, twelve, was a bad boy. He wouldn't go to school. The truant officer was always getting after him. He had taken a dime from his mother's purse. His father was dead, and they couldn't do anything with him.

Armadella slouched into the room—a hulking boy, with nice eyes, and a pair of astounding overalls, all patches where they weren't holes. Miss Brimson asked him to walk a little way with us. As we went, she demanded why he wouldn't go to school.

"Aw, say!" said Armadella. "The fellows laugh at me clothes. They call 'em Dago pants."

He promised, joyously, to go to school every single day, if he got a suit the fellows wouldn't laugh at. Miss Brimson explained after we left him that she would see that one of the women in her church, with a son about the same age, took the boy a suit he needn't be ashamed to wear. She herself would take him a present on his birthday—she had asked his mother when it would be. And she would find him a "big brother"—a man who would keep an eye on Armadella, hear his boyish confidences, and see that he went right! This has been done, and Armadella is today a fine, upstanding lad, with a good school record. The prisons have been cheated out of a boy.

Miss Brimson next gave an English lesson to a young man who was trying to prepare himself to take out his second papers. When he becomes a real American, it will be through the help of our Baptist Americanization workers. In the next tenement house we visited, the Americanization workers had forced the owner to attend to the plumbing. Then we sent a telegram to Boston, asking the Americanization workers there to look after a Czecho-Slovakian mother and daughter who had come to join the rest of the family in this country, and were about to be sent back again, as dependents without visible means of support.

"America would not break up a family so!" sobbed the Chicago daughter, who told us the story. "I take care of them. Don't let them send them away. My mother will drop off, but she will not go back."

The telegram to Boston, I afterwards learned, not only brought immediate consolation to the two forlorn immigrants, but started action which was later efficacious in persuading the immigration officials to allow the two to remain in America.

My train was due, so I could visit no more that day. Miss Brimson was not through, however. A Hungarian girl was coming to her home to teach the Americanization secretary how to make strudel, and to learn how to make doughnuts. It was, I suppose, just a fairly average day in the life of an Americanization worker. But it proved a lot of things—for instance:

Why 500 new volunteer workers are needed.

Why 34 out of 35 foreign women, asked if they wanted an American friend, said, "Please."

Why "the lady from the English" is always spoken of as "my friend."

A Hymn For Social Workers

THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON

*The past is dark with sin and shame,
The future dim with doubt and fear;
But, Father, yet we praise Thy name,
Whose guardian love is always near.*

*For man has striven, ages long,
With faltering steps, to come to Thee;
And, in each purpose high and strong,
The influence of Thy grace could see.*

*He could not breathe an earnest prayer,
But Thou wast kinder than he dreamed
As age by age brought hopes more fair,
And nearer still Thy kingdom seemed.*

*But never rose within his breast
A trust so calm and deep as now:
Shall not the weary find a rest?
Father, Preserver, answer Thou!*

*'Tis dark around, 'tis dark above,
But through the shadow streams the sun;
We cannot doubt Thy certain love;
And man's true aim shall yet be won!*

The Norwegian Baptists have changed the name of their institution from the "Norwegian Baptist Divinity House" of the University of Chicago to the "Norwegian Baptist Theological Seminary."

The First Annual Christian Council of the Christian Evangelistic Union will be held November 7-10 in the building of La Salle Avenue Baptist Church, Chicago. The congregation was unanimous in welcoming the council. Rev. C. H. Rawson is superintendent of the union. The program will begin Monday evening with a mass meeting. Attending ministers living outside of Chicago will address for entertainment the pastor, Rev. J. H. Rogers, 1219 N. La Salle St.

Fresh from the Field.

(Continued from page 1194)

senior home mission stories by Dr. Frederick A. Agar. The ten stories consist of the ones that Dr. Agar has found most popular as he told them in his lectures throughout the country, and even their titles intrigue the imagination. They are:
The Jesus Road, The Sky Pilots of Ellis-worth, The Reg'lar Doin's, A Song in the Night, Never Heard it Before, The Sheep
Herder, An Effectual Call, Billy's Ticket,
A Little Child Shall Lead Them, and The Doctor's Conversion. The booklet can be secured from the department of Missionary Education, Baptist Board of Education, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

Dr. Samuel Z. Batten, in writing to Secretary James H. Franklin concerning his impressions in Czechoslovakia, expresses his opinion that the supreme opportunity for spiritual religion has come in Central Europe. The ground is prepared, as soil never has been prepared before, for the religion of social outlook, moral passion and spiritual vision.
When Austria broke up and the state church could no longer drive the people, there came the inevitable revolt from the established ecclesiasticism. Whole towns, almost to the last person, are renouncing their old religion and there is a mass movement among the people that is one of the most remarkable changes in all history. Unfortunately many of the people are adrift spiritually and many are falling into unbelief. This presents a great opportunity as well as a peril to Evangelical Christianity. Dr. Batten will doubtless be interested in learning, when he returns to America this month, that a large part of the shipment of supplies in the plan to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" will be distributed among needy people in Czechoslovakia.

Dr. Ma Saw Sa of Burma, assistant superintendent of the Lady Dufferin Hospital there, whom so many Northern Baptists came to love last spring, when she visited cities all over the country as a Golden Jubilee guest, has been invited to visit many of the leading hospitals of the United States, for the furtherance of her work—an invitation that shows in what high regard she is held by medical authorities.

Rev. Oliva Brouillette, in charge of our Baptist work in France, was an extremely interesting speaker, at the noon prayer meeting held at the General Board of Promotion headquarters on October 10.
Rev. William R. Lippard of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society led the meeting, illustrating his talk with screen pictures recently taken of the work in France.

Even in Porto Rico the women are asking for what they want—and getting it! The town of Puerta de Tierra is a poverty-stricken little one and the inhabitants depend on work in the tobacco factories for a living. The girls and women of the city wanted some more pleasant occupation. So they presented a petition to Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall, executive secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, when she was on the island, requesting that the Baptists start an Industrial Training School of some sort. In the new San Juan Church and Community House such a class is soon to be opened, and lace work, embroidery and basketry will be taught.

Materials are to be furnished at cost and the women allowed to sell their own work at whatever profit they can make. In cases where the natives cannot afford to buy the materials, they will be supplied free of cost and the finished product sold by the school, the worker being given all profit over and above cost. The "hand that rocks the cradle" does other things too these days—even in Porto Rico!

Among the interesting persons who will shortly sail from New York for other lands is Miss Ruth Ada Grimes, the fiancee of Raymond H. Ewing, an appointee for Assam, under the auspices of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society. Miss Grimes has already had an exceptional career. A graduate of the University of Chicago in 1915, she served as a High School teacher in 1915-16; a High School principal from 1916 to 1919;
in Home Mission Sunday School work from 1919 to 1921; and as the pastor and organizer of a church from 1920 to 21.
She is a licensed preacher of the Methodist denomination in Chicago.

Shortly after Mr. V. G. Krause opened the door of the European Relief Warehouse at 348 East 23rd Street, New York, last Monday morning, a huge auto truck from the Post Office Department stopped in front of the warehouse and unloaded an amazing number of packages which had arrived from all parts of the country.
Tables had been erected in the warehouse for the unpacking and assorting of the supplies, and it is expected that the baling machine will be in operation within a few days and will be kept continuously busy until all the material is transported to the pier.

Is It Worth While?

(Continued from page 1219)

have to raise the money to send them and sometimes only one out of your delegation is moved to a new vision of life.)

Is it worthwhile to have a student come to your office or seek him in his room and then frankly tell such a student that from your observation he is headed down grade and away from the home ideals and the visions of early years? (Some perhaps think the interview impertinent and let your advice go in one ear and out at the other.)

Is it worthwhile to run an annual picnic for Baptist students in the spring of the year and have a ripsnorting time?
(Yes, it takes a lot of promotion work and the weather may spoil all your plans at the last minute!)

Is it worthwhile to attempt to make Jesus real in the lives of students in the formative years of their lives? (Students are transient and you never see any fruits of your work.)

Just then a student who was facing the danger line of "busting out" came along and asked if he might talk with me for a few minutes. I excused myself from my friend, talked with the student facing dismissal from the university (he was a splendid type of manhood and will succeed without doubt in a smaller school where more intimate relations can be established between faculty and students), went home for dinner (two students from Minnesota and Tennessee as our guests) and in the rush of dinner preparation in the kitchen I asked my good wife: "Is it worthwhile?"

I will answer my friend the next time we meet.
University of Pennsylvania.

Just Out!

JOHN KELMAN

Pastor of Fifth Avenue Pres. Church, N. Y.

The Foundations of Faith

The new volume of Cole lectures is by one of the foremost and suggestive of living preachers. As always, Dr. Kelman's work is marked by strong, logical reasoning, distinctive thought, clothed in exceptional and choice language. $1.50

FREDERICK F. SHANNON

Author of "The Soul's Atlas"
And Other Sermons.

The Economic Eden

A new volume of discourses by an eloquent, gifted preacher. Mr. Shannon's extraordinary vocabulary, colorful phrasing, and rich-robing of thought are all apparent—possibly in richer measure than in any of his former books. $1.25

ALBERT CLARK WYCKOFF

The Non-Sense of Christian Science

To the intelligent thinker or the sincere Christian Mr. Wyckoff's searching analysis and merciless expose of the pretensions, errors, follies, and non-sense of so-called Christian Science should prove as convincing as it is unanswerable. $1.75

Work Among Children

WADE C. SMITH

Author of "Little Jewels"

"Say, Fellows"

Chummy talks with Young Men about the Game of Life. Get this book today and open it anywhere. There is no question about your enjoying it! Wade Smith simply buttonholes you at once. You'll read it through and pass it on to many a younger brother. $1.25

S. D. CHAMBERS

To Be or Not to Be

Brief Talks with Children and Young Folks. Talks that help children to right decisions—to determine whether they will, or will not, acquire certain good and bad qualities, calculated either to make or mar their characters and lives. A useful series, quite above the ordinary. $1.25

W. RUSSELL BOWIE

Sunny Windows

"The advantage of this book lies in the fact that the preacher has had unusual success in his ministry with the children in which he has made use of all the material here accumulated."—Christian Advocate. $1.25

HUGH T. KERR

Children's Gospel Story-Sermons

A new volume of Talks to the Young,
the author of several popular volumes of "five-minute talks." Drawn from history, mythology, the daily newspapers, biography and fiction. $1.25

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS, OR

Fleming H. Revell Company

New York, 158 Fifth Ave.

Chicago, 17 North Wabash Ave.

Rev. R. R. Sadler: An Appreciation

BY JAY A. LAPHAM

A sense of personal loss came to many homes and to many hearts when the word was sent out Friday morning October 7, 1921 that Rev. R. R. Sadler, the editor of the Baptist Record, had passed away. Friends had been somewhat prepared by the news that appeared in the Baptist Record, but their friends all over the state were praying and hoping that our brother might be spared for further fellowship and service in the denomination.

Mr. Sadler was one of the very useful members of the official body of the Iowa Baptist Convention, in which he had served as recording secretary for ten years. He was deeply interested in the small churches in the state and in every enterprise of the convention. At the associations he was ever a welcome guest. His gracious bearing and genial smile won him friends at once. He had the stamp of those fine strong Baptist men of old Virginia, his native state.

Nearly twenty years ago Mr. Sadler came to Iowa from West Virginia where for ten years he had been editor of the Baptist Banner. He located at Humeston in southern Iowa and served the Baptist church there as pastor. He believes strongly in the state paper as a means of reaching many homes in our Baptist churches that will not take the national papers; also as a means of giving to all of the churches more local news and a larger opportunity for discussion from the pastors and others, of topics of interest to the members. Accordingly he was soon in the editor's chair again and for nearly a score of years he has made the Baptist Record a welcome visitor in many homes and a strong help in supporting the Iowa Baptist Convention in its work.

As a guest at associations over the state and in many homes, Mr. Sadler received a hearty welcome. He had the fine courtesy so manifest among the best men of the old Dominion. He loved his home church in Pella and was a sincere friend of the pastor. He was active in the Sunday school where for years he taught a large class. Our brother was conservative in his views, but he loved the great Baptist denomination and was anxious to see all of the forces keeping step in aggressive work for the Kingdom of God. In the prayer service and in preaching the gospel he was interesting and helpful.

The writer has a sense of personal loss in the death of Mr. Sadler. For twelve years past the Baptist Record has given a page and more to the subject of religious education. In caring for this page delightful fellowship has been enjoyed with our brother. Through all the years he has taken a live interest in the Iowa Baptist Assembly and extended a strong helping hand through the paper. Many friends will remember the keen interest he took in the program last summer and the generous way in which he gave the readers of the Baptist Record an account of what was said and done. His monument in Iowa will be the Baptist Record which has been a great blessing in many Baptist homes.

Saturday October 8, 1921 was crowning day for Mr. Sadler. A large audience gathered in the Baptist meeting house to pay their last respects to the departed citizen, friend and brother. Dr. S. E. Wilcox, a long-time friend and co-worker led in prayer. Dr. G. P. Mitchell, also a warm friend and co-laborer, spoke words of appreciation. His pastor and friend, Rev. A. C. Droz, spoke words of comfort to the lonely wife and family from the words: "It doth not yet appear what we shall be." In the beauty of the autumn day his body was laid to rest in the beautiful Oakwood cemetery in Pella.

To him as to many another soldier of the Cross of Christ we say, All hail and farewell!

Mr. Liu Sees American Sport.

This impression of the World Series game was written by Herman C. E. Liu of Hanyang, China, a graduate of Soochow University, formerly manager of the Soochow baseball team, now at Columbia University, preparing for Baptist work, and getting his Ph. D. degree.

"I have always been interested in baseball games, I even used to play baseball in China, but never getting crazy about it until today, on Polo ground. This is the first official baseball game I have ever witnessed since I came to America. The papers reported that there might be a midnight line in order to gain admission to today's World Series game, because the seats would be all full and the crowd in an extravagant hurry. So I decided to go there one hour ahead.

"When I reached Polo ground, Oh, boy! Whole New York seemed wild and crazy. I found thousands of people already there, all interested to watch the battle of kuen chiu (bats and balls.) It was estimated thirty-nine thousand yelping wolves inside and three hundred and thirty-nine thousand yammering to get in.

"Before the game was started, the two rival teams, the Yanks in white, the Giants in gray, were getting warm up, as Americans say. I was quite disappointed because I did not see much in it, and I mistook it for the official game. However I enjoyed the comedy and stunts staged by two of the players, although they were too funny with their shindigs. "The grounds were very picturesque. There are many ads and signs opposite the press box. Ads importuning one to use razors, garters, cigarettes, beefsteak for sale, soft drink stands, ginger ale, hot dogs, floated in the air. Over the press stand is a cover of wire netting. It's like viewing a cross-bared veil, looking through the field.

"All were quite excited while the game was going on. Those professional players indeed were different from college boys. It seemed they never failed in pitching, catching or batting. I enjoyed to see their stealing a base, home running and sliding. Bands played, telegraph keys clicked, all added to the excitement. Every now and then a queer bell rang. It sounded like the Chinese victrola peddler, liu shen chi chl.

"During the whole game, I was quite excited, but I was never so crazy and mad as the crowds. They all looked wild, yelling, whistling, clapping all the time. They shouted words of cheer to make exclamations. They often say, Oh, gee,atta boy, well done.

"I learned a new English word today. Everybody was talking about fans. I was disappointed not to find any fans there. My neighbor kindly explained it meant spectators because they are so fantastic.

"I was quite disappointed in Baby Ruth today first because he was not a baby and then not a ruth. He is called a Yankee but I found out he was from Baltimore. My last disappointment was because Baby Ruth did not make forty-nine home runs.

"The attitude of the Americans toward the game is really a puzzle to me. After all baseball is just a sort of recreation. I cannot see why the public are so wild about it and witnessed the game as if they were looking on at the Great War. Another puzzle is that I cannot understand why they commercialize the game. They charge awfully high for admission. I was told that each member of the winning team could get five thousand dollars for a game. Another puzzle is that they buy and sell players. For instance Babe Ruth was bought from the Boston Club for thirty-five thousand dollars. This does not mean that I am not in favor of the baseball game. As a matter of fact I think it is a great asset. It is a game which promotes national unity. It is a good recreation, promoting health. Furthermore, it trains good judgment and quick perception, and teaches the importance of team work.

"This whole afternoon made me terribly homesick. It reminded me of childhood days when I attended a missionary preparatory school in China and how my American teacher taught me to play baseball. When the manager came out today I recalled my trouble with our Babe Ruth when I was the manager of Soochow baseball team and was defeated by the team of the Shanghai Baptist College."

—New Bedford Standard.

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

Physician with extensive industrial experience desires association with physician in Baptist community. Address "Physician," THE BAPTIST.

Successful, interesting, orthodox Chicago pastor, now in business, just closing pastorate of three and a half years, is open for work with a church that cannot afford resident pastor. Highest references. Address C. P. care of THE BAPTIST.

$5,700.00 Mortgage Wanted

on fine church building, one of best in State of Iowa. Prompt payment of interest. Address W.G. Jones, Pastor, Vinton, Iowa

THE RETURN OF THE REDEEMER

By
GEORGE P. ECKMAN
A sane, scholarly, and readable discussion.

Net, 50 cents; by mail, 55 cents

THE ABINGDON PRESS
New York Cincinnati

In writing to our advertisers mention
THE BAPTIST

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

ON THE MATTER OF SALARIES

For some little time the columns of the professional journals patronized by and conducted for the organists and choir-directors have been seething pro and con as to the proper remuneration due church musicians, standards that should be set, items that should be included in the contracts, etc.; and there can be no doubt that such agitation will redound to the improvement of any conditions that may be found unfair, and will suggest many points wherein the musicians may find it possible and politic to be of great service. Rowland W. Dunham presented a very sane viewpoint in a recent issue of "The American Organist," which article is well worth reproduction. Here it is:

"In these days of h. c. l. the cry for higher salaries has inevitably hit the ranks of church organists. More money is demanded by workers in all lines of endeavor, so why not by us? We even hear suggestions and rumors of "organization" to produce the desired results. None of us would object in the least to an increase of greater or less proportions. Few of us are likely to get it. Before we say too much about it, however, would it not be well to pause and consider the situation—are we worth even what we get?

"The report of an official of the A. F. of L. recently made much of the fact that the demands of the American workman were largely responsible for present conditions, through his failure to really do his work to his utmost capacity. The fact is he is not efficient. The more money he gets the less work he cares to do. He has his auto and silk shirts—all very well, properly used. But to enjoy these and other luxuries he must have more leisure. And to keep them up he must have still more money. The result we all know. The truth is he does not earn what he receives.

"There is considerable doubt that the organist who performs his task conscientiously is adequately paid. He has two Sunday services, from one to five rehearsals with the choir in preparation, ten or twelve hours a week practice at his organ, to say nothing of the time spent in planning his services, keeping up his choir organization, and examining new music. Yet, he is the man who has received no increase, and is saying nothing. Mr. Maitland's estimate that the church player gets more per hour than the movie performer does not apply to him. But he loves his work, which he does to the best of his ability without ostentation, and is happy.

"On the other hand, there is the chap who plays the organ in church on Sunday, who is always growling about the ingratitude of churches in general and his own in particular. Besides the labor of his Sunday services, he has a rehearsal in which to "run through the music for Sunday." Sometimes this ordeal occurs just before or after a service, especially if he is blessed (?) with a quartet of singers. As a well-known organist once said, his "choir usually rehearses weakly." He decides what shall be sung by closing his eyes and reaching into the cupboard for a bunch of music, a sort of "first come, first served" performance. When the preacher asks for an anthem in keeping with his subject he is called unreasonable, and another grievance is silently registered in the mind of the organist against all churches and ministers. The organ music this fellow plays needs no practice and is worth just about as much as the pains he takes with it. A quartet needs no organization—a fact which commands that particular kind of a "choir" to the organist. New music is hastily selected at Easter and Christmas time, with perhaps an occasional burst of speed here and there throughout the season, when the singers complain. This organist spends perhaps sixteen or twenty hours each month for which he is paid from $50 to $75. Is he underpaid? He is quite willing to admit that he is.

"All this may be somewhat overdrawn but it represents a type which is numerous enough. There is a pathetically large number of organists who have little genuine interest in the music they give, either from artistic or purely business standpoints. In their indifference they are content to "get by" as easily as possible. They are essentially in this class even if not true to the type in all details.

"What American music needs most of all is sincerity. We are a commercial nation. That spirit is becoming inculcated in our musical life to an alarming extent. Idealism, as we are learning through our political gatherings, has no place in this country of ours. Thus it is that we find reflected in our church music, where of all places it should not be, that spirit which is so hurting our artistic future.

"Many of us feel that the present propaganda for 'better salaries to organists' to be ill-considered. It would be vastly more valuable and, incidentally, more profitable eventually from the ulterior standpoint to make our slogan 'better music to churches.'

"Every organist knows how he stands; whether he is trying to give the very best that he can produce at each performance, or whether he is more concerned about his salary. Churches may sometimes be unfair to their organists. Isn't it true that just as frequently organists are unfair to their churches? It behooves us, therefore, to examine ourselves first before we complain too loudly about what we are being paid. We must not only earn our salaries, which we do not always really do; we must go farther. We must make our church music so much better that every service will be a revelation of the very finest that sacred music has to offer. Then, and not sooner, shall we have any moral right, individually or collectively, to institute a campaign to force our already hard-pressed churches to raise more money for our monthly checks."

Obituary.

CHARLES E. BAKER

The writer first got acquainted with Colonel Chas. E. Baker some twenty years ago in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. The acquaintance ripened into a personal friendship. Recently while visiting in California I planned to call on Mr. Baker in Santa Barbara, his home, but found to my great surprise that he was dead. I could hardly believe the report because I had always associated my friend with vigorous health, buoyant youthfulness, and immortal vivacity. It is true he was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, seventy years ago the fifteenth of last July, but up to the hour of death he seemed to have all the vitality and resilience and enthusiasm of a boy. He died of valvular heart trouble after an hour's illness on June 11, 1921, at Porterville, California, while on a boosting trip with the business men of Santa Barbara. Colonel Baker, as he was familiarly known, was a man of striking form and personality. In face and figure and bearing he was a thoroughbred, and his personality was in complete harmony with his fine physique. His crowning characteristic was sincere and enthusiastic interest in everything human. It was this trait that made him a lovable man in the church, and incarnated the beautiful symbolism of the Masonic Order of which he was a loyal and advanced member. When a boy nine years old he was baptized into the fellowship of the Ninth Street church of Cincinnati. His young manhood was spent in New York City where he became an honored member of the Madison Avenue Baptist Church. In 1874 he married Elizabeth L. Chase of Boston who survives him as do also the two daughters. Removing to Chicago soon after his marriage he engaged heartily in the work of the First Baptist Church. Later he lived in Sioux Falls, S. D., Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Roswell, N. M., and finally in Santa Barbara, California. In all these places he was an officer of the church, an enthusiastic worker for his city, and an honored member of the Masonic fraternity.

His funeral was a fitting tribute to the love and respect in which he was held by the community. Fifty boy scouts accompanied the body of their scout master to the grave as a body guard; Knight Templars in uniform conducted an impressive service at the cemetery; and the pastor of the church, Dr. W. W. Catherwood, spoke feelingly of the great loss sustained by church and community in the death of Colonel Baker. He was a great soul always seeking to radiate sunshine and happiness. Such a spirit is immortal in the richest sense of the word.

JOHN A. EARL

"Thy Speech Bewrayeth Thee"

Oh, that my tongue might so possess,
The accent of His tenderness,
That every word I breathed should bless!

For those who mourn, a word of cheer;
A word of hope for those who fear;
And love to all men, far or near.

Oh, that it might be said of me,
"Surely thy speech bewrayeth thee
As friend of Christ of Galilee!"

—ANONYMOUS.

The Spiritual Meaning of "In Memoriam"

By JAMES MAIN DIXON

A vital and original study of Tennyson's great poem.

Net, $1.00, postpaid

THE ABINGDON PRESS
New York Cincinnati

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home.

Electric Organ blowing out-its for organs of any make.

Write, stating which catalog is desired.
Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desks—EVERY THING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free. DEMING BROS. & CO., 901 17 GREENVILLE ILL.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise

Write for Booklet Z.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

In writing to our advertisers mention
THE BAPTIST

"Buy from Your Own House"

Latest Books of Denominational Interest

Modern Money Methods for the Church

By FREDERICK A. AGAR

The object of the author is to suggest ways hereby the local church may be delivered from unwise financial methods, and to outline a plan adapted to provide adequate financial resources for both the local and the wider Christian enterprise. "Giving is not a matter of legislation, but of life"; "Living and giving in a spiritual sense are synonymous." These two quotations show the atmosphere of this eminently practical book.

$1.00 net

By-Paths to Forgotten Folks

By COE HAYNE

Mr. Hayne has not taken cross sections of fact, he has transplanted it alive. His stories of home mission work bring us into immediate contact with the living factors of human interest. It is as if we visited the homes of Indians, Alaskans, Nicaraguans, ranchmen, and foreign-speaking people, and made personal acquaintance with them and with the men and women who are the hand and the tongue of Christian concern for them.

$1.25 net

The World Lighted

A Study of the Apocalypse
By CHARLES ED. SMITH, D.D.

A discussion characterized by great commonsense and striking insight. The interpretation is historical and yet it is broader than the historical. It is free from offensive literalism. The author steers remarkably clear of the absurd mixture of literalism and symbolism. Altogether it is the most rational interpretation that has yet appeared. In fact, it ought to be an epochal book in the study of the Apocalypse.

$1.00 net

The Dutch Anabaptists

The Stone Lectures, 1918-1919

By HENRY ELIAS DOSKER

Professor Dosker has availed himself of the first-hand information concerning the Anabaptists of Holland contained in the scattered fragments of their own writings which survived the fires of the Inquisition. The book is a mine of information and a guide to further study, abounding in quotation and in careful reference to originals, and serving the reader's convenience with a Bibliography and an Index.

$2.00 net

The Withered Fig Tree

Studies in Stewardship

By EDWIN M. POTEAT

The author's purpose is to make clear the fundamental principles underlying the Stewardship movement and to furnish a basis for the organization of local leagues or groups of Christian stewards. Authentic personal testimonies reinforce the argument. The book is arranged for the use of classes, questions that will stimulate discussion and afford themes for debate being attached to each chapter.

$1.00 net

The Use of Projects in Religious Education

By GERTRUDE HARTLEY

A manual for parents and teachers of children and young people. Shows how to make religious education interesting by utilizing commonplace things in teaching. Tells how to vitalize handwork and memory work. It presents tested methods and illustrations of actual work by boys and girls in the Sunday school.

$1.00 net

Planning Church Buildings

By HENRY EDWARD TRALLE,

M.A. Th.D., and

GEORGE E. MERRILL, A. I. A.

A book that is original and constructive. Shows how to plan for the adequate housing of a modern church program. Shows how to build beautifully and economically. Shows how to build for preaching, for worship, for teaching, for recreation, and for evangelism. Shows how to build for a small church or a large church. Shows how to remodel an old building. Illustrated with architect's plans.

$1.25 net

Principles of Christian Service

By HENRY F. COPE

A text-book in the Standard Course of Teacher training, outlined and approved by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations.

A unit in the third-year specialization series issued by the Teacher Training Publishing Association, intended for use in the Adult Department. It presents in vigorous readable style a program of Christian service by adults, together with the reasons for the features of service described.

60 cents net

Gilbert M. Brink
General Secretary

SEND FOR OUR TWO NEW CATALOGS

"The Church and Sunday School Builder" (Church and Sunday School Supplies)

"Selected Books, Catalog and Holiday Bulletin" (Books and Holiday Goods)

Established 1824

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
(THE JUDSON PRESS)

Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Seattle, Toronto

"Use BAPTIST Lesson Helps"

"Order from Our Nearest Branch"

Volume II

October 29, 1921

Number 39

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

WELLS CATHEDRAL in England. Notice the architecture, delicate and strong, dignified and beautiful. Landscape features combine with the structure to create a scene of rare beauty. Observe how accurately the building is mirrored in the clear, still water.

"I have been reading many religious periodicals, as an active pastor, during the past ten years, but not one of them has contributed either to my thinking, preaching or living anything like the wealth of guidance and inspiration that I find in The Christian Century."

—REV. CHARLES W. GILKEY, Hyde Park Baptist Church, Chicago

"The Church's Stake in the Armament Conference"

A SERIES of four editorials on "The Church's Stake in the Armament Conference" is beginning now in The Christian Century. In no peaceful period has the church given so much evidence of a vital interest in the essentially Christian business of abolishing war as in the past few months. Enlightened Christian churchmen are coming to regard the Washington conference as an event in whose issue and outcome they have, as Christians, the most vital stake. They feel, moreover, that the responsibility of creating an atmosphere not merely of ardent expectancy but of moral demand rests peculiarly upon them and their churches in these crucial, vibrant weeks. This conviction has been finding steady expression in The Christian Century. It was in the editorial columns of this paper that the suggestion was first made to to observe November 11 as a high day for prayer and earnest discussion. Into every city and hamlet of the country the idea has been carried by magazines and the daily press until it has now received the reinforcement of President Harding's request that the day be made a solemn holiday.

This incident is but one illustration of the unique position The Christian Century has come to occupy in the thought of American church leadership. It discusses the great issues of the social order, of industry and business, of states and communities, of Christian unity, of theology and ethics, of the personal spiritual life—and all with a candor unrestrained by denominational interests and horizons. No thoughtful man or woman, inside the church or outside, can afford to be without this free interpreter of religion in these great days.

The CHRISTIAN CENTURY A Journal of Religion

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON and
HERBERT L. WILLETT, Editors

FOUR DOLLARS A YEAR

Some Recent Contributors—Each An Authoritative Writer

Charles E. Jefferson, Robert E. Speer, Richard Roberts, Rufus M. Jones, J. H. Garrison, Edward Scribner Ames, John Spargo, Alva W. Taylor, Jane Addams, Harry F. Ward, Vida D. Scudder, Lloyd C. Douglas, Charles A. Ellwood, Albert Parker Fitch, Edgar De Witt Jones, Joseph Fort Newton, Scott Nearing, William Adams Brown, Reginald J. Campbell, Katherine Lee Bates, Edward Shillito, H. D. C. MacLachlan, Peter Ainslie, Lynn Harold Hough, Joseph Ernest McAfee, William E. Barton, William E. Gilroy.

Fill out one of these coupons and mail today. Addresses outside U. S. must provide for extra postage.

The Christian Century, 508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Please enter my name (a new subscriber) for a year's subscription to The Christian Century at your regular rate of $4.00 (ministers $3.00). I will remit upon receipt of bill and you will please send me without extra charge a copy of [ ] "The Daily Altar," by Willett and Morrison, or [ ] "The Next War," by Will Irvin, or [ ] "What and Where is God?" by Swain, or [ ] "What Christianity Means to me," by Lyman Abbott, or [ ] "Princess Salome," by Burris Jenkins, or [ ] "The Master of Man," by Hall Caine.

Name..... Address.....

Baptist, 10/29

The Christian Century

508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find $1.00 for a twelve weeks acquaintance subscription to The Christian Century.

Name.....

Address.....

(Use title "Rev." if a minister.)

Baptist, 10/29

The Baptist

Vol. II                      October 29, 1921                      No. 39

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER                      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE                      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR                      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY                      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMILL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY                      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS                      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	1228
EDITORIAL .....	1229
AMERICA'S DUTY IN SHANTUNG, by Henry Noble Sherwood .....	1230
THE KINGSHIP OF CHRIST—IV. CHRIST AND THE PERSON, by E. Y. Mullins.....	1233
BULLETIN BOARD .....	1237
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1238
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.....	1239
WITH OUR BAPTIST COLLEGES.....	1240
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	1242
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	1244
A TERRIFYING RESPONSIBILITY; BUT A DOOR OF HOPE, by James H. Franklin.....	1252
TWO DOCTRINAL STATEMENTS.....	1254

In All Seriousness Speak Up

THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists. If the Baptists want this Kollum Kremated let them just say the word. In all seriousness we are calling for a referendum vote of our subscribers. What you say will in the next thirty days decide the fate of Killam's Kollum. We want a post card shower. If you think the page should be kept as it is tell us why. If you want it "killed" tell us why. We want the privilege of printing your replies as far as possible. The case is now in the hands of the jury. We await our fate with a smile. THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists.

Killam's Kollum

The Publisher's Page

This is now and has been from the beginning the publisher's page. It is always partially surrounded by the material Uncle Samuel requires and the table of contents as well as list of editors, committees and contributing editors who seldom contribute. Upon this inspiring and attractive page we tell from week to week the purposes, the policies and the progresses of THE BAPTIST. We have stuck to our text. Over and over we have told of the friends and the foes, the hopes and the fears, the present and the future of our denominational newspaper. We have never told all we knew about them either. For some reason unknown to the editor the Kollum has been read. How do we know? First, we know by the cash book. For example, the reference of our favorite flower, "the forget us not" brought us many dollars. Second, we know for during the past months we have asked for many things and in nearly every case the response as been immediate and ample. In the third place thousands of letters make favorable reference to the Kollum. Fourth we know for material from this page has been copied in religious journals far and wide. Fifth, we know because for months we have not been introduced in church, convention and seldom in private without its stigma attaching to us. Sixth and lastly we know for many of the readers of THE BAPTIST are human beings.

Shall Killam's Kollum Krumble? ? ?

A sad and serious situation confronts us. THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists. Do not understand us to say that this is the sad and serious situation. Far be it. This is the trouble: the Kollum is misunderstood and its mission questioned. Is there a department which has pleased everybody? It has been called an "editorial page," a most grievous mistake. Some one has discovered that it is "undignified." We do not understand his type of mind. Upon analysis it has been found to savor of the "superficiality of the age." We think it was a university professor who made the test. Seven men and one woman have written their protests in the past seven months. We were bearing up bravely under this sense of failure until our General Director intimated to us last week that he felt the Kollum was a mistake and now we are heart broken. This is the sad situation to which we refer. THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists. It does not belong to the boards, the secretaries or even the editors. We must have a referendum. Read the paragraph in italics and you will understand. Shall we order the undertaker and flowers for Killam's Kollum?

Fresh from the Field

Rev. William Earl La Rue, pastor of the Lyell Avenue Church, Rochester, N. Y., has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Takoma Park Church, Washington, D. C., and will begin his work there November 15. Mr. La Rue began work in Rochester in September, 1917, coming from the First Church of Weedsport. During his residence an aggressive work has been done and the indebtedness on the building reduced to less than $1000. He has served during this time as chaplain of the Rochester General Hospital and as clerk of the Union of Baptist Churches of Rochester and Monroe County.

The Baptists of Detroit are a great family and every church and every mission is a matter of deep concern to every other church and mission. The latest child is the new Jefferson Avenue Baptist Church, now housed in its splendid new Sunday School and Institute building on Lakeview avenue at Jefferson avenue. This is the new church resulting from the consolidation of Clinton avenue and the Jefferson avenue branch at Engle. Dr. and Mrs. C. M. Carter have been the pastoral spirits that have brought about the happy combination. The neighborhood affords one of the most promising opportunities in America and already the great building is in some ways inadequate for the demands upon it. But this is only temporary. There is a great auditorium building yet to come when the proper time and necessity comes, as they will.

A work the Detroit Baptists have long looked forward to has been a Christian center, down town, for our Negro brethren and sisters. A preparatory work was begun at the Second Church with Miss Reid in charge. It was a serious loss when the mother of Miss Reid died and she was obliged to return home and take up the educational work laid down by her mother. But this did not defeat the plans. The Women's Home Mission Society has kindly sent Miss Alexander, Dr. Brooks of the Home Mission Society approved of the plans outlined and in co-operation the Detroit Baptist Union is overhauling the building on Russell Street, near Sherman Street, recently vacated by the Calvary Negro Baptist Church for the new Negro Christian center. It is hoped to have it ready to occupy by October 15, when a comprehensive evangelistic, social, industrial, educational and recreational program will be put on.

A denominational development of widespread interest has been going on in Detroit all the summer months—the consolidation of the Grand River Avenue and the Fourteenth Avenue Baptist Churches in the edifice of the latter, corner Fourteenth Avenue and Marquette. The building has been materially changed, a large pipe organ installed, also new heating and ventilating systems and many interior changes looking to the efficient care of the great consolidated Bible School, all under the name of the Baptist Temple, Rev. Llewellyn Brown, as pastor. Later it is expected to build adjoining a splendid church house or institute building for a larger educational and recreational work. Services during the summer months have been held in the Grand River Avenue building while the extensive changes in the Fourteenth Avenue Church building were under way, but now the united congregations are at home in their new house and we are certain a new era of advancement has dawned.

In the vestibule of the First Baptist Church of Rahway, New Jersey, a huge box has been placed for the receiving of parcels with which to help "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." Members coming to the church at the Sunday services and at the prayer meetings deposit their packages in this box. As soon as it is filled, arrangements are made to transport it to the warehouse in New York, through the courtesy of one of the members, whose business firm runs a daily truck service between Rahway and New York.

The First Baptist Church of Falconer, N. Y., started out to fill one barrel with supplies for the relief ship being sent to Europe, but they found it necessary to write to headquarters for additional shipping tags. When the members had brought in their gifts, it was found that two and possibly more barrels would be required for their shipment to the warehouse.

In reporting its work in southern Ohio during the last summer, one of the evangelistic teams from Denison University remarked that there is plenty of romance among those hills, and to illustrate the point, sent along this picture. Study it.

"How to be a Good Citizen" is today as popular a subject among the women, young and old, as a quarter century ago was "How to be a Good Housekeeper." The topic is occupying a prominent place this fall on the programs of the state conventions of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, which are being held in nearly every commonwealth. Study courses in Citizenship are advocated for groups of local workers in every community. Circles will meet to study and discuss politics, national, state and municipal; to talk down or to talk up candidates for office; to pass around recipes for good government and remedies for inefficient government, as the women were wont to exchange recipes for sponge cake or cures for the children's sore throats. The Young People's Branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union is organizing citizenship classes and inviting other young people of both sexes in for a social evening and a discussion of "How to be a Good Citizen."

The New York Bible Society, at 5 East Forty-eighth Street, will present to President Harding a Bible specially made for use for the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments. The organization received word yesterday from the President that he would be glad to accept the gift.

The Bible is bound in morocco and is of large type. It is one of the finest copies of the Scriptures published, and the cover will bear the following inscription:

"This Bible is dedicated to the promotion of good-will among the nations by the New York Bible Society, Nov. 11, 1921."

The Bible is now on exhibition at the Bible House. The gift was planned by the Rev. Dr. George William Carter, general secretary of the society.

Rev. W. L. Miller of Tobias, Nebraska, in attendance at the recent state convention, remarked to the editor that he had taken the Standard and The Baptist from 1868 to date. Are there other brethren who can equal or surpass this record?

At the recent Kansas State Convention a delegate stated to the body that Miss Ruth Paul, a graduate of Ottawa University, then about to sail for missionary work in Orsam, lacked a Corona typewriter, for which the sum of $50 was needed. A collection was at once taken and more than $58 realized sent to her with the loving greetings of the convention.

Dr. Bruce Kinney, speaking at the Colorado State Convention, stated that Dr. D. D. Proper, who had just given an address was, in point of service, the oldest field worker of the Home Mission Society and that he stood next.

Tentative programs have been issued for the Convocation of Christian Citizens in Behalf of Limitation of Armament which is to be held in the Central High School and new Masonic Auditorium, Washington, D. C., Sabbath, October 30 to Wednesday November 2. They may be obtained by addressing the National Reform Association, Pittsburgh, Pa., which has taken the lead in calling the Convocation, to which individuals as well as representatives of religious and civic bodies will be admitted without enrollment fee or special credentials. Those not as ecclesiastics but as citizens. The emphasis will be put not so much upon the economic as upon the Christian argument against militarism.

Beat the average of one hundred per cent if you can! Miss Anna L. Dahlgren of the Iloilo Hospital, Iloilo, Philippine Islands, brought that challenge to the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society here, when she visited its headquarters this week, bringing the best of news of the training school for nurses in the Iloilo Hospital. Last year's graduating class passed the government examinations one hundred per cent perfect, and the 33 pupil nurses who are now in training show symptoms of an ambition to beat even that record, Miss Dahlgren says.

(Continued on page 1256)

The Baptist

We Have Not Succeeded—Yet

COMPARISONS of per capita giving on the part of Northern Baptists and other bodies are gratifying. They afford a measure of comfort also if in any hour we are inclined to become discouraged.

There is need of caution, however. This is not time to get to coddling ourselves. Self congratulation may prove to be a bad thing if indulged in at the moment when the consciousness of an enormous task and of a sure defeat if we do not exert ourselves to the utmost should be present in such a way as to be almost overpowering.

Some of our people have, it is true, given wonderfully. But we are only half way to our goal. The total asked for this year is much greater than for last, and yet collections are not more than half as much as for the corresponding months in 1920. Such facts do not suggest that this is a good time in which to sit down and fold our hands.

We have not failed. But the plain fact is that we have not succeeded. The goal is a long way off. As we measure our human power it seems impossible of attainment. Indeed, it is impossible—for us. But it is not impossible for God, working through us. Now that we have come face to face with what seems humanly impossible, we shall perhaps be led more and more into resolute dependence upon Him who can do all things when he has the proper human instruments.

The course before Northern Baptists is perfectly clear. It involves, first, absolute dedication of all that we are and have to Him. It means, second, the seeking Him in constant prayer—in praying through our own personal problem and duty. And it means, third, such effort and sacrifice as most of us have not yet put forth. Success is ours if we are willing to pay the price. And the price involves both the entire consecration of our hearts to Him and the undertaking of tasks so great that we are led to say, "I cannot do it; but God can do it through me."

The Long and Short of It

LONG ARTICLES, editorial or contributed, in a newspaper, are an abomination in the sight of the reader. But the report of the Mohonk Missionary Conference sent in by Dr. James H. Franklin last week, and the luminous discussion of the Shantung controversy by Dean Henry N. Sherwood this week deal with matters so vital and of such immediate importance that we are sure to be thanked by some of our readers for presenting them in spite of their length.

Join the Procession

WHAT THE BAPTIST has hoped and pleaded for seems to be coming, namely: that Baptists try—really try to understand each other, and get together in the middle of the Baptist road. Indiana Baptists have done this. Wisconsin did it two weeks ago. Washington and several others, as reports go, have joined the procession. Let all the states do the same. They need no outside permission nor help except from God.

Keep Cool Heads and Clean Hearts

IN TIMES OF CONFUSION such as that through which the Baptists of the North are passing, there is only one safe course to pursue. It is that of open, clear, frank, courteous and courageous discussion. The heart of the denomination is right, and when our people come to see clearly what the issues are, there is no doubt what they will do. They will get together on Baptist ground, as they are already doing in state after state. The only real dangers to the denomination peculiar to the present juncture are tendencies to set up schemes in the dark, to seek factional victories, to substitute emotional intensity for clear thinking, to resort to words of double meaning for the purpose of avoiding the consequences of clearly definite statement, and to use the denomination as a field of propaganda for outside and alien movements. Guard against these and the denomination, in its fellowship, its orthodoxy and its program, is safe.

Editorial Fits and Starts

MR. CLEAVES is in the West attending state conventions. Mr. Killam is in the West, the North and the East, making "the welkin ring." Only Mr. McGuire is left—occasionally, between his own visits to state conventions. Consequently work in the office of THE BAPTIST is a thing of "fits and starts," as witness this page.

"Go, Chicago"

BAPTIST LOVERS of football everywhere will feel a thrill of pleasure to read of the score of 9-0 made by the team of the University of Chicago against Princeton last Saturday. We congratulate Mr. Stagg, the veteran coach of Chicago, upon this "signal" victory. "Go, Chicago!"

Wanted—A Representative

REV. W. A. AYRES states his impression in this issue that THE BAPTIST is not "rightly representing the Baptists." He is right. We are trying to unify and enlist them as far as we can; but our efforts in this direction are very unsatisfactory even to us. "Representing" them is another matter. Baptists refuse to be represented by anybody but themselves. In fact they find difficulty sometimes in trying to rightly represent themselves.

America's Duty in Shantung

If the coming conference on disarmament can settle Shantung with justice and satisfaction it can settle the rest of the troublesome problems and clear the way for peace. The case stated by a brilliant student of world politics.

By HENRY NOBLE SHERWOOD

Dean and Professor of History, Franklin College, Franklin, Indiana

ONE OF the eighteen provinces of the Middle Kingdom of China is Shantung. It is about equal in area to the state of Illinois and contains nearly 40,000,000 people. Many facts about Shantung cause the Chinese to attach a unique importance to this province of the Empire. Mencius, the philosopher, was born in Shantung. Here, also Confucius lived, studied, and was buried. For four thousand years the Chinese have made pilgrimages to his grave and visited the sacred mountain of Tai Sham. On this mountain, a millennium and a half before Moses received the tables on Sinai, Fuh, first of the five great emperors, sacrificed to Heaven. All over China stones from this holy mountain are set up as memorials. Shantung, the resting-place of her great and mighty dead, is sacred soil to China.

The natural resources of this province are both varied in number and in quantity. Here the silk worm was domesticated and silk culture first flourished. Shantung also produces leather, cotton, and woolen goods. Moreover, it is rich in minerals. Copper and lead, antimony and nitre, silver and gold abound; and the coal and iron deposits with the four neighboring provinces to the north, are "so rich that they will equip navies when the miner's pick is silent in Pennsylvania, and when young New Yorkers are rickshaw coolies for Japanese gentlemen."

Together with these natural resources are important characteristics which assure to Shantung an unrivalled position as a commercial center. Its coast line is longer than that of any other Chinese province and it is blessed with excellent harbors, chief of which is Tsingtau. The province lies across two great channels of Chinese commerce: the railroad from Shanghai to Peking, and the Grand Canal.

Rule Shantung, Rule China

The nation that rules over Shantung virtually controls not only this railroad and canal but the Yellow River as well, and therefore dominates internal communication and commerce. For this reason the possession of Shantung is of great strategic value. It is further enhanced by its central location. Because it is an entering wedge between the North and South it can dominate political situations. Moreover, the Bay of Kiaochow is an outlet for the products of North China and the shortest approach to Peking from the sea. Its strategic value is therefore doubly emphasized.

By virtue of its history and traditions, its natural resources and industrial opportunities, its strategic value considered both from a commercial, political and military point of view, Shantung is one of China's most highly treasured territorial divisions.

In 1897, using the murder of two of her missionaries as a pretext, Germany occupied the port of Kiaochow, and on March 6 of the following year obtained by treaty certain rights and privileges in Kiaochow and the adjacent territory. Two months later Great Britain leased the island of Wei-hai-Wei at the northeastern tip of the peninsula. Thus two nations disturbed the sacred province of Shantung.

Japan by the capture of Kiaochow in 1914 "with a view to the eventual restoration of the same to China" eliminated Germany from the province. Events moved rapidly. On January 18, 1915, Japan presented to the President of China the famous twenty-one demands. Five months of diplomatic negotiations followed. The treaty as it was finally concluded and as it relates to Shantung, is as follows:

1. China agrees neither to lease nor cede to any country any territory within Shantung or any island along its coast.

2. China agrees to open certain suitable commercial ports in Shantung. The choice of ports and the regulations therefor will be determined after consulting the Minister of Japan.

3. China agrees to accept whatever arrangement Japan and Germany may make of the latter's claims in Shantung.

5. It was further agreed: "When, after the termination of the present war, the leased territory of Kiaochow Bay is completely left to the free disposal of Japan, the Japanese government will restore the said leased territory to China under the following conditions:—

(a) The whole of Kiaochow Bay to be opened as a commercial port.

(b) A concession under the exclusive jurisdiction of Japan to be established at a place designated by the Japanese government.

(c) If the foreign powers desire it, an international concession may be established.

(d) As regards the disposal to be made of the buildings and properties of Germany and the conditions and procedure relating thereto, the Japanese government and the Chinese government shall arrange the matter by mutual agreement before the restoration."

Early in 1917 at Japan's request Britain, France, Italy and Russia assured her that they, at a peace conference, would support the claims of Japan in regard to the disposal of Germany's rights in Shantung.

On June 28, 1919, Germany signed the Treaty of Peace at Versailles in which she renounced all her rights, title, and privileges in Shantung in favor of Japan.

John Hay and the Open Door

This concludes the resume of the contemporary history of Shantung. It is a bald statement of the events themselves without any attempt to set forth, as Herodotus would say, "the grounds of strife." With this as a background the remainder of the article will attempt to define the policy which America may best hold with reference to this Far Eastern situation. To set forth a policy caused me much trouble, for in the words of Thucydides, "the witnesses of the various events were not agreed in their accounts, but both sides were affected by partisanship and failure of memory."

In the determination of America's duty in Shantung it is well to ask, what has been in times past our policy toward China and Japan, the two countries most intimately related to the topic under investigation, and does the present disposition of Shantung and the present attitude of Japan in the Pacific run counter to our Far Eastern policy?

In 1899 John Hay set forth the open door policy—equal economic opportunity in China for all nations. The following year he led in the demand for the preservation of the territorial integrity and independence of the nation. For a third of a century as respects China our policy has been that of the open door and the preservation of her territorial integrity. The great nations of Europe, Japan included, have assented by diplomatic notes to this policy.

We have shown a like spirit of good will toward Japan. Through the efforts of our country Japan has opened her gates to foreign intercourse. We have tried to help the Japanese solve many of the problems which her new position entailed. And for almost half a century an American was always the trusted advisor of the Japanese.

Withal, in the words of Professor Hornbeck: "We have been offering and giving to Japan, along with China, all that either has wished to have of the best products—along with some not the best—of Western thought and Western science."

Japan Against American Policy

The second part of our query was, Does the disposition of Shantung and the present attitude of Japan in the Pacific run counter to our policy? Our answer is, Yes, and we offer the following reasons in support of it:

1. The acquisition of Shantung is but filling in the Japanese dreams of empire on the mainland—an empire at present which begins with Fukien on the south and reaches to Manchuria and Korea on the north. In building this empire obviously sovereignty changes and the open door closes. We believe with Mr. Thomas F. Millard: (a) "That Japan has no intention of ever abandoning the hold she has gained in Shantung, unless some kind of compulsion is put upon her to require it. (b) That Japan has no intention of respecting the commercial principle of the open door in Shantung, any more than she has respected it in Manchuria and Korea, unless compulsion in some form is put upon her."

2. Japan has received from China greater concessions than Germany obtained in 1898. In addition to the German holdings a pledge was obtained that she would neither lease nor cede to any nation any territory on the Shantung coast. Moreover, the right to construct a new railway was obtained—obtained in the face of the facts that the construction of this line by and for the Chinese themselves was imminent; that the Chinese railway policy at this time admits of the use of foreign capital under the direction of foreigners but only as Chinese lines; that Japan uses railways not only as economic agencies but as political instruments as well.

3. Japan objected to the neutralization of Shantung and other leased territories for the period of the war; she objected to the capture of Shantung by China; she objected to the entrance of China into the war. On this last point Vicount Ishii, Minister of Foreign Affairs, in a conference with the representatives of Great Britain, France, and Russia, who in November, 1915, suggested to Japan that China join the Allies, is reported to have said: "Japan could not regard with equanimity the organization of an efficient Chinese army such as would be required for her active participation in the war, nor could Japan fail to regard with uneasiness a liberation of the economic activities of a nation of 400,000,000 people."

4. Japan does not respect the sovereignty of China because she violated Chinese neutrality in making the capture of Kiaochow and in obtaining the twenty-one demands. Not only does the substance of the demands convict her but the method of obtaining them as well. Japan presented them to the President of China instead of to the Foreign Office; she warned China that all proceedings must be kept secret; she denied at home and abroad, officially and non-officially, the terms of the demands; and she threatened that unless an immediate answer was given that "the Imperial Japanese Government will take such steps as may be necessary."

During the course of the negotiations the American Secretary of State gave to the press a statement that the Japanese government had assured the United States that "Japan had no intention of interfering with either the political independence or territorial integrity of China, and that nothing she proposed would discriminate against other powers having treaties with China or interfere with the 'open door' policy to which all the leading nations are committed."

Five days after the date of this news item, on May 11, 1915, the United States sent identical notes to both China and Japan in which our government declared "that it cannot recognize any agreement or undertaking which has been entered into or which may be entered into between the Governments of China and Japan impairing the treaty rights of the United States and its citizens in China, the political or territorial integrity of the Republic of China, or the international policy relative to China commonly known as the open door policy."

This action on the part of our government suggests that the affair of the twenty-one demands created misgivings at Washington.

Would Vise American Note to China

5. The fifth reason why our Far Eastern policy has been traversed is found in the demand made by Tokyo in 1917 that a United States message of special advice to China should have been viséed by Japan.

6. The course of Japan's foreign policy in general is imperialistic and leads to the conclusion that Japan will not restore Shantung to China. She has in the last generation frequently added territory to the Empire. The method by which Korea was obtained is characteristic of what may be expected with regard to Shantung. In 1894 in a treaty of alliance with Korea we find this statement: "The object of the alliance is to maintain the independence of Korea on a firm footing." In 1898 in an agreement with Russia Japan recognized definitely the sovereignty and entire independence of Korea. In 1902, in the treaty of alliance with Great Britain, again Japan recognized the independence of Korea. Twice in 1904, she made the recognition. In 1905, Japan assumed control of Korean foreign affairs. In 1906, Marquis Ito was made resident General in Korea. In 1907, Japan prevented a hearing being given to the Korean representatives at the Hague. In 1908, Prince Ito declared Japan would not annex Korea. In 1909, he declared Korea must be "amalgamated" with Japan. In 1910 Korea was annexed to Japan.

In the light of Korean history what interpretation shall be placed on diplomatic promises made in Tokyo?

Despite her promises to stand by the open door and territorial integrity of China in the Lansing-Ishii agreement of November, 1917, the inference seems warranted from her Far Eastern record that Tokyo scored when Washington, on the ground that "territorial propinquity creates special relations between countries," recognized that "Japan has special interests in China, particularly in the part to which her possessions are contiguous."

7. And Japan would score again by building up a Monroe Doctrine for the Far East. But it is not a Monroe Doctrine. It is a wolf in sheep's clothing. It is an attempt to begot America by the inference of a name. "The American Monroe Doctrine is defensive and all excluding; the Japanese Monroe Doctrine is aggressive and not self-excluding." Japan could meet her foes singly; Russia is practically out; Germany is out; who will be next? Probably America.

But before we go further let us look at another picture.

China has 400,000,000 people; they speak about twenty different languages; they are 95 per cent illiterate. China has had a Republic imposed upon her. In reality she is without a government. After studying at first hand conditions in the Far East, Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip makes this estimate of the Chinese government: "It has represented nothing; it has been corrupt; it has been inefficient; it has lacked courage and has been without any real national political feeling or backing, and it has no standing or influence . . . and China is next door to Japan."

On the other hand there is Japan. During the last half century, the Shogun has surrendered his power; feudalism has wiped itself out; a constitution has been established; and political parties formed. The qualifications for voting have been reduced from ten yen to three and the question of universal suffrage debated. The most optimistic think Japan is fast approaching a limited monarchy with ministerial responsibility.

This island empire, not quite as large as California sustains 53,000,000 people. The increase in population is about 400,000 annually. Approximately only seventeen per cent of Japan is arable. She is now passing from an agricultural to an industrial nation. She is practically without either coal or iron ores. She has all kinds of labor force and practically no raw material.

"The Devil Take the Hindmost"

And China rich in coal and iron ores is next door to Japan. Would it not be the natural thing for Japan to quote from the speech that Herr von Bulow made in 1898 in the Reichstag: "Mention has been made of a partition of China. Such a partition will not be brought about by us at any rate. All we have done is to provide that, come what may, we ourselves shall not go empty-handed. The traveller cannot decide when the train is to start, but he can make sure not to miss it when it does start. The devil takes the hindmost."

And in this light Dr. T. Iyenaga, head of the Japanese Bureau of Information, addressed recently the Twentieth Century Club of Boston:

"What Japan obtains are simply the economic rights and concessions in Shantung similar to those enjoyed by other powers in other parts of China, and the establishment of such a settlement at Tsingtao as the foreign settlements that exist at Shanghai, Tien-tain, and Hankow. The Shantung settlement, therefore, far from impairing the territorial integrity or independence of China, rather serves to restore her sovereignty, which Germany had, in fact, overridden at Kiao-Chau by the treaty of 1898.

"Such being the actual outcome, I am unable to understand what ground there is for the abuse that has been heaped upon the Japanese nation on account of the Shantung disposition of the Treaty. To restore the exercise of full sovereignty over Shantung to its owner—is this what you call 'Japan's rape of China'? To develop, in connection with China, the resources of her potentially rich province, which, left alone to the Chinese, would long remain a hidden treasure—is this what you call an act of burglary? To contribute to the education, sanitation, and physical well-being of the inhabitants of Shantung, as Japan will doubtless strive to do along the railroad in whose management she has a share—is this what you call 'the enslaving of 36,000,000 in Shantung'? Were these acts to be properly styled 'rape,' 'burglary,' and 'enslavement,' we would ask for the immediate and thorough revision of Anglo-American dictionaries to prevent our disastrous blunders in understanding the English language."

And Kong Siang Ko, lineal descendant in the 75th generation from Confucius and envoy to the Peace Conference at Paris, cries out, "We, forty millions of Shantungese, will never in any fashion submit to Japanese domination."

And Japan answers; "I have been trying to negotiate with China regarding the restoration of Kiaochoo and there is no China with which to negotiate."

And what in view of all this is America's duty in Shantung?

America Lost Two Opportunities

America has lost two splendid opportunities to deal satisfactorily with the Shantung problem. The first opportunity was when she entered the Great War. The nations with whom we became associated would have assented to any reasonable demand on condition that we declare war. Our government undoubtedly knew for a considerable time in advance of our declaration of war that we were going in. During this interval of time we could have bound Britain, France, and Italy to the immediate restoration of the German holdings in Shantung to China. We not only did not do this but we allowed Tokyo to bind them to support her proposition that the German holdings be turned over to Japan.

The next opportunity came during the peace parleys in Paris. What went on there is as yet not a matter of public record.

Of one thing we are reasonably assured. America asked for no territorial gain. She asked for nothing for herself. Japan made two requests; a declaration of racial equality and Germany's place in the Far East. Japan used the first request to throw dust in the eyes of those who opposed her second request and at the crucial time dropped the first and obtained the second. And America was helpless to prevent it. We had the opportunity and lost it.

And from Paris the scene shifted to Washington. From the executive branch of our government the Shantung question went to the Legislative department.

The answer made to this question by the United States Senate is a matter of history. On November 15, 1919, the Senate adopted the following reservation to the Treaty of Peace with Germany:

"The United States withholds its assent to Articles 156, 157, and 158, and reserves full liberty of action with respect to any controversy which may arise under said articles between the Republic of China and the Empire of Japan."

On the 15th of the following March this reservation was amended by striking out the words "between the Republic of China and the Empire of Japan."

Whether or not the Treaty is ratified by the American Senate with or without this reservation it seems likely that unless some compelling force prevents it Japan will remain permanently in Shantung. This occupation is only an additional step along the road to an enlarged Japanese Empire. The increase is to come in the future as it has in the past at the expense of China.

With regard to the dismemberment of China and to economic and commercial relations with her the United States has expressed herself in the Hay Doctrine. Now as heretofore this doctrine needs enforcement. America must stand by the Hay Doctrine as she has stood by the Monroe Doctrine. The safety of our ideals, the maintenance of our civilization and the preservation of our Republic demand it.

The European states already have agreed to the Hay Doctrine. It seems reasonable therefore to ask them to join us in a demand that Japan announce a date upon which she will restore Kiaochow and her concessions in Shantung to China. This announcement should specify the terms of the restoration and both the terms and the date should be acceptable to the Powers.

Moreover every encouragement and help should be given to China in order that she may develop into a strong power. A strong China would go a long way toward the settlement of Far Eastern questions. If those that are strong bear the infirmities of the weak then the western nations must unselfishly make contributions to China. Otherwise the China that hath not will lose that which she hath.

The Kingship of Christ. IV—Christ and the Person

Jesus effected a new creation. He made men out of chattels. Human personality is too sacred for even Him to venture to compel its allegiance. A master of Baptist theology interprets Him.

By E. Y. MULLINS

President of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Louisville, Ky.

JESUS CHRIST revealed to the world the value of human personality. Prior to his coming men were treated often as chattels or as animals. He taught the infinite value of the individual man in the sight of God. His teaching is based upon the fact that man is made in the image of God; that he is a spiritual being destined to an immortal existence and capable of infinite growth. The individual is regarded in the New Testament as a member of a spiritual society, the church. His personality is to be estimated in his relation to God and to other human persons. The teachings of the New Testament are especially clear in this regard. It is not necessary here to repeat the various passages of Scripture which bear upon the theme.

Dim Lights on the Horizon

The human person of course involves all that man is—physically, mentally, morally and spiritually. The feelings, the conscience, the will, the purpose, the power of choice, the whole of man's self-consciousness, belongs to his personality.

Human personality, as Jesus Christ found it when he came into the world, was sadly in need of divine assistance. Human society had left man in the midst of spiritual disaster. Sin was dragging men down slowly into the depths. Ethical and philosophical systems had been devised, but were incapable of redeeming men. Here and there a dim consciousness had arisen on the horizon of the more enlightened men concerning the value of the human person and its destiny, but this vision and ideal had not become universal and had not become a practical regenerating force in the world.

When Jesus came, it was the coming of the invisible God into the visible world, the inaudible God speaking in audible tones. It was the God of philosophy and abstract speculation taking concrete form and inviting men to lay hold upon him for their salvation; so that Jesus set forth himself as the crown and hope of a renewed personality for man. He offered himself as the revelation of God, as the Savior, as Lord. He invited men to accept his yoke. He said that faith in him would bring a new life to the soul. What man needed was, first, to be rid of the bondage of sin. Jesus taught that faith in him would bring the necessary emancipation. Man found a division in his nature. When he would do good, evil was present. There were occasional glimpses of the moral ideal, but they were transient. What man needed was the unfolding of his possibilities, the development of himself. In order that man may come to the full realization of himself, Jesus taught that man must accept him and the life which he brought.

A Royal Priesthood

Jesus taught that there were two great elements in the process of self-realization on the part of man, following his restoration to fellowship with God and emancipation from the bondage of sin. First, man must become a king, and second, he was to become a priest. "He made us to become kings and priests unto God." Now, kingship, in the old sense of autocrats, is an anachronism in the world today; but kingship stands for power, and the element of power is a necessary element in Christian character. Priesthood, in the old sense, according to which men were custodians of divine grace, has passed away in the religion of Jesus. But priesthood, in the sense of sympathy and love of one's fellow men, remains. It is thus in the combination of power and sympathy, kingship and priesthood, that the Christian ideal of character is to be realized.

There are two groups of words in common use which reflect these two elements in character. We speak of self-discipline, self-development, self-direction, and we work these ideals into our educational systems. They supply the kingly element in character. They bring power. But there is another group of words, viz: self-sacrifice, self-renunciation, or self-denial. These represent the priestly element in character, and it is the combination of the two groups of ideals which brings self-realization under the leadership of Jesus Christ. It is this combination which enables men to rise to the Christian standard.

He Will Not Coerce a Will

I notice next the method of Jesus Christ in dealing with human personality. All his methods reflect the high valuation which he sets upon men. He never coerces the will. He deals with us on principles of freedom. He makes revelations to us, but he does not declare them as dogmas to be imposed upon us. He awaits our discovery of those things which he has revealed. His own Messiahship is an example. He lived before men and taught them, and by and by he asked them for their opinion of him, and when they confessed him he pronounced them blessed. Thus the disclosures which he brought became the insight of his followers.

So also in the matter of righteousness. Jesus came to make men righteous; but his righteousness is both a gift and an achievement. He came to reveal a new righteousness of God; but faith is reckoned unto us for righteousness. Christ himself is made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption; but he also commands his people to work out their own salvation in response to the inworking of God. Thus at every point he pays the utmost respect to human personality, lures it, woos it, wins it, and trains it to the highest possibilities.

God Does Not Swallow Men

A very interesting aspect of Christ's work with the human person is seen in the gift of the Holy Spirit and his spiritual service for men. The Spirit of God reveals to the Christian the things of Christ, as of God dwelling in man; but it is not God swallowing up man, so that man's personality is wiped out, as some pantheistic systems of belief would teach us. Man's personality remains distinct. The Spirit of God convicts, persuades, teaches, leads, guides, upholds and sustains and brings to mind the things of the past, but never coerces the will. Through the Spirit Christ addresses motives. He appeals to the whole range of human interests—to fear, to hope, to desire, to aspiration, to the conscience. This is the moral method of the divine Son of God with free personality. There is never coercion but always persuasion.

The relation of Jesus to human personality is reflecting itself in our times in many ways in human society. I mention a few of the spheres in which his principles are beginning to operate. I mention, first, education. Education more and more seeks to cover the whole range of possibilities in the pupil. Modern education is recognizing that the pupil is a moral and spiritual being, as well as an economic factor. A rounded and symmetrical education is bound to provide for all these high possibilities of human personality.

Again in the realm of economics the world is coming to recognize that it is not lawful to use other men for selfish ends. Some of the ancient institutions of man have been striking examples of the violation of personality. Slavery and war, and some forms of industry, have been outstanding examples. Chattel slavery is no longer regarded as ethical in civilized countries. The human person cannot rightly be held in bondage by another human person. In war, also, men have violated in many forms the sacredness of human personality. Men have been used as "cannon fodder," they have been used as puppets, and they have been slain by the million to gratify the ambitions of rulers without conscience.

A Man's a Man

In the realm of industry, also, men are recognizing the sacredness of human personality, that man must not exploit his brother man. He must respect him. All forms of class warfare are violations of this ideal of the gospel. No group of men is inherently superior to any other group. Human nature all stands on a high level in the sight of God. There are degrees of culture and development, of course, but "a man's a man for a' that."

Again, in the realm of the state men are recognizing the sacredness of the person. An absolute monarch who can do as he will with his subjects is an anachronism. Democracy or self-government is the ideal which is more and more coming into vogue in the modern world. It is destined to cover the whole earth in due time, because democracy recognizes the value of human personality.

A Religion Without Sacraments

The same principle is seen in its operation in the sphere of religion. The forms of religion which are dominated by priesthoods and by sacraments usually subject men to a form of spiritual bondage and put them at the mercy of a priesthood acting as custodians of the divine grace. The religion of the New Testament is the religion of the direct appeal and the free response, a religion without sacraments, but holding only to ordinances; a religion which appeals through the truth to the intelligence, through the moral law to the conscience, and through the Holy Spirit's reinforcement to the will. This is the kind of religion that respects human personality. Sacramental religions, therefore, are destined to pass away, and free and spiritual religions are destined to abide, because they and they alone fully respect the human person.

The goal of personality is self-realization in the Kingdom of God. The individual has his place in the social order; he finds himself only as he finds his true relations to his brother man; and the social order which is destined to rule, is the Kingdom of God as founded by Jesus Christ. The work of Jesus Christ, therefore, with the person, is the work of preparing the person for the Kingdom of God, which is an eternal Kingdom.

"A Place for Me"

"My Father has need of the birds and the flowers,
A place for each beautiful tree,
And so I am sure in His wonderful plan,
There's a place and a mission for me.

So, wherever I go and in all that I do,
I crave the dear vision to see,
My place in my Father's own wonderful plan,
My task and His blessings for me.

I'd like to use all of my talents and time,
And ever so faithful to be;
That God should not miss any service of mine,
To perfect His service in me.

He has a good purpose in all He has made,
And surely I know it must be
That when He pronounced His creation all good,
He meant something lovely for me.

Then I must look close thru the days as they pass,
The sign of His guiding to see,
And be glad that my Father's own loving good plan
Included a mission for me."

From Coast to Coast With the D. V. B. S.

By CONSTANCE JACKSON

Statistics are seldom interesting to anyone who doesn't possess a mathematically inclined brain. But that's because they're usually abstract and dull. Living statistics are different though, and facts concerning actual, breathing, wide-awake-at-this-moment boys and girls won't bore you as the number of life insurance policies issued in the year 1907! Results of the Daily Vacation Bible Schools held by the representatives of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission School all over the country are beginning to pour in, and they indicate without a doubt that the movement has met with greater success this year than ever before.

Aiken Institute in Chicago holds the world's record, and leads the list with an enrollment of 1070. But numbers are not everything and the spirit at Aiken was excellent, too. Despite the hot weather the order was fine, the Bible memory work gratifying, and the singing impossible to describe in its beauty and volume. "Could you have seen the toy trunks and carts made by the boys," writes Miss May A. Morey, "the dresses, aprons and bloomers which the girls turned out, to say nothing of the 250 dollies dressed by the little girls under ten, you would have said, 'If this is D. V. B. S. I'm for it!'"

"The heavens declare the glory of God,
And the firmament showeth His handiwork."

Strange scripture to teach girls and boys who have lived all their lives in New York tenements among brick walls and stone pavements, you say? Yet the 19th psalm was the scripture chosen to be memorialized by the children who attended the Daily Vacation Bible School at the Judson Neighborhood House. The very limitations which gave them so little chance to see Nature close at hand made them thrill to the beauty of the words and they recited them with joy and vigor. When all of the schools were gathered in the Wanamaker Auditorium for the closing session of the year it was a stirring experience to hear these children of the city streets lift up their voices with one accord and say,

"Day unto day uttereth speech,

And night unto night showeth knowledge."
At the First Magyar Baptist Church in be proud the lad asked for more material and attempted another. Later he brought the two articles to Miss Wheeler and said,

CLASS IN SYRIAN MISSION, BOSTON
Covers for sofa pillows. We made them ourselves. How do you like them?

Trenton, New Jersey, the attendance rose from 24 on July 5 to 94 on July 30, and the final enrollment exactly doubled last year's record.

Miss Frances Broome, a missionary among the Italians in Buffalo, New York, writes that their school was the largest in the city. They had 156 children for the first week when the attendance rose and remained practically at the figure of the total enrollment—189. One hundred and fifty-six pieces of work were completed in the Junior Department and the children memorized four songs and two Psalms.

Many children learned habits of faithful workmanship which they had never known before. Miss Carolyn Jane Wheeler of the South Chicago Neighborhood House tells of one boy who had a reputation for being hard to manage. They did not expect much of him and weren't surprised when his first piece of work—a hammock—was very poorly done. Realizing that it was not a piece of work of which he could

"This hammock ain't no good—poor work. But this one is fine!"

In Seattle, Washington, Miss Fannie Allen held a Vacation School of 44 week day sessions with an enrollment of 120 children. Counting the eight Sundays included in the term the children had 52 days of Bible work or the equivalent of a year in the Sunday School. "And those children surely know their Bible," writes Miss Allen.

Fast becoming little Americans, are many of the foreign born. Miss Augusta Stewart of Trenton, New Jersey, tells of a touching incident in connection with the picnic held for the D. V. B. S. children. Tony, a little Italian boy, had been eagerly looking for the Washington Monument all the way. Suddenly he spied it and with face aglow he jumped to his feet and saluted in proper military fashion. "There he is," he cried, and as the car sped past, he threw back a kiss to the Father of the country he had come to love so well.

Amusing things happen too. At the first session of the Daily Vacation Bible School held by Miss Harriet Cooper in Detroit, she asked the children how many of them had brushed their teeth and taken a bath that morning. The response was slim! What was her amazement on walking through the park on her way home to find several of the children splashing merrily in a little fountain. "We're taking our bath now, Miss Cooper, will it count for tomorrow?"

"What is your parents' religion?" one of the boys registering for a Daily Vacation Bible School was asked. "My mother's a Protestant, but I'm a devil," came the startling answer. The work is strenuous in hot summer weather but the needs of the child soul are imperative, and country wide the teachers and missionaries of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society have been so zealous in the work that children already are asking, "Please, teacher, when does it begin again?"

SOME NEW AMERICANS
Americanization Workers visit our homes. "Whoop! Don't overlook me—the boy in the doorway."

The First Meeting of the International Missionary Council, Lake Mohonk, N. Y., Sept. 30—Oct. 6, 1921

(Continued from last week)

The exclusion of German missionaries from allied territory was regarded as due to general political considerations, for the Council, "though not occupying the position of a court of enquiry," yet had at its service a great mass of information as to the countries where German missionaries had been at work and on reviewing that information expressed the conviction that "speaking generally, German missionaries working under the flags of other nations were not guilty of acts of disloyalty or of attempts to excite disloyalty among the people of the country, and that, if anywhere there were exceptions, these were not in accordance with the policy of German missionary societies."

Other restrictions upon missionary work in certain colonial areas, especially in Africa, received careful consideration, and methods of procedure were proposed in order if possible to secure an easement of these restrictions.

Autonomy Looms Big

A momentous discussion was had on "Church and Mission." The special committee having to do with this subject was composed of board secretaries, missionaries and representatives of the rising churches in mission lands. In order that this special committee might have before it a frank statement of the most forward looking thought from the group last named, the Japanese, Chinese, East Indian and African members of the committee, acting as a sub-committee, were asked to frame a statement indicating what they felt should be the relation between the developing indigenous churches on the field and the missionaries. Through this action probably for the first time in modern mission history the trend of thought on the part of the so-called native leadership became fully vocal at an interdenominational, international gathering held within the bounds of Christendom. The sub-committee was composed of able and courageous folk, but instead of offering for the consideration of their Occidental fellow-members of the special committee an argued brief for fuller or fullest self-determination or independence on the part of the indigenous churches on the field, this Oriental and African group, purposely avoiding whatever might suggest a demand on their part, framed several penetrative questions of far-reaching import. These questions offered by the sub-committee were worked over carefully by the special committee and with a preamble giving them their setting were presented to the Council as the committee's unanimous report. The Council, in receiving this report, did not need to be convinced that "the Christian movement in a large part of the mission field, and in particular in India and China, labors under a serious disadvantage on account of its foreign character in the eyes of the people—a disadvantage which can be overcome only in the degree that the main leadership and direction of the Christian movement passes into native hands." But what could the Council do with the questions which had been raised?

"1. Whether, with a view to minimizing the disadvantage referred to, and promoting native leadership, it is desirable in certain fields that foreign missionaries should be related to and serve under the direction of the constituted ecclesiastical authorities of the country to which they are sent and that they should have the same ecclesiastical status as that of corresponding indigenous workers.

"2. Whether it would be more in harmony with the spirit of brotherly co-operation and of rightly serving the church of the country that all questions affecting the program of Christianity should be discussed by natives and foreigners meeting together, rather than such matters should be determined by a mission council or other body composed exclusively or preponderantly of foreigners; and hence, where it is not possible on the grounds stated above, or for other reasons, to transfer the direction of all Christian activities to the indigenous church, how best an opportunity may be given to the native church of expressing its mind in regard to missionary policies falling at present within the purview of the mission body."

Such questions the Council could only "refer for consideration to the mission boards and societies and through them, if so desired, to the missions and churches in the mission field," recognizing at the same time the differences in polity and practice of the several churches, the different stages of development of mission work and the varied conditions in different mission fields. The earnest consideration already given by many missionaries to the question of transferring responsibility to the indigenous church, and the pre-supposition involved in the questions that a strong indigenous church and a capable native leadership are already in existence. The impossibility of finding any uniform solution of the problem applicable to conditions in all fields was also emphasized, parts of Africa, for instance, being absolutely unprepared for such proposals and Japan having already in large measure achieved ecclesiastical independence.

Like the "Fourteen Points"

At the end of the discussion the report embodying the questions and referring them as stated was unanimously adopted by the Council, although it was frankly remarked in informal conversation among the members that the questions so raised had carrying power possibly akin to that of President Wilson's Fourteen Points.

The discussion of Christian education in the mission field as notable. Papers by two of the outstanding experts in education in Great Britain and the United States, Sir Michael Sadler, of Leeds University, and Dr. Paul Monroe, of Teachers' College, Columbia University, were before the Council, as well as the reports of certain special educational commissions, that to Africa reporting in person to the Council through Dr. Thomas Jesse Jones, the Rev. J. E. K. Aggrey, D.D., and the Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Wilkie of West Africa. Mr. J. H. Oldham led the discussion, which in its various aspects lasted for almost a full day. The ideals of missionary education; the relation of missionary education to the developing national systems of education in mission lands; and the specific contributions to be made to national life and character and to Christian leadership by missionary education that can be made by no other agency—these were the major issues considered.

Other topics receiving consideration were Christian literature, the relation of missionaries to public questions, the preparation of missionaries, the International Review of Missions, and the traffic in narcotics as an international problem.

With reference to the forthcoming conference at Washington on the Limitation of Armaments the Council passed this resolution:

"The council contemplates with deep thankfulness and solicitude the assembling of the international conference at Washington. The momentous issues to be considered will profoundly affect the peace and well-being of many peoples. Our earnest prayer to God is that such wisdom may be given to the delegates that their deliberations may result in the discovery and acceptance of agreements that shall be the political equivalent of those principles of brotherhood taught by Jesus Christ, which principles we believe command the assent of a vast and increasing number among all nations.

We Will Support a Just Peace

"We cannot doubt that, should the result of the conference be a concert of judgment and action significant for justice and peace in the world, this brotherhood of Christians in every nation and of every name would with new hope and confidence give themselves to the promotion of these principles among all men everywhere. For such high enterprise we, assembled from among the missionary forces of many peoples, for ourselves and, so far as we may, for those whom we represent, make solemn pledge of the highest service which in Christ's name we can render."

Of this new International Missionary Council, Dr. John R. Mott was elected Chairman, and Mr. J. H. Oldham, M.A., and the Rev. A. L. Warnshuis, D.D., were elected secretaries. Mr. Oldham and Miss G. A. Gollock were elected joint editors of the International Review of Missions, all to serve until the next regular meeting or until their successors are elected.

The Committee of Council, appointed to serve until the next meeting of the International Missionary Council, includes the following: North America—the Rev. Arthur J. Brown, D.D., LL.D., the Rev. James H. Franklin, D.D., the Rev. Frank Mason North, D.D., LL.D., the Hon. Newton W. Rowell, LL.D., K.C., Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, the Rev. Charles R. Watson, D.D.; Great Britain—the Rev. R. Forgan, D.D., the Rt. Rev. George Lanchester King, D.D., the Rev. John H. Ritson, D.D., Colonel Sir Robert Williams, Bt., M.P.; Continental Europe—Baron C. W. Th. van Boetzelaer van Dubbledeam, M. Daniel Couve. The officers of the Council are made ex-officio members of this Committee of Council.

It is expected that the next meeting of the Council will be held on the Continent of Europe in 1923.

The Bulletin Board

Take a Square Look at War

The Manchester Guardian for July 29 says: "The illusion that war is a school of character is dead. *** The illusion that war permanently tightens comradeship within a nation is dead. *** War as a means to anything great, noble, or precious, beyond its own immediate object of escaping violent conquest by others, is as bankrupt before the world as fire or plague. Its casualties to both winner and loser are seen to be not merely losses in life and limb and money, but losses in character, in intellect, in every part of civilization."

O, Restless, Resistless Pussyfoot!

—Pussyfoot Johnson is broadening the scope of his anti-liquor program and has sailed for India to carry on a temperance campaign. "One would think the prospect of his campaign good," remarks the San Francisco Chronicle, "because out of the 300,000,000 people, more or less, something like one-fifth are Mohammedans who are solidly with him to begin with. We do not understand, however, that Mr. Johnson's business is with the native masses, who for the most part are too poor to indulge in the frivolity of strong drink, but rather with the 100,000 Europeans scattered through the country, and if it is with them Mr. Johnson will have the job of his life."

Seeking a Lost Island

—Sir Ernest Shackleton, noted explorer, left London on a 30,000-mile voyage to explore the uncharted Polar regions of the South Seas. His ship carries stores for a two-year voyage. The explorers are making for the Enderby Quadrant, the Antarctic, south of South Africa. Some ninety years have passed since a ship was in these waters. They will also search for the lost island of Tunaki, mentioned in missionary history and legend, but never seen. A seaplane is on board the ship and motion picture men are along.

There Are Millions in It

—During last year the United States manufactured 61,859,900,000 cigarettes. Of these, 15,834,000,000 were shipped abroad and the remainder smoked here. Revenue collected by the United States on tobacco products amounted to $294,000,000 during the year.

Literature Teaches Free Love and Atheism

The Evangelistic Committee of New York city, which is endeavoring to raise $11,000 for the pressing immediate needs of the committee if it is to continue its work this summer, reports that $160,000 is being spent in the city in the distribution of literature teaching free-love, atheism and un-Americanism. One of the boys' workers of the committee is in touch with a young man who makes it his profession to teach young lads to steal, and with another man who is teaching atheism and un-Americanism to a group of twenty young men. It is against such evil forces that the evangelistic Committee's work is directed.

Paul D. Moody, President

—Paul Dwight Moody, associate with Dr. Coffin in Madison Avenue church and a son of the famous evangelist, Dwight Moody, has been elected to the presidency of Middlebury College in Vermont. Mr. Moody, who was at one time pastor of the Congregational church at St. Johnsbury, resigned his pulpit to serve in France as chaplain in the 26th division. General Pershing later appointed him to succeed Bishop Brent as senior chaplain of the American Expeditionary Forces. On his return to the United States Mr. Moody became connected with Madison Avenue church. As president of Middlebury he succeeds John M. Thomas, who resigned a short time ago to become president of Pennsylvania State College.

They See the Way Out

In a great mass meeting of the churches, both state and free, in Hyde Park, London recently, the following declaration was adopted according to the reports:

"In face of the collapse of our existing economic, industrial, and social order, and of so much blindness in statesmanship, this meeting urges all men and women of goodwill to recognize that the solution of the deadlock can be found only in the practical application of the principles of Christianity to all the departments of human life. A persistent refusal to apply these principles of Truth, Justice, and Brotherly Love is a denial of Jesus Christ, who lived and died for their establishment on earth. The present system, being based largely on unrestricted competition for private and sectional advantage, must be brought to an end, since it fosters the sins of avarice and injustice, lays a yoke of thralldom upon masses of men and women, and leads almost inevitably to war.

"Therefore this meeting calls upon all Christian people to find in the failure of the old society a supreme opportunity for the building up of a new order that shall be founded on brotherly co-operation.

Women of Two Races Join Hands

The promising cooperation which has recently been established between men leaders of the white and colored races by joint committees of conference in all the leading southern cities, is now being extended and strengthened through the organization of similar committees of women. Both state federations of women's clubs and women's missionary societies in the various Protestant denominations are actively encouraging this development. The white women are pledging themselves to work with all their might to create public sentiment against lynching. The one accepted apology for lynching has always been the plea that it was the only means of protecting white womanhood in the south. When southern women repudiate such dishonoring and fictitious protection, the last rag of excuse for lynchers will be gone.

Abolish Either War or Civilization

The Boston Globe summarizes the situation thus:

The modern world carries all its bread-and-butter in the same basket; that if my neighbor goes hungry, I am so much the more out of pocket till I feed him; and that statesmanship must act accordingly. That is, world politics have become world economics. Unless the peoples abolish war, war will abolish them. Abolishing war depends on raising the mental and moral standards of the average citizen. We must learn to think less as partisans of our own Nation and more for the sake of mankind as a whole, since it has been abundantly shown that no Nation is strong enough either to rule the roost or go to it alone. That the war-breeding evils of secret diplomacy have their origin in the ignorance and indifference of the peoples themselves, who in war, are, of course, the first to pay the penalty."

A Texas Judge on Divorce

Judge Muse, one of the district judges of Dallas, said in an address: "We must get back to spiritual conditions in which we were many years ago to have the country improved. The only chance we have to conduct the government in a proper manner is to dwell upon the spiritual truths which are in the Bible. *** The only good reason for granting divorce is the reason given by the Bible, and any other reason is worthless. *** The biggest thing that faces the United States government today is the divorce problem. This rapidly increasing divorce rate will weaken the nation. There will be no remedy for this evil until laws are made which will make it more difficult to get married and even harder to get divorced. The home should be a place where the people find the greatest pleasure. There should be more singing of the old songs and a study of the classics instead of the jazz music and the popular novels. A home cannot be bought; only a house is bought. But a home is built through a slow process. If God is not in your home, open your door and let Him in, for where God is there is never divorce."—Baptist Standard.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for November 13.

PAUL BEFORE THE ROMAN GOVERNOR.
Acts, 23:25-24:27. Golden Text: Acts, 24:16.

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

Claudius Lysias had his hands full for a time. Bent on killing Paul forty men bound themselves by a curse to put him out of the way. But Paul's nephew informed the chief captain of the conspiracy, and the captain sensing the trouble sent Paul to Caesarea under a strong guard of soldiers by night. To Felix, the governor, he sent a letter explaining the situation. Felix waited five days for Paul's accusers to appear in the person of the high priest, Ananias, who came to Caesarea with certain elders and with a special pleaser by the name of Tertullus. The fulsome, flattering and false speech of Tertullus is found in Acts 24:2-8. At the close of this speech Paul is permitted to make his defense. Having heard both men, Felix puts off judgment for a more convenient time hoping thereby to avoid trouble and promote his own greedy ends. But the convenient time never came for it was the policy of Felix never to have a convenient time. His wife who was a Jewess induced him to call Paul before them. Her motive was doubtless pure curiosity. Again Felix delayed action with reference to Paul, and after two years he was succeeded in office by Festus who found Paul in bonds.

The Lesson Taught

Paul before Felix and Felix before Paul are the two dramatic scenes of the lesson.

Paul Before Felix

When Paul stood before Felix he was a prisoner accused of at least three things, viz., insurrection against the government, schism against the Jewish religion, and profanation of the temple. Paul denies the first charge with dignity and calmness, pointing to the fact that scarcely two weeks had passed since he arrived in Jerusalem and implying that the time was too short for any serious conspiracy to be hatched. He denies the accusation that he profaned the temple, but on the contrary admits that he was orderly and worshipful in the temple, conforming to its laws and customs. He calls upon his accusers to offer proof stating in his defense that they have no proof or they would offer it. He answers the charge that he is a sectarian, confessing that he is not the ringleader of a sect, but that he does walk in the Way which the law and the prophets indicated.

The defense of Paul before Felix is marked by its omissions. Paul says nothing about Jesus the Christ. He keeps himself strictly to the charges that have been made against him and rests his case on the simple statement that all the fuss stirred up about him is unnecessary because he is a law-abiding citizen of Rome, a Jew loyal to the law and the prophets interpreted in the light of the New Way, and a man wholly innocent of wrongdoing. In this Paul manifested his good sense. He would make the situation no harder than it need be. He would inject nothing into the trial that was not involved in the charges. Paul's defense is also marked by its implications. He implies that the Way is not a new sect but a flowering out of Judaism. His position seems to be that of the writer of the Epistle to the Hebrews. Bear in mind that he is not preaching the gospel before Felix; he is simply clearing himself of lies that have been put in the form of legal charges by one Tertullus; but in clearing himself his integrity stands out. There is nothing double about Paul. While not yet perfect he exercises himself to live with a conscience void of offense toward God and men.

Felix Before Paul

This is an entirely different scene from the one just passed. Paul in this case is invited to meet Felix and Drusilla alone in order that they may hear him concerning the Way or rather the faith in Christ Jesus. He is, therefore, not appearing before them as a prisoner but as a preacher. His defense as a prisoner before Felix and in the presence of his accusers required tact; his appearance before Felix and his wife as a preacher requires courage. Whatever the motive may have been that led to this meeting, whether the cupidity of Felix or the curiosity of Drusilla we do not know; we do know it gave Paul a striking opportunity not to philosophize about a new faith in a crucified Messiah but to reason of righteousness, self-control and the judgment to come. His reasoning was doubtless not personal in the sense that Nathan said to David, "Thou art the man," but it was direct though general and so telling that Felix was terrified. The message of Paul to Felix and Drusilla was eminently fitting because it preached righteousness to a pair who had violated every principle of righteousness, it brought the truth of self-control home to a man and a woman who were self-indulgent to the last degree of lust, and it flashed the lightnings of the judgment to come around the judgment seat of an official in whom all sense of justice was dead. It struck terror to the heart of Felix, but seemed to have no effect upon his wife, and the fear which caused Felix to tremble was only temporary, demonstrating the truth of Tacitus' statement that "Felix wielded his kingly authority with the spirit of a slave."

In a very real sense Paul was master of the situation all the way through his prisoner experiences. It is almost humorous to see how the little bleary-eyed Jew, whose sight was so poor he could not distinguish the high priest, Ananias, and whose bodily presence was contemptible, was important enough to require an escort to Caesarea of 470 soldiers. He was the master of kings and governors. His great personality radiant with the love of Christ and burning with enthusiasm for the salvation of souls made men forget his physical weakness and see only the charm of his spiritual presence.

Book Reviews

Jesus and Paul, by Benjamin W. Bacon, D.D.; MacMillan Co., New York; cloth, 251 pages, $2.50.

A series of nine lectures delivered at Oxford during the midwinter term in 1920. The author states at the outset his intention to "apply without reserve or restriction every process of historical and literary criticism which modern science places within our reach" to "an analysis of the early literature of Christianity in order to get at the springs of its life." In a rational and scientific manner he unfolds his idea of the relationship between the conception of Christ found in Paul's teachings and that in the gospels, with special attention to the place that the fourth gospel holds as a reconciliation between the theological system of Paul and that of the other evangelists, speaking of the Ephesian evangelist as the exponent of the "higher synthesis" of Jesus and Paul.

Snowden's Sunday School Lessons for 1922, by James H. Snowden; the Macmillan Co., New York, $1.50; a real find for the busy Sunday school teacher. To begin with the book is written by a man who has ideas and knows how to put them on paper, as his previous writings clearly prove. You are pretty sure to get fresh, thought provoking, interest arousing comments on the lessons. Then the book is of convenient size, the ordinary five by seven inches of the regular book, that permits tucking it into overcoat pocket or shopping bag. There is none of the obvious padding that makes the usual comments on the lesson so trying; the matter is clear, condensed, direct.

The lesson text is followed by a lesson plan that gives a natural but not trite analysis of the material. Each heading in the lesson plan is commented upon briefly, and the practical teaching-point is printed in bold faced type. These teaching-points are what give the distinctive flavor to the book. They could hardly be better; they are suggestive, broad in their reach, thoroughly practical and rooted in present-day applications, and deeply spiritual.

It is safe to prophesy that the reception accorded to Dr. Snowden's venture will make this the first of a long series of commentaries on the Sunday School Lessons.

Young People's Work

Topic, November 13.

BIBLE EXAMPLES OF PERSONAL EVANGELISM.

Matt. 4:18-22; 9:9,10.

"And Jesus walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea for they were fishers. And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men."

"And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of customs and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him."

It does not seem possible for any one to read the Bible and not feel a sense of responsibility for personal work. Not only do the Old and New Testaments and the teaching of Christ reveal this obligation, but the lives of the early Christians show that they so understood the teaching and obeyed it.

Finders' Chapter. The first chapter of John's gospel has been called the "Finders' Chapter." When John the Baptist found the Messiah he went about, saying, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." Two of the men who heard John followed Jesus and accepted him as their Lord. One of these was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother. As soon as Andrew found Jesus he hurried out to find Peter, and brought him to Jesus. The next day Jesus found Philip, and Philip became a disciple. Philip hurried out and found Nathanael, and said: "We have found him, of whom Moses in the law, and the prophets, did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph." Nathanael expressed some doubt of this and Philip quietly said, "Come and see"; and Nathanael came and saw, and surrendered his life to Christ. When the Gadarene demoniac was healed, Jesus sent him back to his village to tell the story of his wonderful cure.

The Outcast. An outcast woman meets Christ at the well, and as soon as she comes to know him as her Lord she hurries back into the village, gathers a group of folks about her, and says to them, "Come and see a man, which told me all things that ever I did"; and because of her testimony they go to see the Christ, and a revival of religion takes place in that community. This is the constantly repeated story of the New Testament. As soon as men experienced Christ's salvation they went out to tell others about it.

But we see our responsibility, not only as emphasized in the teaching of the Old and New Testaments and the experience of the early disciples, but also as it is clearly set forth in the example of our Lord.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

John says: "He that saith he abideth in him ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked." If we give ourselves to follow in the footsteps of our Lord, we shall soon be speaking to individuals about his salvation; for Jesus was not only a preacher to the multitude, he spent much time in talking to individuals. Indeed, some of the greatest sermons he ever preached were spoken to individuals.

The Master's Sermons. The great sermon on "Regeneration" was preached to one man late at night. The marvelous sermon on the "Water of Life" was preached to an outcast Samaritan woman beside a village well. While few of the sermons of Jesus have been recorded, the Spirit of God has thought it worth while to preserve twenty-one personal interviews which Jesus had with all sorts of men and women. (Adapted from "Soul-Winning" by Dr. F. E. Taylor.)

Note: Copy of the above named pamphlet will be mailed free on request to the B. Y. P. U. of America, 125 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

Also, information concerning material and methods of all sorts for Young people's work may be had by writing to same address.

Kankakee Celebrities.

The B. Y. P. U. of the First Church, Kankakee, held their banquet on October 14th with pastor H. W. Hines as Toastmaster. Representatives were present from St. Anne, Immanuel and First Church.

The officers of First Church B. Y. P. U. are: President, Edward J. Bringstaff; Vice-Presidents, Hazel Lankford, Everald Vickery; Secretary, Ruth Hicks; Treasurer, George Scharlach; Chorister, A. Delabre; Pianist, Ruth Hubert. Toastmaster Hines presented the officers in the following manner:

Sister Hubert is our talented Schubert
Who tickles the ivory key,
Making music and motions and other commotions
For director Delabre.

George Scharlach is our Shylock
Who holds the bags of dough,
While Ruthy fair of the auburn hair
Makes the monthly roll-call go.

A brace of nuts, hazel and hickory,
Are vice-presidents Lankford and Vickery.

But the captain of the ship
Who hands out the weekly gaff
Is the ever ready and voluble Eddie.
Beloved president Bringstaff!

The general theme for the evening's program was based on "Our Relationships": To the Local B. Y. P. U., E. J. Bringstaff; To the Neighboring B. Y. P. U. Organizations, Rev. D. M. Trout; To the B. Y. P. U. of America, Miss Mary Salzman; To the State B. Y. P. U., Miss Nettie Anderson; To Service, Dr. J. A. White. Vocal solos were rendered by Miss Renetta Catton and Mr. E. Rapp.

NEVADA-CALIFORNIA LIFE SERVICE LEAGUE

BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE'S ASSEMBLY OF

With Our Baptist Colleges and Universities

Keuka Park

The re-opening exercises of Keuka College as a college for young women were held recently. The presence of educational leaders from New York and Rochester, from the New York State Department of Education, and from Colgate University, together with the fine appearance of the new faculty headed by President Norton, as well as of the thirty-seven young women, members of the freshman class, bespeak the interest and enthusiasm which will make the college a success. President Rush Rhees, of Rochester University, made the principal address. He congratulated the young women that they were attending a women's college, for some he said preferred to be at a college all their own. He rejoiced that the Free Baptists and Regular Baptists, between whom there had been too little difference to warrant their being apart, had united. The adoption of Keuka, a former Free Baptist co-educational college, by the united body of Northern Baptists as a woman's college meant a useful and successful future. He spoke with great appreciation of the beautiful location and college buildings and rejoiced that here in the central part of our great state there was to be a woman's college dominated by the Spirit of the Greatest of Teachers. Doctor Taylor of the New York State Education Department said Keuka College should prepare young women to be makers of homes. Some might wish to be in professions or in helpful occupations, but primarily let this college graduate home makers. Judge Harvey F. Remington of Rochester, a trustee, presented the keys to President Norton with some pleasing references to the bright prospects ahead.

A very effective pageant illustrating the winning of Red Jacket to the aid of the Colonists was given on the lake shore by the students under the direction of Mae H. Baker, Professor of Expression and Physical Culture.

Robert E. Farrier, D.D., state director of the board of promotion, and Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, former president of the Northern Baptist Convention, were present to represent those bodies.

Mrs. Gertrude S. Martin of Ithaca, executive secretary of the Women's University Clubs of America, an outstanding personality in women's educational matters, was chairman of the committee in charge of the formal opening.

The regents of the University of the State of New York have authorized Keuka College to conduct a summer school during the summer of 1922, in which courses of studies will be offered to teachers and college women who are prepared to work for a degree.

Colby College

Four new members of the faculty greeted the students of Colby at the opening of the college year. Prof. A. P. Savides, Ph.D., Associate Professor of Philosophy, takes the place of Prof. W. R. Wells, who resigned in June to accept a position on the faculty of Lake Forest College. Professor Savides is a graduate of Roberts College, Constantinople. He came to America and studied at Harvard, from which he received his doctor's degree. He returned to Constantinople as a member of the faculty of Roberts College. He has also been a member of the Simmons College faculty, and was with the Americanization Division, Department of the Interior, for a time. He is a man of ability and pleasing personality.

The appointment of John C. S. Andrew, A.M., S.T.B., as Associate Professor of History marks the development of that department, which under the direction of Prof. J. W. Black, Ph.D., has grown to the point where it requires the services of two instructors. Professor Andrew is a graduate of Harvard, class of 1896. He received his master's degree also from Harvard and in 1902 was graduated from Andover Theological Seminary with the degree of S.T.B. He has taught at Radcliffe and Harvard, served in the educational work of the Y. M. C. A. in France during the war, and then taught at Penn College, Iowa, from which institution he comes to Colby.

Harry E. Edwards, the new Director of Physical Education, is a graduate of the Springfield Y. M. C. A. Training College in the class of 1921. He has had wide experience in the direction of athletic activities and is well qualified for his important position. He served with the colors during the world war.

Charles B. Hurd, Ph.D., Instructor in Chemistry, is a graduate of the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and received his doctor's degree from Clark University. He was an Instructor in Chemistry at Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and later a Fellow in Chemistry at Clark.

It is interesting to note that of the entering class of 182, Maine contributes 126, Massachusetts twenty-seven, Connecticut eight, New York eight, New Hampshire five, New Jersey four, Vermont and Pennsylvania each two. Colby's appeal is more than local, as this distribution of students shows.

During the summer the new cinder running track was completed. And just before the opening of the new year work was begun upon a new concrete grandstand which, when completed, will seat 2500 people. The donor of this gift has not been announced as yet. It is a much needed addition to the fine athletic field which bears the name of Mr. Charles F. T. Seaverns, a graduate of the college and member of the board of trustees, whose generosity has made possible the employment of an accredited physical director.

A PARK IN THE WEEK OF JULY 25, 1921

International Baptist Seminary is Dedicated

Few events have ever had more significance in Northern Baptist history than the dedication of the International Baptist Seminary in East Orange, New Jersey, on October 12, "that students may come from all parts of the world to learn here how to interpret God to those from other lands."

Scores of the denomination gathered to witness the dedication in the gracious and beautiful home purchased for the International Baptist Seminary at 64 South Munn Street, East Orange. Of all who came, not one failed to feel a stir of heart when the seventy students, all but one of them born in foreign lands, the staff of professors, also foreign-born, the fine board of Trustees, and President Frank Leonard Anderson, who needs no introduction to the denomination, pledged themselves, heart and soul, to the great task that lies before them. All who witnessed the ceremony felt that with the opening of the International Seminary a great forward step has been taken by Northern Baptists, a step that will mean much to the whole world. Each spectator reminded himself that to those doors will come disciples from every land to learn how to teach others of Christ, and that from those doors will go out messengers who will carry the glad tidings of God's love not only to the new Americans of our own country, but to men and women all over the earth.

After the opening music, and the invocation by Rev. M. J. Twomey, D.D., of the Paddy Memorial Church of Newark, Rev. Frank A. Smith, D.D., impressively presented the keys of the International Baptist Seminary to President Anderson.

"This is a day of great gladness, a day of achievement, a day of forward-looking," he said. "An institution marvelously blessed in its equipment through great generosity, is today dedicated to God, that those who study here, may go out and interpret Him to those of other lands. This is a dedication of our hearts, as well as a dedication of the International Seminary."

"I do not know how to express the feelings of my heart today," President Anderson said, in accepting the keys. "I realize that the International Seminary is to a great extent a venture, as everything significant is a venture. Under God I pledge every ounce of strength that I possess to this great task. Continue in prayer for the student body who will come here from all parts of the world, and for the faculty, and for myself, as a leader in this great enterprise."

After the Scripture reading by Rev. George Rice Hovey, D.D., secretary of Education of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, eleven Russian boys, each of whom has come from his own country during the past year to be a student at the Seminary, sang one of the Psalms in their own language. The Rev. R. B. Beattie, D. D. of the Vaughan Avenue Presbyterian Church of East Orange, welcomed the new Seminary there in the name of other denominations.

"You are sincerely and cordially welcome, in your great enterprise," he declared. "I felicitate you on this daring venture that is no longer an experiment, but a fact."

The chief address of the afternoon was made by Rev. Charles L. White, D.D., executive secretary of the American Baptist Seminary, who reviewed the enlargement of the Society, from its beginning, pointed out that the Baptists of America have always stood for spiritual liberty, and declared that vast opportunities lie before the International Seminary.

"Standing between Europe and Asia, America has the secrets of liberty which can save the nations from the perils of war, and the jealousies of peace," he said.

After the rendition of another psalm by the eleven Russian students, the inspiring prayer of dedication was offered by Rev. John F. Vichert, D.D., Dean of Colgate Theological Seminary. A song by the entire student body was followed by the benediction, which was given by Rev. Rufus Miles Traver, D.D. The exercises of the afternoon were followed by a reception.

Brown University May Limit Its Enrollment

Brown University has opened with a record-breaking attendance. The freshman class numbers 405 regular students, and the total attendance including the Women's College will pass 1500. The question of the possible limitation of numbers is now being discussed. The students and many alumni would like to limit the undergraduate men to 1000. It is felt by all that now is the time to select from all applicants only young men of high purpose and genuine ambition. The problem is to be discussed at the annual meeting of the corporation to be held on Wednesday, October 19.

The Brown Christian Association recently called on the students for $1500 for current expenses, and the amount was subscribed in twenty-four hours. Soon the association will begin a campaign for the support of a "Brown in China" in connection with Shanghai Baptist College. Prof. D. H. Kulp of that college is now returning to Shanghai after a year at Brown. The Brown students are planning to greatly enlarge the social work Prof. Kulp is doing among the factory operatives in Shanghai and to provide facilities for enlarging the college courses in Social Science. Already Brown students have subscribed $2000 for this purpose.

(Turn to page 1247)

The Chimney Corner

The Possible Impossibility.

I.

EVERY good story should, of course, introduce such earlier events in the life of its characters as lead inevitably to the situation about to be disclosed. This is a good story, because a true one; but space being at a premium it will be adequate to condense said events into these terse but pictorial words. Met. Poor. Engaged. Still Poor. Married. Poorer!

II.

With which brief introduction you are now to meet these twain, several years later, eating breakfast. It was, in fact, the morning after the evening before when they had firmly decided to try a new thing—a rather startling, dizzy thing to dream of putting in practice. The night before they had formed the resolution; but now, having slept on it, they sat staring at their plates in utter consternation, while the cheerful autumn sunbeams dappled the tablecloth. And of the two the Coffee-Pot End of the Table was the more consternated; but wild horses could not have made her admit it! Such is the essential bravery of the weaker sex.

So presently, since it really had to be broached, he ventured the remark: "I suppose you realize that the twins may suffer if we carry this thing out."

The Coffee-Pot End of the Table tightened its lips valiantly: "And they may suffer more if we don't try it! A thing that's right to do, is right to do—that's all there is to it. I dare say there are hundreds of families all over this country right now who know perfectly well that the only decent thing to do is to practice Christian stewardship, only they don't dare. I've been saying to myself that in the end our doing this may bring the twinnies more good than—music lessons, for instance."

"But $200 out of $2,000 is a bit steep," said the Bacon and Egg End of the Table, and added ingloriously: "I suppose we couldn't start in giving less than a tenth until we got used to it."

"And be meaner than the old Jews were? Not much!"

"Well, I hope we won't be sorry for this decision, dear," he said; and kissed her, as he used to kiss her in the days about which you can conjecture, before they were married.

III.

On the way home from work that evening he invested in the fattest ten-cent ledger he could buy, and after supper they mapped out a family budget, with fear and trembling, setting down a tenth conspicuously in the Lord's column. It looked like a larger amount than ever when set down in black and white—that $200! And there didn't seem to be nearly enough to put in the other five columns—Rent, Food, Clothes, Heat and Light, Miscellaneous. But from that day on every littlest item was religiously entered in that ten-cent notebook; and every smallest expenditure was a debatable problem.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

"One thing, we don't throw money right and left, any more," laughed he.

"It's like a game," she said, "I had no idea it would be actually interesting and absorbing."

So the months' skipped by as months have always skipped and the ten-cent book become so thumbed that every separate leaf curled up—I think in anticipation of the miracle about to be disclosed at the end of the year when they balanced the accounts and discovered with awe that their personal nine-tenths, carefully administered, had gone exactly as far as had the entire ten-tenth the previous year, when they aimlessly got what they wanted from week to week, and never really knew where the money went.

IV.

That it was a modern miracle they did not doubt. There are two persons in my household who will never forget that young man's face in the prayer service when he arose and told of the possible impossibility.

"It's all down in black and white!" he exclaimed, holding the shabby little ledger in his hand, "I know to a penny that we made the nine-tenths equal the ten-tenths, and we haven't skimmed ourselves, either. But we were bound we weren't going to have this side of our Christianity lop-sided, although neither of us dreamed that we would make money! As for the Lord's tenth,—well, all I can say is, we've proved that where your treasure is there will your heart be also! We wanted to follow our dollars in imagination, so we took to reading the missionary magazine. There we discovered that the salary of a Bible woman is only $20 a year. So I said: 'Let's adopt one of our own!' My wife said: 'Let's make it two, one in China and one in India?' So we did; and my wife says that while she works around the house she is painting pictures in her mind's eye of some brown-faced saint in India salaaming each day at fourteen front doors and sitting on fourteen earthen floors opening up the Word of God to a hundred souls hungry for a true religion. We've never known what true religion was, ourselves, before," he added with beautiful simplicity.

V.

Little by little, as business grew, they increased their proportion from a tenth to a fifth, for from that first possible impossibility he went on to prove the joy of John Bunyan's memorable couplet:

"A man there was, some called him mad.
The more he gave away, the more he had."

The Young Reserves

Jack-O'-Lantern Lights His Candle.

"EXTRA! All about the big fire!" yelled little Rastus Jack at the top of his voice. Every once in a while someone stopped to buy a paper, but whether he was yelling or selling Rastus Jack was thinking every minute that this was turning out to be a very disappointing birthday. Exactly like last year's. Somehow he had painted a little picture in his mind's eye of a cake with candles and presents, and maybe even a party! Of course this was perfectly absurd; but it did seem as if marvelous things could happen in the Smoky City—quite different from anything that had ever happened way down south in Dixie. What was the use of coming up north in a train if nobody knew you had come or paid any attention to you?

"Extra! All about the big fire!" he kept yelling, yet the only fire he really cared about was the fire which ought to be flickering at the ends of ten colored candles on top of an icy cake—the kind of cake that white folks had. But the passers-by saw only a shabby little negro boy with a big pile of papers under his arm. I am sure you know yourself how horrid it is to be full of wonderful thoughts while looking so very ordinary outside.

Then suddenly the Crusader Squad swung around the corner, fifteen strong, and bumped into Rastus Jack still lustily announcing the fire. Everybody picked himself up with a hearty laugh; and Jimmie Dale said to Mr. Everwise: "Oh, look, Mr. Everwise, doesn't that negro newsboy look exactly like a black Jack-o'-Lantern—see, his broad grin? And his rolling eyes?"

After Mr. Everwise had nodded his head, he surprised the squad by saying: "Boys, let's take him along to the party. How about it?"

"Sure thing!" agreed a dozen voices heartily, with a very faint growl from the boy who hadn't wanted to come from the very beginning. "Why should I go down and entertain a lot of niggers?" this boy named Percy had complained.

The class will never forget the way Mr. Everwise looked Percy up and down, up and down. As if he had been a statue. Or a monument. Or an ash-can. Or—nothing at all! It was dreadful.

"So that's the kind of a snob you are, is it?" Mr. Everwise said. "Well, boys, it's just as well we know the worst about him before we go. I had imagined that Abraham Lincoln had settled a few things in American minds about negroes. I had supposed everyone knew by this time that there are white black men and black white men. That color is only skin deep, anyway."

Which was absolutely all that was said, but the squad somehow had the impression that nobody was to say "nigger" after that, even in fun, or act as if he himself were white. Evidently color had to be proved! Indeed some of them were a little alarmed when Jimmie Dale ventured to say that the newsy looked like a black Jack-o'-Lantern. He did, of course. Terribly so. But until Mr. Everwise agreed they were rather uneasy.

Rastus Jack was overcome with the invitation: "I reckon you-all has asked the right kid," he grinned; "but 'pears like I ain't neber gwine ter sell these here papers, mister. It's a powerful big fire, but folks is paying mighty little 'tention to it. Just you point me the way, and I allow I'll be along lickety-split when I'm done sold out."

Down in his heart Mr. Everwise wanted to buy all the newspapers himself, but he saw in a flash it would look too patronizing. In another flash he saw the very thing to do: "All right, Rastus Jack," he said, "you come along as fast as you can. We'll leave Percy behind with you, to help sell the papers, and to show you the way to the party."

Poor Percy seemed to turn a sickly green and was about to protest against such an arrangement when Mr. Everwise hurriedly continued: "I am sure you're delighted to stay here, Percy, since you weren't very keen about the party, anyhow."

So the Squad moved on, leaving Rastus Jack and Percy on the curb.

"This is a nice way for me to be spending my Hallowe'en," mumbled Percy, glumly.

"Jest what I was saying when you-all happened by," sympathized Rastus Jack. "'Pears like I nebber been so powerful lonely, and now here's a lot of brand new friends and a while folk's party. You see, it's my birthday—oh, say, mister, buy a paper off me, all about the big fire."

Three men bought papers, a young lady too. Indeed business was suddenly so brisk that Rastus Jack thrust half his papers under Percy's unwilling arm.

"Here!" he shouted, "you sell them up near the store, I'se gwine ter sell them nearer the curb."

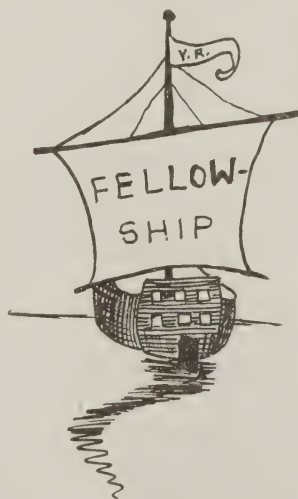

Percy had never sold anything in his whole life, but there was no chance to refuse for people began buying of him, and he actually sold all of twenty cents' worth. Really, it was good fun, so that when he was sold out and Rastus Jack was sold out they walked along counting their money in the most business-like way. At least Percy was business-like. Rastus seemed poor at figures.

"I reckon you been ter school a whole heap," the negro boy said enviously, "down south in Dixie I never done much book-learning, and I only been up north a year."

"Do you like it?" Percy asked.

"'Pears like I'se always jest gwine ter like it when Ole Man Trouble comes trawling round the corner. First my pappy he went to Hebben, and my mammy she can't be happy no more. Then the little piccanninies is a pack of trouble—scart of the snow in winter, sick with whooping-cough

A cablegram from Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, European Baptist Commissioner, strongly recommends that a part of the supplies which will be sent by Northern Baptists in the movement to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" be designated for distribution in Russia. Our people everywhere would be delighted at knowing that a part of their large shipment had been designated to the suffering people in Russia.

I saw a ship a-sailing
From Young Reserves one day.
And, oh! it was all laden
With clothes for boys, they say.

There were girls' clothes in the cabin,
And layettes in the hold,
And soap and socks and mittens,
And playthings, new and old!

in summer. But sometime I'm aiming ter like the Smoky City real well—say, you Percy!—Look out there!—Lay low—oh!"

Before anyone knew quite what happened a crowd had gathered, and Percy was explaining rapidly: "Yes, he ran out and pushed me back, but he couldn't get back to the curb himself before the auto hit him. He—he— isn't killed, is he?"

"No!" said the ambulance doctor promptly, "it may not even be a break, although his leg is badly hurt. If you're his friend perhaps you'd like to ride along to the hospital with him. Hop in!"

So Percy hopped. But while he did it he wondered what his mother would think. Or Mr. Everwise. Or the Squad.

At the hospital he telephone to his father to explain that if Rastus Jack had not pushed him aside he, too, would have been badly smashed up; so on account of Percy's father's gratitude, Rastus Jack found himself lying in a stylish little room by himself. His leg was not broken, but badly dislocated and bruised, as the Squad learned later that evening when they called at the hospital to inquire. Percy met them in the waiting-room with shining eyes: "I tell you what, fellows, that little nigger is white all the way through."

Mr. Everwise thumped him on the back: "Good for you, Percy, and now suppose you cut the word 'nigger' from your dictionary altogether. For Rastus Jack's a boy, color doesn't matter, but spirit does. Perhaps you'll remember we had a lesson about that two weeks ago—'The spirit of man is the candle of the Lord.' To my mind, Rastus Jack has lighted his candle!"

Percy grinned. "Say, that's truer than you know," he laughed, "for this is Rastus Jack's birthday I sort of wish we could, have lighted some real candles for him."

Jimmie Dale grew excited: "What's the matter with lighting a Jack-o'-lantern and let it burn in his room. He couldn't manage a cake tonight, anyhow."

So all night long the little yellow Jack-o'-Lantern grinned cheerfully at the little black Jack-o'-Lantern. Sunday afternoon Mr. Everwise came to call and explained about the Negro Community Center where his class had had charge of the Hallowe'en party the day before. It seemed it was a place where Rastus Jack could go to play, where the piccanninies could stay all day while "mammy" worked.

Rastus Jack beamed as he listened: "'Pears like I always knowed there was something waiting round some corner for a little darky like me, but I nebber rightly knowed which corner till Percy come along. Say, he's a friend for you, Mr. Everwise. See that there cake with ten candles—well, sir, his mammy done brung it to me with her own lily white hands. And see them books? Well, Percy's gwine ter learn me lessons; and Percy's pappy allows I'm gwine ter school or he'll know the reason why not! I'm powerful glad I busted my leg a little."

You can see for yourself that the little key this time was comradeship.

Our Own Folks

Wisconsin State Convention.

By ROBERT W. SHAW

The Wisconsin Convention met in Beloit October 10-13. It was the seventy-seventh anniversary of the organizing of the work in Wisconsin. The convention had met with the church at Beloit in 1898, and so twenty-three years had passed before it returned.

The Place

Beloit is one of our little cities near the Illinois line. At one time it was in Illinois, but new surveys put it back where it belonged. It is a city of beautiful homes, many churches, and excellent schools. Besides the many industrial institutions Beloit boasts of being the home of Beloit College, a large Congregational college. The Baptist church is strategically located down town, and has an excellent property, though a new church building is needed badly. The pastor, Dr. I. E. Bill, and his good people took excellent care of the visitors and sent them away with a desire to come back again soon.

The program opened Monday night with the Ministers' Union. And it ended Thursday night with a world view of the missionary endeavor. The State Convention program proper had for its slogan, "A New America For a New World." All phases of the work were considered though home missions was stressed. One of the outstanding features of this convention was the rural work session on Wednesday afternoon. Rev. W. W. Diehl of Michigan was present and stirred our hearts with a great message on this important work.

The Speakers

The invited guests were Dr. J. J. Ross, of Chicago, Dr. R. G. Baker, of Chicago, Dr. T. G. Soares, of Chicago, Dr. L. C. Barnes, of the Home Mission Society, and S. R. Vinton of the General Board of Promotion. For the women Miss Nellie G. Prescott was present from Woman's Home Mission Society. Dr. T. S. Youngs of the Publication Society presented the educational work.

Dr. Ross gave two addresses. One was on the "Inspiration of the Scriptures," and the other was on the "Second Coming of Our Lord." Dr. Ross, by his reverent and consecrated approach to these important questions practically set the pace for the convention, and created a great spirit which kept up throughout all the sessions. Dr. Baker's address was on the missionary side of the peace question. Dr. Barnes gave five addresses on the Americanization of the various groups of people within our borders. Dr. Soares spoke to the Brotherhood on "The Human Problem," which was the problem of learning to live together and work out our mutual problems. S. R. Vinton took us over the world and showed us how little had been done in the way of evangelization. Miss Prescott tried to tell us what the boards did with our money. Dr. T. S. Youngs inspired us with the opportunities of the Church Vacation School, and Week Day Religious Education.

Disarmament

This was the way Dr. L. C. Barnes characterized an important matter which came before the convention. The story of it has already been told in last week's BAPTIST. It was a fine getting together without compromise of the groups which had not been able to see eye to eye for several years. On the one side had been the question of doctrinal position, on the other that of denominational co-operation. It was a splendid demonstration of the fact that Baptists can get together, and trust each other as brothers. And that unanimity which expressed itself so well at Beloit will characterize Wisconsin Baptists in the future. Something like this can happen in every state in the Northern Baptist territory, and in the Northern Baptist Convention whenever Baptists desire it. Not to whip the other fellow, but to understand his position and help him to understand yours, and then get together on a common platform is a demonstration of the real spirit of real Baptists.

The New Leader

Dr. A. LeGrand, the new leader of Wisconsin Baptists, was much in evidence, and his attitude toward the work and the workers inspired the greatest confidence. "If the unbrotherly spirit is in Wisconsin, it will not be my fault," he said several times. And there is no doubt that the lad who grew up in Wisconsin, and who has now come back to lead our work was chosen under the leadership of God. Dr. D. W. Hulburt was there. He is happy in the new work of Pastor at Large, and has the confidence of his brethren in the working out of the many problems in the local fields.

This is the fifth convention which the writer has attended in Wisconsin and it was the best. The spirit was fine. The addresses were above the average. The actions taken were progressive. The men elected to office will be on their jobs. The determination to do the full share of Wisconsin's responsibility in money and souls was expressed on every hand. Mr. E. J. Steinburg, one of our fine young laymen was elected president for the third time.

Next year the convention will meet with the First Church of Oshkosh.

South Dakota State Convention.

By ROGER J. LLOYD

Our convention met this year in the capital city of the state, at Pierre, Oct. 5-9. Pierre nestles among the hills on the east bank of the Missouri River, where bathed in sunshine and steeped in historical riches, the setting was complete for our fortieth anniversary meeting.

We were fearful for a time that our beloved secretary, Dr. S. P. Shaw would be unable to attend the convention owing to a recent and severe illness, but under the watch-care of Mrs. Shaw he was able to attend although confined to his room the major part of the time. We are happy to report him at the present time as well on the road to recovery.

President John Sutherland of Pierre presided over the sessions, and did it so well that he was re-elected for another year.

The report of the board of managers was full of optimism and presages a successful year ahead of us. The missionary pastors of this state are doing a wonderful piece of work: many of them laboring in the out-of-the-way places of the state and under extreme difficulties. Western South Dakota is still in the frontier stage of development, and calls for men of consecration and endurance to man its fields.

The annual sermon by Rev. A. P. Waltz was full of optimism and argument for the continued development of our denomination.

Dr. Emery W. Hunt, president of Bucknell University was our convention pastor; and under his benign influence and masterly sermons, our hearts were warmed and encouraged. When a man has spent the year entirely isolated from his ministerial brethren, he looks forward with considerable anticipation to the state convention meeting with its fellowship and opportunity to talk over his problems with some one who will understand. Come again, Dr. Hunt!

Miss Nellie Prescott, representing the women's work, made a place for herself at once among the convention folk. Her far-reaching grasp of the world situation was at once apparent, for, as she "sits over against the mail bag" at the headquarters rooms, her own heart becomes as it were the clearing house for the triumphs and appeals from the missionaries in the ten different countries in which our women carry on work.

Miss Elsie Kappen is in our state for three months in the interests of missionary education and has demonstrated by her quiet unassuming ways that she is our kind of folks.

Miss Evelyn Camp, home on furlough, carries a message of interest to the women and girls.

A Real Tenderfoot

The real "tenderfoot" in the convention was Dr. C. A. Brooks who had the temerity to confess that he had never been in the state before, but was willing to become a native after several days of our sunshine and good fellowship. Dr. Brooks' address on "The Consequences of the Peace" was declared by all to be the high point of the convention.

Last, but not least, among the folk who visited our convention was the editor of the famous "Killam's Kollum." It may be undignified and it may savor of the superficiality of the times, but Killam says it gets subs for THE BAPTIST, which is the one thing needful. There is certainly no reason for the other editors of THE BAPTIST getting so uppity about it. So there.

With a splendid group of new workers linked up with our seasoned troops South Dakota will forge ahead this coming year. Watch us grow!

Huron, S. D.

Detroit Doings.

BY ALBERT H. FINN

The Council of Churches held an inter-denominational Conference on Evangelism at the First Baptist Church on Thursday, Sept. 22nd, when Dr. Goodell and other denominational Secretaries, including our own Dr. H. F. Stillwell, were the speakers. It was well attended, especially by our Baptist ministers and laymen. On Monday, October 24, our Baptist Conference on Soulwinning will be held in the Temple Baptist Church with an engaging list of speakers, including Dr. S. G. Nell, of Philadelphia. General Director Hudson, of the Michigan Baptist Convention and Evangelist Stough, who opens a series of meetings at the First Church on October 16. Thus the evangelistic note is ever kept to the fore in Detroit.

Dr. and Mrs. Carter's Great School

The new house of worship for the new Jefferson Avenue Baptist church was fully occupied on September 25 when the Bible School numbered 467. Mrs. C. M. Carter has been acting as superintendent. Dr. and Mrs. Carter have wrought wonders since the amalgamation June 5. They expect to spend the winter in southern California where he will endeavor to regain his old time strength and vigor. A delightful farewell was given Dr. and Mrs. Carter at the Jefferson church, Thursday evening, September 29. They have done a fine piece of work. Dr. H. C. Gleiss is now directing the work.

At Beulah Baptist Church, on Friday evening, October 14, will be held the fall get-together of Detroit Baptists under the auspices of the Detroit Baptist Forum. It will be Baptist Bible School night with Rev. A. V. Allen, Mrs. West and Dr. W. Edward Rafferty as star attractions. Dr. Rafferty will speak on "The Church that Makes Good in Religious Education." Detroit Baptist churches have made a distinct advance along religious educational lines since Rev. A. V. Allen has been with us.

The Detroit Baptist Union has done a remarkable work among the Negro Baptists. Eight congregations have been adequately housed within the year and now a Negro Christian Center is to be opened this month on Russell Street, in the center of the congested Negro population down town. The ladies of our white Baptist churches are furnishing the building and even the civic authorities are earnestly co-operating. Dr. and Mrs. Moore of the American Baptist Home Mission Society are to be present at the dedication.

The Temple Baptist Church was dedicated Sunday, October 2, with an addendum lasting through the week. Temple Church is a consolidation of the Grand River and Fourteenth Avenue churches, the property of the Fourteenth Avenue Church having been extensively overhauled and improved. A pipe organ added, new heating and ventilating systems and other improvements added, all under the leadership of Rev. Llewellyn Brown, pastor of the Grand River Avenue Church. The Temple Church is located something over a mile north of the Grand River Avenue Church in a splendid residential district. It is expected to build later a church house, educational and social center adjoining the present building. Rev. J. G. Brown, D. D., of Toronto, Ont., brother of the pastor, was the dedicatory preacher Sunday. Monday was

Sunday school night; Tuesday, Young People's night; Wednesday, church night with Director Grant M. Hudson, of the Michigan Baptist Convention as speaker; Thursday, denominational night with Dr. Sumner R. Vinton, of New York, as speaker for the City B. Y. P. U.; Friday, as community night with Dr. Jones of the Central Christian Church as speaker. The Temple church has a membership of 1,200, and a Sunday school enrollment of 1,500. The property is valued at $150,000. We are looking for great results from this union.

Thursday evening, September 29, the pastors and especially selected delegates from the various city churches dined with Director Hudson at the Warren Avenue Baptist Church and listened to his stirring appeal for the New World Movement. Facts and figures of a very searching character were given that sent every one home with a new consecration to the great task before us as Baptists. It is believed that the next sixty days will show a large increase in Michigan contributions to our General Promotion Board.

Royal Oak is one of the most aggressive of the several choice suburbs of Detroit. The Baptists have been on the map there for over 75 years, but with new will and vision since Rev. Geo. E. Dawkins came to this wonderful field. The crying need has been a worthy and adequate building. These trying times are not conducive to church building but further delay could not be thought of. The American Baptist Home Mission Society, the Detroit Baptist Union are both alive to the need and are co-operating with the church. Plans have been adopted and work begun which will speedily bring to this fine congregation at least a part of the housing it so much needs.

Negro Church of 3,000 Members

The old Second Church, organized in 1876, was the first Negro Baptist Church in Michigan and has ever since maintained its premier position. Here is a people who love to go to church. It required three services a day to accommodate them. This week they are celebrating the eleventh anniversary of the coming of their pastor, Rev. R. L. Bradby, a truly remarkable man of God and a great preacher. In addition to his large duties as pastor of a church with 3,000 members he is superintending the work among the more than 30 Negro Baptist churches of this city, under direction of the Detroit Baptist Union.

Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Rev. John Wellington Hoag, D.D., pastor, had a great rally day October 2, with a distinctive missionary flavor to it all. Mr. and Mrs. Merrill Raymond were dedicated to missionary work in Burma and were the special guests of the church and their great Bible school. It is estimated there were 1,500 in attendance at the Sunday School services. Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, of London, England, occupied the pulpit in the evening. This great down-town church is doing a wonderful work in this difficult field.

Judging from the reports that came in from the churches the work has opened most auspiciously all along the line. The Bible schools are more largely attended and each church has a real aggressive program. Springwells Avenue Church has called Rev. Geo. E. Barnard and he is already upon the field. Birkett Memorial had a happy home coming week—that of September 25. A new mission school has been opened on the Nine Mile Road and John R. Street, principally manned by the Highland Park Church.

Dr. H. C. Gleiss, Superintendent of the Detroit Baptist Union, is almost omnipresent among the seventy-five churches and missions of the Detroit area. He also gives generously of his time to the work of the Michigan Baptist Convention of which he is one of the vice presidents in church of the department of city evangelism. Muskegon is enjoying his inspiring presence this week. He is also an important factor in the larger work of the denomination. He has the confidence and respect of our business laymen which, in a large measure explains the remarkable accomplishments of the Detroit Baptist Union, even during these trying times.

Boston Letter.

BY CHARLES H. WATSON

Men and Things at Newton

In such a perfect October as this, it is not easy for men to be as brilliant as "things" are at Newton. The glories of the landscape from the vantage of the "old hill" are this year equal to any within the longest recollection. It would have to be a wonderfully timely address that would be up to the level of the timely things making up such a landscape. The golden leaves on the hillsides, the rich tints of bronze and green in the valleys, the majestic gothic towers in the distance—all these are timely in the setting of mid-October, and so are the fringes of the Great City nearby, that speak of the outlying world to which the Seminary is closely bound.

In his fine opening address Professor Donovan's was the scholar's voice. Some teachers are learned yet not accurate; others are well informed yet not always exact; still others are more inspiring than authoritative. A subject as timely as the landscape Dr. Donovan found perfectly simple in itself, yet made complex by the differences in our own theological day. His theme was "The Interpretation of Scripture," and he handled it with the broad-minded exactness of the true scholar.

Dr. Donovan began with a historical view of two extreme methods to be avoided. He called attention to the simplicity and directness of Jesus, and urged Him as the students' model, rather than any scheme of human ingenuity. He went fully into the characteristics of Jesus in his use of the Old Testament; and he found that the New Testament writers in directness, spirituality, practicality, and freedom, fell below the Master. The church went far astray in mystical allegorizing, the Jews reacting to a literalism which became quite as fanciful. The great reformers sought to let Scripture speak for itself, though their theory exceeded their practice. Dr. Donovan's appeal was, that we follow Christ in his reverence for Scripture, and in straightforward practical use of it. Evidently the speaker was recalling the long historical background for some of the questions in interpretation that are vexing us in the present day. He seemed to raise the question whether perfection is not one of the great objects of education. It was a timely and illuminating address, and was given in clear, outspoken fashion.

The week following came the announced lectures on the Stephen Greene Foundation by Sir William Ramsay of Aberdeen University. Certainly as an interpreter of Scripture he is one of the lions of the forest. His bulky, learned books are on our shelves, and he was a man to see. The unusually large assembly in the Baptist Church thought so, even if but a few of them were able to hear him. The next morning the Seminary Chapel was full, and some got a part of Sir Williams' voice, and a good view of his fine face.

He was not lecturing, merely talking out of his fullness in the desultory manner of the class-room. We were thinking of the marvellous enrichment of his mind, of its amazing out-put in his authoritative books, rather than of what he was saying, for it was difficult to hear it, and Sir William is not an easy talker. But it was delightful to enjoy his fine face, the glow of his personality, and to think of the shining record that he has made, and of the immense store house of Bible knowledge behind the comparatively little that we were getting.

Great is the art of the spoken word! British scholars and lecturers seem almost to despise it. They dig deep and put much into books, but outspoken and finished utterance is rare among them. Matthew Arnold's constant wonder when in America was, that the average American could talk so well "on his feet."

A Memorial at Melrose

At the First Church, Melrose, they have been dedicating a beautiful window "To the Glory of God and in Loving Memory of Charles Copeland Barry and Ernest Leighton Carr"—two of our noblest laymen. In the general fraternity of the churches, Mr. Barry was the better known, for he, like Stephen Greene, was one of our strong and willing burden bearers. It was befitting that the theme of the memorial should be "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Against a rich, blue background, emblematic of heaven and truth stands the Savior clothed in white robes. His gracious invitation speaks in His attitude: responding to it, are two flanking figures with faces turned towards Him, radiant with a hope that drowns sorrow and weariness. Mr. Carr was a younger yoke-fellow in the church with Mr. Barry, of like temper and devotedness. How true that they rest from their labors and their works do follow them! The artistic memorial was the gift of Mr. Thomas D. Lockwood, and the design of it was made to harmonize with a previous commemorative window which he had given to his church in 1915.

The State Convention

By the time this letter is in print we shall be in the midst of our state meetings in Worcester. There is a double anticipation of the gathering this year: the comprehensive timeliness of the program, and something that has been gathering in the air for a few months that presages some rather heroic readjustments. Preparatory attempts have been made, as if to outline what the new arrangements are to be, but the outline has not been definite and clear. We shall see what we shall see. Very happily, whatever differences we shall discuss, they will not be doctrinal, but rather the varying opinions of earnest Christian brethren with regard to the wisest plan for developing and pushing the great work of the Lord committed to us. When there is absolutely no suspicion or bitterness among us, but a deep unity of spirit and bond of peace, discussion or difference is merely the effort of consecrated workers to find the Master, themselves, and their work. That describes our present situation.

Something in Lynn

They make something besides ladies' shoes in the big city of Lynn. The churches and ministers and Christian workers keep busy. It is a city of large congregations and full Sunday Schools. At present it is to be the city of a large four-year-old "School of Religious Education." It commences October 1 and closes with the last of March, and is a high grade evening school under a faculty of seven competent experts. Among them is Dr. Arthur E. Harriman, the veteran pastor of the East Church, who is the instructor in the Life of Christ in the community school. The course covers the field, and handles all the materials of intelligent Biblical instruction and Christian work, and the enrolled students pay four dollars a piece to learn how to do it, and win their diplomas. The Lynn leaders remind us of Luther's words, "If Satan's Kingdom get a blow that will bite to the quick, it must come from young people brought up on God's word, and teaching it to others."

Daughter of Zion, Awake!

Missionaries' salaries must be paid month by month. Churches and schools must be kept in operation. All obligations to which the participating organizations of the New World Movement have committed themselves must be met. In view of the fact that the income for the first five months of this fiscal year was not up to normal, there was only one way left by which to meet these monthly needs. Large sums of money have been borrowed. This means the accumulation of large interest charges.

Necessities of the moment are so great that prompt payment of pledges on the part of individuals and churches is imperative. Church treasurers having New World Movement funds on hand should remit to the state collecting agent in full the first of each month.

The total sum which the Convention voted ought to be raised this fiscal year for the work of all the missionary and educational organizations participating in the New World Movement, is $20,000,000.

Of this total budget the various organizations were authorized to gauge their expenditures on the basis of an income of $12,500,000 with the provision that sums beyond this respective share of each organization of this amount should only be expended as the funds are raised.

The $12,500,000 provides only for the work of the denomination on a severely conservative basis. This total is within the amount which the actual subscriptions to the New World Movement, if fully and promptly paid, would produce during the year. The last few months have been a period when the church income both for local expenses and for world needs, has not been as great as during the rest of the year. The financial situation has made the income even less than under normal conditions.

Members of our churches are deeply interested in all the work being carried on by the New World Movement. All desire to have this work pushed vigorously, as they have abundantly proved by their pledges and gifts.

Surely this is a time when we should bring "all the tithes into the storehouse" and match with sacrificial giving the sacrificial living of those who represent us so faithfully in the posts of difficulty and responsibility in all our missionary and educational work.

In view of the foregoing facts, we earnestly request pastors and members of all our churches, as well as our church treasurers, to see that at least one-half of the amount due on pledges for the current fiscal year is paid in full by January 1, 1922.

Signed:

HENRY BOND, Chairman, The General Board of Promotion.

J. Y. ATTCHISON, General Director, The General Board of Promotion.

HUGH A. HEATH, Executive Secretary, Department of Conventions and Conferences.

H. R. GREAVES, Business Manager, The General Board of Promotion.

GEORGE B. HUNTINGTON, Treasurer, American Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

MISS NELLIE G. PRESCOTT, Foreign Secretary, Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society.

CHARLES L. WHITE, Executive Secretary, American Baptist Home Mission Society.

MRS. KATHERINE S. WESTFALL, Executive Secretary, Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society.

GILBERT N. BRINK, Corresponding Secretary, American Baptist Publication Society.

GEORGE R. BAKER, Associate Secretary, Board of Education.

E. T. TOMLINSON, Executive Secretary, Ministers' & Missionaries' Benefit Board.

I. B. BOWER, Representing State Conventions.

C. H. SEARS, Representing City Missions.

Challenge American Tract Society.

A Statement by the Literature Committee on Co-operation in Latin America

For the years 1920 and 1921 the American Tract Society published a volume of Notes on the Sunday School Lessons in the Spanish language, edited under the direction of this Committee. In February of 1921 the Secretaries of the Tract Society agreed to issue a similar volume for 1922. Accordingly the editors of this committee were instructed to go forward with its preparation.

Early in June, the date agreed upon, the completed manuscript was delivered to the Tract Society. In a few days it was sent back, apparently without having been opened, and with a memorandum that explanations would follow.

On June 23, without supplying any such explanations, and without having consulted with this committee or its editors, the American Tract Society issued and distributed widely a circular letter. This letter, referring to the volumes for 1920 and 1921 affirms unqualifiedly that they "contain teachings contrary to the accepted standards of evangelical Christian belief"; that the society "has been grievously misled and deceived in this matter"; that it "denounces the aforesaid teachings," and "has ceased the publication and distribution of said Notes."

The writers of the letter exculpate this Committee on Literature since they "do not believe that any of the members of the Committee on Christian Literature for Latin America can have any more knowledge of the teachings herein referred to than had the American Tract Society."

Concerning this letter and the issues which it raises we wish to say:

1. We hold that the American Tract

Society violated a definite agreement in refusing to publish the Notes for 1922. The various objections and criticisms of the other volumes had been brought to its attention prior to February, 1921, and the question was then definitely raised whether in view of them, the Society wished to go forward. Its reply was in the affirmative.

2. The charges which the Society now makes against the volumes for 1920 and 1921 are unfounded. The writers of the circular letter do not cite any passages from the volumes to substantiate them. They do not even profess to have read those volumes.

3. We have not been in ignorance of the contents of those Notes, nor unaware that in some quarters objections had been made to them. A considerable part of those objections were transmitted to the Society through our offices. They came almost wholly from representatives of mission boards not connected with the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America, and in many cases known to be antagonistic to this Committee. Their authors appear to be extreme literalists in their view of the Scriptures. Nevertheless the authors of the Notes, our Editorial Secretary, Dr. G. B. Winton, and his assistant, Dr. Orts, at our suggestion took special pains in preparing the volume for 1922 to avoid, if possible, any forms of statement that would be objectionable even to literalists of the most pronounced type.

4. Over against the criticisms of the Notes by a few scattered workers, indorsed however by the Tract Society, we place the practically unanimous testimony of the missionaries of the thirty boards and societies connected with the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America, constituting an overwhelming majority of the Evangelical workers of Latin America. From these have come not adverse criticisms of the books but, in so far as they have been heard from, a universal note of commendation, and of rejoicing that help of that kind for Sunday School workers has at last been made available in the Spanish language. The workers in Brazil are begging that the volumes be issued also in Portuguese. It is incredible on the face of it that had these Notes put forward un-Christian and harmful teachings, no one of these approximately one thousand intelligent and devout Christian workers, or of their equally consecrated native associates, should have discovered it and entered protest.

5. It is the feeling of this Committee, moreover, that in the details of Scripture interpretation, not involving fundamental Christian principles, no small degree of liberty should be allowed. It should be possible for different students to take divergent views of the same Scripture without either charging the other with being disloyal to the truth. "Where the Spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty," and liberty of conscience and of opinion is a heritage too precious to be lightly disregarded.

6. In view of the unquestioned need for Sunday School helps in the Spanish language, and of the general approval given by our workers to the previous volumes, and since the Tract Society declines to go on, this Committee proposed to arrange elsewhere for the publication of the Notes for 1922. Because of the charges made, however, and at the suggestion of the Executive Committee, three members of this Committee have examined the completed manuscript. This Committee, consisting of Messrs. Harry Farmer, Secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, C. S. Detweiler, Secretary of the American Baptist Home Mission Society, Geo. I. Babcock, Secretary of the International Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association, all former missionaries in Spanish-speaking countries, have unanimously recommended that the volume be published. This will be done at once, acting on the purpose of this Committee to do all within its power to serve the missionary forces of Latin America by providing them with helpful Christian literature.

THE LITERATURE COMMITTEE of the Committee on Co-operation in Latin America.
By Harry Farmer, Chairman, and
S. G. Inman, Secretary.
August 24, 1921.
25 Madison Avenue, New York City.

With Our Baptist Colleges

(Continued from page 1241)

pose. Prof. J. Q. Dealey, who has just returned from teaching in the Shanghai College, also delivered eighty-two public addresses in Eastern China, and has returned full of faith in China's future. Brown University will open in November a Community School of Religious Education, conducted with the aid of the R. I. S. S. Association. The Director is Marion E. Bratcher, Ph.D., associate pastor of Calvary Baptist Church and Lecturer in Biblical Literature at Brown. It is expected that 300 teachers from Providence churches will be enrolled in these courses.

Kalamazoo College

Kalamazoo College opened its collegiate year September 21 with the largest enrollment of its history. There are one hundred and fifty-two new students and a total enrollment of three hundred and fifty-three students.

There are two replacements on the faculty, Leonard James Ashby becoming the Assistant Professor of Physics and Paul E. Brees, Assistant Professor of Public Speaking and Debate. The constant growth of the student enrollment in the past few years has necessitated a number of additions to the faculty: Miss Agnes B. Powell becomes Dean of Women and Assistant Professor of English; Thomas O. Walton, Assistant Professor of Mathematics; A. A. Hovey, Assistant Professor of Political Science; Alfred Tonness, Instructor in Philosophy; Helen E. Loth, Instructor in Spanish and Latin; Mrs. Linsey R. Goss, Instructor in English.

There have been formed in the college two gospel teams, five young men in each team, and two mission teams, one consisting of three young women and the other of three young men. A very full and comprehensive program of activities for week-end and Sunday services will be given by these teams as they visit churches throughout the state. All four teams have engagements to go out to that many different churches within the next few weeks and other churches have written in for the services of these young people. We believe that these Christian young men and young women will be a great blessing to the churches visited, that they will be able to carry the splendid Christian influence of the college to the young men and young women throughout the state and the very fact that so many young men and young women are rendering this form of distinctive Christian service will strengthen the already fine, Christian, and missionary spirit in the college.

There were thirteen student volunteers in the college last year. Several of these were in the graduating class. Already a number of young men and young women have joined the student volunteer band of the college which now numbers seventeen.

Church News by States

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

DEXTER has just witnessed the greatest revival that it has ever seen. Dr. Franklin Swift of Rochelle, Ill., has just closed a series of meetings, the Baptist, Congregational, Free Baptist and Methodist churches uniting in this campaign. Seventy decided for Christ the first night—17 in all during the campaign. Dr. Swift goes from here to Middleport, Ohio.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

New Hampshire Convention

The ninety-fifth annual meeting of the New Hampshire Baptist Convention was held with the Merrimack St. and Peoples' Baptist churches in Manchester, October 4 and 5. The attendance was the largest for several years. Few pastors were absent. The program was pronounced by many as the best ever. The outstanding features of the program were the splendid spirit shown, the presence of Dr. Heath of the General Board of Promotion. Dr. Agar who held three Conferences with the full Convention present, and two addresses by Dr. Neil of the Publication Society. The annual sermon before the Convention was preached by Rev. W. C. Myers of the First Church Concord. His theme was "Giving Christ the Right of Way." There was nothing given by any of the speakers on the program that could have suffered omission. The following officers of the Convention were elected, President, Hon. C. M. Collins, 1st Vice President, R. C. Goodell, 2nd Vice President, Rev. John Manter, General Secretary, Rev. D. S. Jenks, Treasurer, L. E. Staples. Previous to the meeting of the Convention there was a half day session of the Ministers' Conference with a banquet the evening before with Dr. Heath as speaker. Rev. E. C. Goodwin was elected president and Rev. W. W. Harris secretary of the Ministers' Conference for the ensuing year.

VERMONT

ADDISON ASSOCIATION met with the Addison Church, Rev. B. H. Curtis pastor, Oct. 5. The devotional services were conducted by Revs. C. P. Smith, H. L. Howard, J. J. Fowler. Dr. W. A. Davison spoke on "The Hope and the Outlook," outlining a practical program for the coming year. The subject of "Steward ship" was presented by Dr. J. E. Norcross of New York City. Miss Isabelle Crawford told of "Baptist Work Among the American Indians." The evening service consisted of a lecture by Rev. J. F. Ingram on "Pioneering Among the Wild Kachins of Northeast Burma." The officers elected were: Moderator, Rev. H. L. Howard; secretary-treasurer, Rev. B. H. Eddy.

Vermont Central Baptist Association

The one hundred and fourteenth annual session of the Vermont Central Baptist Association was held at the First Church of Randolph, Rev. Dr. F. S. Tolman pastor, on Thursday, October 6. Dr. Tolman was elected moderator, and Rev. C. D. Piper of Montpelier clerk and treasurer. The annual sermon "The Abundance of Grace" (Rom. 5:17) was delivered by Mr. Piper, and was one of fitting power and appeal for the occasion. Rev. Dr. W. A. Davison, secretary of the Vermont Baptist State Convention, spoke on "The Hope and the Outlook." This address was characterized by great earnestness, hopefulness, and statesmanship. Dr. Davison is a mighty man of God, and is the right man in the right place. Miss Orton made an unusual, striking appeal on behalf of the reading campaign in the state. In the afternoon Dr. James E. Norcross of New York addressed a large audience on "Stewardship." His discourse was one of fine thought, eloquence and challenge. "Baptist Work Among the American Indians" was the subject treated by Miss Isabelle Crawford of New York. Miss Crawford stirred the hearts of her hearers to their depths, and made an impression that will last for many days. Rev. J. F. Ingram, returned missionary from Burma, closed the splendid, uplifting program of the day with an illustrated lecture on "Pioneering Among the Wild Kachins of Northeastern Burma." This came in the evening, and was full of interest, humor, pathos, power and entreaty.

Danville Association

The twelfth annual meeting of the Danville Association was held in the Main Street Church of Newport, Tuesday, Oct. 4. Rev. H. B. Rankin of the First Church of Newport was reelected moderator, and Rev. J. H. Blackburn of the Main Street Church elected clerk and treasurer. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. I. M. Thompson of Hardwick.

Letters were received from all the churches, and all save one were represented by delegates. Only one church is pastorless. Three new pastors—Rev. R. G. Greengrass of West Charleston, Rev. L. E. Hall of Sheffield, and Rev. Kenneth MacLeod of Sutton—were welcomed by the moderator.

Our state superintendent, Rev. W. A. Davison, D.D., outlined the work which he hoped to see accomplished in the state during the year, emphasizing especially the raising and collecting of our part of the $100,000,000 fund, the winning of 1000 converts during the winter, and the filling of empty pews. He presented a plan that had been worked out by the secretaries of the Baptist, Congregational and Methodist bodies of the state for the effecting of the last-mentioned task. In conference, it was unanimously voted to accept this plan, and to conduct a canvass for church attendance Oct. 23. The association also voted to accept its share of the new members to be won which was 200. Later, the pastors and other leaders in the churches, divided this number among the churches, each church assuming its quota. Ralph H. Rogers, a member of the Barre Church, and a teacher for two years in Syria, is to assist the churches in raising their apportionments for the New World Movement.

The Northern Baptist Convention was represented by Dr. James E. Norcross, who spoke on "Stewardship." Miss Isabelle Crawford brought to us the story of her work among the North American Indians. In concluding her address she gave us the Indian interpretation and presentation of the 23rd Psalm. The women in conference, under the leadership of Miss Ada Brigham and Mrs. John A. Greenwood, laid plans for materially aiding in meeting Vermont's quota in the New World Movement. The association closed with an address given by Rev. J. F. Ingram, who spoke, aided by the stereopticon, on "Pioneering Among the Wild Kachins of Northeastern Burma."

The state convention, through Miss Orton, educational secretary, had an attractive exhibit of literature. Devotional services were conducted by Revs. Greengrass and Woodworth. The association meets next year with the Union Church of St. Johnsbury.

RHODE ISLAND

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 2 was Rally Day for the French people at the Cranston St. Roger Williams Chapel. About one hundred gathered from Providence and vicinity. The Rev. Horace H. Hayes, pastor of the church, and Deacon Chas. Stark took part in the service. Mr. Sylvani Dayon of Central Falls spoke and missionary Rev. Auguste Devos preached. The service was a pronounced success.

PASTOR CHRISTOPHER of the Second Church, Newport, is preaching a series of dramatic book sermons, considering "Seven Lamps of Architecture," "Tito in Romolo," "The Scarlet Letter," "Les Miserables." Each meeting closes with a musical service, and each sermon enforces a spiritual lesson.

AT THE PHILLIPS MEMORIAL CHURCH, Pastor Vye is preaching a series of doctrinal sermons Sunday evenings.

THE ANNUAL RALLY AND BANQUET of World Wide Guilds of Rhode Island will be held at the Union Church, Providence, Saturday, October 22. Miss Alma Noble the Executive Secretary of the Guild is expected to be present. Mrs. Leslie E. Swain is the State Secretary-Director.

THE FOUR ASSOCIATIONS of our state have held their annual meetings; the attendance has been larger this year than usual and a spirit of optimism prevailed throughout the gatherings.

A CARD FROM REV. W. E. DENNETT and wife en route across the country to the coast, says, "Preached in the pulpit in Michigan I left thirty-five years ago." Stops are being made at Minneapolis, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, and then on to San Francisco where they expect to spend the winter.

NEW YORK

REV. FRANK S. HARWOOD leaves the pastorate at Adams Village, November 1st, to take up the pastorate in Keyport, N. J.

REV. R. A. FARGO resigns the pastorate at Genoa to take up work in Pennsylvania.

UNDER THE DIRECTION of Rev. T. J. Wheeler, a new church has been organized at Ashford Hollow, Cattaraugus Association, and the Rev. A. H. Drake, West Valley, R. D., has entered upon the pastorate of that church.

REV. STEWART J. VEACH finds the work prospering in his new charge at Canastota, where he has recently gone from the Jordon church.

REV. IVAN M. ROSE, pastor at Rome, is conducting, under various leaders and with speakers from the General Board of Promotion, a series of Missionary Study Classes.

REV. C. H. FRANK has taken up the work in the First church of Poughkeepsie and anticipates a forward and aggressive work in that important field. The Tabernacle church has called Rev. E. C. Wilson.

REV. A. K. FULLER, D.D., is recuperating his health at the home of his daughter in Syracuse and hopes to be able to act as pulpit supply within a few weeks.

IN THE ABSENCE OF A. B. SEARS, D.D., from the Delaware Street church, Syracuse, who has a leave of absence for six months, Dr. C. S. Savage is acting as supply.

MR. BENJAMIN STARR, representative of the State Board of Promotion in Stewardship work, reports 2,212 tithers who have organized into Leagues throughout the State. The Stewardship work begins to promise large returns for many years to come.

REV. GRANT CHAMBERS OF ONEIDA, is assisting in the Stewardship work and is rendering valuable service thruout the State, by giving helpful addresses in several of the Associations.

PASTOR ALBERT W. BEAVER, Lake Avenue, Rochester, is holding a class in the "Meaning of Church Membership," during the Sunday school hour. The first class was held October 16, and the others will be held on the two following Sundays. The church maintains a Wednesday Night Club at which a supper is held, followed by a social hour and then the prayer meeting.

LONG ISLAND ASSOCIATION met at Emmanuel Church, Brooklyn, October 18-20. This is the fifty-fifth session of the association.

ITHACA: Dr. Robert P. Jones, pastor emeritus, preached September 25. The pastor is preaching a series of sermons on "The World's Greatest Book" during October. The Philathea Class has charge of a nursery in the kindergarten room during the morning service. Friday evening, September 30, the church gave a reception for the new students of the university and the pupils in the Conservatory of Music. About 200 attended. Among the preachers to occupy Sage Chapel this term are the following Baptist ministers: Dr. C. W. Petty, Mount Morris Baptist Church, New York; Dr. C. W. Gilkey, Hyde Park Baptist Church, Chicago; and Dr. Cornelius Woelfkin, Fifth Ave. Baptist Church, New York City.

PENNSYLVANIA

A Bible School, Convention was held Oct. 14 at Carnegie Church. The principal speakers were Rev. E. A. Harrar, H. E. Carmack, Rev. F. W. Stanton, Rev. A. Schumaker and Dr. H. E. Trolle.

BELLEVUE CHURCH, Rev. C. A. Decker, pastor, will study Paul's Letter to the Philippians at prayer meeting during the next three months. "The High Calling" is the general subject of the course of studies.

THE FIRST CHURCH, McKeesport. Rev. Jas. S. Braker, pastor, began an educational campaign the first of October. A course in Baptist Church History, a reading contest in missions, a course on Christian teaching crystallized in the Crozer Extension Course and a Mission Study class will be carried on during the first three months.

THE SEWICKLEY CHURCH, Rev. J. S. Stone, pastor, was represented by five delegates at the Brotherhood Rally held recently at Rochester.

SUNDAY, SEPTEMBER 25, was observed as Enrollment Day by the Knoxville Church. Rev. F. W. Stanton, pastor, in which it was sought to secure the correct address of all members of the church and its organization, also to correct and enlarge the constituency roll. October 2-9 was observed as Rally Week with a special program each evening.

THE JOHNSTON AVENUE CHURCH, Rev. W. S. Skinner, pastor, recently secured pledges to be paid in sixty days, more than sufficient to cover the cost of remodeling, aside from the small mortgage.

THE FOLLOWING OFFICERS were recently elected by the Ministers' Conference: President, Rev. C. A. Decker; vice-president, Rev. A. J. Meek; secretary and treasurer, Rev. R. M. Safford.

THE SEPTEMBER MEETING of the Board of Directors was held at the First Church, Pittsburgh, Monday evening, September 26, as the guest of the Chairman of the Church Extension Department, Mr. J. H. Stauff. The trustees of the church, Dr. J. A. Norcross, Rev. Sumner R. Vinton, and Mr. G. H. Merrill, of the Home Mission Society were invited guests, Dr. A. J. Bonsall, president of the Board, was toastmaster. Dr. I. D. Metzger, chairman of the Board of Trustees, responded. Dr. Norcross and Mr. Vinton spoke briefly. Rev. W. C. Chappell, Secretary, outlined the work the association is doing.

MRS. E. A. HARRAR, wife of Rev. E. A. Harrar, pastor of the Homewood Church, passed away Monday, September 26, after a lingering illness of over two years.

FIRST CHURCH, GREENVILLE, observed Rally Day recently. The teachers and officers of the church school for the coming year were installed by the pastor. Rev. H. G. Weston Smith is pastor.

TARENTUM, Rev. L. F. Taylor, Pastor, is making special efforts for large delegations at the Bible School Convention at Carnegie and at Franklin for the State Convention.

SIXTEEN NEW MEMBERS have recently been received into the Cobden Street Church, Pittsburgh, Rev. F. W. Henry, pastor.

LORENZ AVENUE, Pittsburgh, Rev. L. J. Ramsey, pastor, broke previous attendance records on Rally Day last Sunday. There were eight more present at the Bible School than are enrolled. Morning and evening congregations are increasing. One was baptized Sunday evening, Oct. 9th.

EVERYBODY-TO-GO-TO-CHURCH SUNDAY, Oct. 9th, was a decided success in Carnegie. The Bible School enrolled three new pupils.

THE ANNUAL BROTHERHOOD BANQUET in Pittsburgh Association will be held Friday evening, Dec. 2nd. Dr. Frederick E. Taylor, of Indianapolis, has been secured as the speaker.

EVANGELIST H. E. SHADE and Singer J. McCleery open a two-weeks' evangelistic service Sunday, Oct. 16th with the Midway Church, Rev. J. R. Routledge, pastor.

CAPTAIN THOMSEN of the SALVATION ARMY preached an inspiring sermon last Sunday at the Sewickley church, Rev. J. S. Stone, pastor.

ATTENDANCE AT THE MONESSEN CHURCH, Rev. W. W. Anderson, pastor, maintains a steady increase. The seating capacity of the church has now been reached. The pastor recently baptized his wife and three young men, members of the baseball club. The congregations contain an unusual percentage of young people.

REV. W. G. RUSSELL, STATE DIRECTOR, is calling for a re-enlisting of the Minute-Men in the churches. It is planned to have six brief addresses covering a wide range of subjects relating to our denominational activities for the year given by these speakers beginning Nov. 6th. Churches that have carefully trained and used Four-Minute Speakers have been greatly helped.

A CONFERENCE on "Case Work in Christian Service" under the direction of the Woman's Department of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches will be held at the Second Presbyterian church, Eighth Street, Tuesday, Oct. 25, 1:30 P. M. So far as is known this is the first conference of the kind to be held by churches.

CHAPLAIN J. W. BUNDRANT, of Parkersburg, W. Va., has been elected Executive Secretary and Director of Men's Work for our Pittsburgh Community Service among Negroes, a name just adopted to designate the two-fold work at Morgan Community House and Provident House, a Temporary Home for Men.

FORD CITY: Rev. A. A. Bowser, pastor. Oct. 9 a special service was held in the morning of the Sunday school and Church combined. The audience filled the church and the offering exceeded the goal asked. A series of community services will be held in the church on Sunday nights at 7:30, consisting of addresses of special interest to the public, exchange with pastors and stereopticon lectures.

Mississippi Valley

WEST VIRGINIA

Clarksburg Doings

The First Baptist Church of Clarksburg, W. Va. had as supplies during August and September Rev. R. B. McDanel, of Martin's Ferry, Ohio, a former pastor; Rev. F. E. Brininstool, of Clarksburg, also a former pastor; Rev. E. F. Garrett, of Bridgeport, W. Va., now practicing law in Clarksburg; Rev. Jonathan Wood, of Parsons, W. Va.; Rev. A. M. Ritenour, of Clarksburg; and Rev. Elkanah Hulley, L. L. D., President of Broadus College, Philippi, W. Va.

Pastor J. W. Graves submitted to a surgical operation at Mounds Park Sanitarium, St. Paul, Minn., the first of August, which kept him from his pulpit until the 18th of September. He has about fully recovered and is now on the field again.

October first marked the beginning of his third year with this church. During the past two years 187 members have been received, 108 by baptism, seventy-six by letter and three by experience. Sixty have been dismissed to other churches, fourteen erased and twenty-three have entered into their reward, making the total diminutions ninety-seven, leaving a net gain of ninety-one. The present membership is 1,073.

The Sunday school has an enrollment of $32; there are more than 60 officers and teachers. The school is thoroughly graded and organized. The church maintains a mission station in a neglected section of the city.

During the two years $42,852.69 passed through the Treasurer's hands, which does not include several thousand dollars raised and expended by other organizations. Of this amount $15,732.54 went to missions, $17,893.52 for current expenses and the balance for the purchase of a Church Home, which is used as a social center for all the organizations of the church and for Sunday school purposes.

The pastor was one of the denominational secretaries connected with the Publication Society before coming to the present pastorate.

OHIO

FIRST CHURCH, GALLIPOLIS, of which Rev. Robert W. Peirce is pastor, held its annual Rally Day for the church and Sunday school on October the 9th. A unique feature of the day's exercises was the building on the platform of an exact model of the church. Members of the various classes and departments of the school as well as the different organizations of the church brought bricks mailed to them in advance, and also other parts of the church, and presented them with appropriate addresses. Three hundred and twenty-five were present. In the evening the children's program was presented to a crowded house. The school is now thoroughly graded with twenty-one classes and teachers.

INDIANA

HAMMOND, First: Rev. J. Clark Oranger begins his pastorate November 1. Rev. W. J. Geen of Chicago has filled the pulpit since Rev. Mr. Licklider, the former pastor, resigned.

ILLINOIS

AFTER FOUR AND A HALF YEARS of service as pastor at Roseville, Rev. George W. Claxon has resigned to begin his work at Streator, November First. Mr. Claxon has served his Association for three years as clerk and this year was elected its moderator.

GALVA: Rev. C. B. Hilton, pastor, held its annual meeting and supper on the evening of October 6th. During the period of seven months covered by the report $2,600 had been contributed for current expenses and $2,300 for the New World Movement.

CARROLLTON: Rev. W. E. Pool, pastor, recently observed a Rally Day in the Sunday school by filling a miniature ship of fellowship placed on the platform. A Christmas tree was also loaded with good things for Miss Minnie Grage of Africa, and an Indian tepee filled with articles for Miss Ryan's distribution among the Hopi Indians. The parsonage of this church has just been put into good repair and the church is now raising money for a new furnace for its meeting house.

THE CLERK OF PEORIA ASSOCIATION in writing of its recent meeting held at Peoria says that contributions for all purposes were $100,426, of which $40,619 was for the New World Movement. This is a per capita gift for benevolences of $7.75 and is the best record ever attained and is at least seven times as good as the average in the past. Baptisms reported number 243.

REV. F. T. KLOTZSCHE, pastor at Cornell, reports a teacher training class of 18 recently organized, which is expected to greatly increase the teaching force of the Sunday school in the near future. Mr. Milton McGorrell is superintendent of the school.

REV. J. CLARK ORANGER who has been for four years pastor of the First Church, Rock Island, has resigned to become pastor of the First Church at Hammond, Ind. He began his duties as pastor August 1, 1917. The church membership was 363, during his pastorate 384 admissions to the church have been made, 201 of whom were by baptism, at present the total membership is now 595. The Sunday school was increased from an attendance of 150 to 300.

BLOOMFIELD ASSOCIATION met September 14-16. The attendance was large and enthusiastic. All departments of the association were well represented and splendid work was reported in all the churches. We have a few pastorless churches but Mr. Merrill, our field man, has the matter in hand. Dr. Brand, Dr. Peterson and Mrs. Wadsworth were speakers at the association. Reports showed 400 baptisms within the association last year and by far the greatest contribution to benevolences in our history. The association will meet with the Arthur Church in 1922.

REV. C. C. LONG, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Urbana has led the churches of his community in federating the local churches. Besides some matters of social interest the federation has now in preparation a Conference on Missionary Education to be held between the dates of October 26-30. Mrs. F. F. McCrea of Indianapolis will present the study books and Mrs. Wadsworth of Pasadena, Cal., will conduct the conferences on Missions. Mrs. S. E. Osgood of Chicago will conduct the children's hour. The evenings will be devoted to inspirational addresses from men from the field abroad and at home. Invitations are extended to the churches of all denominations in the eastern part of Illinois and the western part of Indiana. The federation is also opening a Community Training School for the local church workers, October 25.

AT A RECENT MEETING of the Chicago Ministers' Conference Dr. Smith T. Ford was elected a special representative of the conference to attend the meeting of the General Board of Promotion at Indianapolis, November 1-4.

REV. P. E. MUNDY leaves Shabbona November 1 to begin his work as pastor of the church at Tiskilwa.

DISTRICT SUPERINTENDENT Rev. Joseph C. Dent is at present holding a series of meetings at Dixon and reports interest and attendance good. At the present writing twenty-five decisions are reported, forty have been received for baptism and others are expected.

OCTOBER 8 was a red letter Rally Day for the church at Ashland, Ill. All day services were held and dinner served in the church at noon. The pastor, Rev. F. B. Wright, reports that in spite of rain the house was crowded. Thirty were received into the fellowship of the church, twenty-three by baptism and seven by letter and experience. Evangelist J. L. Mead is now holding a series of meetings with this church.

AT THE MEETING of the pastors' conference, Alton Association, the sum of $500 was voted to assist four churches in having regular preaching services. It was also decided to enter a new field in the north part of the association. This conference met with the First Church of East St. Louis of which Rev. T. M. Estes is the pastor. The ladies of the church served a dinner for the ministers.

THE BAPTIST COUNCIL of the city of Alton met with the East Alton Baptist Church on the evening of October 3. A comprehensive survey of the Negro situation in the district was given and a committee known as "Negro Populations Committee" was appointed to advise and co-operate with the colored churches. The churches at Hartford and Roxanna, both in the Woodrider Refinery district, were admitted into the membership of the Council. This makes seven white churches in the Council, making Alton the second Baptist city in the state. President D. T. Magill gave a lecture on the Hopi Indians.

CHICAGO HEIGHTS, FIRST: The entire church building within has been renovated. A mortgage of some eight hundred and fifty dollars, as old as the building has been paid off. A parsonage has been purchased and provision made to meet necessary payments within the required time.

MICHIGAN

W. LEWIS CRUTHERS, for the past five months pastor of the First Church at Bloomingdale, was ordained October 4. The moderator of the council was Rev. T. H. Corey, the clerk Rev. W. F. Disette. The ordination sermon was preached by Mr. Disette. Judge David Anderson, Rev. C. H. Heaton, Rev. L. A. Meade, Rev. R. E. Priest and Rev. C. P. Meeker also participated in the service. Mr. and Mrs. Cruthers are graduates of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary of Chicago.

HELLSDALE COLLEGE CHURCH observed Reception Day, October 9. Eleven members were taken into the church, among them three professors of the college and their families. One was received by baptism on Thursday night, Oct. 6. Communion followed the right hand of fellowship. Walter Yumazatu—a Hawaiian student and president of the Endeavor Society—gave an illustrated lecture on Hawaii Sunday evening. A class in religious education will be formed on Thursday night.

Rev. C. H. Berry, who closed his work as Director of Religious Education in Michigan, Sept. 15, to enter the pastorate of the Central Church, Kansas City, Mo., writes that his work is opening up very hopefully.

Director of Evangelism, Rev. F. L. Curry, assisted by Prof. A. E. Greenlaw of Detroit conducted a two weeks' series of meetings at Dewitt. Several conversions were reported, and the church has experienced a spiritual awakening. At the close of the meetings an entertainment was given by Prof. Greenlaw, assisted by his wife who is a reader of exceptional ability.

Dr. and Mrs. A. T. Robinson, tithing evangelists, spent the summer in British Columbia. From there they planned to journey into Alaska to fill an engagement, but on seeking accommodations on the boat, found that reservations were already booked up to next May. They, therefore returned across the border and are now journeying down the Pacific Coast. They spent one week with the First Church, Seattle, where the Northern Baptist Convention will meet next year. This church received 300 members last year.

Bethany Church, Pontiac, has organized a Woman's Union for all the women of the West Side. The King's Helpers, Dorcas, Philathea and Berean classes and Scout Mothers are especially sought for the organization.

Rev. Henry Morgan reports growing congregations in the Mt. Pleasant Church. Nine new members—all heads of families—have been received, also one candidate for baptism.

The primary department of the West Side Church, Bay City,—W. B. Jarman minister—is to support a child in India during the next four years. The children either earn the money, or save it by going without something they want—candy, toys or pleasures.

In the Marshall Church the rural work has been divided into districts with a real live chairman for each district. Pastor J. Burt Bouwman tells us that a most cordial welcome is given to the callers from the rural field, and in this way the church is changing the meaning of Christianity among the farm life about Marshall.

Pastor Hartzog received one new member into the Mason Church on Rally Day, Oct. 2. Large congregations attended the services.

Rev. R. S. Sprout is preaching to congregations which are larger than any other church in town. The church just now is stressing the repair work needed on the building.

Owing to continued ill health Rev. F. Dewey Ehle has been obliged to sever his connection with the Romeo Church, which has made a notable record during the past three years. The N. W. M. quota was over-subscribed and has been nearly half paid in; about forty new members have been added, mostly by baptism, and the attendance at the mid-week prayer meeting and the B. Y. P. U. is fine. The church wants to settle a pastor. Mr. D. Ehle is taking treatments and resting at St. Louis Sanitarium, St. Louis, Mich.

The First Church, Lansing, is planning a big program for the winter. Rev. C. W. Kemper is pastor. The church is holding a community sing on Sunday evenings. A Tithers' Club will become a reality soon. A large class taking the study put out by the Board of Education on the Life of Christ—credits to be given toward high school graduation—has just been started, and many other things to be noted later. The two children—Olivet with Rev. Donald T. Grey, and North, with Mr. Balfour and his splendid wife, are both making progress.

IOWA

EVANGELIST C. E. HILLIS and wife of Kahoka, Mo., in Sept. and Oct., conducted revival campaigns in the Baptist churches of Lockridge and Round Prairie. In both places the membership was doubled and three-fourths of the conversions were men and young men. In many instances whole families united with these churches. They are now in meetings with the Baptist church in Summerset, Iowa.

CALVARY, DES MOINES: From September 25th to October 2nd was observed by Calvary Baptist church as Rally week. On Sunday September 25th was Rally day in the Sunday school with an attendance of 225. Tuesday was Rally for the choir. Wednesday we rallied to the mid-week prayer and covenant meeting. Friday was the social for the whole church. Eight were extended the hand of fellowship and welcomed to the church on Rally Sunday at the communion service. In the afternoon the young people visited the Iowa Methodist hospital, singing and distributing flowers and Christian literature to the sick. Several united with the church at the evening service.

MINNESOTA

CALVARY, MINNEAPOLIS has received $6,204.18 for benevolences and $6,700.97 for current expenses during the past year. A community training school for Sunday school teachers, begins October 16. The B. Y. P. U. is furnishing ushers for the Sunday evening services during the month of October.

A SIMULTANEOUS BAPTIST evangelistic campaign began at Duluth, October 16. Meetings will be held in three centers, Rev. George E. Burlingame speaking at the First Church, Rev. W. H. Rogers of Muscatine at the Swedish Bethel, and Rev. L. A. Clevenger at West Duluth.

REV. I. D. ALVORD, on October 16, began meetings at Campbell, Minn.

REV. ROLLAND BUTLER, pastor of the First Church of Anoke, has just closed a series of meetings at Brownsdale, with most excellent results. Nearly 100 people have made profession of religion.

A SERIES OF EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS, led by Mr. Thompson, the harp evangelist, has just closed at Detroit, Minn. The interest has been very deep. Scores have re-consecrated themselves, a number have made decisions, and others have united by letter. About twenty have thus far signed cards for church membership. The church was very greatly blessed.

REV. A. FRANK HOUSER is holding an evangelistic meeting with the Swedish Baptist Church at Willmar and good reports are received from the services.

EVANGELISTIC MEETINGS are now in progress at Park Rapids.

MISSOURI

EUCLID, ST. LOUIS: During the past year 255 have been received for membership, of whom 130 came by baptism. Eight young people volunteered for definite service in missionary and ministerial work. Two young ministers were ordained. Prayer meetings have reached 200 in attendance each Wednesday night. The present membership is 1,072. $11,698.57 has been raised for current expenses, $3,958.98 for benevolences, and $15,356.05 for building and equipment fund.

MARCELLINE, FIRST has received eighty-two new members during the past year, and has substantially increased its offerings for benevolences. Pastor J. E. Chapell has just closed his first year as pastor.

Pacific Coast

WASHINGTON

TACOMA, FIRST, has organized a Business Girls' Bible Class which holds its meetings at 9:45 Sunday mornings in the Rialto Theatre. A feature of the first meeting was a fifteen minute organ recital. As a result of a class which the pastor taught during person week, thirty-five people have signed a pledge to constitute themselves into a "Win-one-Legion." Mr. J. F. Miller was elected as the captain, and plans are being made to do regular systematic work at every service of the Church, as well as between times.

LAST WEEK was an eventful one at Austin First Church, for then occurred the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the church and the beginning of the thirteenth year of the pastorate of Dr. Judson B. Thomas. During the fifty years, about twenty-two hundred members have come into the church. The original membership was fifteen—the present enrollment 905. Two of the charter members are still living: Deacon E. S. Osgood, who is yet an active deacon of the church, and Mr. Anthony Smith, who resides in California. Meetings were held Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday evenings and all day Sunday, in which reminiscences of the past and hopes for the future were the dominating notes. On Sunday, the 10th, a sum of over five thousand dollars was raised to cover the expense of redecorating the church and to meet all outstanding bills, the balance for a nucleus of a fund for a new Sunday-school building which the church hopes to erect soon. The closing sermon Sunday evening by Dr. Benjamin Otto was a fitting close to a week full of inspiration.

CHRISTIAN COMMUNITY CENTERS: The Seattle Baptist Union, Western Washington Convention, Home Mission Society and the Woman's Home Mission Society have voted liberal appropriations to assist both the Chinese and Japanese Baptists of Seattle in erecting Community Christian Center buildings that will take care of the regular church services, and provide for a practical educational and social program for these two groups of people in Seattle. It is expected that these buildings will be under construction before the end of this year.

REV. GEO. M. LEHIGH, for the past four years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Phoenix, Ariz., becomes pastor of the Central Baptist Church of Olympia, and assumed his duties October 1. Dr. Lehigh is a well-known pastor and evangelist and is recognized as one of the outstanding preachers of the Pacific Coast District.

QUEEN ANNE BAPTIST CHURCH has leased the German Methodist building on Howe Street near Queen Anne Avenue, and began holding services there October 9. They have purchased a lot in a very desirable location on which they will later erect a building. Rev. F. W. Carstens is the pastor.

REV. J. C. WETTERHAHN has accepted a unanimous call to the pastorate of the church at Vancouver, Wash., and has entered upon his work there. A reception was held for the pastor and his wife on Friday evening, October 7.

THE FIRST SWEDISH Church of Tacoma, Rev. Charles Asplund, pastor, is erecting a parsonage to cost about $5500. The pastor and family hope to move into it by Thanksgiving Day.

REV. S. L. BROWN, recently of Dryad, has entered upon his work as pastor at Port Townsend.

REV. AMOS HAUSE has closed his work at Tumwater and will supply the Baptist Church at Raymond during the month of October.

Cowlitz Association

The Cowlitz Association met with the Baptist Church at Chehalis, Oct. 4-6. The pastor, Rev. F. C. Stannard, and his people entertained royally. The attendance was unusually large. Nearly all the active churches were represented and all the pastors in the association but one were present. The reports revealed a year of real advance. An exceptionally strong program had been prepared and every one whose name was on the program was present and "delivered the goods." Rev. Edker Burton, the Moderator, presided. Rev. E. G. Judd was elected Clerk pro tem.

Helpful conferences and discussions were held on "Public Worship and Services," "Women's Work," "The Church's Standing and Community Service," "Christian Education," "The Denominational Program" and "Evangelism."

Addresses were delivered by Dr. G. F. Holt, Dr. J. F. Watson, Rev. T. H. Hagen, Dr. C. O. Johnson, Mrs. Henry Topping of Japan, Miss Anna V. Johnson of the Philippine Islands, and Rev. S. D. Bawden of South India. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. Guy Hathaway and the closing sermon by Dr. C. O. Johnson. Bible readings were given by Rev. Edker Burton and Dr. Geo. M. Lehigh.

A strong resolution was adopted endorsing the New World Movement with its Objectives and Program for this year and urging each church to do its share toward attaining the denominational goals.

Officers elected for the coming year were: Moderator, Rev. F. C. Stannard; Clerk and Treasurer, Rev. E. G. Judd. These, with Rev. Edker Burton, Mrs. J. T. Alexander and Mrs. J. C. McCamman will constitute the Executive Committee.

The next session of the association will be held with the church at Vancouver, Wash., Rev. B. M. Godwin to preach the annual sermon and Rev. J. C. Wetterhahn, alternate.

OREGON

AT THE CLOSE of a series of evangelistic meetings conducted by Rev. Earle D. Sims for two weeks, with the First Baptist Church of Gresham, the Church extended a unanimous call to Rev. E. L. Wright, of Topeka, Kansas, to become their pastor. Also the church voted to enter in the New World Movement and put on a convas of the membership this year. Also steps are being taken to begin soon the erection of a new church building.

MEDFORD held a most successful annual business meeting first Wednesday in October. Reports showed 108 additions with a net gain of eighty members, being the largest with one exception in the history of the church; $7558 raised during the year, and $2641 contributed to missionary objects. The church unanimously voted to launch a church building campaign with the idea of building next year. Church Architect Geo. E. Merrill, of New York City, plans to visit the church and direct in planning for a thoroughly equipped building for the work of the church. Rev. F. R. Leach is leading in a large program and has the backing of the entire church.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-FIRST AVENUE CHURCH, San Francisco, is rejoicing in the fact that (Turn to page 1256)

A Terrifying Responsibility; but a Door of Hope

By JAMES H. FRANKLIN

ON October 15 the New York Times, which is reckoned by many as America's greatest newspaper, if indeed it is not the foremost daily in the world, contained an editorial on "Prayers for Peace," a part of which was as follows:

"Americans will not be alone in their prayers and their hopes, for like hopes and prayers will rise from every people touched by the great war. It is significant that it was a Buddhist priest who followed a delegation from the churches of America in calling upon the President in this cause a few days ago. General Pershing has said that, unless 'some such move is made' as is contemplated in the conference, 'we may well ask ourselves whether we are doomed to go headlong down through destructive war and darkness into barbarism.' General Tasker Bliss has assured the clergymen that if they want to secure a limitation of armaments they can do it now; and that if it is not done, they and those whom they represent will be responsible for every drop of blood shed if another great war as the last does come."

General Tasker Bliss, who for a time during the recent war was Chief of Staff of the American Army, next a member of the Supreme War Council in France, and later one of the American representatives at the Peace Conference at Paris, is the son of the late Professor George Ripley Bliss, of Crozer Theological Seminary. His experience, therefore, enables him to speak regarding the influence of clergymen, as well as of war and its causes. If he is right in his deliverance, of which mention is made by The New York Times, there rests on the pastors and churches of America a stupendous responsibility at this hour. If he is right, it is now possible to secure a limitation of armaments, provided the Christian leaders of the land really want it and will work for it. According to General Bliss, if it is not secured, these leaders will be responsible for such great wars as may occur in the future. At first thought, the responsibility is terrifying. Upon second thought, there is inspiration in the prospect. At such a moment the Christian forces of the land need to see clearly, reason fairly, and act wisely, and while they should be bold, they should be careful also to avoid saying or doing anything which might prove embarrassing to men of goodwill who represent our nation and other governments in the conference at Washington. It is safe for us, as Americans, to assume that our President and his Secretary of State, who are primarily responsible for this conference, were prompted by the noblest Christian motives and that they do not need to be goaded into right action. It is safe to assume as well that men of equally high motive will be among those who cross the seas to attend this conference. What, then, is the mission of the Christian pastors and congregations at such an hour?

As hosts of this conference, the American people are peculiarly responsible for the atmosphere of the occasion, and atmosphere, we are told, is everything in such an international meeting. If the representatives of the several nations find themselves in an atmosphere of brotherhood, freedom from race prejudice and suspicion, disinterested aspiration to serve humanity as a whole, and to take sacrificial steps, if need be, in leading the way toward peace, a favorable outcome may be anticipated. The atmosphere generated by the American people may be a decisive influence on the conference in which so much depends upon a friendly attitude on the part of all concerned.

The New York Times has indicated that, while the Christian forces of the land should pray ardently for the desired result, it should not be overlooked that the conference in Washington is to be brought face to face with the necessity for practical adjustments among the nations. The continued efforts of at least one European nation to maintain a great army and of three other powers to strengthen their navies cannot rest on anything less than a distrust of the motives of other governments. We have been asking why others find it necessary to follow such a course, after the horrors of the great war. Others are asking the same question regarding America. It may be well, therefore, for us to try to ascertain how our own recent policy has impressed other nations, and to see ourselves for a moment as others see us.

We are told that Great Britain feels that her own existence may depend upon her supremacy of the seas. Any one familiar with economic conditions in Great Britain will feel the force of that argument, if there is nothing better for humanity than to settle international differences through a resort to the sword. For such reasons, we are told, Great Britain is unwilling that America or any other power should possess a navy superior to her own, and it is hard for our British cousins to understand why America requires such an expansion of her sea power as we are told is now being developed.

According to press reports, naval officers are pointing out that the Pacific Ocean is now the strategic naval center of the world, and that "the first move in this direction took place last March when the United States, whose most powerful warships had been assembled in the Atlantic, ordered all first-line battleships and auxiliaries to join the Pacific fleet." A few days ago came the word that Great Britain now proposes to maintain a powerful battle fleet in Pacific waters, and The New York Evening Post says: "With the Japanese and United States fleets now in the Pacific, and with the decision of the British Admiralty to base a powerful fleet at Singapore, the Pacific will become the scene of the greatest aggregation of warships in the history of the world."

Is it possible? Four years ago we were told we were fighting to put an end to war, and now we are told that in the Pacific Ocean, which more than any other sea separates Occident and Orient, or the white man from the yellow man, there is being formed "the greatest aggregation of warships in the history of the world." This is not a pleasant fact, but perhaps we can pray the more intelligently when we remember it. Perhaps we can pray a little more consistently, too, if first we stop and ask how these "gestures" on the part of Western nations are interpreted in the Orient. Here we need again to see ourselves as others see us. On my desk at this moment is a paper published at Shanghai, China, which contains an article on this question: "If the Conference on Pacific Problems Fails?" This Shanghai paper reports: "There is every reason to believe it is the intention of the American Government to establish a combination naval and commercial base at Dutch Harbor, Alaska. * * * * Dutch Harbor is the Gibraltar of the Pacific. * * * * It is the midway point between Seattle and the Orient." We must try to see just how our policy is viewed from the other side of the Pacific, for it is generally admitted that some agreement regarding Pacific problems is essential to any real limitation of armaments.

The unpleasant facts to which I have referred are sufficient in themselves to justify the conference on the limitation of armaments. Nations simply cannot continue to deal with each other on the old basis, and not, to quote General Pershing again, "go headlong down through destructive war and darkness into barbarism." Our President and Secretary of State and men of goodwill from all the nations who are to participate in this conference will be given our confidence and support. They are earnestly striving to find a better way. We can help them as we pray and as we attempt as well to foster brotherhood, freedom from race prejudice, and a disinterested purpose on the part of America to lead the way, at all cost, toward peace and goodwill among the nations.

Let the Christian forces approach the season of the conference at Washington with a sense of the terrifying responsibility suggested by General Bliss. At the same time, let them look forward to the conference as a great door of hope, and determine that through prayer and personal effort nothing shall be left undone to create an atmosphere in America in which the better way may be found. Once more The New York Times:

"This is no time for citizens whose vocations are those of peace to hesitate. It is a time for showing faith and hope. 'Well have we need of many orisons.'"

New York City.

What They Are Doing at Headquarters.

Miss Nellie G. Prescott, executive secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, has returned to New York after a speaking tour at a number of state conventions and churches in the Middle West.

Miss Clarissa May, field missionary of the Camden Community House, Camden, New Jersey, presided at the regular Monday noon prayer meeting of the General Board of Promotion, commanding the interest of everyone present as she told of her work among the Italians there.

Dr. James E. Norcross, who has just returned from Vermont, reports meetings of rare interest and consecration there. The slogan of "Fill a ship for fellowship" has revived the war-time art of knitting, at the General Board of Promotion headquarters. Mrs. Helen E. Sprague, head of the stenographic department of the General Board, reports that every girl attached to that department, has either knitted caps for the children in these devastated lands, or donated money for wool. Among those who have contributed labor or money or both to this noon-day work are the following:

Misses Murray, Hamer, Hollis, Hilsinger, Wackford, Cone, Armstrong, Ward, Hoffman, Kintopp, Bleuitt, Adam, Zaveski, Dammes, Aude, Lewin, Goebel, Paul, Nieser, Farbrother, Gelston, H. Ward, Jewett, Wells, McCartney, Briggs, Lerges, Miller, Ross, Koller, Hicks, Stephenson, Kittle, Fensom, Cobb, Hodges, Bailey, Frachtman, Fersh, Pedersen, Johnson, Sears, Schoenstadt, and Miss B. Brace.

Also the Mrs. H. E. Sprague, Voorhees, Bohm, Brace, Hamilton, Dewdney, Bishop and Copeland.

Money was donated by the Shipping Department, the Treasury Department and also the executive of the General Board.

Some "Impressions"

By W. A. AYRES

AN HONEST statement by many of their interpretation or "impressions" of the Des Moines Convention may be helpful. It is curious how our different personalities, education, etc., change our viewpoints and our consequent "impressions." My views while agreeing with some may differ very widely from others.

My impression from the strong vote on fundamentals in the conference on that subject, and also in the convention on the action of the Home Mission Society in receiving the gift with some creedal strings to it, was that the denomination is still sound and tremendously in favor of holding to and declaring its faith in the old time principles of Baptists, as contained in the New Hampshire Confession of Faith, or some similar statement.

A few seem to strenuously object to any such statement, and of course, are pretty weak Baptists, if Baptists at all, yet the vast majority are still to be counted on. The cry of "No creed," raised so insistently by some, impressed me as the result of three things, possibly, ignorance, needless fear, or insincerity—a mere camouflage. I cannot think it possible that even tolerably well informed men or women are ignorant of the fact that Baptists have always had a creed, and been proud to declare it to the world. So it is not ignorance. Their opposition impressed me as a bit of insincerity, camouflage—possibly unconsciously so to some extent on their part, but yet truly so. They have tried in what they have said or written to scare people, some of our own people, into thinking that "creed" must be something awful. Now really that is not honest. There is no fault in any creed that is true, nor anything to fear. The fault with the Roman Catholic creed is not so much what it teaches, though that is far wrong, but in the way they promulgate their creed; they use force. Baptists never have used force and never will. To cry out so against creed is not needed, and is neither fair nor honest towards loyal Baptists, who really stand for something.

I for one wish the "no creed" folks would quiet down and stop that kind of misrepresentation. Of course, we have no rack and thumb-screw creed; not a Baptist in the whole denomination thinks of such a thing. And for a few who cry out so against creed to imagine they are the whole denomination is absurd. A little less egotism and a little more humility by a small number who assume to be the entire denomination would be fine. A very small tall should not try to wag the whole dog. Of course, this is all in kindest, most Christian spirit; I am just giving some of my impressions!

And here are a few more: I have felt that there has been a considerable change in faith and working policy in the schools and missionary boards in these late years, and not for the better. A generation ago we had some giants in our Baptist school and mission world, and then things went well. Of course, we are doing bigger things than we did a generation ago, and some may be inclined to take much credit to themselves for this seeming progress, not really recognizing the fact that we are in the day of bigger things, and that bigger things do not always or necessarily mean better things. And I am not advocating that we go back a generation to do the smaller things, even with the bigger men. My "impression" is that we need big, strong, sound, loyal men and women now in our school and missionary work to lead us right in our larger tasks.

Another "impression" is that we are dangerously near an educational evangelism, with a strong tendency to nominal Christianity, such as the schools of Europe produced, rather than an evangelical type of evangelism that really saves the souls of men and women, boys and girls.

And yet another "impression" that came to me at Des Moines, while I sat quietly watching the proceedings (not a single outburst from me!), was that the minority, by different ways and means, was seeking to lead the majority, and rather largely succeeding, which may have been very satisfactory to the aforesaid minority, but another "impression" was that the large majority would not always submit, that some change in this respect may be expected.

And "lastly," my "impression" is that THE BAPTIST, while fairly good at first, is not now rightly representing Northern Baptists, and that a decided change is needed and will surely come. Of course, these are only my impressions, but I wouldn't be surprised if a good many others had similar feelings.

Coming Crisis in Burma.

By J. HERBERT COPE

This will probably be used just before the Burma Convention and Conference meet. Thank goodness we do not have to decide which mission board we will work under, but we can continue to be plain missionaries of the Gospel. But serious questions seem to be in the air. Crises are becoming contagious. So the Conference this year must decide a very vital matter, namely, our relation to the governmental aid to schools. Mission schools are assisted financially by government by means of partial payment of teachers' salaries and result grants for successful passing of government examinations by pupils. The South India missionaries opened the subject by questioning the propriety of accepting such aid by Baptists. So this year the matter is to be thrashed out by all the British India missions. In Burma the question has never been the refusal to accept government aid but most missionaries complain they do not get enough of such assistance. One missionary boasts he gets more money from government than any other man. So it is going to be hard to get the Burma missions to think along any other line. One thing is pretty certain, if we refuse government aid our educational work will for the time being be that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

Baptist Department
Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST
FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured. No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

Read THE passion for Life To DAY
HOCKING'S GREAT NOVEL

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

Beware of Contagious Diseases
THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE
INDIVIDUAL
SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES
Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer.
Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

Immigrants may become good Citizens if we give them the Bible. Your donation will help us distribute it in 53 languages. The sailor, the blind and the poor also need the Bible.

Every kind of Bible for sale. Scofield, Oxford, Bagster, Cambridge, Holman, Nelson, at special discounts.

Write us about Annuity Bonds
NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY
5 East 48th St. (112th Year) NEW YORK

In writing to our advertisers mention
THE BAPTIST

knocked into the proverbial cocked hat. Two recent actions by government have already caused some of our missionaries to turn gray. They decided to close all Anglo Vernacular Mission High Schools in towns where the government schools were able to care for the needs. They are now trying to close the high department at Myaungyan. The government made a big cut in grants in and to Anglo Vernacular schools. That order sent S. O. S. calls to the Board and the schools were able to carry on. So this new question will have a serious influence on our work.

The Chinese work is growing in importance. Last year Mr. Driggs was appointed to that work but in good missionary fashion he was loaded up with other work. Now it has been decided to send him, at the request of the Christians, to Mandalay in Upper Burma. Here also they are placing Mr. Armstrong on his return from furlough. Since he is an Indian missionary it looks as if the work among these people is to be pushed in Upper Burma.

A long felt want in Burma seems on the way to be met. It has been the custom to bring a man to Burma and immediately put him in charge of a large station with no end of work. All his time is thus taken and in odd moments, while dressing, eating or taking a bath, he is supposed to study the language and if he does not get it is apt to be sent home. Now one of the ladies, Mrs. Elliott, has made a gift to found a language school for new missionaries. The first class will be formed of young ladies coming this fall.

America's Stake in the Far East

CHARLES HARVEY FAHS
A "Problem Discussion" Series Book

An indispensable book for people who wish to be well informed on current problems and who have not the time to do the research work that is here so manifest. It is designed for group discussion and gives material on both sides of disputed questions. Cloth, $1.35; Paper, $0.95.

Church and Industrial Reconstruction

Prepared under the direction of the "Committee on the War and the Religious Outlook"

"The industrial unrest and uncertainty of the period following the World War bring to the Christian Church an imperative summons and a boundless opportunity." This is the opening sentence of the introduction and it strikes the keynote of the whole book. Read this volume if you would discover, so far as possible, what a genuine application of Christian principles to our industrial life would require. Cloth, $2.00; Paper, $1.00.

Democratic Movement in Asia

TYLER DENNETT

An unpretentious but thoughtful study of the gradual growth of the democratic spirit in the Far East. The author has been an extensive traveler, a keen observer and a profound student of present day tendencies in the Orient. Thirty-four unusual photographic illustrations are included.

At your bookstore or from us

ASSOCIATION PRESS
347 Madison Ave. New York

Two Doctrinal Statements

At the request of a prominent Baptist in southern Illinois the "Doctrinal Statement" issued by the Christian Fundamentals Association (interdenominational) at Denver last June, and the "Confession of Faith" adopted by the conference on Baptist fundamentals at Des Moines, are here printed side by side for comparison.

Introduction to the Des Moines Confession

The adoption of a creed to which allegiance is demanded would be contrary to our historic Baptist principles and repugnant to our deepest spiritual instincts. On the other hand the adoption of a confession of faith, as a standard about which our Baptist people may rally, is consistent with the practice of our fathers from the earliest days of our denominational history. Living in a day of doubt, unbelief and irreligion, we feel that the time has come for Baptists publicly to reaffirm their faith in the great fundamentals. As Baptists and members of churches connected with the Northern Baptist Convention, we desire to restate the foundation doctrines of our faith in the following brief and simple confession which is but a re-affirmation of the substance of the historic Philadelphia and New Hampshire Confessions of Faith.

Comparative Treatment of the Same Topics

DES MOINES CONFESSION

1. We believe that the Bible is God's word that it was written by men divinely inspired, and that it has supreme authority in all matters of faith and conduct.

2. We believe in God the Father, perfect in holiness, infinite in wisdom, measureless in power. We rejoice that he concerns himself mercifully in the affairs of men, that he hears and answers prayer, and that he saves from sin and death all who come to him through Jesus Christ.

3. We believe in Jesus Christ, God's only begotten Son, miraculous in his birth, sinless in his life, making atonement for the sins of the world by his death. We believe in his bodily resurrection, his ascension into heaven, his perpetual intercession for his people and his personal visible return to the world according to his promise.

4. We believe in the Holy Spirit who came forth from God to convince the world of sin, of righteousness and of judgment, and to regenerate, sanctify and comfort those who believe in Jesus Christ.

5. We believe that all men by nature and by choice are sinners but that "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life"; we believe therefore that those who accept Christ as Savior and Lord will rejoice forever in God's presence and those who refuse to accept Christ as Savior and Lord will be forever separated from God.

Continuation of Des Moines Confession

6. We believe in the church—a living spiritual body of which Christ is the head and of which all regenerated people are members. We believe that a visible church is a company of believers in Jesus Christ, baptized on a credible confession of faith, and associated for worship, work and fellowship. We believe that to these visible churches were committed, for perpetual observance, the ordinances of baptism and the Lord's Supper, and that God has laid upon these churches the task of persuading a lost world to accept Jesus Christ as Savior, and to enthrone him as the Lord and Master. We believe that all human betterment and social improvement are the inevitable by-products of such a gospel.

7. We believe that every human being has direct relations with God, and is responsible to God alone in all matters of faith; that each church is independent and autonomous and must be free from interference by any ecclesiastical or political authority; that therefore Church and State must be kept separate as having different functions, each fulfilling its duties free from the dictation or patronage of the other.

DENVER STATEMENT

I. We believe in the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments as verbally inspired of God, and inerrant in the original writings, and that they are of supreme and final authority in faith and life.

II. We believe in one God, eternally existing in three persons, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

III. We believe that Jesus Christ was begotten by the Holy Spirit, and born of the Virgin Mary, and is true God and true man.

IV. We believe that man was created in the image of God, that he sinned and thereby incurred not only physical death but also that spiritual death which is separation from God; and that all human beings are born with a sinful nature, and, in the case of those who reach moral responsibility, become sinners in thought, word and deed.

V. We believe that the Lord Jesus Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures as a representative and substitutionary sacrifice; and that all that believe in Him are justified on the ground of His shed blood.

VI. We believe in the resurrection of the crucified body of our Lord, in His Ascension into heaven, and in His present life there for us, as High Priest and Advocate.

VII. We believe in "that blessed hope," the personal, premillennial and imminent return of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

VIII. We believe that all who receive by faith the Lord Jesus Christ are born again of the Holy Spirit and thereby become children of God.

IX. We believe in the bodily resurrection of the just and the unjust, the everlasting, conscious punishment of the lost.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

ANTHEM LIST NO. 1

During the past few weeks so many requests for suggestions as to new anthems have come in to this department that I have decided to ask the indulgence of the writers and delay personal answers for the time being; instead, as a temporary expedient, there will be printed in this corner for the next month or so a series of anthem-lists, compiled from the issues of various publishers, tabulating only material which I know is satisfactory, both from the musical standpoint, and from its value as devotional music. No "elaborate" numbers will be included; all the music will be such as can be easily handled by the average "volunteer" choir in a few rehearsals. New, fresh music is an absolute necessity, if interest and enthusiasm is to be kept up. Each list will be from the catalogue of one good publisher, and may be ordered direct from that address, or through other dealers. Any wide-awake publisher is more than glad to get in direct touch with a live-wire choir leader—and such connection is a mutual benefit. The first series of anthems is from the list of Clayton F. Summy Co., 429 So. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.

- My Defense is God—Schuler.
- And God Shall Wipe Away All Tears—Harris.
- Offer Unto God Thanksgiving—Wheeler.
- My Saviour, Source of All My Joys—Otis.
- Rise, Crowned with Light—Otis.
- Our Guardian Slumbers Not—Robyn.
- Look Ye Saints, the Sight Is Glorious—Gaul.
- Fight the Good Fight—Pike.
- As Now the Sun's Declining Rays—Nevin.
- I Will Lay Me Down in Peace—Lester.
- Saviour, Again to Thy Dear Name—Houseley.
- He Loveth Me—West.
- All Ye That Cry Unto the Lord—Colby.
- Still, Still With Thee—Thickstun.
- The King of Love My Shepherd Is—Oliver.

In next issue will appear titles chosen from the publications of H. W. Gray Co., of New York.

MUSIC REVIEWS

From The Lorenz Publishing Co., Dayton, O. The "Choir Leader," issue for October, Thanksgiving Number.

This regular monthly visitor is always welcome—and to this editor, every number seems an improvement upon the one previous. Some of us who are given to the "high-brow" attitude toward musical conditions in this country—more especially as that embryonic situation is reflected in the grade of music habitually put up in the great majority of the churches—such of us, familiar with the high atmosphere of the masterworks of Bach, Dvorak, Brahms, Elgar, et al., are apt to forget that most of that material is beyond the efforts or possibilities of most choirs—and, to our shame be it said, most of the serious composers of this country have done little to supply good, but simple material to fill that great void! A symphony or a string-quartet may reach a few thousand people in a season—a successful song or anthem may reach millions in that time. We theorists and dreamers have seen the value of one, and very little of the other. Why not have both? It can be done, when the better class of composers sense their duty—and incidentally their profit—in supplying a stock of practical, finely-conceived and well-written music designed for the use of those choirs and singers who lack the technical facility to effectively produce anthems and solos which call for professional technique. The regular monthly choir volumes, such as listed above, are doing a great work along this line. In the years that have gone since I first became acquainted with the publications of this firm, I have seen a steady improvement in the musical value of the material issued—which is as it should be. This steady climb in artistic grade, coupled with the enormous circulation of the choir-books, denotes a tremendous influence for the betterment of church-music conditions. All power to the Lorenz Company in their progress! Besides well-written and pertinent editorial notes, this issue includes many interesting articles on subjects relating to the art of choir-singing and like repertoire (including a reprinted article from the music page of "The Baptist"), and fine anthems by Ashford, Coerne, Wilson, Wildermere, and Gatty-Nevin.

From G. Schirmer Co., New York, N. Y.
Bread of the World.....Hyde ($0.12)
The Lord is in His Holy Temple.....Lester ($0.12)

Two anthems by Chicago composers, suitable for use by chorus or quartet. The first-named is a finely conceived and splendidly worked-out anthem in the English style, unusual in melodic line, warmly harmonized, welcome for use at communion services. The other number is a brilliant, but easy opening anthem, with effective soprano solo interlude, designed primarily for dedication services, but usable for all occasions when a showy, joyous, easily prepared number is desired.

From The H. W. Gray Co., New York, N. Y.
Quarterly No. 41—Anthems for Christmas and general use.

The choir-director who is not on the regular mailing list of this sterling publishing house is, to my notion, unfortunate. The volumes, an example of which is listed above, are sent out periodically to active leaders as a convenient form in which to present new issues of anthems and choruses—my library contains, as a most prized possession, a series of these books, substantially bound, and a mine of valuable and convenient material. If you are not of the favored ones, get in touch with the company and get initiated! The anthems contained within the covers of this issue are mostly seasonal numbers, several of the exquisite arrangements of old carols by Clarence Dickinson, a majestic setting of Milton's "This is the Month," by MacKinnon, a tender Christmas lullaby by Hartley, "O Come, O Come, Emmanuel," a Clemson Gold Medal anthem; also several other interesting works by Webbe, Terry, J. S. Matthews, and others. Also included with the book is a tract listing recent issues in all departments by this active publishing house.

Rev. W. B. Riley of Minneapolis, in addition to the pastoral care of his great and growing church, is busier than ever in the work of the Christian Fundamentals Association (interdenominational). He is in the field holding conferences almost all of the time now, and has a heavy schedule ahead, principally in the South.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.
Baltimore, Md.
CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL
BELLS Memorials
a Specialty

5000 Christian Workers Wanted to sell Bibles

Testaments, good books and handsome velvet Scripture Mottos. Good commission. Send for free catalogue and price list.

GEORGE W. NOBLE, Publisher
Dept. No. 5 Monon Bldg. Chicago, Illinois

A New Christmas Service Free

We want you to see
THE GIFT OF LOVE, our new S. S. Service of merit. You will like it. Sent free.
Our CHRISTMAS RECITATION BOOKLET, NO. 24 with cute songs, is the best ever. 15c.
WHEN THE KING CAME, a Pastoral Sketch for young people. Beautiful. No music. 12c.
CHRISTMAS FOLKS, a wholesome, amusing cantata for Sunday school or Day school. 12c.
HYMNS FOR TODAY, for Sunday school and Church, contains 20 Christmas hymns and two Christmas service programs. Sample copy sent for examination. Orchestrated.
Give us your address (or others interested) and we will mail free a new catalog of Christmas services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for women's voices, also men's voices, and anthems for mixed voices.
If interested in Sunday school orchestra music you should know what we have for you. Write.

FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE
528 Elm Street, CINCINNATI, O.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC FREE
HALL-MACK CO.'S
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT. PASTOR or COM.

6 new, original Christmas S. S. Services NEW PUBLICATIONS

- Helper No. 9. Price, 20c. (25c for Helper and 3 services.)
- Herod's Vision. A Song Story—Cantata. Price, 30c.
- Victorious Christmas. A Song Story for the Sunday School, 25c.
- The Manger King. Choir Cantata by Dr. Adam Geibel, 50c.
- Here Comes Christmas. Children's Cantata. Price, 25c.
- Songs for Little Singers, No. 3. Price, 30c. All (except Helper) sent for examination.
- Hall-Mack Co. } 21st and Arch Streets,
Adam Geibel Co. } Philadelphia, Pa.

Lorenz's Christmas Music

- SERVICES
"Worship the King" Wilson.
"Gift of Love" Holton.
"Christmas Echoes" Based on Carols.
"The Coming Messiah" Lorenz.
8 cents a copy, $6.00 a hundred.
- CANTATAS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS
"When the Savior Came" Lorenz. Sacred. 20c. per copy
"A Christmas Secret" Wilson. Santa Claus. 30 cents per copy.
"The Spirit of Christmas" Lorenz. Secular but serious. 30 cents.
- RECITATIONS AND EXERCISES
"Christmas Treasury No. 32" 25 cents.
- CHOIR CANTATAS OR SEMI-ORATORIOS
"The Manger Prince" Ashford. 60 cents.
"The Light of the World" Holton. 60 cents.
- CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS
Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state whether difficult, medium, or easy anthems are wanted, and about twenty samples will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at list prices.
- CHRISTMAS SOLOS AND DUETS
Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state voice desired, and about a half dozen sheet music selections will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at one-third off list price.

Send for Free Packet of Samples and Catalogue.
Mention "The Baptist"

LORENZ NEW YORK, CHICAGO
Publishing Co. Z and DAYTON, OHIO

A DICTIONARY OF RELIGION AND ETHICS

ONE VOLUME

Edited by Shailer Mathews and Gerald Birney Smith.
With the cooperation of almost one hundred scholars.

All words of importance in the field of religion and ethics are defined. Contains in compact form the results of modern study in the psychology of religion, the history of religions, the present status of religious life in America, Europe and the most important mission fields and the important phases of Christian belief and practice.

This volume is intended primarily for ministers, Sunday-school teachers and general readers who are interested in religion, not as technical students, but as those who wish to acquire accurate and compact information of the latest developments of study in the field. It will be an especially useful reference book for public and Sunday-school libraries. $8.00. Send for Circular.

An Introduction to the History of Christianity

A. D. 590-1314

By F. J. Foakes Jackson
Fellow of Jesus College and Professor of Christian Institutions, Union Theological Seminary

Not enough pulpit use is made of Church history by today's preachers. History makes a strong popular appeal when the events of Christianity's past are read by a modern historical student of the first rank like Dr. Jackson. (Probably) $4.00.

The Infinite Artist

By Frederick Shannon

Characteristic sermons by the minister of Central Church, Chicago. $1.25.

The Origin of Paul's Religion

By Prof. J. Gresham Machen
Princeton Theo. Seminary

Prof. Machen examines with care the various current theories. His conclusion is that the whole of Paulinism is derived from Jesus and from the supernatural Jesus of the New Testament. (Probably) $3.00.

The Prophetic Ministry for Today

By Bishop Charles D. Williams

For years Bishop Williams has practiced a persistent faith in the power of the spoken word to keep before men the high and unswerving standards that alone save a people from perishing. $1.75.

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Paton: Spiritism in Antiquity.....	(Probably) $3.75
Babson: Religion and Business—Eighth Ed. Originally $2.75.....	1.50
Swain: What and Where is God?—Eighth Ed. Originally $2.50.....	1.50
Hurt: Self-Help in Teaching.....	1.00
Wodehouse: Sunday Talks to Teachers.....	1.25
Berry: From Genesis to Revelation.....	2.00

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

64-66 Fifth Avenue

New York City, N. Y.

Fresh from the Field

(Continued from page 1228)

Rev. J. F. Speerli, until recently a pastor in the Methodist Protestant Church, has united with a Baptist church, and, of course, desires to continue in the ministry. The brother came before the Permanent Council of Camden, N. J., Baptist Association on October 3, at which time he made a statement concerning the matter of his Christian experience, etc., and the reasons for his change as far as denomination is concerned. The Council was unanimous in its recommendation that Mr. Speerli's ordination into the Methodist Protestant Church be recognized. Rev. W. S. Terrell of Haddonfield, N. J., presided at the Council and Rev. Wm. P. Haug, of Camden, N. J., served as Clerk. In the Recognition Service held last evening (12th) in Grace Baptist Church of Camden, N. J., the following brethren participated in the program: Revs. E. R. Williams, L. D. Bozorth, C. R. Hench, and the pastor of Grace Church, Wm. P. Haug.

Rev. Stephen Byron Dexter has resigned the pastorate of the Clinton, Ill., Baptist Church to become pastor of the church at Lincoln, Ill. A farewell reception was held for him October 6 at Clinton. He began his work at Lincoln October 9.

Hudson Orphanage at Irvington, Ill., is engaged in a continuous program of improvement and enlargement. The scheme for this present season includes an additional building that will provide three playrooms, four rooms for the "help" and addition to the dining; the whole to cost $10,000. Rev. N. F. Hafer is superintendent in charge.

Rev. and Mrs. William Ashmore, have recently returned to America after forty years of service in China. Mr. Ashmore's father was in China fifty years before his son. Mr. and Mrs. Ashmore are with their daughter, Mrs. Chas. R. Elder, in Boulder, Colo. They will go to California for the winter. Mr. Ashmore completed his translation of the Bible into the language of the Swatow people just before leaving for America. He hopes to return to China long enough to revise it before he retires from service. Mrs. Ashmore has written a detailed history of the South China Mission which can be secured from our publishing house. In Sept. Dr. and Mrs. Elder received the members of Boulder First Church and friends in celebration of Mr. Ashmore's seventieth birthday and on Oct. 7 they celebrated their forty-second wedding anniversary.

Church News by States

(Continued from page 1251)

Rev. Walter L. Bailey of Carlton, Ore., has accepted its unanimous call to become pastor. Mr. Bailey will begin his work October 16.

At RIO VISTA during the past year there have been thirty additions to the church. Fifteen of these have come from the Chinese mission recently organized at Locke.

At FORT BRAGG a men's brotherhood has been recently organized in the First Baptist Church by Pastor Howe, with a charter membership of thirty-five.

A CALL TO BECOME PASTOR of the church at Gerber has been accepted by Harry Alfred Kern.

At THE AUBERRY (White) Church the work has been resuscitated by Rev. C. H. Bancroft. Nine have been baptized and a number of others received by letter.

THE RESPONSE to the program and objectives that have been sent to the churches has been most encouraging. The churches are setting high goals for themselves and are making plans to reach these goals.

Rev. Arthur S. Phelps stated preacher at the First Church, San Francisco, began October 10, a series of eight lectures at the Berkeley Divinity School on "The Christian Message of the World's Greatest Pictures."

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Column of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

NAME PLATES

Chipped glass name plates are an interesting suggestion. Mr. Ralph Karney, a Baptist, of Rockport, Ind., is advertising them in this issue.

Write for prices on chipped glass name plates for your door, auto or desk. Any size or style. Ralph Karney, Rockport, Ind.

CHURCH DESIRES PASTOR

The First Baptist Church of Defiance, O. is pastorless. Communications may be sent to E. J. Webb, 715 Wolfgate Ave.

Remarkable New Christmas Pageant!

Companion production to the great Easter success

"THE DAWNING"

By the same author,
LYMAN R. BAYARD

"WHEN THE STAR SHONE"

REVERENT - COLORFUL - SCRIPTURAL

Beautiful in Action, Music and Spectacle
Thrills Audience with Religious Devotion

The pastor of a great church writes—"In my church it produced a profound religious impression. I do not think I have ever seen an audience more deeply stirred by a scriptural presentation."

Twenty or more copies..... 45c per copy
Any smaller quantity..... 50c per copy
(We cannot furnish free or returnable copies.)

Canadian Prices

Twenty or more copies..... 55c per copy
Any smaller quantity..... 60c per copy

Canadian orders should be sent to The Methodist Book and Publishing House, Toronto, Ont.

PAGEANT PUBLISHERS

1206-1208 South Hill Street

LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

6.05
Volume II

November 5, 1921

NOV 14 1921 Number 40

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

DURHAM CATHEDRAL, ENGLAND

Fresh from the Field

Rev. E. H. Shanks, who recently closed his work at Clinton, Iowa, and entered upon the pastorate of the First Church, Phoenix, Ariz., speaks in the highest terms concerning the work of his predecessor, Dr. G. M. Lehigh. "I found an active church, a growing Sunday school and a great opportunity in this capital city. It is worth being alive here. One feels like working even at 100 in the shade in the middle of October." Mr. Shanks says that people are so healthy down there that when they want to start a new cemetery they have to kill some one.

At the Pennsylvania General Convention held in Franklin this month a testimonial banquet was given in honor of Dr. LeRoy Stephens, who has served for twenty-seven years as secretary of the state education society. He was presented with a purse of gold. Dr. Stephens has passed his eightieth birthday, and the convention has made him secretary emeritus with full salary. Rev. H. J. Whalen presided at the dinner.

During a pastorate of about five years Rev. Robert J. Church welcomed 336 new members into the church at Arkansas City, Kans. Mr. Church has presented his resignation to take effect at the close of the present year.

Dr. O. C. S. Wallace, pastor of the Westmount Church, Montreal, has been called to the Eutaw Place Church, Baltimore, Md. His decision has not been announced. Dr. Wallace was pastor of the First Church, Baltimore, for several years and resigned in 1913 to go to Montreal.

The resignation of Rev. W. A. Hamlett, representative of the board of the Southern Baptist Convention in Jerusalem, has been announced. Dr. Hamlett has accepted the call of the First Church, Austin, Tex. The board wants it understood that this does not in any wise mean the abandonment of the plans laid for the work in Palestine. A successor will be appointed at an early date.

Great interest is being shown in the first series of lectures on the William Cleaver Wilkinson Foundation at the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. Dr. Augustus H. Strong is the lecturer. The course began Nov. 3 and will close Nov. 9. The lectures are open to the general public.

The evangelistic goal of the churches in Ohio is to bring to Christ and into the churches not less than 5000 persons this year. In the southeast district in November sixty pastors under the direction of Rev. C. H. Stull will become evangelists. The churches have released their pastors for this service and their pulpits will be supplied during their absence. The second general campaign will be in the southwest district in January.

A new bulletin issued by the Jefferson Avenue Church, Detroit, Mich., carries a wealth of information of local interest. It announces as its mission "Christian service and good fellowship. . . . To instill the spirit of unity and co-operation." What is the purpose back of your church bulletin?

Dr. John Y. Aitchison, General Director of the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention, returned on Oct. 24 to board headquarters in New York, after making addresses at a number of state conventions, chiefly in the Middle West. "I am greatly pleased with the spirit shown in all the state convention meetings," Dr. Aitchison stated. "In all of them there was unmistakable evidence of the deepening of spiritual life, and the realization of the necessity of taking care of the needs of the New World Movement. While our people are facing great problems, perplexities, and discouragements, there is evidence of willingness to sacrificially carry on our work during this financial crisis. It is apparent that there are some whose burdens are greater than they can carry alone. Therefore, those who are more able financially must help carry the burden of the weak, thus fulfilling the law of Christ."

Dr. S. P. Shaw, secretary of Nebraska Baptist Convention, has suffered a severe illness but is now well on the road to recovery. He was able to attend the recent meeting of the convention, although confined to his room most of the time.

The death of Miss Grace L. Coppock, in Shanghai, following an attack of pneumonia, is a great loss to the Christian forces of China. Miss Coppock began her work in China in 1906 and at the time of her death was the American head of the Y. W. C. A. in that country. Her former home was at Buffalo, Mont.

In 1920 more student volunteers sailed to foreign fields under North American missionary societies than went out during any previous year in the history of the movement. The exact number is 595, which is 25 per cent more than the record of the preceding year and 50 per cent more than the average for the last ten years. They were appointed by seventy-four different societies.

A statement by Rev. F. A. Hayward, city executive of the Federated Baptist Churches of Indianapolis, gives a most comprehensive outline of organization and program of work. In explanation he states, "We need a Baptist consciousness and nothing can bring that into a permanent existence except as we work, study, play and above all pray together for our common Christ and our beloved Baptist denomination."

Rev. Chas. E. McColey, pastor of the Plainfield Church, Providence, R. I., has called upon his young people to help him prepare a series of sermons on "Faults and Ideals." He has framed a number of questions and asked his people to write him frankly without signing their letters. His sermons will embody the suggestions given.

An increase of 300 per cent in the average attendance at the Sunday evening service is pretty good. Rev. Chas. F. Carl, pastor of the church at Leechburg, Pa., has by the use of the stereopticon brought about such an increase. "Of such is the Kingdom" has been the general subject and the pictures have been on child life the world over.

Evangelist John M. Linden, of Madison, Wis., will close his third consecutive meeting in Indiana at North Vernon, Nov. 6. He goes to Centerville, Iowa, and Nebraska City, Neb., before the holidays.

At the South Illinois Association, Dr. Wm. P. Pearce of Cairo, was given an hour each morning to speak on his delightful hobby: "The Prayer Life." It is said the atmosphere created was remarkable. Lately he has been speaking on the same subject in Hinsdale Sanitarium to the delight of physicians, nurses, patients and students. Lately he charmed the saints in the First Church, Pueblo, Colo. Dr. Pearce can be secured for a week or two and delights in answering such invitations where a church seeks to know God intimately. Large audiences hear him with delight.

The first teacher training institute in Argentina has been started by Rev. George P. Howard, Sunday-school Field Secretary for South America representing the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City. The time of the seasons is reversed in Buenos Aires and their intensive study months are during July and August. This year they have had one of the coldest winters on record and the thermometer was constantly several degrees below freezing. This fact affected the normal church attendance, as their churches do not have heating arrangements. The opening night of the training school was unusually cold and those in charge wondered about the size of the first enrollment. When the hour came for the registering of students the leaders were surprised at the number who presented themselves and in fact were unprepared to handle the many who came. Several new secretaries had to be impressed for immediate work. On that cold night there were 120 people present and 95 matriculated. Later enrollments brought the total well above the 100 mark.

The Belden Avenue Church, Chicago, was the scene of an enthusiastic gathering in celebration of the first anniversary of the coming of Dr. J. W. Hoyt as pastor. During the year 135 new members have been received into the church, fifty-three of the number by baptism. Dr. Myron W. Haynes and Dr. John A. Earl, former pastors were present and spoke. The men's class under Dr. Hoyt and the women's class under Mrs. Hoyt have set high membership goals for the year, the former 1000 and the latter 500. The pastor is leading the church in the study of the book of Revelation and the lecture room is crowded each week.

The Central Church, Duluth, Minn., Rev. H. R. McKee pastor, is conducting
(Continued on page 1260)

The Baptist

Vol. II                      November 5, 1921                      No. 40

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Committee on Publication:
Rev. James M. Stiffler                      Mr. Peter R. Finlay
Mrs. Clayton D. Eulette                      Mrs. Samuel C. Jennings
Mr. Wm. Ayer McKinney
Contributing Editors:
Pres. George E. Horr                      Prof. William Lyon Phelps
Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery                      Mrs. Bertha Grimmell Judd
Pres. Leonard W. Riley                      Rev. Frederick E. Taylor
Rev. S. W. Cummings                      Pres. John W. Bailey
Hon. Carl E. Milliken

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	1258
EDITORIAL .....	1261
A PRIMER OF THEOLOGY, by A. H. Strong.....	1263
THOSE OF ITALY, by Mary Argyle Taylor.....	1265
THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE, by Albert H. Finn.....	1266
WHO'S WHO AMONG BAPTISTS, by William B. Lipp- hard .....	1268
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE.....	1269
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1270
OUR YOUNG PEOPLE.....	1271
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	1272
THE BULLETIN BOARD.....	1274
A BAPTIST SEMINARY FOR MANY NATIONALITIES, by Charles L. White .....	1275
MICHIGAN BAPTIST CONVENTION, by W. F. Roberts.....	1276
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	1279
OUR MUSIC CORNER.....	1287

Help Those Women

One is always sure of a welcome in Minnesota. They "say it with Flours." Minnesota sets the record for an ambitious program for Baptist periodicals. In the printed outline of goals circulated at the meeting in Duluth the woman's societies have set for themselves the subscription goals of 1400 for Missions, 2000 for THE BAPTIST and 3000 for the North Star Baptist. Mrs. George E. Young of Minneapolis is taking a most active part in pushing the campaign. The pastors can be counted upon to help and encourage the women in a work which is fundamental in building up a denominationally intelligent church membership. Read the goals of the Illinois women in the report in this issue.

Killam's Kollum

An Impersonal Announcement.

Dr. Arthur S. Phelps of California writes: "I am shocked to see that your 'Exchange and Service Department' begins with the caption 'Pastors Available' and closes with the caption 'Back Numbers Wanted.' But Doctor, we are trying to reconcile our readers to the inevitable. We had no individuals in mind.

Beg Your Pardon.

THE BAPTIST will be under the necessity of opening after the example of the Chicago Daily Tribune, a "Beg Your Pardon" department. We owe the good church at Hillsdale, Mich., an apology. The proofreader in the issue of Oct. 29 page 1250 placed an "e" where there should have been an "i". Who says that there is no such being as a printer's devil?

If They Don't Who Will?

A business man in Billings, Mont., in renewing his subscription to THE BAPTIST said some nice things about us. This was perfectly proper and almost inevitable. He goes on to make some suggestions about the material which appears in our news from week to week. "It strikes me that you permit a lot of fellows to speak pretty well of themselves in your publication." He indicated the pastors were among those who praised themselves beyond all reason. THE BAPTIST rushes to the defense of the pastors (some of them) for not in all cases do they write the laudatory news. Some of the churches have made a wonderful success in training news agents usually in the form of some —well we won't say it.

A Noble Example.

"Please find $3.00 for my subscription to THE BAPTIST which expired Feb. 1921. The subscription is $2.50 and the fifty cents is for interest I owe by right in not paying it when it was due." M———, Brooklyn, N. Y. The brother is right. Interest to whom interest is due should be the subscriber's slogan.

Have You Voted to Keep or Kill the Kollum?

The whole question of the continuance of this Kollum is in the hands of our readers. Already the votes are coming in but there has been no time to count the ballots. Let us have a real referendum. Give us your reasons for or against the Kollum. It will at the worst go out in a blaze of glory for we hope to publish hundreds of replies. Use a post card or if you use a letter be brief. We have other work beside sitting over against the Kollum. How glad we are that THE BAPTIST belongs to the Baptists. It is your Christian duty to vote. Keep or Kill the Kollum! Oh! What suspense!

Fresh from the Field

(Continued from page 1258)

a campaign for their new church building. The church is located in a growing section of the city and the new equipment will add greatly to the efficiency of the work. The new building when completed will cost about $75,000.

Special meetings under the leadership of Dr. A. J. Fristoe, state evangelist for Maryland, were held in the Petworth purposes for the year ending May 1st, 1921, the sum of $660,043.20 as against $200,038.79 the previous year. The per capita gifts increased during the year from $2.88 to $9.50. In addition to the above the state contributed at least $50,000 in cash to the Baptist Old People's Home and the two orphanages, making the total gifts for benevolence approximately $710,000. This is equal to 4-5 of the last published sum on current expense. Baptisms reached a total of 4,481 as compared with 3,788 for the previous year conferences and attend various meetings in the principal centers of influence; and his tour is so organized as to constitute a world-wide propaganda among the most influential classes for peace.

Dr. John Marvin Dean has accepted the call of the First Church, Pasadena, Cal., and will begin work there about the middle of November.

Dr. Elijah A. Hanley has resigned his pastorate at the First Church, Rochester, N. Y., after accomplishing there a strong and vigorous work, and accepted the call to the First Church of Berkeley, Cal. Dr. Hanley is one of those men who irresistibly attract people to himself and his friends and fellow pastors in the East and Middle West will certainly miss his presence, but they cannot but congratulate him on the opportunity which will be his in Berkeley where his church is in close touch with the students of the university.

The Annual Meeting of the Baptist Orphanage and Home Society of Western Pennsylvania, will be held at the Home near Castle Shannon, Penn., on Thursday afternoon, November 10, at 2 o'clock. All Baptists of Western Pennsylvania are invited to be present.—HARVEY E. COLE.

Dr. J. W. Weddell has notified his church at Oberlin, Ohio, which he has served the past four years, helping also the broader interests of the denomination with pen and voice, that with the present year now drawing to a close that he will retire from the active pastorate. He expects to make his headquarters in Chicago residing at Morgan Park, his former home, where he will respond to calls for teaching, evangelism and permanent supply among the churches.

A group of Baptists in Baltimore, with Joshua Levering in the midst of them, have purchased a lot beside Johns Hopkins University in a rapidly growing part of the city, have erected a beautiful chapel and Sunday-school room and have unanimously invited Dr. A. C. Dixon to lead the movement. Dr. Dixon has consented to spend at least two months with them, beginning the first Sunday in November, on condition that he is not to be considered a candidate for the pastorate. The church has been named, "The University Baptist Church." About forty years ago Dr. Dixon was invited to Baltimore by a group of Baptists to lead a similar movement in establishing a church on the corner of North Avenue and St. Paul Street, which is now the Seventh Church and prosperous under the pastorate of Dr. Pinchback. At that time the beautiful section of the city, in which the University Church is located, was an expanse of open fields and forests. There are immense possibilities in this movement, and the prayers of the readers of this paper are earnestly requested for God's blessing upon this new church.

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved, and thy house," read Miss Minnie Gelhardt, a missionary of the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society in Cleveland. "How many does that include in your house, Elizabeth?" she asked. The dark-eyed child had been drinking in the words eagerly and with lightning speed came her answer. "Well, I have two little brothers in one grave, and a baby sister in heaven," counting on her fingers, "and then there's mother and father and me. That's six!" triumphantly. Elizabeth wanted them all saved!

KEUKA PARK COLLEGE BUILDING, NEW YORK

Church, Washington D. C., Rev. F. Paul Langhorne pastor. On the first Sunday following the meetings twenty-two were baptized. A number more will come into the church largely as the result of the meetings.

Among the university preachers for November and December at the University of Chicago we note the names of Dr. William C. Bitting of St. Louis, who will preach Dec. 11.

Col. John Sobieski is a member of the Temple Church, Los Angeles, and one of the distinguished citizens of America has for more than sixty years been actively identified with humane and reform movements in this country. Members of the Baptist churches of Los Angeles and citizens generally gave him a reception in Borean Hall recently.

Bible advertising in the street cars was authorized by the board of managers of the Williamette Association, Oregon. Mr. A. D. Bosserman is the man in charge. The Promoter in reporting the action says: "If you come to Portland and ride in the cars you may read, 'Good morning, young man. Have you seen II Tim. 2:15? I Thes. 5:22 will tell you exactly what to do.'"

Writing of the recent meetings in Dunkirk, Ind., Pastor Cooper says: "Linden has come to Dunkirk and Linden has gone but the results of his strong work will be felt for many days." The church has been quickened and many new members will be received.

Baptisms and increased gifts for Benevolences have kept pace in Illinois according to a report read at Rockford by A. E. Peterson, Promotion Director. The State contributed for New World Movement and 2,812 for 1919. The Rock Island Association reported more baptisms during the two years of the New World Movement than the seven previous years.

Bucknell University has shared in the general turning of our young people to institutions of higher learning. She has received about 300 new students and has a total enrollment of about 850. This increase in attendance has come normally from the position the University has attained in the State and from the estimate the Baptists have of its value to the denomination. President Hunt by his indefatigable labor among the churches is winning a strong patronage.

With the opening of this year Dr. Raymond M. West began his ministry as pastor of the local church at Lewisburg, Pa., and as the educational representative of the denomination in Bucknell University. His twenty years of pastoral work, his five or more years as State Executive in New Jersey and his two years as Life-Work Secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention have given him a background that makes his preaching vital to young people. Already by the presence of the students morning and evening the congregations have been doubled.

Rev. G. N. Stoddard has accepted a call to the First Baptist Church, Arcola, Ill. He goes from Decatur, Ill., where he has spent three successful years.

Under the joint auspices of the World Alliance of the Churches and The Federal Council of Churches of America, and with the encouragement and support of other international Christian bodies, Mr. Fred B. Smith is undertaking a tour of the world in the interest of international friendship and good will. He will hold

The Baptist

Some Trans-Mississippi Baptists

THE editor has just returned from a visit to some of the state conventions which meet well beyond the Mississippi River—namely in Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado. It has been a great joy to greet the pastors and the laymen and women of these states. They are Baptists through and through. They believe in Baptist principles and rejoice in the splendid history of the past. They believe that Baptists have a great mission in the present which only they can perform. Our insistence upon a regenerate church membership, upon a church modelled after the New Testament pattern, our protest against all sacramental notions and our belief that each soul has immediacy of access to God, our loyalty to the New Testament as containing the program for the kingdom of God, and all those other beliefs which have marked Baptists from the beginning are dear to them. And they look to the future with faith and determination. To sum up impressions of such people is not easy. And yet three things stand out prominently.

These people stand for a few evangelical truths which they believe that all Baptists must hold, in connection with those beliefs of which mention has just been made, or cease to call themselves Baptists. They are quite willing to grant to men liberty of theological interpretation, but within the limits of the Biblical facts which seem to them essential. They believe in the unique character and inspiration of the Scriptures which embody God's revelation to man and the program of the kingdom, and that these Scriptures are authority for the Christian. They believe that Jesus is the "express image of the invisible God," that he has borne our sins in his own body on the tree, that salvation is of the infinite grace of God and not of works, that Jesus has risen from the dead with an actual body, that he now makes intercession before the Father for all believers and that he will return according to his promise. They believe in the New Testament church and in the kingdom of God Jesus proclaimed. Other things they believe but those mentioned are the irreducible minimum. THE BAPTIST rejoices in the faith and loyalty of such genuine Baptists.

They have also an evangelical passion. In all of these states the number of baptisms for the past year has been exceptionally large. What has been done furnishes an incentive for the new year. There is hardly a church or pastor which is not aflame with a desire to win yet more during the coming twelve months into the kingdom. In every kind of discussion this passion and zeal tend to come to the front.

There is also a deep interest in and enthusiasm for the New World Movement. The first excitement is over. People are coming to the second mile on the road. They are seeing the difficulties in the way but are thinking that difficulties are things to be overcome. Obstacles are things that try men but should not be kept in the foreground. Not only do these Baptists have strong convictions but they believe that their convictions should be given a practical form in a program of service. So intense was the interest in discussions centering about the New World Movement program that at the Colorado convention the delegates wrestled with the questions involved until two o'clock in the morning in one notable session. The people attending these meetings are keeping the vision before their eyes and are saying, "This thing must be done, and with God's help we will do it. It may seem impossible, but our God is a mighty God and we will conquer in him." The hope of our great program of world service is in people who take just such a position. And if we are not mistaken, this is the attitude which is beginning to be manifest all over the North. May God speed it.

Is There Any Good Reason?

MANY statements have been given of the reason why individuals and churches have co-operated in the New World Movement. And many testimonies are at hand as to the spiritual benefits which have followed. Would it not be valuable to have at hand an honest statement of the reasons which have led people to refuse co-operation? Occasionally in conferences statements of this sort are made, but as yet we have not seen them gathered together. Moreover one often has the feeling that what is said is in the nature of excuse rather than of reason. One cannot listen attentively, however, without discovering that there are at least three heads under which the reasons people give for not participating may be grouped.

First, there may be prejudice. Sometimes this expresses itself in theological terms and sometimes differently. There was, for instance, the hostility to the Interchurch World Movement—to the excessive expense and the overlordship idea. Probably the Interchurch will not be correctly estimated in its results for some years to come. But it is clear that in places the criticism of the movement was easily taken over and applied to the New World Movement. There was for a long time confusion in people's minds between the two. This is gradually clearing up. Only occasionally now does one hear criticism of the New World Movement on this ground. And when it does appear, laughter is provoked in the audience. We must admit, however, that suspicion and prejudice have played no small part in the doings of the last two years.

Then, there is lack of information. Through some failure of local leadership, the people have not had the real facts presented to them. Often it has happened that such churches have responded quickly when they have been informed. For this lack of information there is no excuse. The denominational press has abounded in material bearing on the movement; literature has been distributed with a generous hand; and there is always a chance to write directly to 276 Fifth Avenue,

New York, and get whatever knowledge may be lacking.

Occasionally also it has been suggested that there are men who are willing to take any excuse which seems reasonable for not parting with their money. Such men will find wholesome exercise in examining their own objections in order to see what value there may actually be in them. Piety and orthodoxy should not by any chance be allowed to be confused with niggardliness.

All of these constitute real difficulties in the way of the ultimate success of the movement. How fortunate it is that there have been so many churches which have been able to overcome misunderstandings because they were unwilling to take the worse view of any situation and determined to think well of their leaders and the plans which these leaders have, through mental sweat and spiritual agony, been able to formulate. Had it not been for these churches Northern Baptists would by this time have been hopelessly shamed in the presence of the tasks and opportunities which in these unsettled yet challenging times are crowding upon them.

The duty before every co-operating Baptist and church is perfectly clear. It is to seek out the non-co-operators and so to deal with them in the spirit of faith, love and prayer, that prejudice may be transformed into praise, information in abundance may be made available, and a sense of Christian stewardship developed in every member of every church, whether the Lord has given him much or little money. Ultimately there is no reason for non-co-operation which may not be overcome.

Pray for the Armistice Conference

THE conference which is to discuss limitation of armaments, and which has within it the possibility of doing great things for the peace of the world and for removing the burden which war and warlike preparations have laid upon the peoples of the earth meets on November 11. The eyes of all the world will turn towards it with hope and fear. The war which was to have ended war has not removed the threat of new struggles. The weary nations continue to hope that in some way this new gathering of the representatives of great nations may succeed in accomplishing what the peace conference did not do.

Christian people will not fail to remember the call to prayer which has gone out to all our churches. This is a time to mobilize all our forces in the interests of world peace. The force of public opinion is something. Churches do well to express themselves with the utmost vigor through resolutions and in other ways. But the force of prayer is even more. One cannot conceive the power with which a nation at prayer may act in a matter like this. World problems are so vast and so complicated that they seem often beyond the control of individuals, however wise and good these may be. But what man cannot do God can do when men will allow him to work through him. There are divine resources which can and do accomplish miracles. God can bring peace to the world if Christian people will give him the chance.

Pray, therefore, for the conference. Let us gather in our churches in meetings, great and small, for this purpose. Let us give the subject attention in our homes and in our private devotions. A great volume of prayer, ascending to the throne of God, should mark, not only the coming week but the entire period during which this conference sits. Our God can do all things when the people are willing and obedient. Speak now, for the Lord heareth.

Are You Good to Yourself?

A SMALL boy and his sister were sent by their mother to the grocery store. They made their purchases and started for home, the boy graciously allowing his sister to carry all the bundles. She asked him to take some of them. "Naw," he said, "I won't! Carry them yourself." "You are awfully good to yourself, aren't you?" she replied.

This thing is a parable of events in the denomination. Northern Baptists, following the largest vision they ever had of world conquest in the name of Christ, are struggling and sacrificing in order to carry on the biggest program of which they ever dreamed. Many of the churches are carrying heavy loads and doing valiantly with them. There are others in every state which are sharing in the Baptist heritage and reflecting the glory of Baptist achievement but which have as yet not laid so much as a finger to the big task. They are "awfully good to themselves." What might not be achieved if all would help to carry the work of the denomination as loyally as some of the churches have done?

Is your church one which is trying to be good to itself in the sense of the boy's remark? Or is it following the truer way of serving its own interests by losing its life in the present wonderful program into which God has led Northern Baptists?

* * * *

In this issue THE BAPTIST begins the publication, in eight installments, of "A Primer of Theology," by Dr. Augustus H. Strong. Dr. Strong has the entire confidence of the denomination and any expression of his mature thought warrants careful consideration on the part of all Baptists. Persons who have never made a careful study of theology will find in these articles a syllabus which should be of great use in giving them a general idea of the field covered. We suggest that our people hear Dr. Strong through before they deluge us with letters concerning the matters of which he speaks.

* * * *

The annual meeting of the Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention is being held in Indianapolis, Nov. 1-4. THE BAPTIST expects in its next issue to present a careful summary of the important actions taken. No meeting in recent years has been more important than this one. The middle year of any movement is always a critical time. The problems to be faced call for man's best wisdom and God's constant direction. The members of the Board will meet in the consciousness that they must fail unless God is with them. But they will also meet with the full determination to go God's way to success. Watch for the report of this meeting.

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

PREFACE

MANY times of late I have been asked to put the salient points of Christian doctrine into more popular form than that of my "Systematic Theology." I aim in this little treatise to meet such a demand, by condensing and illustrating what I have previously written, with some additions from modern philosophy and literature. I wish, however, to say at the very start that the truth which I present is not derived from either philosophy or literature, although I use these to throw light upon it. Before I knew much of philosophy or literature I had learned that truth, from Scripture and from my own experience. I have thought it needful, therefore, to verify my statements of Scripture by definite citations, and to help inquirers by occasional references to my own published books, in which they may find matters more fully discussed. My allusions to personal experience run the risk of appearing too autobiographical, but I comfort myself with the example of the apostle Paul, who found in his own heart the best confirmation of Scripture teaching.

Although this treatise is a Primer, in the sense of brevity and simplicity of statement, I cannot call it "milk for babes," for the reason that the matters discussed are the greatest and most profound. I would make it a positive and constructive statement, rather than a refutation or denunciation of false doctrine. I desire to recognize whatever of truth there is in the theory of evolution and in the conclusions of the higher criticism. But I have felt bound to show that there is a downward as well as an upward evolution, and that the higher criticism is not supreme arbiter in the interpretation of Scripture, but that it must be accompanied and qualified by the insight furnished by the Spirit of God. Modern literature furnishes us with methods of composition which are unhistorical, yet well fitted to convey essential truth. I have used these to show the possibility of their use in the composition of the Old Testament. I hold, therefore, middle ground between the higher critics and the so-called fundamentalists, and believe it possible for them both to reconcile their differences, by a larger view of the deity and omnipresence of Christ. He is "our Peace," and he holds in his girdle the key to all our problems. It is with the hope of doing something to bring about such a reconciliation, that I print this new statement of doctrine. Since my aim is above all to exalt Christ as Lord, I commend what I have done to his blessing.

AUGUSTUS H. STRONG
Rochester, August 29, 1921.

I. GOD IS SPIRIT

MANY years ago, when I was a pastor in Cleveland, report came to me that one of the members of my flock, superintendent of my mission-school, and professor in a medical college, was teaching his Sunday school the most arrant materialism. I invited him to a brotherly conference, and asked him what was his conception of God. He gave me an answer that would have done credit, or discredit, to a Mormon or a Swedenborgian. God, he said, was a being in human form, but of vast dimensions, spread out in space, with body like our own, man himself, in fact, being only a miniature god. When I reminded him that God is spirit, he replied that spirit is only a form of matter, thin and subtle, but capable of thought. I did not succeed in convincing him of his error. Dealing in his profession solely with the body, he could think only in terms of materialism: matter, space and time, were all and in all. Our conference ended in an amicable arrangement that he should resign his place as superintendent, while he still listened to my pastoral teaching as a faithful member of the church. In all probability few of our church members have done their thinking so logically, or have carried their thinking so far. Yet I am persuaded that very many are handicapped in their Christian progress by similar misconceptions of God; and I begin my statement of doctrine by pointing out that "God is spirit" (John 4:24), and that this implies, not only that God has no visible form, but that he is also absolutely independent of space and time.

My medical friend's misconception of God was due to his wrong beginning. Dealing in his profession only with the body, he had come to believe that man is only body, and that God, in whose image man was made, must also consist only of body. He should have reflected that man is essentially spirit, and that spirit is not itself body, but that it only uses the body. And spirit is invisible. I can never see you, with any outward sight: I can only see the body which you inhabit. Your inmost self, your ego, reveals itself in the play of your features and in the sound of your voice; but the cause of these changes is hidden from me; in fact, some men put on looks so false and use words so misleading, that their real selves are quite the opposite of what they seem. Though spirit expresses itself in form, it has no form; though it lives in space and time, it is not the creature of space and time, but is independent of them. And since knowledge of ourselves is the only clue to our knowledge of God, we conclude that spirit in God, like spirit in man, implies absence of all external form, and complete independence of space and time.

This is the clear teaching of the Scripture. "No man hath seen God at any time," says John's gospel (John 1:18); he is "the invisible God" (Col. 1:15); "whom no man hath seen, nor can see, says the apostle Paul (1 Tim. 6:16). Apart from his manifestations, God's being would be unknown. Only as we penetrate into the secrets of our own being, can we understand him; and even our philosophizing goes astray, unless corrected by God's self-revelation in Jesus Christ. A part of that self-revelation is furnished us in the declaration of the book of Ecclesiastes that "God hath set eternity in our heart" (Eccl. 3:11 marg., and Miscellanies, 1:313-334), and in the statement of Paul that in Christ we are made "citizens of heaven" (Phil. 3:20, and Miscellanies 2:159-174). As spirit in us has no form, and is invisible, so God, as pure spirit, has no body, never can be seen, yet is present everywhere and always. There was once an atheist who tried to teach his daughter by writing on the blackboard: "GOD IS NOWHERE." But the child read it more correctly: "GOD IS NOW HERE." The doctrine of omnipresence is simply this: The whole of God is present in every place and at every time.

This conception of God as spirit antedates some of the conclusions to which modern science is drifting. Einstein's "relativity" is an assertion that time and space are simply relations of material being; they have no independent existence; without matter, they cease to be. Not only Science, but also Philosophy, now sees the world to be psychic. But a psychic world demands a Psyche; a universe demands a Unifier; for "psychic" means "possessed by, or manifesting, a psyche, or a soul." The philosophy that holds to universal thought, feeling and will, while it ignores or denies any soul, source or standard of truth, beauty of goodness, is like the smile in Alice's "Wonderland," which remained, after the face to which it belonged had disappeared. William James well characterized such philosophy as "rotten"; by which I understand him to mean, cut off from its source of life, and therefore decayed, corrupt, and offensive to God and man. If the universe is psychic, there must be a Psyche and a Unifier. That Psyche, that Unifier, must be a mighty Will, creating, unholding, energizing all material things; material things indeed are only the forms of his volition, while He, as spirit, is the invisible cause of all.

This mighty Will, just yet benevolent, is according to Scripture "King of the ages" (1 Tim. 1:17, marg.), that is, Creator of space and time, not subject to space and time, but including them in his own being. With Him, not only is "one day as a thousand years" (2 Pet. 3:8), but he lives in an everlasting Now, in which all history, past, present and future, is condensed (Miscellanies, 1:313-334). As he is essentially Will, we are created wills, capable of a relatively independent action, while our bodies are products of his constant volition, and he "holdeth our soul in life" (Ps. 66:9), even when we use these bodies to sin against Him (see my "Christ in Creation," 30-35).

God is not only spirit; he is also personal. When we apply the term personal to God, we must not put into it any unspiritual or materialistic meaning. God is a personal being, because an intelligent and loving Will is impossible without self knowledge. The very word "consciousness" implies duality, a subject that knows, and an object that is known. But this duality of self-knowledge sometimes becomes contrariety and insanity; a man can hate himself and run away from himself, as from an alien enemy. The prodigal son "came to himself" (Lk. 15:17), and so became normal. Duality can become fellowship, only through a third consciousness that the two are one; and this turns the duality into a trinity. There are indeed instances even of a triple consciousness within the same human personality; and the case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, which Robert Louis Stevenson has detailed to us, is not mere matter of a novelist's imagination. But no analogy suffices here. Three persons in one Personality constitute a union so unique that Earthly analogies are only imperfect pointers toward its absolute perfection—they simply suggest that there is nothing irrational, but rather the highest reason, in the conception that an eternal Word stands over against the eternal God, as his expression and counterpart; and that an eternal Spirit completes the self-knowledge and voluntary activity of Deity. The personality of God, as intelligent and holy Will, implies the existence of three distinctions in his being, which are best described as three persons, and which we name Father, Son and Holy Spirit. The Father is God unexpressed, and independent of space and time. The Son is his one and only medium of expression, his eternal object of knowledge and end in volition, his only word of communication to creatures. The Holy Spirit is the organ of fellowship; making the Trinity an infinite society of communion and love, even without the existence of creation. Three persons are requisite, in one mighty Personality, to constitute that

"living Will that shall endure
When all that seems shall suffer shock";
and a trinitarian theology is necessary, if we are to believe in a living, loving, and self-sufficient God.

I have already intimated that the second person of the Trinity is called not only the Son, but also the Word of God. By this last designation it is implied that he who became flesh, and who is known as Christ, is God's means of expression, not only to himself, but to creatures. In truth, we may well say that God never thinks, speaks, or acts, except through Christ. We know the significance of words, in our own intercourse with others. I meet a man casually in the street. As he brushes by me, a single profane word opens to me the depths of his evil heart. A little word of kindness and compassion, from a gentlewoman to a child, tells me the whole story of a mother's love. But for those words, the spirit would have been hidden. The single word has expressed the inmost being. "In the beginning was the Word," says the prologue to John's gospel. "And the Word was with God, and the Word was God" (John 1:1, 2). In eternity past, as we may conceive it, Christ already existed as God's means of expression to himself, and as the object of his knowledge and love. It is still through his eternal Word, that God reveals himself in creation, providence, and redemption; and the whole physical universe is only the operation of Christ's will. This too is the assertion of Scripture, for John continues: "That which hath been made was life in him" (John 1:3, 4, margin).

Let me make this relation of Christ to the Father more plain, by citing the allusion to it in the book of Revelation. There it is said, of the heavenly city, that "the glory of God doth lighten it, and the lamp thereof is the Lamb" (Rev. 21:23). God is light; but light diffused is never seen; we see by it, but we never see it; only as light is concentrated, is it ever seen. Christ, the Lamb, is the concentrated light of God; he is the Lamp, in which God's light is made visible; even in heaven, we shall never see the Father, except as he is expressed in Jesus Christ. And so our Lord himself says to Philip: "He that hath seen me, hath seen the Father; how sayest thou: Show us the Father?" (John 14:9). And Paul sees "the light of the knowledge of the glory of God" only "in the face of Jesus Christ" (2 Cor. 4:6); while the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews speaks of Christ as "the effulgence of God's glory and the very image of his substance" (Heb. 1:3). All the light of God is concentrated in Jesus Christ, so that he is the only God with whom we have to do; he is God manifest in the flesh (1 Tim. 3:16); in him is all the fullness of the Godhead bodily (Col. 2:9); in him are hid all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge (Col. 2:3). Andrew Fuller once said that the doctrines of theology were "united together like chain-shot, so that, whichever enters the heart, the others must certainly follow." This is peculiarly true with regard to our view of Christ; and what I have said of him will determine and dominate my whole subsequent treatment of theology (Mat. 22:42).

Those of Italy

"I gathered them into that 'inward eye' which makes a bliss of solitude . . . and it came over me like a promise that perhaps we . . . may in the future yet see an amazing harvest in a galaxy of souls as beautiful as this late Alpine flowering."

By MARY ARGYLE TAYLOR

IT is a favorite device of the Roman Catholics to pose as the only Church Universal and in Latin countries, to play upon national feeling, accusing the Evangelicals of being aliens bought with foreign money and traitors to their own land. In Italy, whose history is full of foreign domination, intrigue and greed, people are, not naturally, peculiarly sensitive to this jeer, and it has been used for all it is worth. But Italian evangelicals are a steadily, if slowly, growing element in the nation and where they are known are gaining the respect if not the benevolence of the public. They were well represented in the war where more than one evangelical minister was killed at the front, and humbler Christians disarmed prejudice by their consistent conduct.

Two Baptist Ministers Died for Italy

Two of our Baptist ministers lost their lives. Both of them were poets of some literary gift. One, Rocco, was a young fellow from the South, much beloved by us all, who had been assigned, as was customary with priests and pastors to the Sanitary Corps. Feeling that as a man without family, he did not wish to skulk behind the lines, he resigned this post and volunteered for the front among the ardite, a corps devoted to the most desperate enterprises. A touching instance of the Italian power to feel the other man's side is displayed in a little, very simple poem, he wrote which was copied by many of the Italian papers, in which the Italian child says, "Mother, the little Austrian girl prays to God for her father as I pray to Him for mine—God bless her prayer too!" He was killed in an advance attack of the Italians and his death made a deep impression in the little town of the Salerno province where he was stationed as evangelist when the war broke out, and the commemoration service was attended by the town authorities.

The other, Arbanasich, an older man, and a student, had translated the Gospel of Luke into the Sard dialect and had written some good hymns in Italian. He died from his wounds after reaching his home near Genoa where he was pastor of one of our little churches. His father, another of our ministers, was a native of Trieste and had felt bitterly the domination of his own Italian city by the Austrians, so that there seemed a sort of poetical justice that the son should die to win that city for Italy. He was given a military funeral in Chiavari and his widow, a consecrated Christian, the daughter of another revered Baptist minister, has lived on there with her four little daughters and a beautiful boy born while his father was at the front, winning the respect of the community by her consistent life and the exemplary behavior of the children in the public schools. A nun who taught the little girls always referred to them when any question arose about Bible history in the class as they were the only ones who knew about it, and she said one day—"Your mother is such a good woman she really deserves to be a Roman Catholic!" She is now about to become the matron of our new Baptist Orphanage on Monte Mario just outside of Rome. We are enlarging a beautifully situated villa for that purpose, at least to make a beginning, hoping, with new funds, to build more extensively later on the fine site we have purchased.

Work of a Brilliant ex-Franciscan

A recent effort to vindicate the Evangelical name in Italy has been made by another of our Baptist ministers—Piero Chiminelli—a brilliant ex-Franciscan who is an eloquent preacher. His "The Lord's Prayer in the Modern World" and his attractively written "Life of Jesus of Nazareth," published by our Bilychnis Press had a wide sale during the war and we had to print last year a second edition of his "Jesus of Nazareth" to supply the demand. As we have effected a union with the Mission of the English Baptist Society, our church in Florence has been fused with theirs and is shepherded by their evangelist, so that Signor Chiminelli, formerly pastor there, has had time to do some special research work in the libraries and archives of Italy. As a result, last year, he produced a valuable book on the "Bibliography of the Italian Reformation," and he is now working up the manuscripts of the same subject. In honor of the VI Dante Centenary this year 1921, appears his attractive volume on Dante study throughout Reformed Christendom with especial reference to Italy. The pretty illuminated cover is by our Baptist artist Paul Paschetto. Ten chapters are devoted to the Italian Protestants, or evangelical sympathizers, who down to our own day have studied, translated, made Dante collections, or furthered knowledge of the great national poet. The six other chapters are devoted to the Dante cult in Switzerland, France, Germany, England, the United States, Holland, Sweden and Hungary. The book and the ample notes and references, printed beautifully on excellent paper contain many interesting details of the story of what Italian exiles for their faith have done in the past, and shows especially the revival by Protestants of Dante study when he was little appreciated by the Roman church which now so devoutly claims, and celebrates, him as one of their very own. His account of the Orelli family, of the great Swiss Dante authority of Italian descent, Pastor Scartazzini of Gabriele Rossetti and of many others is new to the average reader and the English and American chapters are well done for a man with only a slight knowledge of English. One wishes that among the great English Dante-lovers, he had mentioned Macaulay and Gladstone, but where there is so much it is invidious to ask for more or to wish that some typographical errors in foreign names had not crept in.

Italy's Heart Throbs for Dante

The appearance of the book is most timely. The heart of Italy palpitates for Dante in a way incomprehensible to men of other nations. He is not only their greatest poet but their very voice and embodied Word. He is to them what the English Bible has been to generations of Englishmen—their well of language and terse, noble expression. King and peasant feels that Dante is his very own and there has been much feeling and much artistic genius in the beautiful commemoration at Ravenna, Florence and Rome. Army, navy, priest and people have joined in the celebration, and it is only right that Italian Protestants should vindicate their right to join in this anniversary of their Divine Poet and show what a noble part of herself Italy—or rather the Inquisition—cast out in the XVI century. An item of the Dante centenary may interest Baptists particularly. The Baptistery of his “bel San Giovanni” has been restored to the shape and size that it was in the poet’s time because he is said to have saved a child from drowning in it.

Their Dishonored Dust

For many years, Italian Protestants had no abiding place for their bodies even in the cemeteries. In most places their graves, as of unbaptized heathen, were made in some neglected spot outside of the consecrated pale. In Rome they were buried in the cemetery for foreign residents made famous by the graves of Keats and Shelley, but about twenty years ago, the Roman municipality had to recognize that their increasing number could not find place there. Italian evangelicals, no longer rare exotics, were assigned an outlying, forlorn section of ground on the edge of the city cemetery. With a sick heart, I saw the earthly remains of beloved and honored dead laid away in that weed-grown, despised field. This spring, after a six years’ absence I attended the funeral of a member of our Roman church, an active witness for Christ in the police force of which he was a superior officer. How gladdened I was to see the change in that outcast place. It has become one of the greenest and prettiest parts of the vast cemetery. There are no big marble or brass monuments for we have few of earth’s wealthy among our Evangelicals, but the cypress lined approach has grown into a noble avenue, the graves are green and well cared for, flowers are not wanting and on even the smallest slab there is a passage from the Scriptures to attest the faith of the departed.

A Mountain Meadow Vision

Late in September, I was walking among the lights and blue shadows of the high Alps. Spring and Summer flowers were over; only hips and haws were left to brighten the bushes; we had had even a snow-storm to powder the peaks. But it was a radiant day with air like elixir and as I turned the shoulder of a giant mountain a rarely lovely sight suddenly gleamed before my eyes—it was a broad meadow gemmed, and starred, with exquisite diaphanous, irradiated purple crocuses—not an inch of the ground was bare—the happy child by my side lost his warm, chubby clasp of my hand and rushed entranced to make a bouquet for “Muvver,” but I gathered them into that “inward eye” which makes a bliss of solitude where live the daffodils of Wordsworth, and it came over me like a promise that perhaps we who have agonized over the cold avidity, the petty scandals, the disillusion and careless criticisms of our Baptist Mission, and have blushed for the heedless superficial sowing of some, mourning for the noble lives apparently sacrificed to it in vain by others, may in the future yet see an amazing harvest in a galaxy of souls as beautiful as this late Alpine flowering—

“Methought that of these visionary flowers

I made a nosegay, bound in such a way

That the same hues, which in their natural bowers

Were mingled or opposed, the like array

Kept these imprison’d children of the hours

Within, my hand,—and then, elate and gay,

I hasten’d to the spot whence I had come

That I might there present it—O! to whom?”

Italy, Sept. 27th, 1921.

The Washington Conference

By ALBERT H. FINN

NONE of us appreciate as keenly, as deeply, as we should the significance of the disarmament conference called to meet in Washington, D. C. in November. November 11th is already a historical date because of being Armistice Day, but this new date may be an even more potential day if our President, and Secretary of State shall be able to bring the five great powers invited to a new and higher plane of thinking and action, internationally.

After the Delirium

The victorious allies were in a delirium of delight at the signing of the treaty of Versailles; but as we come to sense the import of its terms and realize how selfish, how inconsiderate, how far removed it was from idealism, we truly rejoice that the Senate did not approve of it and thereby involve the United States in this impracticable super-state.

The world is war weary. This is a very desirable state of mind even when resulting from such awful cost. There have been many attempts looking to world peace but the most of them have been glaringly insincere. Nationalism, selfishness and diplomatic intrigue have not as yet been done away with. The greatest object lesson in the world is the four thousand miles of boundary line between the United States and Canada which for more than one hundred years has gone undefended by soldier, fort or battleship. There have been international differences—many of them—but all have been settled in a sane, Christian manner.

France is friendly and grateful, but she has Asiatic complications as well as European.

Great Britain is very friendly with the United States but her allied dominions do not see just eye to eye with the parent nation. Then Great Britain has a load of dependencies which are somewhat staggering. She has had much experience in colonization and world diplomacy—in fact has acquired an international mind. The United States has much to learn along these lines and is in a measure impotent, because our diplomatic service has been too much given over to the spoils system. In other words our ambassadors are not brained men in diplomacy, but men of political importance, or scholars, or lawyers of renown, which is quite a different matter when it comes to meeting trained experts who live and think only in international relationships.

Washington Will Test Diplomacy

Possibly it has been well that, as a nation, we have endeavored to develop a new type of diplomacy and the American standard will undoubtedly be put to the test at the Washington conference. The Anglo-Saxon mind is so different in its processes from the Oriental mind. The Asiatic and Italian minds do not work in perfect understanding or harmony and when we remember that China and Japan are both to be in the conference with their intricate and almost divergent interests, involving the peace of the world, we begin to appreciate, only in a vague way, the delicacy of the situation that the Washington conference will bring into action.

The United States is anxious to keep out of European entanglements and yet the whole world has narrowed down almost indescribably within the past ten years that it may not be quite possible. The nations of the world are all coming to have a clearer knowledge of each others problems which of itself is helpful, but there remains so much of ignorance, of prejudice, of selfishness, of lack of confidence, that we should not expect too much of the coming conference.

Some Unknown Equations

Germany, Russia, Turkey and other lesser nations are as yet unknown equations. Japan is internally divided between her peace and militarist parties. The peace party seems to be in the ascendancy but the militarist party were largely educated in Germany under the gospel of "Might makes right," and it is difficult to say how far they will go with their program. Then China is in such pitiable condition by reason of her internal dissensions. What can be hoped for?

The whole world is making great advance in international thinking and relationships. Methods that obtained ten, twenty years ago, are now considered reprehensible. That means there is developing a world conscience that will have an important bearing upon world peace. The United States has shown a spirit of brotherhood, of sympathy and service to Europe, to China and now to Russia, that is making an impress that none can measure. Japan seems to be the touchy, sensitive member of the conference. Can she sense and desire this new standard of international relationship—a sincere desire to serve? We must not forget her problems of existence for a rapidly increasing population. She must expand, but where? Can she retract on her Chinese, Korean and Siberian policies? Does the Monroe Doctrine apply only to America? Just what is the Monroe Doctrine? Shall she be called upon to surrender that which she gained at Versailles? She has already shown a fine spirit in joining the consortium. She cannot remain outside the Washington conference. What does it mean to Japan?

The whole Pacific problem of naval bases, fortifications, cable stations, etc., has so many ramifications. Japan has not alone sinned against China. What about the other nations who have taken advantage of China's impotency? There are many other questions growing out of a consideration of halting the foolish, endless competition in armaments.

God Must Take Hold

These are but intimations of a few of the greatly involved issues at stake. Can we understand what all this means to the Christian church? The hopes and aspirations which Jesus Christ enkindles will be woven into the entire woof and texture of the conference. What will mean to us as Baptists? What to the kingdom at large of our Christ? The very least and it should be the very most that anyone of us can do is to continually bear this potential meeting to the throne of grace. God is still supreme among the nations. Our own President, our own Secretary of State and all the other members of the conference should be earnestly interceded for, that they shall be guided by divine wisdom and Jesus Christ be honored.

A Buried Talent

By J. H. MERRIAM

THOSE who are informed of the remarkable development and extension of the scope and influence of public libraries in the last few years seem to concede that they are crowding the public schools for supremacy as an educational force.

Some religious organizations such as the Christian Science, Jewish, New Thought advocates and others, seem to appreciate this and are diligently using it, but our evangelical churches apparently have not yet waked up to the importance of it and are doing nothing to make it effective in church work. Such Sunday school libraries as are still in existence are many years behind the times and most of them have been buried, and the rest may about as well be buried in the cellar of oblivion.

But there seems to be absolutely no reason why every one of our churches, large and small, in the cities or in the country, should not have a helpful library and reading room opened during certain hours each week with a responsible librarian in charge, and equipped with the best reference books, text books and other books adapted to interest, instruct, train, develop and help children and grown people, Sunday School teachers and other workers in the church and all its departments. Illustrated travel books, periodicals, magazines, charts, posters and even stereoscopes and storytelling hours could be made to per-

"And I, too, sing the song of creation,—

A brave sky and a glad wind blowing by,

A clear trail and an hour for meditation,

A long day and the joy to make it fly;

A hard task and the muscle to achieve it.

A fierce noon and a well contented gloam,

A good strife and no great regret to leave it,

A still night and the far red lights of home."

form the important functions of interesting and educating people of every age.

It would not be necessary to raise a large amount of money to supply the books required; many of the most useful could be contributed or loaned by individual members of the church and many could be furnished by the public libraries, who are always eager to extend and increase their circulation of books and furnish helpful instruction in modern methods of library extension work.

Sermons, lectures or informal talks on the latest and best books would be of unfailing interest and instruction, and a sales table could be maintained to make it easy for individuals to purchase the best and most popular books.

Places of great influence and helpfulness are waiting in every church for those who are qualified to give wise, well-informed and consecrated advice to our young people on books to read, vocations to choose and how to prepare for service.

Who's Who Among Baptists

A Review of Contemporary Biography

By WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

REV. JAMES H. FRANKLIN

In 1912 the Board of Managers of the Foreign Mission Society was faced with the problem of finding a new Foreign Secretary to succeed the late Dr. Thomas S. Barbour. After long, patient and earnest search, the board elected James H. Franklin, at that time pastor of the Baptist Church of Colorado Springs, Colo. To sever his happy relations with the church proved most trying, but in obedience to duty Dr. Franklin accepted the election. His subsequent record has fully demonstrated the wisdom of the board in appointing him to this position.

Dr. Franklin was born in the village of Pamplin, Va., where his father lived for many years following his retirement from the Confederate Army. He was educated at Richmond College and at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., from which he was graduated in 1898. His early denominational career was spent in the West, where he served as pastor at Leadville, Colo., and later at Cripple Creek, Colo. Following a brief service as district secretary of the Home Mission Society, he became pastor of the First Church at Colorado Springs, which he served for six years. He has been a member of several denominational committees and for two years was recording secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention.

During his nine years of service with the Foreign Mission Society he has made an exhaustive study of the foreign mission work of the denomination and has made several official visits to its mission fields in the Far East and to Europe. He had previously visited Africa in 1911, as a member of a special commission sent by the denomination. During the winter following the armistice, Dr. Franklin was sent to France to study the need of religious reconstruction and relief work, particularly in the devastated areas. His book, "In the Track of the Storm" has received wide circulation. Because of his service in France the French Government through General Robert Nivelle conferred upon Dr. Franklin the distinguished decoration of the Legion of Honor. He is also the author of "Ministers of Mercy" of which several editions have had to be printed. The great relief program in which Baptists are now engaged in Europe is the denomination's response to the suggestion to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" which Dr. Franklin made to the board just prior to the Northern Baptist Convention.

Through personal observations as well as extensive correspondence, Dr. Franklin has acquired an amazing knowledge of missionary problems, policies, and activities and a wide acquaintance with missionary leaders in all parts of the world. For a number of years he has been a member of the Committee of Reference and Counsel of the Foreign Missions Conference and recently was elected the Baptist representative on the International Missionary Council. He possesses an unusual capacity to see things in the large, and to interpret the great world movements of our time in their relation to the missionary enterprise. His refreshing personality, his broad sympathy, and his unflinching courtesy have won for him hosts of friends who recognize him as a denominational leader, a missionary enthusiast, and a devoted disciple of Christ.

He is now in the prime of his strength and growing in breadth of vision and in power for leadership.

WALTER S. HUBBELL

The city of Rochester has achieved an international reputation because of four leading institutions. The first is its university, splendidly equipped, which will soon possess one of the finest medical departments in the world. The second is its widely known theological seminary, whose graduates are today serving on every continent on earth. The third is the Eastman Kodak Company. It would be difficult to find a place on this planet where the kodak is unknown. The fourth is the famous Hubbell Bible Class for Men at the First Baptist Church.

It is a remarkable coincidence that one man should have built his personality and influence into the progress of these four institutions. Walter S. Hubbell is a graduate of the University of Rochester and for many years has been an active member of its Board of Trustees. In a similar capacity he has served for twenty-nine years on the board of trustees of the theological seminary and also on its executive committee. Although the latter meets frequently and although Mr. Hubbell is an unusually busy man, it is seldom that he misses a session. The unprecedented success of the Kodak Company and the world-wide distribution of its products are in no small measure due to the business and legal ability of Mr. Hubbell. He has been its legal adviser, for he is by profession a lawyer, and for many years he has served on its board of directors and more recently as its vice-president.

Doubtless Mr. Hubbell personally derives the greatest satisfaction from his service as teacher of the Hubbell Bible Class. This wonderful organization has grown from an attendance of twenty-five men to an average Sunday attendance of well beyond 350. On special days, such as Easter, it is not unusual for 650 men to be present. Since 1892, nearly thirty years ago, this class has grown, prospered and has been inspired under the leadership of this distinguished Rochester lawyer and Baptist layman

We must understand what democracy is. It is not intellectual equality. It is not leveling down all men to a dull mediocrity. Democracy does not mean that one man is as good as another, but that all are good enough to have a voice in saying who the best ones are. Democracy does not mean dislike of excellence or pre-eminence. It means not that all are equally able, but that each man shall have the chance to develop the utmost ability he possesses, and rise to the summit if he can, whether in scholarship, in athletics, in dramatic or musical organizations, or in general leadership of student opinion. A true democracy is a society where excellence is demanded, high ability is recognized, and every man is big enough to rejoice if some one else is bigger. A fair field and no favors and joyous acclaim for those who rise to the greatest heights—that is the democracy of America and of Brown.—PRESIDENT W. H. P. FAUNCE of Brown University.

The Devotional Life

O God, Who hast made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hast redeemed them by the precious blood of Thy Son Jesus Christ, we worship Thee as the Father of us all. We bless Thee that in the tempest of human passion which has swept over the earth in a devastating war Thou has graciously preserved Thy Church to bear witness unto the truth of Thy Fatherhood and of human brotherhood.

We approach Thee in deep humility, confessing our sins, both personal and national. We deserve Thy chastisement, for we have not kept Thy law nor have been mindful of Thy precepts. We have been proud and presumptuous; we have not loved our neighbors as ourselves; we have not preached Thy Gospel to all nations. Grant unto us and unto all men repentance and faith that we may turn from ourselves to Thee the only true God.

Comfort, we beseech Thee, those that are in distress. Open the hearts of Thy people in our goodly land that they out of their abundance may feed the famishing, clothe the naked and minister to the sick. Especially do we commend to Thy fatherly care the congregations whose churches have been destroyed, whose pastors have suffered persecution even unto death, and whose people have been scattered as sheep without a shepherd.

O Thou Prince of Peace, Who gavest Thy life that there might be peace among men, hear the prayers which we offer this day for the speedy coming of the time when nations shall know war no more. May Thy Holy Spirit incline the hearts of all who have authority or power to promote good-will among all people. Guide with Thy heavenly wisdom the counsels of those who seek the disarmaments of the nations so that waste of life and treasure may cease and that peace and plenty may come to all mankind.

Awaken Thy Church to heed Thy command to Preach Thy Gospel to all nations. May she joyfully hasten to enter the doors that are now open everywhere to the messengers of the Word of Christ, to Whom, with the Father and the Holy Spirit, be all the glory, world without end. J. A. SINGMASTER, in The Lutheran.

"Devotionals" In Colleges

Daily devotional exercises in colleges as easily become stereotyped as the saying of grace at the family table. And yet the "old grad" testifies that he looks back to the religious Chapel services with happy memories and a feeling that they have had for him the richest life-content of all the routine of his college life.

The majority of active students also value such exercises, tho they now and then wish they had greater variety. Their "reaction" has been observed at Hillsdale College this autumn. The services have been uniformly and avowedly religious, consisting of carefully selected classic church hymns, scripture read by the leader, or in responsive form, comments upon the spiritual needs of men and women, a chant by all as a response to the prayer, the "Shepherd Psalm" or Lord's Prayer in unison, and the like. A reverent atmosphere and attention have been conspicuous. In token that reputedly care-free boys and girls in college are responsive to the religious appeal, the following extracts are reprinted from an editorial of a student editor of the Hillsdale College paper:

"One of the oldest and most sacred of college traditions is the chapel service. At no other period of the day do students and faculty meet in so close and corial communion. The spirit embodied in the devotional services and chapel talks does more than anything else could possibly do to establish friendly relations among the members of the college family. Furthermore, there is a sense of quiet peace and good will consequent upon the few minutes spent in earliest and solemn thought each morning, which puts the student into a calmer and more industrious mood. * * * Chapel is what the students make it, just as all college activities reflect their attitude. The character of the student body of a college is

Autumn Leaves.

By FREDERICK R. GREUL

Time—say the autumn leaves, can sift
Our various ways, with change and shift,
And ev'ry mark of joy erase
From off the gladsome human face,
Though upward turn'd to cloudless sky.
Time demonstrates that all must die.
Thus say the leaves, yellow and brown.
Bereft of life, sweet nature's crown,
Faded and dead, on sloping hill,
Scatter'd beside the quiet rill,
Destined never again the glow
Of life, or grace of form, to know.

And yet—there is immortal rest.
An altar burns within the breast,
A work of love, where like a bird
In vernal days, love's song is heard.
No with'rd hope is drooping there.
Not even death can bring despair.
Kind thoughts have glorified the hours,
And made them sweet, as fragrant flow'rs.
A mystic weaver at the loom
Braids perfectly, as flowers bloom.
The threads of faith, in forms divine,
That neither fade, nor yield to time.

plainly indicated by the kind of chapel in vogue and the students' opinion of it. Thus the students and the chapel service are inseparable in the eyes of visitors who judge by externals. When one fails the other fails and it is only by mutual support that both can render the greatest service to the institution."

The Foreign Mission Society Rents Another Warehouse

The plan to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" has evidently met with enthusiastic response on the part of American Baptists. Visitors who have called at the warehouse at 348 East 23rd Street, New York, N. Y., and have brought their own packages, have been impressed, and indeed astounded, at the amount of supplies already received.

During the last two weeks mail wagons, delivery trucks and express drivers have stopped several times each day, unloading hundreds of packages, boxes, bags, crates and barrels. Missionary V. G. Krause has received by mail scores of freight bills of lading, which indicate that a large amount of supplies has been sent by freight. The basement of the warehouse is already piled high with boxes and packages, and the rear of the warehouse floor is filled to the ceiling with completed bales which the baling machines are now turning out at the rate of 25 per day. The congestion has become so great as to interfere seriously with further sorting and baling and the Foreign Mission Society has therefore found it necessary to rent additional warehouse space, where the completed bales will be stored until their transfer to the steamship pier.

The variety of things sent in is not only interesting but reflects also the wide response to this relief appeal. Hundreds of cakes of soap of many standard as well as relatively unknown makes, thousands of pieces of underwear, overcoats, suits and caps have been received and are all properly sorted. Of more tender significance are the numerous bonnets and coats for little children, tiny pairs of shoes and infant's stockings and sweaters. Many of the latter are quite new and indicate that people have spent much time in knitting these garments in order that the children of Poland and Latvia may be made comfortable during the coming winter. In one corner of the warehouse are great piles of blankets and comforters which will be packed separately and properly labelled so as to facilitate their distribution. It is pleasing that practically everything is in good condition, clean and durable, and hardly anything has, thus far, had to be discarded. It is a motley array of boxes, cartons, packages, bags and bales which the visitor finds at the Baptist relief warehouse. Each package, however, tells in unmistakable terms the story of a response to a human need and an answer to a human appeal and an effort to come to the relief of those who are in distress.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for November 20.

PAUL BEFORE THE KING

Acts. 25:1-26:32., Golden Text, 1 Cor. 15:20

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

From Felix to Festus marks the transition from Chapter 24 to Chapter 25. Noble Romans seem to have been scarce in provincial service. Festus was only another edition of Felix. His motive was to curry favor with the Jews, therefore he proposed to send Paul to a violent death by having him meet his accusers in Jerusalem. The appeal to Caesar was forced by the political trickery of Festus. Paul made up his mind that he would be safer in Rome than in either Caesarea or Jerusalem as the case was going, and then should he be sent to Rome his long cherished desire would be gratified. The appearance of Paul before Agrippa was not in any sense a legal appearance; it was simply an attempt on the part of Festus to entertain his royal guests with something out of the ordinary routine.

The Lesson Taught

Paul before as a man, a Jew, a prospective Christian, marks the progress of Paul's appeal.

Agrippa The Man

It is true, Paul is well aware of the position Agrippa occupies. The opening words of his address acknowledge this fact eloquently; but he quickly passes by the tinsel of royalty and comes directly to Agrippa as a human being. The story of his conversion leads Paul up to his first climax which is found in the opening words of the printed lesson. "Wherefore, O king Agrippa, I was not disobedient unto the heavenly vision; but declared both to them of Damascus first, and at Jerusalem, and throughout all Judea, and also to the Gentiles, that they should repent and turn to God, doing works worthy of repentance." Paul had only one gospel for Jew and Gentile, rich and poor, king and peasant,—the gospel of a common human level. Agrippa was a kinglet ruling over a small province by the courtesy of Caesar for political reasons; but he inflated the value of his position to the bursting point by putting on airs which his subordinate kingship did not warrant. To this man Paul preached repentance in common with all other men. If Paul had been brought before Agrippa as a judge to answer legally for his imprisonment, his attitude would have been different; but as he was there to "make a Roman holiday," and entertain the king and his sister, Bernice, he was free to speak to the king in any way he felt led. The gospel was the one theme to which Paul always turned when he had opportunity, and whether before kings or governors or common people or slaves he faithfully proclaimed the common level of mankind as sinners against God, and the common need of turning to God, and the common test of repentance in worthy works.

Possibly at this point we modern preachers and teachers make too many allowances and distinctions. The new times, the new world, the new outlook, and the new universe revealed by modern science are so attractive that we are in danger of losing the sense of what is old,—old sin and the old way of salvation and the old obedience to Jesus Christ which never change. Down in the human heart are common needs which no changing world can supply. The preacher must always follow Christ and his greatest interpreter, Paul, in addressing himself to men as men in spite of all racial, social and religious distinctions.

Agrippa The Jew

Agrippa was not a pure Jew. He was a hybrid, and yet the Romans classed him with the Jews. He was the grandson of Herod the Great, king of the Jews. However, he was enough of a Jew to understand the Jewish religion as an institution. This is Paul's second approach to Agrippa. At first he addressed Agrippa as king but with his common humanity in mind. General statements without direct personal application mark the words of Paul as he tells again the story of his conversion to Christ. Interrupted by Festus who charged him with insanity, Paul turns to Agrippa and directly addressing him, says, "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets?" And without waiting for Agrippa to reply, Paul immediately adds, "I know that thou believest." In this part of Paul's address he is endeavoring to capitalize the inheritance of Agrippa as a Jew. He had no appeal to Festus, because they had little or nothing in common, but with Agrippa, Paul had much in common, "for the king knoweth of these things, unto whom I also speak freely, for I am persuaded that none of these things is hidden from him." This is Paul's second climax. He appeals to Agrippa on the basis of what they each have in common,—faith in the prophets and knowledge of Jewish hopes.

This shows Paul's consummate skill with men. With the Athenians he put himself in rapport by showing himself familiar with their literature and life, and now with Agrippa he seeks common ground in the Jewish religion. He knew as we should know that only by establishing points of contact could he hope to win men to Jesus Christ. It is well enough to deal in generalities when addressing men in the mass, but when one man is selected he must be dealt with as Jesus dealt with Nathaniel, Nicodemus and the woman of Sychar. Possibly the Christian ministry is too general today. There is need for a return to the method of Paul with Agrippa,—the personal method which first establishes confidence by emphasizing what is held in common.

Agrippa as a Prospective Christian

Paul reaches his third and final climax when he expresses his dominant desire for the salvation of Agrippa in these words, "I would to God, that whether with little or with much, not thou only, but also all that hear me this day, might become such as I am, except these bonds." This is the only answer Paul has for the jibe of a king who would create a laugh at Paul's expense by exclaiming, "Me a Christian. Do you really imagine, Paul, that you could make me a Christian?" There is a world of sarcasm in the words of Agrippa. Into the word, Christian, he pours all the contempt that the Jewish and pagan world coined it to express, and out of the word, "me," he extracts all the sweetness and pleasure that his official pomp and position had put into it. "Me a Christian!" Why the two things are as Kipling said about East and West, "Never the two shall meet." But Paul undismayed and moved profoundly by his yearning desire for the salvation of souls takes no notice of the "fling." "Call me a Christian, if you like; but I would to God, that both King Agrippa and all others who hear me this day were as I am barring these chains." That is Paul's sublime answer to the sneer of a king and to the indifference of his courtiers. Nothing could quench the love of Paul for men. Only deep regret and disappointment assailed him, but no word of judgment issued from his lips upon his tormentors.

Good Reading for Young People.

MILTON M. MCGORRILL

Young people want to be up-to-date on the best methods of doing things. No back numbers are possible where they are concerned. There is a new series of books just off the press that contains some vital material on some problems in which young people are interested—the Judson Training Manuals. The first in the series is "Story-Telling Lessons" by H. E. Tralle. This book gives practical, common sense methods of developing in one's self the great art of story-telling. Its material is easily understood for the method of presentation is clear, definite, and attractive. "Our B. Y. P. U." by J. A. White, the second in the series, is the latest book on methods in young people's societies. It is presented in question and answer form so that common problems of young people's work are raised and means of settling them suggested. "Plan-

(Turn to page 1286)

Young People's Work

Topic, November 20.

THE GOODNESS OF GOD

Ps. 34:1-10 (Thanksgiving Meeting.)

"I will bless Jehovah at all times, His praise shall continually be in my mouth."

From the quiet but eventful days of Gov. Bradford, 1623, up to 1864, when President Lincoln appointed a day of thanksgiving, up to this day, we have been having services of thanksgiving; but we have more to be thankful for today than ever before in our history. Let us look at some of the ways in which God has manifested His Goodness to us:

1. Our republic is the most favored nation on the globe. We can say this in spite of all the distracting things—strife between capital and labor, unemployment and unrest.

2. Our religious heritage is greater than any other. In the last few years we have seen the forces of God moving forward in the accomplishment of great tasks. We can mention only a few of the evidences of these things:

(1) The feeling of brotherhood. In spite of the charge that the twentieth century spirit is surcharged with selfishness, there is a growing feeling of brotherhood in stores, factories, shops, etc.

(2) The effort of Christian evangelism. Last year saw a great ingathering into the churches of the land. Further, we have taken more seriously the problem of world evangelization. Along with this great advance, and on every side, we have seen the goodness of God. How a study of God's Word has laid upon our hearts the obligation of winning a world to the Saviour!

(3) Growing out of this evangelism is our present-day effort in Christian education in the churches and in our Christian colleges. Baptists have not always taken the task of education seriously. There is the dawning of a better day. The light of a benevolent sun is already breaking. No one can look at these mighty forces at work and be a pessimist. Instead of pushing the world downward to a complete smashup, we will get hold and lift 'er toward God.

*'Better to weave in the web of life
A bright and golden filling,
And to do God's will with a ready heart
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, slender threads
Of our curious lives asunder.
And then blame heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit, and grieve, and wonder.'*
(M. A. KIDDER.)

"That was a great day for the human race when the last touches were put upon the glorious Parthenon, and architecture came to its perfection of beauty. That was a great day when Raphael completed the Sistine Madonna and painting reached its highest mark. Those were great days when men invented the steam engine, the telephone, the telegraph, the electric light. But above all other days was the supreme day when the Perfect Man appeared. Cicero in his Tusculan Disputations tells us that ancient thinkers discussed what sort of a man the just man would be; but nobody discusses that now, for the ideal of humanity has been revealed in Jesus. The wonderful dreams of the world's philosophies and religions have come true at last in the Man of Nazareth. All their prophecies, longings and the imagings find their fulfillment and more in Him."

As we trace the influence of this One down through the centuries to our day we are made to realize the goodness of God.

SOME FUNDAMENTAL RELIGIOUS NEEDS OF YOUNG PEOPLE

To know and accept God as their Heavenly Father through Jesus Christ, His Son and Saviour and Lord.

To master intelligently the more important facts and truths of the Bible and know how to use them in their own lives and in helping others.

To know the more important facts about church history and important principles of Baptist churches.

To know the more important facts about great missionary and philanthropic movements of the Christian church, past and present, and to properly relate themselves thereto.

To know how to pray and how to lead and to cooperate in the social worship of a Christian assembly, including a knowledge of how to use scripture reading, hymns, prayer and testimony so as to secure the most effective results.

To maintain a wholesome, rich and fitting social life in their own group and with other groups of their church and community.

To be able to lead others to accept Christ as Saviour and Lord.

To seriously consider the work of the ministry, Christian missions, or other special Christian work as a possible life work.

To know how to be "good stewards" of time, money and personal powers, including both the ability to earn and to properly use that which God can give of money and of personal worth.

To know how to conduct a church business meeting in a business-like way.

To know how to work with others both in initiating new plans, co-operating in their adjustment and helping bear the burden of seeing them through.

AGENCIES WHICH ESPECIALLY APPEAL TO YOUNG PEOPLE IN BAPTIST CHURCHES

The Sunday school, with its organized teen age and young people's classes should always be considered as a central factor in religious educational work for young people. Other agencies and plans should be co-ordinated with its program. Conversely the Sunday-school program should be enriched and developed to its utmost capacity to meet the needs of our young people, and all young people's classes should be organized.

The B. Y. P. U., which with its varied devotional, educational, social and missionary activities offers the largest possibilities of any one agency for meeting the needs of a general organization for all the young people in the average Baptist church.

The W. W. G., a special missionary organization for girls providing for their training in missionary knowledge and work and their proper relation to the work of the American Baptist Woman's Missionary Societies. A Junior W. W. G. may be formed for earlier teen age girls.

SPECIAL

The big young people's convention meets in St. Paul, Minn., next July. Plan now to attend.

DEAF AND DUMB B. Y. P. U.: East Avenue Church, Austin, Texas, has perhaps the only B. Y. P. U. in the world organized exclusively for deaf mutes. The union was organized by Miss Jennie Moore who has been doing a wonderful work among the deaf and dumb in Austin.

WEST VIRGINIA Baptists have closed a very successful assembly. The meetings are held in the commodious buildings of Broadus College, Philippi. Kenneth F. Leeson of Parkersburg is the new president. The two educational leaders are Rev. Julius Fishback and Miss Fairy Van Gilder. Sixteen new volunteers was the result of the Sunday afternoon service. Rev. A. B. Winters says: "We had two hundred of the finest most purposeful young people in the state in attendance."

BROOKLYN NOTES

Prayer Changes Things

That the young people of Brooklyn believe this is evident by the number who were present at the Quiet Hour Service from 7:30 to 8:30 on the morning of the Annual Rally, which was held at the Baptist Temple on October 6th.

The Temple was filled with delegations from Brooklyn and Long Island societies, all of whom responded to Roll Call with either a Scripture verse or a song. Fred Ashplant, president of the Union, presided.

"The Mind of Jesus"

The speaker, Dr. A. Ray Petty of Judson Memorial Church, New York City—introduced as the man who delivered the Coronation Address at the B. Y. P. U. of A. Convention in Cincinnati—never had a more appreciative audience than that which listened to his exposition on "The Mind of Jesus." He drew a heart-stirring picture of the helpfulness, the sympathy, the tolerance, the true democracy and the sacrificial love that characterized the mind of our Saviour.

(Turn to page 1286)

The Chimney Corner

Pat. Applied For.*

PAT was out of a job!

What was worse, nobody seemed to want him. And of all the places he had been to in the last ten days—and the advertisements he had answered! But always some other boy just ahead of him got the job.

Now he was a bit hungry—not that it mattered to anybody but himself, now that "Mither" was gone. "Mither" had known clever ways of cooking up a stew out of almost nothing at all—but "Mither" was gone forever and ever and ever.

Pat scuffled along through the fallen leaves and felt blue—terribly blue. Nobody loved him; there was nobody for him to love; no place to work; no money jingling in his patched trousers' pockets; nothing to eat;—why it seemed like the end of the world! So he kicked the crackly brown leaves, feeling fully as shriveled and useless as they.

He wouldn't try any more. He'd just go to some orphan asylum and ask to be taken in. That there were such places, he well knew. Soon after his mother's death, he had heard Mrs. Flanagan, who lived in the flat above, say to Mrs. Murphy, across the street, "Poor Pat! Now it's an orphan asylum that'll have to take care of 'im."

"What's an orphan asylum?" Pat had demanded.

Mrs. Flanagan turned very red, but she began enthusiastically, "Oh, it's a hively place, where you can have a bed to sleep in, and plenty to eat, and you don't have to pay, and—"

But that was enough for Pat. "I'll not go to the orphan asylum," he broke in, "I'll work for my own grub!" And ever since, Pat had been trying to do just that.

When he grew so tired looking for that job—that someone-else-always-got that it seemed as if he couldn't walk another step, he would think of his mother. Remembering how proud she had looked when she said to him, "Yes, Pat, it's poor we are, but we've never had to ask for help yet," he trudged bravely on. But now—well, he had tried for the last time. He kept on walking, though, just because he didn't know what else to do. Where were the orphan asylums, anyway?

Toward the end of the afternoon Pat found himself on a hillside overlooking the city. As he shuffled through the crackly autumn leaves, his foot hit something. It sounded—yes, it actually sounded like money! Breathlessly Pat raked through the leaves with his fingers, looking for the thing-that-sounded-like-money. Finally he found it; but it wasn't money; it was a sort of button, rectangular in shape, with five bars of color across it—red, yellow, blue, white, and black. On each stripe was one word, forming a column of five, reading:

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Are You Your Brother's Keeper?

Pat snickered. "Wish't I was," he said, winking at the questioning button; "but I ain't got no brother—see? Guess you've rung up the wrong party!" Then he turned it over and read across the upper celluloid rim these astonishing words, "Pat. Applied For." Almost forgetting his troubles, he laughed again. "Pat Applied For! Well, now! Nobody ever applied for Pat McMullen; only wish they would!" Still chuckling over his own joke, he read on. Across the bottom of the button were these words: "United Miss. Campaign, 720 Mercantile B'l'd'g." This was even funnier than the words about Pat. "So it's a Miss that wants me, is it? Maybe, she wants an office boy."

But at this thought, the corners of his mouth dropped again. He couldn't be anybody's office boy; nobody wanted him; he'd have to be an "orphan." So what was the use of joking? However, that jolly button seemed to mock his melancholy mood. Perhaps the laugh had helped. Maybe it wouldn't do any harm to try again. He would try—just once more—to find some one who wanted him. And if he found that some one,—my, how he would work!

Pat pinned the button into his coat lapel, turned, and marched back in the direction from which he had come. For didn't he know the Mercantile Building? Wasn't it big and tall, with two "slick" elevators that popped you up to the roof in no time at all? He would go flying up to Room 720 and ask "Miss Campaign" if she didn't want an office boy. As Pat stepped into one of the two big elevators in the Mercantile Building, "Seventh floor," he said casually, just as if he had been saying it for years. But his heart tripped uncomfortably fast as he opened the mysterious door marked 720. After all, he had no reason to suppose "Miss Campaign" needed a boy. Perhaps the real office boy would drive him out of the room.

However, it was not an office boy, but an elderly gentleman who saw Pat come in. "Hello, sonny!" he said pleasantly. "What can I do for you?"

"I'm Pat!" Pat answered and paused. "Glad to meet you, Pat," said the gentleman. "What can I do for you?"

Still, Pat was silent. What had he come to say? Fortunately, the elderly gentleman had a twinkle in his eyes—a "go-on-don't-be-afraid" kind of twinkle. When Pat discovered this, he wasn't afraid, and he did go on. He took the button from his coat.

"Look a' here!" he said, pointing out the letters on the back. "Pat. Applied For." Well, I'm Pat. Oh, I know," he hurried on, as the elderly gentleman looked bewildered and amused both at once. "Of course, I know that doesn't mean me, but you see, sir, I've been doing nothin' but applying—applying for a job, you know,—and nobody wanted me, and when I saw that on the button, it made me laugh, and then I thought I'd try again, just once more, and—" Somehow, before he knew what he was going to do, Pat had told the gentleman all about it—about "Mither," and about the weeks he had spent hunting for a job, and about the orphan asylum. Perhaps he wouldn't have told so much, but the elderly gentleman looked more and more twinkly and asked so many questions—not "rubbery" questions, but friendly questions—that Pat couldn't stop talking.

When at last the long story was finished, the elderly gentleman was very red in the face and took off his glasses to wipe his eyes. "Don't go—sit down here—only a minute," he said, and went into the next room, where Pat could hear many voices. After what seemed a very long time, the elderly gentleman came back looking very happy. "Well, Pat," he exclaimed, "you're applied for. There's always room here for a boy who wants to work hard. Can you begin to-morrow?" Of course, Pat could "begin to-morrow."

That next day was the first of many in which Room 720 was like a home to Pat. He swept the floor as tenderly as "Mither" used to brush his thin, worn coat; he sharpened pencils as if he were carving a beautiful statue. He filled the inkwell with such care that the elderly gentleman's thumb lost its inky smooch. He polished the door-knob until, in its shining depths, the Youngest Lady, on her way out, could take one glance at her tip-tilted hat.

Of course, Pat had not been working very long before he learned all about "Miss Campaign." These words meant a Missionary Campaign of all the churches in town. The motto was, "Are You Your Brother's Keeper?" And that meant, are you interested in helping your Chinese brother? The five colored stripes on which were the five words were those on the flag of the new Chinese Republic.

There was just one thing that kept Pat from being perfectly happy these days it was such a very big thing that often he was not happy at all. There was no body to care about him—that is, nobody except the “Campaigners.” They were good friends, but they weren’t “folks.” It seemed as if he had never missed “Mither” so badly as now, when every night he had so much to tell her. If only he had a brother or sister!

*From "Friday's Footprints." Copyright, The Judson Press.

One day, in one of those rare moments at the office when he had nothing to do, Pat was spelling through the fascinating posters that decorated the walls. It would seem from these posters that there was a lot of the world that lived outside America! Of course there had always been Ireland—for Ireland was where grandfathers came from. And France was the place where you went to fight if you were old enough to be a soldier. But now, all of a sudden, other big places became real to Pat. Great chunks on the map became very real indeed when you connected them with the brilliant posters.

On this particular day, there was a brand-new poster hung up to look at. “Am I my brother’s keeper?” it read, and showed that for every Christian in the United States there are forty-two Chinese who have never even heard the name of God. There was a picture of them at the foot of the poster: they stood there, one black-clothed American and forty-two blue-clad Chinamen. You could count them for yourself and see.

“Jingoes!” exclaimed Pat, much excited. “Forty-two brothers—in China—and last night I was wishin’ I had just one here. It’s about time I began to get acquainted with them!”

Next day when the Youngest Lady was not quite as busy as usual, Pat asked her how you went about taking care of forty-two Chinese brothers anyhow.

“Send ‘em to school,” she said, licking up envelopes pell-mell. “Costs twenty dollars a year.”

Pat was stunned by the thought of such a large sum of money; but he was determined that before the year was over, he would have taken care of at least one Chinese brother or know the reason why!

After that, Pat became stingy to himself. He had to be so, for a brother at twenty dollars a year means nearly six cents a day. The Youngest Lady noticed with relief that he had stopped chewing gum; he picked up extra jobs in his off-time—like shoveling snow, or carrying bags for people from the depot to the street-cars. At Christmas time, when the office people clubbed together and gave him five dollars for a present, nobody understood his whoop of sheer delight. But it meant one hundred days of “brother” unexpectedly paid for!

The following year, the elderly gentleman, who was treasurer of the “Campaigners,” found a strange, chunky letter on his desk one morning. When he opened it, all kinds of money spilled out—pennies, nickels, quarters, bills—and this note also.

“Dere Chinese Brother, I dont no your name but hears the 20 dollars. dont you walst it, for im poor and there’s 41 more brothers still on me hands. I used to be blew and lonely, but I got to urn so much money to get you all edyoucated that I’m all rite again. I hop youll lik reading and riting they make a kid nice. they tell me you worship an eyedoll in China. say you stop it. thats wun thing wot this hear 20 dollars is for. are you a baseball fan i am. Goodbuy for now.

Your bro. Pat.”

The elderly gentleman showed the letter to the Youngest Lady, and she cried! They wrote a very special letter to a missionary in China, and some months later Pat had a marvelous reply:

“Mr. Honorable Brother Pat, your princely help are receive with grate gratitude. Now shall I unworthy with careful enter the heavenly school and fill my modest stomach with good wisdom as you offer. Are it pleasing to you, then I study this Christian doctrine. Much people is please over it already. As for the baseball fan we do not operate it in China, —feather bamboo silk and paper are our favorite fan for blowing. Eagerness I look upon your next beauty letter, celestial Pat. Cousin Wu Sin Yin are write this he being of English a new student.

With loveness,

Kom Loi.”

When Pat finished reading this brotherly letter, he straightened his shoulders and said: “Well, there’s only forty-one more now!”

Pat had found his job.

The Young Reserves

SANTA CLAUS’ PARTNERS

Dear Young Reserves:

Perhaps it is because you are not very familiar with “Interesting Baptists” that so few of you have competed in the contest closing November 1. The winning essay will be printed week after next. Those that have come are exceedingly good.

And now, here is a new contest subject which will surely appeal to every single one of you: for once upon a time didn’t you play Santa Claus’ partner to somebody who wouldn’t have had any Christmas at all if you had not helped? Write and tell us about “How I was Santa Claus’ Partner,” mailing it to the Chimney Corner Editor by December 1. Then it can be printed in time to give the rest of us ideas to put in practice this year; and the prize will be sent to the winner in time for his or her own Christmas stocking. Won’t that be fun? If you have never, never, never been a S. C.’s Partner, then perhaps you would like to be a pretend-partner, and write an imaginary account of the delightfully unexpected way you helped bring a Merry Christmas to someone. In that case call it: “How I dreamed I was Santa Claus’ Partner.” There will be a prize for the best of these imaginary accounts, too. So put your wits to work, and let’s help each other to make this the merriest Christmas that ever was. With love from your friend.

MARGARET T. APPELEGARTH.

Prayer-Hymn for Missionaries

*Forget them not, O Christ, who stand
Thy vanguard in the distant land.*

*In flood, in flame, in dark, in dread,
Sustain, we pray, each lifted head.*

*Exalt them over every fear,
In peril come Thyself more near.*

*Thine is the work they strive to do,
Their foes so many, they so few.*

*Be with Thine own, Thy loved, who stand,
Christ’s vanguard, in the storm-swept land.*

—MARGARET SANGSTER.

A Fall Down-Fall!

How carelessly the Mother Spring
Must sew the leaves upon the trees!
For with the tinnest autumn breeze
They all rip off like anything
And lie about untidily—
A sorry sight for one to see!
I know if I were Mother Spring
I’d sew them on with stouter string.

* * * * *

*The roasted chestnut once again
Is with us for a term,
The same old appetizing smell,
The same astonished worm!*

TIME TO GO NUTTING!

Can You Pick These Nuts?

1. If you go down to the seashore what kind of nuts should you find?
2. What kind of nuts should be in a pood?
3. What kind of nuts should we wear in the yokes of our dresses?
4. What kind of nuts should you find in the partitions of a house?
5. What kind of nut comes from South America?
6. What kind of nut should grow at the end of the Schoolmaster’s switch?
7. What kind of nut begins with a girl’s name?
8. What kind of nut is likened to slant-eyes?

UP A TREE!

1. What part of a tree is like a dog?
2. What part of a tree is like giving away?
3. What part of a tree is like an elephant?
4. What part of a tree is like a pig?
5. What part of a tree is like a stream?
6. What tree is beloved by heroes?
7. What tree has a double?
8. What tree is not myself?
9. What tree never fades?
10. What tree is very spick and span?
11. What tree is warmly clad?
12. What tree languishes?
13. What tree is the senior of the forest?
14. What tree is the favorite?
15. What tree’s name sounds like two letters of the alphabet?

The Bulletin Board

A Creed for Believers in a Warless World

- I. We Believe in a sweeping reduction of armaments.
- II. We Believe in international law, courts of justice and boards of arbitration.
- III. We Believe in a world-wide association of nations for world peace.
- IV. We Believe in equality of race treatment.
- V. We Believe that Christian patriotism demands the practice of good-will between nations.
- VI. We Believe that nations no less than individuals are subject to God's immutable moral laws.
- VII. We Believe that peoples achieve true welfare, greatness and honor through just dealing and unselfish service.
- VIII. We Believe that nations that are Christian have special international obligations.
- IX. We Believe that the spirit of Christian brotherhood can conquer every barrier of trade, color, creed and race.
- X. We Believe in a warless world, and dedicate ourselves to its achievement.

Federal Road Aid at the End of Five Years

On June 30, 1921, the close of the fifth fiscal year since the passage of the Federal aid road act, which is administered by the Bureau of Public Roads, United States Department of Agriculture, the States and Federal Government had completed 7,469 miles of road, and 17,977 miles were under construction. Including the work completed on projects still under construction, the States have completed work which entitles them to draw on the Federal Treasury for $118,915,515. During the last fiscal year the total of completed projects jumped from 1,677 to 7,469 miles, and the projects under construction increased from 14,940 to 17,977 miles. The money earned by completion of work has grown from $40,097,881 a year ago to $118,915,515 at the end of this fiscal year. The amount earned during the year was $78,817,634, or nearly twice as much as the amount earned during the four years preceding. The new projects submitted during the year bring the total amount of Federal aid obligated up to $247,956,456, as compared with $109,830,366, which was the amount obligated on June 30, 1920.

They Are Trying it Again

There is a movement on foot among the farmers now to establish a system of co-operative marketing, according to The Biblical Recorder. This means, as we understand it, that the farmers will have a central agency through which their products are to be sold. Cotton, for instance, will be stored in warehouses and put on the market when prices are advantageous. The manager will not flood the market so as to reduce prices, but will sell gradually in order that prices may be maintained. Cotton will be carefully graded and put in lots, just as is done with tobacco when carried to a warehouse for sale.

Arrangements will be made whereby money can be procured with cotton in a warehouse as security. This cotton, of course, will be insured, so that in case of fire the banks lending the money will be safe. Money will be advanced for perhaps two-thirds of the market value of the cotton, thus relieving the farmers of immediate financial pressure.

Radical Critic Becomes Missionary

The Christian World, London, conveys the interesting information that Dr. Albert Schweitzer of Strassbourg, widely known as one of the most radical critics of the New Testament, holding the degrees of Doctor of Theology, Doctor of Science and Doctor of Medicine, a favorite pupil of the most famous organist in Europe, has given his life to medical missionary work in equatorial Africa. "When I had written my book (in criticism) I had given what I had to give," he said to a friend; "now I am working on the positive side."

"And thus, the reporter went on, "we walked up and down the quay for two and a half hours while he told us how he was able to be a radical critic and an enthusiastic missionary all in one."

Pellagra Scare Ridiculous

A bulletin of the U. S. Health Service as reported in the newspapers, represents the South as suffering from "famine and plague," with particular reference to pellagra. The Southern Medical Journal combats the report and shows that the South makes a better showing in vital statistics than the North.

A Penniless Prince

Dr. Russel H. Conwell, pastor of Baptist Temple in Philadelphia, has lived his own philosophy of life. He has never depreciated the power of money as a force for accomplishing good in the world, but has on many occasions dealt hard blows to the miser. His lecture, "Acres of Diamonds," has been a homely appeal to the man in every community to find right around him in sources of wealth and power. The diamonds are in your own back yard. Dr. Conwell has been so interested in riches that he has carried on a study of some of the rich men of the world. He asserts that of 4,043 millionaires studied, 3,708 began life without a dollar. He also asserts that according to statistics compiled in Massachusetts, only one rich man's son in 117 ever dies rich. Dr. Conwell has had an income for many years of fifty thousand dollars a year, which is probably not equalled by very many American preachers. At the end of each month he pays his debts, balances his books and gives away the balance, whatever that happens to be.—Exchange.

Whew!

The following report appeared recently in the newspapers:

"Profound religious fervor equaled only by the famous shrines of Frere Andre behind Mount Royal and Ste. Anne de Beaupre, below Quebec, is sweeping the east end of Montreal.

"Residents of the locality are greatly excited over supernatural manifestations that center around a statue of the Sacred Heart of Jesus in the possession of J. Marcotte. This statue of the Saviour, which stands about two feet high, is covered with blood which is alleged to have dropped from the seven wounds.

"The first manifestation occurred on March 10. A rosary lying at the feet of the statue, which has been in possession of the Marcotte family for twenty-one years, was found twined around the neck and shoulders of the figure. The rosary was again laid at the feet of the figure and the next day the chaplet was again around the neck with the cross covering the sacred heart.

"When this happened for the third time Mr. Marcotte spoke to his religious adviser. To make sure that there was no occult manifestation the rosary was sealed in a jar at the feet of the figure and the room sealed. The next the beads were again draped around the figure, where they have remained since.

"Fully 500 people visited the Marcotte home to view the statue."

How Would You Answer?

Evidence that our native students in various lands know how to use their brains and must be given Christianity in its most logical and convincing form is to be found in the questions recently handed in by the first year High School students in our Jaro Industrial school, in the Philippine Islands. Among the questions were the following:

How many religions are in the world, and how can you tell that you are in the right religion? What is the difference between the Catholic and the Protestant religions, since both believe in God? I want some explanation. Who dwelt in the garden of Eden after Adam and Eve? Where is Hell? Who was the originator of the Bible, and how did he happen to know about God? Is polygamy against the rules of God? Why does God not give us the same health and wealth as others, instead of making us poor and thin?

A Baptist Seminary for Many Nationalities

By CHARLES L. WHITE

An address delivered at the dedication of the International Baptist Seminary, at 64 South Munn Street, East Orange, New Jersey,
October 12, 1921

WHEN representatives from the churches of many states met in 1832, and organized The American Baptist Home Mission Society, they little realized the far-reaching influence of their decision. It was the beginning of a period of westward expansion and settlement. Into the new territories beyond the Mississippi River, our missionaries soon found their way to teach the people to plant their altars where they plowed their acres.

After the Wars

The enlargement of the work of the Society has strangely followed the wars of the last ninety years on both sides of the Atlantic. The struggles in Central Europe in the middle of the last century produced a national restlessness that brought waves of immigration from Germany to America. Religious repression in the Scandinavian countries produced the same result. The Society was quick to find the newcomers, to give their missionaries adequate support and to assist them in the erection of their meeting houses. The converts rapidly increased, and the German, Swedish, Danish and Norwegian Baptists organized many churches, soon feeling the need of the theological training for their people in their own vernacular, the churches established seminaries, which have contributed much to the enrichment of our denominational and national life. Indeed, from these schools have gone many missionaries to foreign countries in the service of our Foreign Mission Society.

After the War with Mexico, the society entered upon its work in that new Republic, just emerging from feudal conditions, and after these many years still in the period of national adolescence.

During the Civil War, soon after President Lincoln had signed the proclamation of emancipation, our Society took steps which led to its entrance upon the work of training teachers, preachers, business men and home makers among the millions of Negroes. In the course of this gigantic work it has spent approximately six millions of dollars, contributed by the Baptists of the North.

After the Indian wars in the West, we established our schools in Oklahoma for the enlargement and perpetuation of which we have during the last eighteen months received the greater contributions for educational work which American Indians have ever given in the history of America. During this period approximately a quarter of a million dollars has been given by the Indians themselves, and the end of the giving has not been reached.

After the Spanish-American War we established our missionary and educational work in Cuba, Porto Rico and subsequently made our first beginnings in Central America.

Before the War

In 1913 before the great European War began, we began, at the insistent entreaty of Rev. L. L. Zboray, an evangelist to his people, our little Hungarian Baptist Training School in Scranton, Pennsylvania. The unflinching zeal, the intelligent leadership, the apostolic devotion of this good man was the first step of the rising path that has led to the establishment of this International Seminary. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord. They rest from their labors and theirs do follow them."

In 1915, a year after the war began, the Scranton school was moved to Cleveland. In the same year the Slovak Training School and the Polish Department were started in Chicago. The Russian Baptist Bible Institute, in New York, opened its doors in 1917, and a few months ago we began our Mexican Training School in Los Angeles. This is also affiliated with this Seminary.

To Colgate Theological Seminary, however, must be accorded the praise and honor of establishing, equipping and maintaining during the last thirteen years, its "Italian Department," for the leadership of which Professor Mangano, in the providence of God, was intellectually and spiritually prepared.

The necessity of establishing these schools for the training of missionary leaders for their own people is the fruitage of the earnest desire of Northern Baptists to prepare men adequately equipped to serve well the racial groups which in great numbers, during the last twenty-five years, have been pouring into the United States from the eastern and southern countries of Europe. The remarkable narration of how God has called into the ministry of these foreign churches men from the plow and the workshop, who have heroically and with extraordinary self-sacrifice devoted themselves to their holy ministry makes a new chapter in the Acts of the Apostles.

The Hour Has Come to Combine

The hour has come when it has seemed wise to bring these foreign-speaking institutes into this new school of the prophets. We were fortunate in securing Dr. Frank L. Anderson as our president. His parents were born in Sweden; he learned the English language after he was seven years old; passed through our public schools and Baptist institutions, and in a faithful ministry and ten years in the service of the Home Mission Society and the Chicago Baptist Executive Council, was providentially trained for the great work upon which he has entered.

As we stand here today, and look into the faces of our president and his deans, we remember that every one of this group was borne in a foreign land. A biographical sketch of each life would show by what strange paths God brought them from the East and the West and from the North and the South to this spiritual city of God and into the service for which He has prepared them by His grace.

The student body of this seminary and its affiliated school in Los Angeles, comprises representatives of seven races, Russians, Roumanians, Italians, Polish, Hungarian and Slovak and Mexicans. All but one student was born in foreign lands.

Seldom, if ever, in the history of America, has such a group of men sat at the feet of their teachers to be taught the way of life more perfectly than they may pass on the good news of salvation to their own peoples in this and other countries.

This property has been bought entirely with the income on designated gifts made by Mr. John D. Rockefeller to our Society and counting outside of the receipts of the New World Movement. The cost to date of the land, buildings and equipment, has been approximately two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. The operating expenses are met in part by the contributions from the churches, but the larger proportion is furnished by the income from funds given by Mr. Rockefeller.

The first scholarship and the first memorial gift of furniture have been provided by President Anderson in memory of his beloved wife, Linda Williams Anderson. A gift toward the beginning of an endowment fund has been made by Col. Edward H. Haskell.

The equipment of the Italian Department has been provided by Mr. Russell Colgate, Mr. Sidney and Austin Colgate and nephew Henry.

A Junior Seminary

We are establishing here a junior seminary from which the students will be encouraged to enter other seminaries for further study. Here they will take courses in English, church history, homiletics, history of Christian doctrine, theology and other subjects, and learn that all human betterments are the inevitable by-products of the teachings of the New Testament. The theological subjects will be carried on in their own languages, in order that they may preach the gospel to their people in their own vernacular, and thus be able to interpret the truth of Christianity to their foreign speaking congregations.

We have named our school the "International Seminary," for our students have come and will continue to come from many nations and will minister to their own racial groups here in America. Many of them, too, will recross the oceans and become the spiritual leaders in their various European countries. We contemplate the future influence of this seminary not with our natural vision, but by our spiritual vision transfigured, by a faith which in its largest reaches, includes both insight and foresight, and makes ample use of the promises of God. We are confident that there is rejoicing today among the angels of God over the establishment of this institution, where men who believe the gospel will be trained to preach it and in the simplicity of their faith and the vigor of their spiritual services will become the real successors of the apostles.

What Baptists Stand For

The Baptists of America have always stood for religious liberty and have finely exhibited in their history the ideas of spiritual democracy. The belief in the direct responsibility of the soul to God, independent of any sacerdotal stairway, the direct approach of each believer to his Heavenly Father, the equality of all men before their Maker, the independence, the initiative and the responsibility of each church to its Head, the Lord Jesus Christ, will make the spiritual teachings of this seminary concrete, clear and crystalline.

Our future plans which we expect to be realized by special gifts from individual Baptists and churches, for this work, include the erection of a suitable dormitory and lecture hall and the inclusion of women into the institution. The sympathetic interest of our two foreign mission societies, for whose service we hope to train many European Baptists for leadership in many nations of the world; the desire of the Publication Society to cooperate with us in providing courses in religious education; and the intention of the Woman's Home Mission Society to assist in the training of women, added to the fruitful contacts which we shall have from the New Jersey and New York Conventions, and other conventions, and the New York Baptist City Mission Society and other such organizations, all bespeak a future for the school whose first departmental beginnings have grown into that which brings encouragement to us all this afternoon.

Our Board of Trustees is widely chosen from representative people, and its president, Dr. Frank A. Smith, the chairman of the Educational Committee of our Board of Managers, has a broad knowledge of our missionary educational work. The evolution of our little schools into this seminary could not have been accomplished without the thinking and planning of such men as Dr. Morehouse, Dr. Hovey, Mr. Garabrant, Dr. Brooks, Dr. Travers, Dr. Fowler, Judge Clinch, Mr. Bryant and all others of our Board of Managers as well as others of whose lives the angels keep the record.

Standing between Europe and Asia, America has the secrets of liberty which can save the nations from perils of war and the jealousies of peace. Our ability to do this will depend upon the number of master Christian workmen the evangelical churches can produce, and the degree to which these leaders can guide their churches to become fellow workers with God in saving both individuals and society. In the fulness of time America comes to a decisive hour in the world's spiritual history and no institution in America has wrapped up in it greater spiritual potentialities than this International Seminary which, constrained by the love of Christ, we dedicate today to the extension of the Kingdom of God.

Michigan Baptist Convention

Celebrating a Century of Baptist Achievement at Pontiac, October 17-20

By W. T. ROBERTS

The one hundredth anniversary of the beginning of Baptist work in Oakland County, Mich., and a century of Baptist achievement in the state was signalized by holding the eighty-sixth meeting of the convention with the church at Pontiac, the first Baptist church organized in the state. Former meetings of the convention were held in Pontiac in 1855, 1874, and as recently as 1913, but it is safe to assume that no meeting of Michigan Baptists has ever been held when the Baptist task was more clearly stated and emphasized, or greater enthusiasm for service prevailed.

Minister's Conference

The names, Agar and Stilwell spell success in any program. These brethren are a unique combination. Agar with his inimitable Irish incisiveness, and Stilwell with his solidity, sincerity, and spiritual power made a contribution of far-reaching value. The conference included two sessions. Dr. Agar and Dr. Stilwell spoke at each. A general conference on spiritual equipment for spiritual service was conducted when short addresses were given on "The Pastor as Servant," by Rev. W. B. Hartzog of Mason, "The Pastor's Power in Service," by M. H. Pettit, Grand Rapids, and "The Pastor's Passion in Service," by Rev. John R. Estes of Muskegon. Dr. Stilwell closed with a conference on evangelism which deepened conviction, aroused enthusiasm, and envisioned the possibilities of a consecrated and Spirit-filled ministry.

To the Rev. Stewart B. Crandall of the First Church, Battle Creek, the retiring president, much credit is due for the advancement of the program. The officers for the ensuing year are: president—C. W. Kemper, Lansing, vice-president—W. E. Bowyer, Detroit, secretary-treasurer—A. A. Trembert, Flint.

President's Address

Smith G. Young of Lansing for a second term president of the convention in submitting his address, urged a more intelligent grasp of the problems before Baptists; more efficiently operated churches; less attention to material concerns and more effort to produce spiritual growth; the translation of the teachings of Jesus into everyday life; a study of social and economic questions; worship and fellowship in service, and a recognition of the law of equal reaction as illustrated in the words of Jesus "with what measure ye mete it shall be measured unto you."

Referring to the proposed conference on armaments he pleaded for unceasing prayer that the Spirit of God may guide our leaders and that unselfish motives and wise counsels may prevail. He declared the time is here when home and foreign missions are one interest, and that happenings in every part of the world concern us. The giving of a tithe was advocated as a solution of our financial problems.

The cause of Christian education was dealt with and a plea made for adequate support of our colleges. A tribute was paid to the work of women and the placing of Mrs. Montgomery in the presidential chair of the Northern Baptist Convention. In closing he made an earnest plea for the development to the full of our whole range of Christian activities in the local church, the association, the state convention, and the Northern Baptist Convention.

Convention Sermon

The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. J. H. Vatcher, pastor at Sault Ste. Marie. The text chosen was John 4:34: "My meat is to do the will of him that sent me and to finish his work." It was an attempt to answer the query, "What was the great purpose of sending Jesus into the world?" In seeking the answer an appeal was made to the varying concepts of God incident upon human experience and the growing sense of human freedom and responsibility. To many Christianity means the clutter which chokes the channels, and not the spirit of Christianity. The real purpose of God in sending Christ was the preaching of Christ and the making of the principles and ideals of Jesus resnant and the realizing of the real values such as prayer, consecration of life, and intelligent service.

Historical Address

Mr. A. H. Finn of Detroit was commissioned to prepare a resume of the century of Baptist progress in Michigan. His task has been accomplished in a gratifying manner and was presented to the convention in a carefully written pamphlet of twenty-three pages entitled "One Hundred Years of Baptist History in Michigan." With a historic background showing the political and religious growth of the state and the evolution of the American spirit, he traced the growth of Baptists to their present strength. Educational ideals, the formation of the convention with its problem of missionary effort and affiliation with national missionary societies, not forgetting the splendid leadership and the divine blessing have been factors in the century's religious progress.

Outstanding Addresses

President Barbour captured the convention in an address on "The Open Door." In convincing language and by illustration which gave transparency to the facts he made clear the task of Baptists. Unrealized territory was made inviting. Referring to the New World Movement he said, the one hundred million dollar movement is not a thing superimposed by one section of the denomination on another, but a movement which grew out of the needs of the hour.

Mrs. Montgomery with keen logic and incisive utterance held in relief the great program of the Baptists of the North and showed in an irrefutable way the adaptability of the Northern Baptist Convention and its program to the realization of its great objectives. Democracy is most desirable, but it must be organized and intelligent, she said.

Dr. Chas. A. Brooks was heard in conference on city evangelization and the interpreting of our ideals to the new American, and also in a most illuminating address on the "Spiritual Aftermath of the War in the Countries of Europe." The spiritual demoralization and brutality produced by war conditions was made most real. Two ways out are before the people: war and more war, or the cross and peace.

Dr. Alleen K. Foster gave the closing address of the convention at the young people's session. Sympathy with the intellectual problems of young people was expressed and counsel offered. The rounded life of the Christian college was commended as fundamental to efficient leadership.

The Treasurer's report presented by the treasurer's assistant, Mrs. Weir, exhibited a mastery of detail and business sagacity.

The report of General Director Hudson presented under the caption "Carrying On" was a splendid statement and included a complete resume of the year's activities. Larger grants of money than ever before have been made. Sixty-three pastors serving eighty-one churches have been aided in amounts aggregating $20,779.96. A grand total of 1877 baptisms and 1431 accessions to churches, otherwise, was reported from seventy-three churches and the baptisms throughout the state will aggregate 4000. Last year we reported $107,478.92 in benevolences and this has been increased to a total of $345,600.83 and added to that is the amount of $128,998.38 sent by churches to societies and institutions direct, making a grand total of nearly $475,000.00.

In recounting the achievements of the year and the new impetus in Christian service and giving, Director Hudson emphasized the fact that this great forward movement is resultant from the new spirit and vision that has come to the followers of Christ in our day; urged unity of faith, of prayer, and of action among our Baptist hosts to make for a Christian democracy which is not so much dependence as mutual independence; and an impact of united forces in making effective the attack of the church against sin and unrighteousness. He stated, "The church must always sense that it has a task if it is to make progress. Recognizing this, the next great step is to bring all of our forces together in order to make a real effort to accomplish this task. That is the reason for the work of the convention."

The need of leadership was stressed and that in most instances it is not financial aid that the fields need so much as leadership and counsel in developing and carrying out plans for service.

In closing Director Hudson made a distinct plea for a fellowship of service; a service not for ourselves as churches or associations, but for humanity everywhere,—the service of the cross, a service of fruitage to the glory of Christ Jesus; a service that is to bring light where there is darkness, love where there is hate, life where there is death; a blessed service under the command of the Lord of Life, under whose command there can be no failure.

Appended to the report are brief statements by the directors of departments and the superintendent of Detroit City Union.

Gospel Conferences

City Evangelization was discussed in a conference at which Dr. Gleiss presided. Director W. T. Roberts spoke on "Facing Our Task." Miss Cooper addressed the conference on "Women's Part in Evangelizing the City," and Dr. Brooks closed the conference with a discussion of our "Opportunity Among New Americans."

Town and country matters were reviewed in a conference conducted by Director Lawrence, and women's work by Mrs. Edward Wilson, president of the Women's Mission Society.

Kalamazoo College

Dr. Frank Bachelor, field secretary of Kalamazoo College and director of the campaign fund for added equipment was assisted in the presentation of the claims of the college by Professor Bailey, Miss Grant, Walter W. Smith, Grant M. Hudson, and President Stetson. Congested conditions make imperative the need for equipment and larger accommodations. The new women's dormitory is to be given precedence of any other addition. The success of this appeal is practically assured and the women look forward to the completion of plans for this building at an early date.

Fellowship Suppers

The men, and some women who couldn't find room at the women's supper held at the Board of Commerce, joined in the men's supper held in the dining room of the Methodist Church. W. P. Lovett of Detroit was toast maker and kept things a-moving on schedule. Five minute addresses were given by Dr. Bready of the M. E. Church of Pontiac; Rev. C. S. Burns, Ypsilanti; Dr. Chapman, Ann Arbor; A. C. Graham, Detroit; Rev. W. H. Garfield, Grand Rapids and Mr. Duncan Conway, Detroit.

A surprise to all present was the announcement that Mr. James A. Andrews of Wisconsin, a grandson of Rev. Elkanah Comstock, the first Baptist pastor in Pontiac, was present and would speak. Mr. Andrews spoke briefly giving a few leaves from his grandfather's diary indicating some of the hardships and privations of those pioneer days.

The eighty-sixth meeting of the Michigan Baptist Convention will, we believe, go down into history as an epoch-making meeting. It was marked by evangelistic passion, enlarged vision, spiritual fellowship, and a determination to "Carry On." The attendance was above the average. The galaxy of national representatives was large and each made a unique combination. All the addresses were of a high order and the details of the program arranged with evident skill. The next meeting will be held at Jackson, May 1922. Officers for the ensuing year are: President, Mr. Ralph Jennings, Paw Paw; Secretary, Rev. Geo. Waid, Capac; Treasurer, Mr. E. C. VanHusen, Dime Bank Bldg., Detroit.

Some Things They Said

If the folks who are asking, "Can the church survive?" or "Are ministers parasites?" and similar questions would attend the Michigan Convention they would soon be convinced to the contrary.

—GERALD B. SMITH.

You can't superimpose a prayer life on a rotten play life.

To have a cross is to have proof of discipleship.

Contemporaneous with the Saviorhood of Jesus is the Lordship of Jesus.

—AGAR.

Equipment isn't power, but the means of transmitting power and bringing product into being.

The people not the pastor give to the church its soul winning character.

Our ministry should be tested by the ministry of Jesus Christ. —STILWELL.

The Most Interesting Person in the Baptist Denomination

(The enthusiastic young Baptists of Chicago sent in the story and picture, and Mr. Phelps will know nothing of it till he comes to this page.)

There are many hundreds of busy Baptists doing interesting important things in all four corners of the globe, but there is one who appeals to us more than any other person and that is Mr. Edwin Phelps of Wilmette, Illinois.

EDWIN PHELPS

Everyone will have to admit that in this day and age the young people's problem is the greatest. Make of the young people strong serving Christians and you have solved all the problems of the next generation, and the next.

This man's life is wrapped up in young people and their Christian development. He is a lawyer of pleasing personality, optimistic and well-liked by all. This assists him in his study of youth. Mr. Phelps is thoroughly informed on young people and young people's work.

You wonder why he has this knowledge? That is easy to answer. Hasn't he been president three times of a large city B. Y. P. U.? Hasn't he been a member of the Executive Committee of the B. Y. P. U. of A. for seven years? Hasn't he held official capacities in B. Y. P. U. for twelve years? Ought he then not to have intimate knowledge of district and B. Y. P. U. problems? Of course he had and he has.

Mr. Phelps is decidedly a young people's man—he makes himself one of them. He is a progressive, spiritual Christian—an active member of a local B. Y. P. U. This young man, reliable in all things, has great executive ability and is a natural born leader.

Every Baptist young person should know Mr. Phelps intimately and should thank him for what he has done for them. Perhaps some of you do not know that this is the man who saved the B. Y. P. U. of A. five years ago. It was turning over into the C. E. when he and a well-known co-worker pulled it through. Look what it is today because of him!

Were it not for his unassuming personality which is one of his most likeable qualities, Mr. Phelps would have been known and acclaimed as a leader by Baptists everywhere, long ago.

"God gives us always strength enough and sense enough for what He wants us to do; if we either tire ourselves or puzzle ourselves, it is our own fault. And we may always be sure, whatever we are doing, that we cannot be pleasing him, if we are not happy ourselves."—RUSKIN.

Odds and Ends of Interesting Information

"Speed Away"

One of the most impressive prayer services on record at the General Board of Promotion headquarters in New York, took place on Friday, October 21, in a farewell meeting of the missionary workers who sailed at three o'clock that same afternoon for various foreign fields. Miss Nellie G. Prescott, executive secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, led the services, while Miss Marie Holmes of Assam, and Mr. John T. Latta of Burma responded, voicing the faith that our departing missionaries have that the Northern Baptists here at home will make it possible for them to live up to their best opportunities on the foreign fields. The meeting closed with the heartfelt strains of "Speed Away,"—

"Speed away, speed away, on your mission of light,
To the lands that are lying in darkness and night."

The following missionaries were present at the meeting, and sailed in the afternoon:

Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Davis and daughter Lois, of Aurora, Ind. to South India.

Miss Harriet Barrington of St. Mary's, Ohio, to South India.

Mrs. W. B. Boggs of Brookline, Mass., to South India.

Miss Sadie Robbins of Chicago, Ill., to South India.

Miss Elizabeth Hay of Newcastle, Penn., to Assam.

Miss Grace Hill of Oberlin, Ohio, to Bengal, Orissa.

Miss Marie Holmes of Washington, D. C., to Assam.

Miss Edna Paul of Ottawa, Kansas, to Assam.

Miss Isabelle Wilson of Brooklyn, New York, to Assam.

Mr. and Mrs. John Tilden Latta and daughter Emma of Granville, Ohio, to Burma.

Mr. William Dunn of Cairo, West Virginia, to Assam.

Mr. and Mrs. John Firth of Pella, Iowa, to Assam.

Alumni Association Luncheon.

The Alumni Association of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary is arranging for a Homecoming Session on Monday afternoon, November 7th, at 2:30 o'clock, at the Seminary, 3040 W. Washington Boulevard, Chicago, Illinois. The program will be in charge of the President of the Alumni, the Reverend Albert G. Johnson, '18, pastor of the Albany Park Baptist Church, Chicago. Short addresses will be given by the Reverend F. C. Webber, '16, Berwick, Illinois, the Reverend L. P. Cassel, '20, Utica, Illinois, the Reverend V. C. Seafar, '21, Mason City, Illinois, and by representatives of the undergraduate body. The fellowship Service will be opened by the Reverend F. G. Sayres, '18, Freeport, Illinois. Music will be furnished by the Reverend George B. L. Johnson, '20, Chicago, and the Seminary Quartet. Following the program, an informal reception will be tendered the graduates, former students, and friends by the Student Association of the Seminary, Mr. H. M. Griffin, President. All friends are invited and it is especially hoped that all former students, whether graduates or otherwise, will be present. At eleven o'clock on the morning of the same day, President Emeritus A. H. Strong, D. D., LL. D., will lecture, the Baptist ministers and their wives, of the Chicago Baptist Ministers' Conference, being guests of the Seminary. Following the lecture, at one o'clock, a luncheon (50c a plate) will be served to the Conference, former students, and friends, by the Ladies of the Tabernacle Baptist Church, corner of Monroe St. and Spaulding Ave. All friends of the Seminary, of the Minister's Conference, and of Dr. Strong are invited to be present at all the sessions of the day. Those who expect to attend the luncheon will please notify the Office Secretary of the Seminary, Geo. W. Taft, 3040 W. Washington Boulevard, Tel. Nevada 541, by mail or telephone, on or before Saturday, Nov. 5.

Founder of Japanese W. C. T. U. Brings Message of Peace

BY RUTH D. FRENCH

Such important news has come to my notice as port worker here at Seattle that I am sending on the word to Baptist women as rapidly as possible. You remember Madame Yajima, the noted founder and leader of the W. C. T. U., also the founder of Jrshi Gakuin in Tokyo. She landed here with her Japanese secretary, Miss Moriya, Wednesday, October 12 and is now on her way to the conference at Washington. She is not a delegate but comes on a peace mission to ask her Christian brothers and sisters in America to pray and work for World Peace. I cannot tell you how impressive the meetings here have been. She addressed a thousand people one night at the Japanese Hall, and again under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. spoke to a large company of Americans at a reception for her in the Y. W. C. A. building. She is eighty-nine and growing a little feeble in body of course, but her spirit and her intellectual vision are as wonderful as ever. She is surely the great Christian women of the Orient today. In a little pamphlet which I will enclose she tells her mission. She decided to come quite suddenly one day when a visitor was talking of world affairs and this conference. "I will go to America myself" she said. "I have the money (her graduates had presented her with $2000 to enable her to live in comfort the remaining years of her life, but she had laid it aside for some good cause) and what strength I have I gladly give to God to use for this cause of peace. What does it matter whether I die in Japan or in America?"

She sent out several thousand letters to W. C. T. U. members asking them to pray, but soliciting no money. Money, however, began to pour in, and inside of a week they had over $1000.

In order to make the mission more definite they prepared a simple resolution which reads: "We the undersigned most solemnly declare that we most earnestly desire that the coming conference which is to be held in Washington may be the foundation of world peace"—and in two weeks ten thousand women had personally signed this. Surely no message from Oriental women ever came more directly to the Christians of America. Cannot you secure some wide publicity for this? I am sending under separate cover two "official" photographs taken here which I hope may be used in some of our periodicals. I am sending similar ones to the "Outlook" with a short explanation, hoping they can and will use them.

Mrs. Henry Topping is Mrs. Yajima's American secretary and Miss Anna Gordon, national W. C. T. U. president, Evanston, Ill., is responsible for their schedule.

Cannot we give our Baptist women an opportunity to join in prayer with her?

MADAME YAJIMA'S APPEAL

Brothers and Sisters in Christ:—

We have hope and gratitude for the Conference to be held in Washington. The reasons why I, a woman of eighty-nine, have crossed the ocean and the continent are—

1. I have faith that the coming Conference will surely be the foundation of World Peace.

2. We, the Japanese women do not like war but truly and heartily desire Peace.

3. All those who believe in God and love peace ought to join hands and work to make this world the Home of God.

4. I have fortunately, many friends in America, those who are one with us both in faith and principle.

For these reasons, I, as a free individual and neither an official messenger nor the representative of the country, have come to this land.

For the last thirty-five years I have acted as the president of the National W. C. T. U., for the purpose of World Peace, World Purity and World Prohibition.

I think I am one of the most fortunate women in Japan in having many friends throughout the world, and the health which the Lord has blessed me with makes me able to cross the ocean and visit you for the third time.

I know no other language than my own, and yet I know that God knows every language, so I have come to pray with you sisters quietly. God has promised that he will listen to us when two or three gather together and pray.

My countrymen and women have sent me and support me with their prayers.

Let us pray for the coming of a World Peace.

KAJI YAJIMA

Founder W. C. T. U.

Japan.

Workers under the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society in Ponce, Porto Rico, write vividly of the terrifying cyclone which introduced the rainy season there, and blew with such frightful destruction for forty-eight hours. In the mountain districts the bananas were torn from the trees, and the crop of oranges and green coffee was completely destroyed at a great loss. Due to bad industrial conditions the tobacco factories have been closed all year and now the hand-made waist factories are shutting down, too. Hundreds are out of work and the consequences are greatly to be feared. The time is one for prayer that our missionaries and teachers may be guided in assisting this stricken people.

Our Own Folks

Colorado State Convention

The thirty-third anniversary of the Colorado Convention was held in the First Church, Canon City, Rev. Frederick G. Arnold, minister, Oct. 18-20. Special interest was lent to the meeting because it marked the fiftieth year of organized Baptist work in Colorado. All the sessions were notable for a spirit of unity, harmony and aggressiveness. Colorado Baptists, as represented in this convention, are determined to measure up to the opportunities presented to them in this critical year of the New World Movement. The number of registered delegates and visitors was about 200 from approximately sixty churches.

Among the addresses of which particular mention should be made were those of Dr. L. C. Barnes, Rev. F. W. Starring and Rev. John Skeen before the Pastors' Conference; the sermon by Rev. A. W. Atkinson and the address by Pres. J. W. Bailey of the Colorado Woman's College, on Thursday evening; the inspirational address on Wednesday by Rev. W. I. Fowle, director of promotion for Nebraska; and the two stirring talks by the president of the convention, Judge Fred. W. Freeman, of Denver. Mention should also be made of an address on Tuesday morning by Mrs. Geo. W. Coleman, president of the Woman's Home Mission Society, in which she outlined the plan of the women for raising $6,000,000 in new pledges this year.

The high points of the convention, however, were reached in the historical sessions of Tuesday afternoon, and the promotion session of Wednesday evening. The interest and power of these will linger long with all those fortunate enough to be present.

"Where Do We Go From Here?"

Tuesday afternoon's session was in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of the Southern Association. Dr. D. D. Proper, of Omaha, told the story of the Baptist beginnings in the state before there was any convention, and gave reminiscences of many of the early workers. It was the general opinion that the bulk of this address should be put into print and circulated among the churches. Rev. Joshua Gravett, of Denver, followed with some inimitable sketches of the pioneer workers, most of whom he knew and with many of whom he had travelled up and down the state. Humor, pathos and heroism were mingled in these stories. Mr. Gravett called the roll of Baptist workers from the beginning almost to the present, and well deserves the position of historian to which the convention elected him. Pioneer days in Colorado are not yet far off and the human records of them should be put into permanent form while they are yet vivid in the minds of living men. The third speaker of the afternoon was Dr. Bruce Kinney who gave a powerful address on the subject, "Where Do We Go From Here?" He sounded the call of the unfinished task and the necessity in the present for such consecration as marked the past.

On Wednesday evening, Dr. J. Y. Aitchison, general director of the Board of Promotion, gave an address on the New World Movement. He set forth its spiritual objectives, the crisis which has come in this middle year of the movement, and called the churches to increased prayer and consecration and to revived faith and dependence upon God. This was followed by a conference of pastors and church workers which lasted until two o'clock in the morning. The invitation was given to all present to state frankly their difficulties or criticisms. This was done, and the answers were full and frank. It was a heart-searching time. But it served to clear up many difficulties and to bring those present to the firm resolve to do their part in carrying to completion the full program for this year. Many did not know how they could do what was asked, but they became certain that God could do it through them. At the close of this session the recommendations of Director of Promotion Ripley were adopted as follows:

Goals

"1. That the convention make definite plans and set in motion the same for the attaining of the following objectives for the year closing April 30, 1922:

"First, 2600 members added to our churches by baptism and relation.

"Second, 2600 members enrolled in stewardship leagues.

"Third, 13 churches paying their pastor's premium (in the Ministers' and Missionaries' Benefit Board).

"Fourth, the securing of $500,000 in additional subscriptions to the New World Movement.

"Fifth, a total of $260,000 paid on account of the New World Movement.

"2. That, as a measure of helping in attaining the above objectives we endeavor to increase the number of subscriptions to denominational journals at least 50 per cent."

There were also adopted the recommendations of Rev. F. B. Palmer, executive secretary of the convention, which follow:

"We recommend that our convention commit itself prayerfully and earnestly to the speedy realization of the spiritual aim set forth in the New World Movement and that every church in our constituency be urged to project for itself a worthy program in prayer, in study, in evangelism, in stewardship, and in life enlistment. When this is done, we shall constantly be able to contribute our share of faith and devotion and working forces for world conquest.

"The financial campaign of the New World Movement is a vital, determining factor in our denominational life. We further recommend that the hundred million dollar campaign be accepted as an urgent, continuous siege. We must all be at it all the time."

There have been more than 1400 baptisms during the year in the churches of the state. More than sixty-eight workers have been employed in the state mission department and these report 428 converts baptized. Thirteen new churches have been organized. Fourteen building enterprises are on hand. The budget has increased in ten years from $18,000 to $45,000. While collections on New World Movement pledges have fallen off during the last five months as compared with the same months last year, the spirit in which this situation is faced is indicated above.

Convention officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, F. W. Freeman; vice-presidents, C. A. Fulton, Geo. A. Burroughs; recording secretary, W. R. Schoemaker; treasurer, F. S. Smith; executive secretary, F. B. Palmer.

Minnesota Convention

The Sixty-Second Annual Convention of Minnesota Baptists held at Duluth, October 10 to 13, 1921, will long be remembered by those present for its deep underlying spiritual tone; fine fellowship; constructive program projected with hopeful, forward outlook and the manifest determined purpose to attempt and accomplish something commensurate with their ability and resources in the face of increasing needs and new and greater opportunities. It was marked by what one called the "subordination of culture to spirituality with strong emphasis on culture as a means and accessory of spirituality."

Seldom have the varied interests of the denomination been so fully and ably represented. Dr. C. A. Brooks of the Home Mission Society spoke of American Christian influence abroad, tremendous for good. Miss Nellie Prescott, Foreign Secretary of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, told of the perplexing and distressing problems continually confronting the Board and how they are often solved in an unexpected way by prayer and consecrated gifts. The words and very presence of Miss Evalyn Camp, a Minnesota girl from the First Church, Minneapolis—a missionary back from Japan—proved an inspiration. Dr. T. S. Young of the Publication Society declared that the next great awakening would be the recognition of the tremendous loss of our children and the whole young life of the church, urging as a remedy a "real school of religious education in the body of the church." Dr. P. C. Wright, representing the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board, explained the new policy that seeks to deal with the minister in a creditable way and not as a mere object of charity as formerly. City Mission work was well represented by Superintendents, Rev. E. A. Valiant of St. Paul and Rev. J. J. Runyan of Minneapolis.

Killam Announces Policy

Edgar L. Killam, managing editor of THE BAPTIST, presented the appeal of the denomination's own paper for the support of our Baptist constituency, together with "Missions," each, as he said, supplementing the other. "Intimate glimpses into the life of an editor," furnished a rare treat and the policy of THE BAPTIST was announced as unequivocally for the New World Movement and every agency for its promotion, seeking to serve the best interests of the home and the church.

Educational interests were well represented by Dr. Donald J. Cowling, President of Carleton College, who in two very able addresses, presented the vital relation between true education and religion; by Dr. Norman B. Henderson, pastor of the University Baptist Church, who related many human interest incidents of young men in the University seeking to know the truth, and their establishment in the faith with the consequent purpose to represent Christ in business; and by Rev. Walter E. Woodbury, who presented a complete and carefully prepared report of the Committee visiting Pillsbury Academy and Carleton College. Not only was there found to exist in these institutions a high moral tone, but a distinct religious atmosphere.

The two live addresses of Miss Jessie Burrall, Dean of Stevens Junior College, Columbia, Missouri, were both informing and inspiring, and of special interest as Miss Burrall is another one of our Minnesota girls who has "made good" in a pre-eminent way. She answered criticisms and objections sometimes heard concerning missions and the denominational plan, urging the importance of education and tithing, pleading that our work might be done in a really big way.

Young People's work was given a prominent place in the convention and laymen were largely used in presenting its message and claims. There were interesting talks by Rev. Arthur J. Hansen, State Director of Religious Education, Miss Naomi Fletcher, Americanization worker, and Miss Katherine Patrick, worker among the Slovak people of Minneapolis.

Dr. F. A. Agar, in message and method, as always, was unique and his instruction was welcomed by many who have long felt the need of better and more efficient methods in church organization, activities, and finance. Stewardship, prayer, and training were shown to be matters of utmost importance.

Baptisms and Giving

Reports concerning the work were most encouraging. For the year ending May 1, 1921, 1,435 baptisms were reported. The sum of $218,220.04 was received for the New World Movement, with special gifts outside the budget amounting to $2,574.89. Receipts since May 1, 1921, $33,573.76 for New World Movement Fund and $154.88 for Chinese Relief. The expenditures of the State Convention for all purposes during the year were $74,028.29. The indebtedness of the Convention was reduced by $3,000, and the invested funds increased by $1,800.

New work has been undertaken at Rochester by the appointment of a hospital worker; a rural center has been begun at Laporte; excellent property secured for the Calvary (negro) church at Duluth; and a woman worker appointed in connection with the Slovak church in Minneapolis. An efficient State Director of Religious Education has also been secured. The new University Church building is well under way. This is felt to be one of our most important undertakings. The value of special efforts to conserve young life for the church and Christian service has already been demonstrated by Dr. N. B. Henderson, and this work will be greatly facilitated by the new church and equipment.

The coming of Dr. W. H. Geistweit was particularly opportune with his quiet, soul-stirring messages concerning revivals and evangelism at a time when the necessity of such work was being stressed and given large place. The report of the Committee on Evangelism showed an increase of 45 per cent over the preceding year in additions to the churches by baptism. The place and price of power and the need and value of religious affirmations were also forcefully presented by Dr. Geistweit.

Altogether, the program was eminently constructive, possessing an educational value of great benefit to the delegates, many of whom felt they had come to an understanding of the plan and purpose of the New World Movement and our whole task as never before.

Minnesota goals and objectives following the suggestions of the General Board of Promotion, were visualized by means of a large chart, reviewed in detail by Rev. J. H. McLean and considered in the large by Dr. John Earl as demanding information, inspiration, and invocation. The winning of new converts was put first in place and importance. The conviction of the Board was expressed by State Director, Dr. E. R. Pope, that the objectives set forth are by no means unattainable if in all seriousness, under God's guidance and by His help we undertake their realization and to this end pray, plan, provide.

Woman's Baptist Missionary Society of Illinois in Annual Meeting.

The Woman's Baptist Mission Society of Illinois held its annual meeting on Tuesday, October 18, at Rockford, Illinois, in connection with the Illinois Baptist State Convention. About 300 women were registered from all parts of the State. Mrs. H. E. Goodman, Administrative Vice-president, of the W. A. B. Foreign Mission Society; Dr. E. P. Brand, State Superintendent of Missions; Mrs. George Caleb Moor, First Vice-President of the W. A. B. Home Mission Society; Mrs. A. L. Wadsworth, Field Representative of the General Board of Promotion; Mrs. Mary L. Noble, National Secretary of W. W. G.; Dr. A. E. Peterson, Director of the State Board of Promotion; and Miss Greenough, of the General Board of Education, were special guests and also on the program.

Mrs. W. P. Topping, President, presided. A meeting of the State Board was held at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon preceding the State Convention. The Board were guests of the Ladies of the First Baptist Church of Rockford at a 6:30 luncheon.

The key-thought of the entire meeting was "Individual Responsibility."

Mrs. A. S. Stevens, President of Rock River Association, extended all a cordial welcome; and Mrs. R. P. Fales, President of the Chicago Missionary Union, responded. From the reports Illinois women have forged ahead and made great strides in carrying out the great program of the New World Movement of the Northern Baptist Convention.

The study books for the year were presented each day at the Convention by Mrs. C. W. Peterson, of Chicago, and Mrs. H. E. Truex of Mt. Vernon. Mrs. Geo. Caleb Moor, a former state president of Illinois, represented the women on the general convention program. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, President of the Northern Baptist Convention, gave a wonderful address on the closing night of the convention.

The Missionary play, "Christ in America," was given by Rockford young people. Mrs. L. A. Vinnedge, State Secretary Director, reported a wonderful new interest and definite signs of progress in all missionary activities all over the State. The Extension Department has had a more rapid growth than any other; 2,393 copies of Missions were reported taken—the goal was 3,000. There were 70 Honor Societies and 188 societies attaining points in the Standard of Excellence. There are secretary-directors in every Association in the State.

Mrs. J. D. Louderback, State Secretary of Literature, reported secretaries of literature in every Association, and explained the literature plan.

Very early in the year Illinois became a Union District and a Union State, uniting under one head the work of the W. A. B. H. M. S. and W. A. B. F. M. S.

The reports of the different departments was most interesting. The White Cross, a new department of Woman's Work the past year, has grown by leaps and bounds and Illinois gave largely toward "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." Missionary education in all its methods has been pushed in the Circles. The Christian Americanization Department is growing and is a means toward helping many of our new Americans. The State Reading Contest in Illinois has been a great success and is greatly enjoyed. The aim was to have 7,000 readers and 20,000 books read. The result was 6,503 readers and 25,382 books read—567 readers less than the aim and 5,382 books more than the aim. The Loving Cup was awarded to the Rock Island Association, and the State Banner was awarded to the Second Baptist Church of Chicago. Illinois enters the National Reading Contest the coming year.

Officers for 1921-22

The officers elected for the ensuing year are Mrs. W. P. Topping, Elgin, president; Mrs. C. H. Carpenter, Chicago, first vice-president; Mrs. Martha V. Highman, Morgan Park, second vice-president; Mrs. W. C. Rutherford, Waukegan, secretary; Mrs. Monroe Benbrook, Chicago, treasurer; besides a board of 36 women from over the state.

The aims and goals are set high for the coming year. It was decided to push a campaign for 2,000 additional subscriptions to Missions, THE BAPTIST and Illinois Baptist Bulletin. Much interest was shown in the announcement of the "Continuation Campaign" of the New World Movement in which the women of the Northern Baptist Convention are to raise $6,000,000—$2,000,000 by April 1, 1922—a venture of faith. Plans announced later.

The following splendid resolutions were adopted—"Not by might, nor by power, but by My Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts."

First, that we heartily support our officers in the goal for Missions, THE BAPTIST, and the Illinois Baptist Bulletin, and Reading Course;

Second, that we recognize the work among the C. W. C., W. W. G. and College Students, as fundamental in our missionary enterprise;

Third, that the women assembled at this Illinois Baptist State Convention pause each day at 12 o'clock during our State Convention Year for the purpose of prayer for the continuation of our New World Movement fund;

Fourth, that our Prayer Leagues remember to pray that the right atmosphere may be created at Washington during the Conference on Nov. 11 for Limited Disarmament.

The past year has truly been a banner year for Illinois women, and they are really making history. They have a wonderful heritage, for Illinois holds a large share in the producing of many missionary leaders. She has furnished 42 women for the foreign field, and more for the home field. Our missionaries are our answers. Illinois women, let us be loyal to our Master, our Baptist work and to those who have gone on before us.

MRS. W. C. RUTHERFORD,
Secretary.

St. Louis Letter.

By W. E. DARROW

On Monday, October 3, your scribe turned over the presidency of the St. Louis Baptist Ministers' Conference to Rev. H. C. Combs of the Compton Heights Church. Rev. J. W. McAtee of the King's Highway Church was elected vice-president and Rev. Oliver Shank of the Fourth Church, secretary and treasurer.

The one hundred and fourth annual meeting of the St. Louis Baptist Association was held with the Euclid Baptist Church, Rev. Dr. R. B. Whiteside, pastor, October 13-14. Rev. C. S. G. Boone of the Wetzel Memorial Church, Kirkwood, preached the annual sermon. The Southwest Church was admitted to the association. It is in the neighborhood of Clifton Heights. Dr. W. G. Tyzzer was re-elected moderator; Rev. W. L. Nash, assistant; Dr. S. E. Ewing, clerk and treasurer; J. B. Thompson, auditor. The writer was continued as assistant clerk. He served as chairman of the enrollment committee during the association meeting.

As corresponding clerk of the standing committee he reported its work during the past year. He served also as chairman of the committee on obituaries. Rev. R. K. Kelly presented the report on state missions and Rev. E. M. Ryan, the report on home missions. Rev. O. L. Wood, general secretary of the executive board, Missouri Baptist General Association, delivered an address on state missions. The missionary sermon was preached by Rev. P. G. Van Zandt of the West Park Church.

At the beginning of all except the first session of the association Rev. H. C. Combs reviewed the book "You and Your Church," giving in outline the principles and practice of our Baptist faith, a very help-feature of our gathering. On Thursday evening the report of the St. Louis Baptist Mission Board had the right of way. It was presented by Dr. S. E. Ewing. It is a comprehensive statement of the work of the association during the past year. The board holds property valued at $144,700, on which there are mortgages totaling $24,000. Special reference was made to the property at 10th and Carr Streets, purchased for the work of the Italian Baptist Church and Center at a cost of $10,000. Mention was made of the proposed transfer of the property of 2701 N. Grand Avenue, where the Grand Avenue Church is now worshipping, to the latter organization. There were nine daily vacation Bible schools with an enrollment of 1,420, an average attendance of 706, and a faculty of ninety. The Sunday school campaign and the church survey of St. Louis were also mentioned in the report. As to apportionments for 1921-1922, $8,018.00 is asked of the churches of the association for missions-regular, St. Louis Baptist Association; $10,710.00 for church edifices, St. Louis Baptist Association and $25,375.00 for state budget, missions and benevolence, a total of $44,103.00. The Treasurer's report gave receipts as $35,780.76 (including a balance of $878.30 from previous year) and disbursements as $29,164.72. The balance includes amounts held in trust for several building funds as well as special and regular accounts. After the reading of the report, missionary pastors and missionaries were presented. There were addresses by Rev. Oliver Shank, Rev. Grover C. Schwartz, Miss Beatrice Repass and Dr. C. A. Brooks.

The report of the Sunday school and teacher training committee showed important activity by the committee during the past year and contained recommendation for a distinct advance in the year to come. A training school and an enrollment campaign were among the recommendations. The writer has been continued as chairman of the committee for 1921-1922, with Rev. L. R. Call, C. J. Prince, Miss Laura Lee Patrick, Rev. G. W. Graham and Dr. S. E. Ewing as associate members. We hope to have the enrollment campaign during the months of November and December, same as last year. Our St. Louis B. Y. P. U., has been active and efficient, as its report indicated. Following these reports, Rev. L. R. Call, assistant pastor of the Second Church, delivered an address on "Religious education." At the Friday afternoon session, Dr. M. D. Eubank spoke on "Our World Task." It was decided to hold the next annual meeting with the Immanuel Church, Rev. E. L. Pinkerton, pastor, October 12-13; Rev. H. C. Combs, pastor, to preach the annual sermon and Dr. R. B. Whiteside the missionary sermon. John T. Henderson, secretary of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, Southern Baptist Convention, was the speaker at the Friday evening session. An inspiring consecration service brought this year's meeting to an end.

It was decided to arrange for a united service at some central point on Armistice Day that prayer might be offered for God's blessing upon the disarmament conference in Washington and it was recommended that all the churches, so far as possible, hold daily meetings for prayer during the conference. The Anti-Saloon League and kindred organizations were commended and city officials were urged to enforce the laws. Comparatively few denominational periodicals are taken by the people of our association and a campaign in every church to secure more subscriptions for such publications, was urged, as also an increase in the quantity of "uplift" news appearing in the daily press. There have been $65 added to our churches by Baptism last associational year, 677 by letter and 256 otherwise, a total of 1,798. Dismissed by letter 477, by death 78 and otherwise 517, a total of 1,072. Net gain 726. Present membership 10,911.

Third Church, Dr. W. H. Geistweil, pastor, will have the help of Dr. G. W. Truett of Dallas, Texas, in an evangelistic campaign, beginning November 1 and continuing ten days. He will preach each afternoon and evening during his stay in our city. We are hoping for great blessing to the entire city as a result of his presence and service. The Euclid, King's Highway and other Baptist churches of our city are also to hold special evangelistic meetings during November. A spirit of evangelism is evident in the regular Sunday services.

Rev. F. L. Perkins is the new pastor at Water Tower Church. The Jewel

Church is now pastorless, Rev. E. A. Partney having closed his work there in September. Dr. S. E. Ewing is the acting pastor of Antioch, preaching there the second and fourth Sundays of each month until a permanent pastor can be found. Rev. A. J. Johnson has lately come to the Festus Church, in place of Rev. Frank Morton, resigned. Brother O. H. Swyers is doing good work at Overland.

The B. Y. P. U. training school has been postponed to the week of December 4. It will be held in the Compton Heights Church. Mr. J. C. Hockett, Jr., will be its director. The fifty-sixth convention of the Missouri Sunday-school Association will be held in our city, November 15-18, with headquarters in the Third Baptist Church. The Tabernacle Church recently added twenty-seven to its membership as the result of special meetings conducted by its pastor, Rev. G. C. Schwartz, with the help of Rev. W. H. Setzer, state evangelist.

They Have Tried D. V. B. S. and Like Them.

By ELIZABETH M. FINN

A word from the wise is sufficient. The following testimonials speak for the Church Vacation Schools.

Seattle, Washington

"The Bible work was the strong feature. Our Sunday school attendance did not fall off as much as usual this summer. This was due to the Summer School. We did a full year's work in Bible study."—Miss F. ALLEN, Principal.

Bremerton, Washington

"1. It was good publicity. 2. Increased prestige. 3. Furnished point of contact with new people. 4. Helped boys and girls. 5. Discovered latent talent and afforded chance for development to the workers. 6. Broadened horizon of the church. All the workers in the school were volunteers."—Mrs. PIERRE WAGNER, Principal.

Charleston, Washington

"We have found in five years' experience that we can make the work of the school deeply religious.

Worship, Scripture memory work, dramatization of Bible stories, and Bible handwork took the major part of our time. Industrial work is secondary, and is of no greater interest to the children than the Bible work."—F. W. WIGHTMAN, Pastor.

Oreland, California

"It was the best opportunity as a pastor I have ever had to instruct children of the church. It is the best summer work that any church can do. We want to do big things next year."—PAUL H. TALLEY.

Berkeley, California

"Best thing a church can undertake. Parents not interested in church appreciate what is done for their children. The returns are bound to be lasting because of the motive back of the school. The school not only instills a Christian spirit in homes, where there was none, but enlivens it in many other homes."—Mrs. V. S. SILKE.

Oakland, California

"I believe it to be one of the best ways to learn your community. A great opportunity for follow up work in the families."—F. SIDNEY SHINALL.

The best kind of work in which I have ever engaged."—REV. F. A. FRIDELL.

Powers Lake, N. Dakota

"We have already decided to hold a school next year. Our church received the good will of the community. Among the boys and girls our church is the church, our pastor, the pastor, and our teachers, the teachers. We thank God for our success. We are thankful to our teachers for their work, and owe thanks to the American Baptist Publication Society for the splendid lesson helps and suggestions they gave us."—ERLING MONNES, Pastor.

"I am sorry that Bible school is ending so soon. I was very much interested in the work and more so in the Bible Stories and our singing every morning, as I have learned a great deal while attending school. I wish to thank you for all you have done for us and hope we will have school next year and all will be present. From your scholar."—MARGARET BUESINGER. (9 years old.)

The vacation session of the church school has passed the purely mission stage, and earned its rightful place in the educational program of the church. Provision should be made for it in the church budget and wherever possible, because of his religious and educational outlook, the pastor should be the principal. The great need in this field today is for an understanding and co-operating ministry.

To prepare the pastors for this co-operation, intensive training schools have been held in thirty seminaries, colleges, missionary training schools and other strategic points. A course of reading for prospective workers in church vacation and church week-day schools is offered.

An increase of almost 50 per cent in the number of vacation schools has been achieved this year. Reports from about 700 schools under Baptists supervision, or in community co-operation, with an enrollment of from sixty to seventy thousand Baptist children who have received religious education during the summer have already been received. This indicates that approximately 10 per cent of our churches have already organized for vacation school work.

Church News by States

Atlantic Coast

Vermont Associations.

Special Evangelist of the General Board of Promotion

By JAMES E. NORCROSS

The influence that springs from a long and vital contrast, with a given field was signally illustrated at the annual gatherings of the seven associations of Vermont.

Dr. W. A. Davison, the state secretary, proved himself a master in the cumulative arrangement of the programs, the versatility of his appeals to the constituency, the thought given to the comfort and transportation of his guests and the cheerful optimism which he radiated during the two weeks' period of state visitation.

Miss Orton, the office secretary, at each association, presented the cause of missionary literature in a very clear monologue.

Prof. Rogers of Beirut, for a time in America, has been added to the staff of Vermont workers and will direct an intensive campaign in the Green Mountain State in the interests of the New World Movement.

The co-operating societies loaned, for the series of fall meetings, Miss Isabel Crawford, missionary to the Indians, Rev. J. F. Ingram, missionary to the Kachins and Rev. J. E. Norcross, field representative of the General Board of Promotion.

These workers were at their best and enlisted the most cordial approval of the delegates and on the two Sundays of the visitation period, were heard by delighted audiences in the churches to which they were assigned.

The women of the churches were met in special conferences by Miss Ada Brigham and Mrs. J. A. Greenwood and woman's part in our next imperative advance was fully and prayerfully brought to their attention.

Among the many fine presentations of religious truth by selected ministers special mention should be made of the two addresses given by Rev. W. F. Wilson of Burlington and W. S. Towart of Bennington.

Truth has many angles and aspects and these brethren in different centers brought a composite message that arrested the attention, warmed the heart and was aglow with the spirit of Christ.

The weather was perfect, the face of Nature never wore a lovelier smile, Vermont hospitality was tested and praised, delegates were earnest, programs were carried out and policies endorsed with a unanimity that argues well for a banner year for Vermont Baptists.

CONNECTICUT

MISSIONARY INSTITUTES with the conference idea combined have been held in East Killingly, New Haven and Poquonock during this month. The purpose of these gatherings being to arouse interest in the study-books with a view to intelligently facing our "Unfinished Task." There was frank and free discussion of New World Movement goals and objectives.

THE CHURCHES of the Hartford Association co-operated with the Kennedy School of Missions in carrying on a missionary institute, which was held in the chapel of the Hartford Theological Seminary on October 12 and 13. The state convention men were assisted by Rev. J. C. Stoddard, Rev. A. C. Hanna, Miss Ellen S. Daniels, Miss Ruby Weed, Miss Edith Wing, Mrs. Orrin R. Judd and Miss Helen Crissman.

REV. M. W. SCHUH, pastor of Memorial Baptist Church, Hartford, has organized a training school for teacher and leaders covering first and second year courses. Supper is served at 5:30-6:15. Classes meet at 6:15 and 7:00. At 7:45 the regular church prayer meeting hears an exposition of the Gospel of John. Then two classes at 8:30. Mr. Schuh has the assistance of Rev. W. T. Thayer, Miss Edith Town, Mr. Wm. J. Reid.

REV. ADDISON E. PERO, recently called to the pastorate of the Baptist Church, Essex, was ordained Thursday evening, October 13, Rev. E. H. (Who?), New York, preaching the ordination sermon. Others taking part in the service were: Dr. J. H. Sheppard, Dr. A. B. Coats, Revs. E. R. Hyde, W. T. Thayer and S. W. Delzell. Mrs. Pero is the daughter of Dr. Sheppard, pastor of the Deep River Baptist Church.

ON OCTOBER 10 the Preston City Church called a council to examine Horatio J. Chase with a view to his ordination. Rev. N. B. Prindle, Rev. F. S. Robbins, Rev. E. E. Gates, Rev. C. A. Merrill and Rev. O. G. Buddington participating. This date being the 106th anniversary of the organization of the church, a banquet was followed by suitable evening program. Rev. G. H. Strouse, Rev. J. G. Osborne, Rev. M. D. Fuller and Rev. A. B. Coats participated and the Bible school orchestra. Special music was rendered by a tra-

MASSACHUSETTS

REV. E. B. PRIDE of Bayonne, N. J., has been called to the First Church, Fitchburg.

THE FIRST CHURCH CHARLESTON, will celebrate its 120th Anniversary, beginning Oct. 23. President Horr, a former pastor, will attend and give reminiscences of the early history of the church.

AT THE FIRST CHURCH, PEABODY, pastor C. Norman Bartlett announces a series of sermons entitled "Modern Echoes from Ancient Dramas."

AT WEST SOMERVILLE, Rev. Frank M. Swaffield, pastor, they have been using the vacation for a general refurbishing up of the entire plant, and making such changes as add to the needed facilities of a church of 1600 members, and one of the largest Sunday schools in the state. Four thousand dollars transformed the outfit. Pastor Swaffield announces a more extended program for Sunday evenings, taking him through until Christmas. The general subject is, "The Flame that Burns in Famous Literary Gems."

REV. HENRY E. HODGE began his pastorate, at the 1st Church, Everett, Oct. 23, the 23rd Anniversary of his Ordination at the 1st Church, Boston.

DR. W. QUAY ROSSELLE gave a brilliant paper to the Boston Baptist Ministers October 17th, on "Oratory in the Pulpit."

NEW YORK

THE FIRST CHURCH, BUFFALO, at a largely attended prayer meeting last Wednesday, unanimously adopted the Confession of Faith adopted at the Fundamentals Conference at Des Moines. Announcement was made the previous Sunday that the matter would be discussed and this brought an unusually large attendance. There was not a dissenting vote.

AN INSTALLATION SERVICE was held for Rev. A. A. Forshee, minister-in-charge, at the Second Baptist Church, New York, October 7. An informal reception was held immediately following the installation service.

NEW JERSEY

FIRST CHURCH, BAYONNE: C. H. Rannels, pastor, gave the hand of fellowship to several new members at the September and October communion services.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

SCRANTON, IMMANUEL: The present membership of Immanuel is 1,152; non-resident 236; 235 new members have been received during the past two and one-half years. Of these 110 were by baptism. The Sunday School enrollment is 824. Missionary gifts were quadrupled in the New World Movement. Current expenses amounted to about $15,000, and missionary gifts about $12,000 last year. Miss Edith Butz, one of the young women from Immanuel is now studying at the Baptist Institute, Philadelphia. The educational board is now preparing for week day religious instruction. The women's work is now being organized into one society.

REV. PAUL BROWN, Pastor of the Walnut St. church of Jersey Shore, Pa., has accepted a call to become pastor at large of The Ten Mile association. He will begin work on his new field Nov. 1st. When Mr. Brown came to the Walnut St. church three and a half years ago it numbered 260 members, and had never given more than $200 to missions in any one year. Now the church numbers 400 and has pledged $19,200.00 to The New World Movement. Friday evening a farewell reception was given Mr. Brown and his family.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

ELIZABETH CHURCH, Eugene Neubauer, pastor, celebrated its seventy-ninth anniversary by special services running through September.

New College for Women

The first class to enter the new Keuka College has organized by electing Miss Ruth Cynthia Norton as president; Miss Marjorie Elizabeth Comstock of Potter, N. Y., as vice president; Miss Margaret Elsie Hughes of Whitesboro, N. Y., as secretary, and Miss Ruth G. Anderson of Stockton, N. Y., as treasurer. The girls are keenly interested in the pioneer work of establishing a new college for women. Already plans are being made for the establishment of student government and Young Women's Christian Association. A college paper is to be published in October. Nearly fifteen per cent of the students in Keuka College hold University scholarships for excellence in their High School work.

A pageant is being written by the professor of expression and physical culture to be given on October 7 at the time of the formal opening of the college.

Mississippi Valley

OHIO

FIRST CHURCH, GENEVA. On October 9 it unanimously called as pastor, Rev. Theodore G. Erler of Defiance, O. He has accepted the call and will begin his work at Geneva about November 1. Mr. Erler has had two successful pastorates, first at Findlay, Ohio, for four years, and at Defiance, Ohio, for five years.

INDIANA

WAYNETOWN has just closed a very successful revival meeting of twelve days' duration. The only "specialists" used in the meeting were the pastor, and the choir director of the local church. There were four additions by conversion and baptism, and the spiritual life of the church has been wonderfully uplifted.

ILLINOIS

THE RESPONSE to the appeal of the Foreign Mission Society for the "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" has been general and generous throughout the state. Chicago Baptists secured a special car which was packed full. Mrs. J. J. Ross had general supervision in the city of the collection of the goods. She was ably assisted in the task of providing transportation by J. W. Bodenock, L. C. Walker and W. Robinson.

REV. RALPH M. JONES has just begun his work as pastor of the church at El Paso. He comes to the state from Chester, Vermont, where he had the distinction of being pastor for fourteen years. We hope his stay in El Paso will be equally long and effective.

REV. E. K. MASTERSON has just closed a two years' pastorate at Sycamore. He goes to Savanna where he begins his work October 30th.

REV. CHARLES H. DURDEN, the energetic pastor of the First Church, Galesburg, put in a week of hard work at Shurtleff giving a series of addresses which he called "Expositions of the Christian Life." He spoke sixteen times during his visit.

THE CHURCH at WARRENVILLE is making good headway under the leadership of Rev. E. Robert Pfeil. Instead of only one service a week it now holds three. Week day religious education has also been inaugurated and approximately 87 per cent of the school children are attending classes of graded work under the direction of the pastor.

REV. GEORGE W. STODDARD of the East Park Church, Decatur, tendered his resignation on a recent Sunday morning to accept a call to Arcola where he begins his work October 30th. After a pastorate of three years Mr. Stoddard leaves the Decatur field in excellent condition with all bills paid despite the general business depression and unemployment; forty new members added to the church recently as a result of special meetings when he was assisted by Rev. C. R. Drussel of Springfield.

UNDER THE LEADERSHIP of pastor A. Sterling Barner the church at Barrington opens auspiciously its fall and winter work, and $800 has recently been raised and expended for re-decorating the church interior.

THE CHURCH at JERSEYVILLE under the leadership of Rev. R. B. Favorite has just closed one of the best revivals in its history. The pastor conducted two weeks of service after which he was assisted for two weeks by Dr. L. D. Lamkin. The result is 90 additions to date, 64 having been baptised. Many heads of families are included in this number, and the spirit of the revival touched all classes and reached far into the surrounding country. Reports indicate that this revival was not "worked up"; it "came down."

MICHIGAN

JACKSON, FIRST, had an attendance of 285 in Sunday-school, October 16, and $13.74 collection. The Young Women's Club has planned a Halloween party to be given in the church parlors, October 31, to which all members of the church and its organization are invited. The Fellowship class is pushing subscriptions to THE BAPTIST and Missions.

Women's Executive Board Meets

On the morning of October 11, the members of the Executive Board of the Woman's Baptist Mission Society of Michigan met at Woodward Avenue Baptist Church, Detroit. Mrs. Edward Wilson, president, presided.

Mrs. N. H. Bowen, secretary director, has been ill for some time and is still far from well. Mrs. Northrup is also ill. The secretary director's assistant, Mrs. Taylor, reported that Muskegon and Kent Associations had united. A letter from Mrs. Roberts of Alpena Association told of the help and cheer given by Mrs. Lovett at their meeting.

Miss Howell, children's secretary director, reported letters written and that the plans for convention are working out nicely.

Miss Cooper has just returned from Indiana where she found work in splendid condition. Miss Alexander is the new worker among the colored people of Detroit. A center will be opened for them October 29. They are equipping the gym and taking care of the upkeep of the building, but many things are needed to equip the building. Cash donations will be brought to basket meeting October 28. This meeting will be held at Highland Park Church. Mrs. E. W. Moore of the Christian Center at Pittsburgh will be present, and will give an address and sing folk songs.

The Foreign Box and Supply Committee reported cash and supplies valued at $507 sent to the foreign field. It is desired that all sending boxes to missionaries report to Mrs. Arthur Bassett, Vinsetta Park, Royal Oak, Mich.

Mrs. Wreggit, secretary of literature, reported having written thirty letters and sending out twenty-five packets of literature. The sale of the Book of Remembrance is being pushed.

Business was suspended and Mr. Bachelor addressed the ladies on the needs of Kalamazoo College and plans for its future.

Business being resumed it was voted to cooperate with the plans of the Central District in the raising of the Miracle Fund.

The resignation of Mrs. C. F. Brown as custodian of the Society's records, was accepted with regret.

After a few of the annual reports were received, owing to the lateness of the hour, it was voted that the President and Secretary be a committee to pass on such reports.

Meeting adjourned at 12:30 and after luncheon gathered again to meet Director Hudson. He greatly desires the co-operation and help of the women in the raising of the moneys already pledged and in bringing the new plans to completion.

JANET BURGESS,
Cor. Sec'y.

WISCONSIN

JANESVILLE, observed church day Sept. 29 with a cafeteria supper and an appropriate program, followed by the reports of church officers and organizations. The church has raised $10,022.39 for current expenses this year and $7688.65 for benevolences.

IOWA

JUBILEE, DES MOINES: Sunday, October 16 was Rally Day. Three services were held with good attendance at each service. Several united with the church at the evening service. Lots are being purchased for the erecting of a new building.

MINNESOTA

ST. PAUL, FIRST has a total enrollment in its Bible School of 519 attending members, forty-seven in the Cradle Roll and forty in the Home Department, making a total of 580. Rev. John A. Earl is pastor.

Bethel Institute Opens

The Bethel Institute, St. Paul, Minnesota, formerly known as the Bethel Academy and Theological Seminary, has opened its doors for the fall term with many signs of encouragement and progress.

The Theological Seminary, which had an enrollment of fifteen last year, has opened its doors with twenty-five students this year and twenty-one others preparing for the gospel ministry by taking preparatory work in the Bethel Academy, the preparatory department of the school. The enrollment of the Academy is one hundred seventy-four thus far, of which nearly fifty are preparing for some form of definite Christian service.

The new teachers taking up work this year are Mrs. Edna Peterson Kent of Spokane, Washington, in the Commercial Department, Miss Violet Wallendorf in the Academic Department. Rev. O. Milton Lind, a former graduate of the Academy, as well as the Theological Seminary and a student of other schools, has been engaged for the autumn quarter to assist in teaching in order to enable Prof. E. A. Finstrom, M. Th. to assist in the Theological Seminary, pending the coming of K. J. Karlson, Ph. D. of Worcester, Mass., who was appointed at the last meeting of the Swedish Baptist General Conference.

The spirit is very enthusiastic and encouraging and all tokens point toward the best year in the history of the school.

Calvary, Minneapolis

There is now a membership of 182 in the Home Department of the Sunday school. The contributions for the quarter ending September 30 amounted to $32.89. One hundred and twenty-one of the members of the department reported that they had studied every lesson.

The missionary committee at its first meeting held recently planned to respond to the "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" appeal; to make one of the mid week services a month a missionary meeting; to designate the week of Oct. 30 to Nov. 6 as pay-up week on pledges to the New World Movement, to form an active prayer league in the church; to recommend that Sunday, Nov. 13, be observed as a special missionary Sunday; and to plan for a church school of missions after the holidays, the school to last six weeks.

A fellowship canvas was made Sunday, October 16.

NORTH DAKOTA

REV. C. J. TINGLEY, formerly of Minot, became pastor at Fairmount September 1. His work is opening with promise of a long and successful pastorate.

RED RIVER VALLEY ASSOCIATION met this year with the Crystal Church October 18-20; the Northwestern Association with the Glenburn Church October 23-25, and the North Dakota Association with the Bismarck Church October 27 and 28. Rev. Samuel D. Bawden of India represented the Board of Promotion at each of these Associations and gave very informing and inspiring addresses at each Association. Reverend Bawden also spoke at several of our churches during the last half of October.

REV. L. MCKINNON has accepted a call to the Page Church, to begin work November 1. Rev. McKinnon was formerly pastor at Crystal.

LISBON: Director of Religious Education, E. Wiestle, and Miss Emma K. Anderson, field missionary for the Woman's Home Mission Society, conducted a church conference with the Lisbon church, which has greatly helped in the plans for the year.

REV. ADOLPH SCHOCK of Rochester Seminary supplied Minot during part of the summer.

PARK RIVER: The basement is being put in for the new church building. The State Convention is represented on the building committee by the General Superintendent, Rev. J. G. York and Mr. M. W. Spaulding of Grand Forks. It is hoped to have the building closed before winter begins.

BARTON: Pastor B. Kjenstad will enter Northern Baptist Theological Seminary for the second semester.

ESMOND: Pastors Larson and Finwall have conducted a successful series of revival meetings at Esmond and Maddock. A number of persons professed conversion.

KENMARE: Rev. W. A. Barclay, who came to this field May 15, returned to Texas September 15. The church is now on the lookout for another pastor.

RUSSIAN CHURCHES: Missionary Nestor Nesdoly, one Sunday during the summer, baptized fourteen young people. Rev. A. H. Nikolaus of San Francisco visited our Russian churches for a month during the summer and helped very much with the work.

RYDER: The State Superintendent, assisted by Colporteur C. J. Hill, organized a new Baptist church at Ryder, Sunday, October 16, with fourteen charter members. Others will be added to the church by baptism in the near future. Four persons were recently baptized Sunday afternoon at Rice Lake. The clerk of the church is Mrs. Andrew Anderson.

ROSEGLLEN: This church was formerly known as the Amundsville Church. Evangelist Finwall recently closed a successful series of meetings in the church. A number of people have been baptized and united with the church. Funds have been raised to erect a building.

REV. L. R. JOHNSON, formerly of Montevideo, Minnesota, became pastor of the Bismarck church September 1, and has been heartily received by the church and people of the city.

POWERS LAKE: Rev. E. Monnes, the successful pastor of this large Norwegian Baptist church, has given his resignation to the great regret of the church and his host of friends throughout the state.

REV. O. S. JACOBSON and Colporteur L. M. Stolberg conducted a two weeks' series of meetings at Flasher, which were of great benefit to the church. These two workers are now engaged in a series of meetings at Deapolis, west of the Missouri River.

FARGO FIRST: On a recent Sunday evening Pastor R. W. Hobbs baptized seven high school students, five of whom were boys. On Rally Sunday the church aimed at an attendance of 400. The report showed 463 present. The annual business meeting of the church, held during the month of October, showed all bills paid, and the church in hearty accord with the state and national promotional programs.

GRAND FORKS: The first Sunday in October was observed as Rally and Promotion Day in the Bible School. The general plan followed was that of a fishing excursion. The B. Y. P. U. have entered heartily in the program for the Baptist Young People of America, and hope to accomplish more than their share. The church has adopted goals for the coming year which call for 100 persons added to the church by baptism and restoration, and 100 members of stewardship leagues. Rev. J. S. York is anxious to learn the names of all Baptists young people attending the state university.

FESSENDEN: Pastor reports three young people baptized Sunday, September 11.

Visitor Inspects Fargo

I am on a short visit to Fargo, N. D., and had the good fortune to be at the annual meeting of the First Baptist Church of this city. It was preceded by the usual fine supper—of course. Then came the reports.

Rally Day, Sept. 25, the Sunday School had an attendance of 463, against 353 the previous year. At the morning service Dr. R. W. Hobbs baptized seven high school students and then also nine young people came to the platform to indicate their enlistment into life's active service for Christ. Six more, not able to be present, have dedicated their lives to Christian service.

The financial reports were cheering. All obligations had been met. The total approximated $17,000.00. The energetic Sunday School Superintendent made the statement that in all departments $1200.00 had been raised in the school.

The program of the Northern Baptist Convention was enthusiastically adopted by the church, and one-fourth of all subscriptions to "our paper," THE BAPTIST, in the state were taken by this church. The gifts to missions per capita also exceeds that of any other church in the city of any denomination. A VISITOR.

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

LEM T. ROOT, Gospel Evangelist. Twenty years' experience from Pacific Coast to Kentucky. References. Mail addressed 3206 Sixth Ave., Tacoma, Wash. is forwarded.

WANTED—Competent nurse for two small children. A permanent home with unusual spiritual advantages. This may interest some cultured college girl. Mrs. Fales, 44 Central Ave., Dayton, Ohio.

WANTED—By Baptist young woman, position as matron or business manager in college dormitory. Has had training and experience in food work. If interested, address S. care of THE BAPTIST.

Successful, interesting orthodox Chicago pastor, now in business, just closing pastorate of three and a half years, is open for work with a church that cannot afford resident pastor. Highest references. Address C. P. care of THE BAPTIST.

Van Duzen Bells
Formerly Van Duzen & Tyl
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO

Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

Rocky Mountain States

WYOMING

MISS BETTY ADAMS JEWELL DULIN and Roger Gerald Smith were married September 13 at Worland, Wyo. The ceremony was performed by the father of the bride, Rev. T. L. Dulin, pastor of the church at Worland.

COLORADO

BOULDER, FIRST: The treasurer's report for the past year shows that the church met its bills of $7,070.61 for current expenses and $2,793.96 for benevolences, closing the year with a balance of $251.56. A chorus choir of fifty voices is a feature of the evening service.

Sunday School Parade in Loveland

The third annual Sunday school parade of Loveland, Colorado was held on the national Go-to-Church Sunday, Oct. 2, 1921. It was also a Rally Day for all of the Sunday schools of the town. Twelve Sunday schools participated with a total of 2,464 in the parade out of a population of about 5,300. Four German-speaking schools and the Swedish Lutheran school participated for the first time. The parade was gala with brightly-decorated Cradle Roll floats, Home Department floats, bright paper caps for the smaller children, decorated bicycles for the boys. The town band, the boys band and the G. A. R. drum corps all marched. The mayor and council participated in a flag raising service, both the Christian flag and the American flag being raised.

The Baptist Sunday school led in numbers, with a total of 560 in automobiles and on foot. The enrollment of the Sunday school is 350. It has a Home Department of 45 members. It has the largest Cradle Roll in the state with a total of 156 babies enrolled. Twenty-five were graduated from the Cradle Roll this October. The school has a large Teacher-Training class. The departments of the Sunday school are well manned. The superintendent of the school is W. M. Ward, cashier of the First National Bank of Loveland.

FIRST CHURCH, GREELEY: A social was given recently by the young people of the church in honor of the College students. The students from out of town were guests in the homes of church members Sunday, October 9. The women of the church are raising a purse of money to send as a Christmas greeting to Mrs. Alice Glazer Klein and her husband in Moulmein, Burma. Mrs. Klein is the foreign missionary representative of the Greeley church.

ON OCTOBER 12 the First church, Denver, Dr. A. H. C. Morse, pastor, assembled at its annual dinner. About three hundred and fifty were present; after which the annual reports of the church and its societies were read. These revealed the best year in the history of the church; with 380 accessions, and 98 of these by baptisms; the Bible school much larger than ever before, with an enrollment of nearly 1,000; and the funds raised for all purposes more than $40,000.00. Dr. Morse has now been with this church just nine years, and the membership has more than doubled; the total number received in this pastorate being nineteen hundred.

On the second of October he gave the hand of fellowship to twenty-seven, and on the sixteenth baptized two law partners, each about 70 years of age.

Pacific Coast

WASHINGTON

Calvary Baptist Church, colored, Spokane, was not given a quota for the New World Movement. They felt slighted so have adopted for themselves the modest quota of $20,000.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

AT THE MEETING of San Francisco Bay Association, held in the Golden Gate Church, Oakland, among the resolutions passed was the following. "That our association observe November as 'Pledge Up' month, doing their part to fully subscribe the $100,000,000, and observe the third Sunday of November and April as 'Pay up Sunday.'" Similar resolutions have been passed at the various meetings of our associations.

ABOUT 200 WOMEN attended the Luncheon given in the First Baptist Church, Oakland, October 11, to hear Mrs. George W. Coleman outline the plans for the raising of $6,000,000 by the women of the Northern Baptist Convention during the next six months.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

JOHN MARVIN DEAN has been called to the pastorate of the First Baptist church at Pasadena.

THE THIRD ANNIVERSARY of the pastorate of Dr. John Freeman Mills, pastor at Fresno was recently honored by a church supper. During the last associational year one hundred and forty new members have been welcomed. A location for a branch church has been purchased opposite the new million dollar high school building and two blocks from the State College.

REDLANDS, FIRST: Six hundred and ninety-six were present in the Bible school on Rally Day, September 25th. The school of Missions opened October 16 at 6:15. Last year there was an average attendance of two hundred and seventy-five for the six weeks. Twenty-two were received into the church at the October communion service, and large audiences are coming to the preaching services. Rev. Gordon Palmer is going to conduct a five days soul winning conference in order to get instruction to the church members in methods of soul winning. The church is contributing about $12,000 a year for missions. The membership is now over 700.

Three hundred and ten members have joined within the last two years. Rev. S. Fraser Langford is pastor.

Books Received.

A Treasury of Myths, by Inez McFee; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York; for young readers; color illustrations; cloth, 124 pages.

A Treasury of Flower Stories, by Inez McFee; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York; for young readers; color illustrations; cloth, 124 pages.

A Treasury of Indian Tales, by Clara K. Bayliss; Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York; for young readers; color illustrations; cloth, 124 pages.

(These are beautiful holiday or birthday gift books. You will like them.)

To Be or Not to Be, by S. D. Chambers; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; a volume of five-minute talks to children of the junior age; cloth, 160 pages; $1.25; suggestive of good talking points.

The Economic Eden and other sermons, by Frederick F. Shannon; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; nine sermons well worth reading; cloth, 190 pages; $1.25.

The Lure of the Leopard Skin, by Josephine Hope Westervelt; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; a story of travel and adventure in Africa; not much as a story, but giving a good deal of interesting information about the country; cloth, 240 pages; $1.75.

The Miracle on Hermon, by John Marvin Dean; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; a sample of the early mythical tales about Jesus and a delightful Christmas story; 60 cents.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

A New Christmas Service Free

We want you to see

THE GIFT OF LOVE, our new S. S. Service of merit. You will like it. Sent free.

Our CHRISTMAS RECITATION BOOKLET, NO. 24 with cute songs, is the best ever. 15c.

WHEN THE KING CAME, A Pastoral Sketch for young people. Beautiful. No music. 12c.

CHRISTMAS FOLKS, a wholesome, amusing cantata for Sunday school or Day school. 12c.

HYMNS FOR TODAY, for Sunday school and Church, contains 20 Christmas hymns and two Christmas service programs. Sample copy sent for examination. Orchestrated.

Give us your address (or others interested) and we will mail free a new catalogue of Christmas services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for women's voices, also men's voices, and anthems for mixed voices.

If interested in Sunday school orchestra music you should know what we have for you. Write.

FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE

528 Elm Street, CINCINNATI, O.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desk—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free. DeMOLIN BROS. & CO., Dept. 17, GREENVILLE, ILL.

MOUNDS PARK SANITARIUM

Earl and Thorn Streets

MIDWAY HOSPITAL

Snelling and University Avenue

MERRIAM PARK HOSPITAL

(FORMERLY COBB)

Iglehart and Cleveland Avenues

DEPARTMENTS

General Surgery Medicine
Neurology Obstetrics
Eye, Ear, Nose
and Throat

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

LABORATORIES

Radium Blood Chemistry
X-Ray Basal Metabolism
Serology Pathology
Electrocardiograph

Young People's Work

(Continued from page 1271)

What a difference it would make in the effectiveness of our Union and all our local societies, if we should all determine to cultivate "that mind that was in Jesus," and to strive day by day to be more helpful, more sympathetic, more tolerant, more democratic and more willing to overlook self-interest.

Membership Campaign

An intensive membership campaign will be carried on from October 30th to November 15th, to increase the active membership of the local societies as well as the Union. The week of October 23-30 will be set aside for special prayer for the success of this campaign, with Sunday, the 30th, designated as Young People's Day in the churches.

Young People's hour was observed on Wednesday, the 19th of October, in connection with the Long Island Baptist Association meetings in Emmanuel Baptist Church.

MARY M. ANDERSON,
Chairman Press Committee.

BULLETINS

The Lone Star State

One hundred and eight new B. Y. P. U.'s were organized in Texas last July by the fifty two B. Y. P. U. workers.

Among the West Virginia Hills

The Baptist young people of West Virginia have set their goals for 1921-22 as follows: 1. Three thousand tithers before July 1922; 2. Three thousand Bible Readers before July 1922; 3. Two hundred decisions for Life Service; 4. Two hundred B. Y. P. U.'s in the State; 5. Two hundred Standard B. Y. P. U.'s.

Georgia

The City Union of Savannah, Georgia, recently presented a most interesting city-wide program. It was a missionary meeting in which a telegraph instrument was installed in the church. The clicking of the instrument indicated cablegrams from the foreign fields calling for more workers. A long distance phone call was announced asking for a preacher. Besides these there were telegrams and special delivery messages announcing the need for school teachers, nurses, stenographers, and business men.

Down Sugar Cane Way

The New Orleans City B. Y. P. U. recently put on a conversational meeting which proved to be of interest. The group on to lead sat around a table as if they were at home. The topic was discussed, each adding his own contribution to the meeting. Some one would tell how he read of the various interests in home and foreign fields, giving a gist of his readings. We suggest this as one of the ways for avoiding monotony. Mr. Joe B. Moseley who for a number of years has been B. Y. P. U. Secretary in Arkansas is now Director of the same activities in Louisiana.

From the Old Dominion

Over one hundred young people volunteered for definite Christian service in the B. Y. P. U.s of Virginia last year.

Alberta

Baptist Young People's work in the Baptist Union of Western Canada is making progress. The first assembly for Alberta was held at Gull Lake, Lacombe, from July 18th to 30th with an attendance of two hundred and thirty six.

From Sunny California

Rev. W. Earle Smith, pastor of First Baptist Church, Ontario, California, writes: "Our work is prospering far beyond what I had hoped for. I have thirty high school and college young people who are enrolled to take the Baptist Trained Leaders Course. We are beginning next week with two books, 'Restatement of Baptist Principles' and Barclay's 'Life of Christ.' Our high school and junior college will give one full credit for all who complete this Baptist Trained Leaders Course. That's pretty fine when a high school gives one-sixteenth of its entire four year's credit for this work."

Good Reading for Young People

(Continued from page 1270)

"ning Church Buildings" by Tralle and Merrill is especially excellent for those who are contemplating constructing or remodelling church buildings. The reading of this book will put young people in a position to cooperate intelligently in securing better accommodations for their work as they carry out worship, educational and recreational programs. "The Use of Projects in Religious Education" by Hartley opens up the question of the application of the modern educational idea of "project" in the field of religious education. The book is concerned with the handwork part of the program for children and youth. Those who are and expect to be teachers in the church school will find in it valuable help for making their teaching interesting. These are the newest books out on the various problems and are well worth the attention of young people. As one directing work with young people, I am interested in having them read the best to fit themselves for further usefulness.

Our Baptist Summer Assemblies.

ALL over the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention people are expressing themselves in somewhat this fashion with regard to our Baptist summer assemblies, "Woe is me if I do not make my life count for righteousness and the advancement of God's Kingdom this winter." A father writes: "Our daughter, eighteen years of age, has been at the assembly for three summers and comes home each year more enthusiastic to do Bible school work. The Christian influence is great there. Many of the young people who have attended the school have visited my home and they are a fine crowd."

This word comes from another "Never has a more earnest, studious, orderly and jolly assembly convened in this state. The atmosphere was surcharged with the religious spirit. Again the Master was in our midst, manifesting Himself to us by the shores of the beautiful lake. In days to come it will be plain that these young people have been with Jesus."

This past summer has been an unusually blessed and fruitful one in our summer assemblies. A very conservative estimate of the total registrations at our twenty-four Baptist assemblies puts the number doing regular and systematic work between seven and eight thousand.

One resultant of the summer assembly work is that the young people who have been inspired and helped are desirous of bringing in a very definite way something of the same vision to others who have been unable to attend the Summer Assembly. Requests are rapidly coming into the Publication Society's Division on Training School Promotion for institutes to be held in the autumn and winter.

Plans are already being made for five day institutes with Detroit, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Philadelphia, and in other cities for shorter periods. The work done in these institutes is of the same high order as that done in our summer assemblies.

THOMAS B. FRIZELLE.

RUSSELL H. CONWELL'S

story of

"Johnny Ring and the Captain's Sword"

A five-reel Screen Sermon with Synchronized Music Score

WHAT PEOPLE SAY:

"Gripping" "Appealing" "Convincing"
"One of the greatest screen-sermons"

One church cleared $700.00 in a two-night showing

THE TEMPLE PRODUCING CO., Inc.

1943 North Broad Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY WILLIAM LESTER

ANTHEM LIST NO. 2

The list of anthem suggestions this issue is from the catalogue of the H. W. Gray Co., 2 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Lord, I have loved the habitation of Thy House.....Torrance
How lovely is Thy dwelling place.....Brahms
O God, Thou art my God.....Wathall
The Haven-of-Rest-for-Aye.....Lester
I was glad when they said unto me.....Candlyn
Bread of the World.....Chambers
The Lord is my Light.....Young
Almighty and merciful God.....Marchant
O Sons and Daughters.....Andrews
With Righteousness He judgeth all.....Lester
O Lamb of God.....Rile
Come, ye children.....Sullivan-Nevin
The Eyes of the Lord.....Andrews
Consider the Ravens.....Lester
O Saving Victim.....Lansing
The Lord is my strength.....Candlyn
God shall wipe away.....Marks
Behold, what manner of love.....Andrews
God our our Fathers.....Wyatt
Just as I am.....Ludebuehl
Listen, O isles.....Allen

Next week's list will be chosen from the issues of G. Schirmer and Co., New York City.

From the New York Publishing firm of H. W. Gray comes an interesting circular devoted to the church and choral compositions of two well-known American composers, William Lester and Philip James. Of the compositions of Mr. James, special attention is called to a new cantata for Lenten, Easter or general use: "The Light of God," and a Christmas cantata, "The Nightingale of Bethlehem." To these, and to a select list of songs, are appended chosen press comments, praising the musical material. Mr. James is one of our most distinctive and vital composers; whatever comes from his pen is well worthy of earnest consideration. Of the works by the conductor of this page, singled out for particular comment are the oratorio of "The Golden Syon," a cantata for Christmas, "The Christmas Rose," a choral ballad, published in two editions (mixed voices and for women's chorus); a brilliant Easter solo, "Sing the Resurrection Day," and a set of six anthems: "The Haven of Rest-for-Aye," "With Righteousness He Judgeth All," "How Excellent Thy Name," "Consider the Ravens," "He is my Salvation," "Peace Which Passeth." Critical approval as expressed by musical critics and reviewers is attached to the various titles. All of the texts to the above mentioned works are by the noted New York literary authority and poet, Frederick H. Martens.

AS TO CHRISTMAS CAROLS

As yet it is a little early to devote much space to the subject of Christmas music. But several requests have come in for information as to available settings of Christmas carols. Evidently several people read my article on the subject of Sunday school music a few weeks ago, in which mention was made of such material, at least, they blame that for the queries! For the benefit of those interested I list below some carol publications—not new works written in imitation of carols, but settings of old traditional carol tunes.

Five Old French Carols, arr. by DeAndrea.
Five Russian Christmas Carols, arr. by Kingsley.
Six Traditional English Carols, arr. by Scott.
Four Old-time Christmas Carols, arr. by Mattullath.
Five Old Christmas Carols, arr. by Schmidt.
"The Little Lord Jesus," a cantata by William Lester, based upon 16 ancient French carols.
(All the above published by Carl Fischer, Cooper Square, New York.)
Eight Old Christmas Carols, arr. by Lester, (published by H. W. Gray, New York City.)
Summy's Collection of Ten Carols for Christmas, selected by Roy R. Murphy, (published by Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago.)
Old Christmas Carols, traditional melodies, published in ten or more booklets as Carol Annuals.
Ten Christmas Carols, arr. by Gerrit Smith; Three Old Bohemian Carols, arr. by Riedel; (published by G. Schirmer Co., New York.)
Two Christmas Carols, by Matthews, (published by Oliver Ditson Co., Boston, Mass.)

Exchange and Service Department

WHO KNOWS THE BOY?

I HAVE A SON who left Dugger, Ind., about the first of June. His name is Earl Lisher. He is a member of the Baptist church and will be attending church services wherever he is. I would like to get his address. If any of our readers know the young man write his father, L. M. Lisher, Dugger, Ind.

AVAILABLE AS SUPPLY

REV. D. R. DAVIES of Knoxville, Iowa, on account of serious illness in Mrs. Davies family has been obliged to make his home in Berlin, Wis. Mr. Davies is well acquainted in this section, having attended Ripon College. He will be glad to be of service to the churches.

RURAL PASTORATE WANTED

A PASTOR in a thriving city in the middle west wants to leave the city pastorate for rural work. Address "Rural" care of THE BAPTIST.

EVANGELISTIC SINGERS

MR. AND MRS. S. R. STINE of Woodburn Ky., evangelistic singers want engagements in Illinois in December and January.

EVANGELISTS

EVANGELIST L. C. BAUER of Whitehall, Ill., has open dates following a meeting with the Bethany Church, Chicago, the first of the year.

OLD PEOPLE WANT HOME

CAN YOU TELL me of a home where old people can spend the winter or make their home? I know of some people who need such a place. I wonder what it will cost? Any information relative to this will be much appreciated. Address "Old People," care of THE BAPTIST.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC
HALL-MACK CO.'S
FREE
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT., PASTOR or COM.

6 new, original Christmas S. S. Services

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Helper No. 9. Price, 20c. (25c for Helper and 3 services.)
Herod's Vision. A Song Story—Cantata. Price, 30c.
Victorious Christmas. A Song Story for the Sunday School. 25c.
The Manger King. Choir Cantata by Dr. Adam Geibel, 50c.
Here Comes Christmas. Children's Cantata. Price, 25c.
Songs for Little Singers, No. 3. Price, 30c. All (except Helper) sent for examination.

Hall-Mack Co. } 21st and Arch Streets,
Adam Geibel Co. } Philadelphia, Pa.

Lorenz's Christmas Music

SERVICES
"Worship the King" Wilson.
"Gift of Love" Holton.
"Christmas Echoes" Based on Carols.
"The Coming Messiah" Lorenz.
8 cents a copy, $5.00 a hundred.

CANTATAS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS
"When the Savior Came" Lorenz. Sacred. 20c. per copy.
"A Christmas Secret" Wilson. Santa Claus. 30 cents per copy.
"The Spirit of Christmas" Lorenz. Secular but serious. 30 cents.

RECITATIONS AND EXERCISES
"Christmas Treasury No. 32" 25 cents.

CHOIR CANTATAS OR SEMI-ORATORIOS
"The Manger Prince" Ashford. 60 cents.
"The Light of the World." Holton. 60 cents.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS
Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state whether difficult, medium, or easy anthems are wanted, and about twenty samples will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at list prices.

CHRISTMAS SOLOS AND DUETS
Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state voice desired, and about a half dozen sheet music selections will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at one-third off list price.

Send for Free Packet of Samples and Catalogue.
Mention "The Baptist"

L O R E N Z
Publishing Co. Z
NEW YORK, CHICAGO and DAYTON, OHIO

RODEHEAVER PUBLICATIONS
VICTORY SONGS

Our great gospel song book prepared under direction of our Mr. Homer Rodeheaver—unrivalled for general church and religious purposes. 288 pages of choice music—70 new songs. PRICE REDUCED to 25c manila—30c limp—40c cloth, in quantities not prepaid. Single copies—30c manila—30c limp and 45c cloth, postpaid.

AWAKENING SONGS, 256 pages; SONGS FOR SERVICE 288 pages. Same rates as Victory Songs. JOYFUL PRAISE, 128 pgs, adapted to all religious services, 25c limp—20c manila postp'd single copies: 20c limp, 15c manila, not prep'd in quantities. RAINBOW SACRED RECORDS—85c each—Ask for these. Write for complete catalog.

THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1053 Monon Bldg. Dept. B, 814 Walnut St.
Chicago, Ill. Philadelphia, Pa.

Prepare for Your Christmas Services NOW with New Anthems and Carols

Glorify God by Mabel McDuffee, 15c.
A Christmas Message, by Philo Otis, 15c.
In the Beginning Was the Word, by F. Leslie Calver, 15c.
Ten Traditional Carols for Christmas, Selected by Roy R. Murphy from the best of the Old English and German, Price 10c.

Clayton F. Summy Co., Publishers
429 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago

"Buy from Your Own House"

CHRISTMAS SUPPLIES

Christmas Service

The Road to Bethlehem

This new Christmas Service by C. Harold Lowden and Edith Sanford Tillotson can be truly said to be just a little better than the dozens of other popular services by these two talented writers. The service is unique in both story and music and is built upon the Christmas story as told in the Word. The music is charming and impressive.

$6.00 a hundred      $3.25 for fifty
80 cents a dozen      Sample copy, 7 cents

Christmas Offering Envelope

An entirely new design, lithographed in Christmas colors on strong, white paper. Size  $2\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$  in. 50 cents a hundred in any quantity.

$2\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$  inches

Candy Boxes

New and original design, printed attractively in Christmas colors, with tape hanger. Holds one-half pound. Shipped flat, $2.00 a hundred delivery extra.

Christmas Cards

[SERIES 802]

Series 802. A set of ten entirely new Christmas cards. Beautiful designs of winter landscapes with holly. Christmas greetings with Bible verses and suitable poetry. Each with strong envelope. Size  $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Set of ten for 30 cents, postpaid.

Christmas Folders

Series 803. A set of ten new, beautiful Christmas folders. Exquisite designs of landscapes with winter scenes and holly. Christmas greetings with appropriate Bible verses and selected poetry. Each with strong envelope. Size  $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Set of ten for 50 cents, postpaid.

[SERIES 803]

Pastor's Christmas Greeting Cards

No. 890. Designed especially for a pastor to send the members of his church or congregation. A good Christmas sentiment with a beautiful Christmas scene lithographed in full colors. Each card with envelope at $2.50 per hundred.

Send for a copy of our "Selected Books Catalog," containing the Holiday Bulletin, listing Gift Books, Children's Books, Fiction, Greeting Cards, Calendars, and Novelties for the Holiday Season

Established 1824

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
(THE JUDSON PRESS)

Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Seattle, Toronto

"Use BAPTIST Lesson Helps"

"Order from Our Nearest Branch"

Volume II

November 12, 1921

NOV 12 1921

Number 41

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

LINCOLN CATHEDRAL is admitted to be one of the finest in England. Its founding dates back almost to the Norman Conquest; to be more exact, the year 1075. The building was completed in 1501. Between its beginning and its completion the world had witnessed the Crusades, the Revival of Learning in the West, the end of the Roman Empire and the discovery of America. It is in the early English style. Spires originally surmounted the main tower and the two western ones, but the central spire was removed in 1547 and the others in 1808. In the central tower hangs the famous bell, "Great Tom of Lincoln," which weighs 10,800 pounds.

A casual glance is not sufficient for such a building. Take time to inspect it part by part and as a whole, its arches, gables, towers, windows, finials and skyline; then say if it is not a thing of beauty.

Fresh from the Field

Rev. C. D. Williams of Moberg, S. D. began his work at Bonesteel, the same state, Nov. 1.

The First Church, Marceline, Mo., reports a very successful year's work under the pastoral direction of Rev. J. E. Chapell, who has just entered upon his second year. The membership was increased by eighty-two, and missionary offering were larger than in former years.

Mr. E. V. Brewster, clerk of the church at Aberdeen, S. D., in calling attention to the resignation of Rev. E. A. Gilmore, who has accepted the call of the Windsor Park Church, Chicago, says, "During the past two years we have rebuilt our church building at a cost of more than $20,000, our membership has been increased and all the work of the church has been progressive."

Miss Anna Boorman, a finely trained and experienced missionary among the colored folk in the south, writes of the fine Bible classes conducted in Birmingham, Alabama with a total enrollment of between six and seven hundred. The free will offering for charities and missions, collected during the year, amounted to $252.40, of which one hundred dollars was sent to the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society as a special thank offering. The district is a distinctly wide awake one. Recently six women, working for a few hours each week, made 1,166 religious calls and distributed 2,269 leaflets.

Miss Eva Fewel, a missionary under the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society among the Piute Indians at Fallon, writes, "I miss my family after the long vacation with them but if I can't have both I'll take my Indians." Her red men were overjoyed to see her return and one brave exclaimed fervently, "You all the time come back! Hoorah!" The Indians planned a surprise party to celebrate the reunion and the guests all feasted on ice cream, cakes, pies, sandwiches, deviled eggs and watermelons. A strange menu when one has always imagined that all Indians dined frugally on bear meat and cracked corn!

Rev. J. Q. A. Henry, the well known evangelist, has just received a cablegram from Scotland asking him to conduct a four months evangelistic and temperance campaign beginning shortly after the first of the year. Some years ago Dr. Henry conducted a campaign of a similar kind in Great Britain running through more than five years. He took over 150,000 new total abstinence pledges in his meetings and had nearly 30,000 confessions of faith. His decision has not been announced, but if he goes he is assured a great opportunity for service. He goes to Mt. Vernon, Ohio, for a big meeting Nov. 6-20. Mr. C. W. McKeever is his singer.

The fraternal delegate appointed by Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery to represent the Northern Baptist Convention at the annual session of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec was Rev. Bernard C. Clausen of the First Baptist Church, Syracuse, New York. Mrs. Clausen arrived in St. Thomas, Ontario, on Friday morning, October 21. Place was immediately made for him in the busy program of the day, and he addressed the assembled delegates at 11 a. m., bearing the greetings of the American Baptists, and giving his Des Moines address on "Religion at 21." The convention had evidently been a triumph of brotherhood and faith, for the hundreds of delegates were radiant with the sense of victory and promise. The fraternal delegate from the Southern Baptist Convention, Rev. George McDaniel, had contributed greatly to the success of the sessions, through a series of addresses on "The Church of Christ," which had touched the hearts of the whole multitude. The heartiest of greetings were extended to the Northern Convention, with thanks for the courtesy of the appointed delegate.

Rev. M. A. Summers, for nine years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Nowata, Okla., resigned that church the last Sunday in August, and became pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ironton, Ohio, the second Sunday in September. The church at Ironton is taking on new life and is now engaged in a series of special meetings.

About one hundred scholars have cooperated with the editors, Shailer Mathews and Gerald Birney Smith, of the University of Chicago Divinity School, in producing a monumental work, A Dictionary of Religion and Ethics, which is just announced by the publishers. It sets forth in compact form the results of modern study in the psychology of religion, the history of religions, the present status of religious life in America, Europe, and the most important mission fields, and the important phases of Christian belief and practice. It also covers both social and individual ethics. All words of importance in the field of religion and ethics are defined and the most important of them discussed at length. The articles are written historically and objectively, without speculation or propaganda. Among the hundred collaborators on the work are twenty-five members of the University of Chicago faculties.

For his services in the war as commissioner for the Committee on Public Information in charge of work in Italy, Professor Charles Edward Merriam, of the Department of Political Science at the University of Chicago, has recently been made Commendatore della Corona d'Italia by King Victor Emmanuel. At the same time Assistant Professor Rudolph Altrocchi, of the Department of Romance Languages and Literatures, was made Chevalier of the Crown of Italy in recognition of his services during the war when, in 1918, as a member of the Bureau of Public Information, he directed all American speakers in Italy and organized a campaign of speeches which reached approximately a million Italians. Professor Merriam is the author of a contribution on "American Publicity in Italy" which appeared in the American Political Science Review.

Rev. Stuart Goude has accepted a call to become pastor of the Baptist Church of Clifton, N. Y. Mr. Goude is a student at Rochester Theological Seminary and a graduate of McMinnville College. This Baptist college of the Pacific Coast sent seven to the entering class at Rochester this year.

Rev. Philetus H. McDowell, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Melrose, Mass., prints in his church bulletin this inspiring call: "The hour of faith has come; let all who believe rise up and join hands."

Rev. F. E. Taylor at the First Church, Indianapolis, has a custom of delivering every autumn a series of Sunday evening messages to young men. He finds this practice a fruitful preparation for evangelistic reaping later.

A national public ownership conference is announced to be held in the Congress Hotel in Chicago, November 19, 20 and 21. A special feature of interest in this conference is that several prominent religious leaders will have conspicuous places on the program.

Rev. Alpha Ingle of Newton, Kansas, has closed a pastorate of more than four years at that place and goes to Salina, where he is delighted with the reception accorded him.

Dr. S. G. Neil of Philadelphia assisted Pastor Llewellyn Brown in a series of evangelistic meetings at Temple Baptist Church, Detroit, October 23 to 31. Nine were baptized during the week, and Pastor Brown is expecting many more. Mrs. Arthur S. Secord of Brantford, Ontario rendered fine assistance in the service of song.

Rev. Henry D. Coe, pastor of the Bristol Baptist Church in Connecticut, was reported in the newspapers to have refused to conduct the funeral service for a United States soldier whose body was brought from France to this country for interment. His church was reported to have asked for his resignation on account of his action. The church by unanimous vote has authorized a statement pronouncing the report false in all particulars. It declares that he did not refuse to conduct the funeral service and has not been asked to resign for that or any other reason; but that at request of the church he had remained two years after he would have closed his work, so that he might help the church to recover itself from the effects of a disastrous fire.

Rev. F. I. Osborne, formerly of Morren, Mich., has accepted a call to Novi in the same state, and is already located on the field.

Rev. Vernon H. Cowser has closed his work at Corning, Cal., and begun pastoral service at Clovis, the same state.

A wedding ceremony of more than usual interest occurred on the evening of Saturday, October 22, at the Vincent Methodist Church, 701 East 91st Place, Chicago. The principals were Mr. Raymond H. Ewing, a Baptist missionary under appointment to India, and Miss Ruth A. Grimes, an ordained minister of the Methodist Church. The ceremony was performed by the bride's father, Rev. Walter B. Grimes, who was assisted by Rev. F. F. Faimloe of Fernwood. Both Mr. and Mrs. Ewing are graduates of the University of Chicago, the former holding a Bachelor's degree in Divinity, and the latter a Master's degree in Arts. The groom is also a graduate of William Jewell College. He is already a missionary of experience, having taught for three years in Wayland Academy, Hanchow, China. Mrs. Ewing is a preacher from a family of preachers. Last year she built up a vigorous church in the South Blue Island industrial community. The newly married couple will sail from New York on November 15 en route for India. Here Mr. Ewing has been assigned to the general superintendency of seventy mission stations. Mr. and Mrs. Ewing will be at home to their friends after January 1, 1922, at Tura, Assam, India.

The Baptist

Vol. II      November 12, 1921      No. 41

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
Mr. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HOOR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

CHILDREN'S BOOK NUMBER

Table of Contents

Page

FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....1290
WOMEN'S PART IN THE $100,000,000 FUND.....1292
EDITORIAL .....1293
A PRIMER OF THEOLOGY II, by A. H. Strong.....1295
THE READING OF THEN AND NOW, by E. J. Martin.....1297
IMPRESSIONS OF KINHWA, by Alice Pickford Brockway .....1298
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....1299
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE .....1300
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....1301
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....1303
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....1304
BOARD OF PROMOTION MEETS .....1305
WHAT EXPERTS SAY ABOUT CHILDREN'S READING....1307
WHAT THE BOYS AND GIRLS LIKE—TOLD BY THEMSELVES .....1309
OUR OWN FOLKS .....1311
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....1319

Great Interest in Referendum

Will the fate of the Kollum be that of the officials of the Non-Partisan League in North Dakota? More than 250 letters and post cards devoted entirely to the Kollum were received during the first week. We venture no prediction in the face of incomplete returns. Vote to keep or kill the Kollum! Do it today. Tomorrow may be everlastingly too late.

Killam's Kollum

Going Some

October receipts from subscriptions were $3566.85 against $1996.65 in the same month a year ago. This a gain of nearly 80 per cent. The churches are doing the work which results in such gratifying returns. Take three examples which happen to be on my desk at this moment. Isreal Putnam of Merrill, Wis., has stood back of The Standard and THE BAPTIST for years. With the loyal backing of the pastor, Rev. A. O. Protsman, the church secured the renewal of every one of the fifty-five subscriptions and added three for good measure. J. H. Bradbury of Ellsworth, Kan., with his list sent ten new subscribers and Mrs. A. C. Lohr of Churdan, Iowa, fifteen. These and hundreds like them are the folks who deserve the credit.

The Secret Is Out

Mrs. G. H. O'Donnell, of Columbia City, Ind., in exercising her franchise in the referendum breaks forth into verse:

They give the hot letters to Killam,
The cries and the wails, he must still 'em;
He puts 'em on ice,
For he thinks it is nice—
Before he must read 'em—to chill 'em.
Then he shovels 'em all in his mixer,
His patent, fool-proof trouble fixer;
Each frown that goes in
Comes out a broad grin;
He smiles, and just says, "Take your pick, sir."
"Keep Killam's Kollum Kuring Kickers. It is the one—" (Our modesty about which we have heard some complaint keeps us from printing the rest of the sentence.)

Our President Says, Keep It

"I don't want Killam's Kollum cremated. I think our denominational papers today are much too solemn. They wear long frock coats buttoned up in front, and plug hats, and they carry canes, and they always speak solemnly and from the pulpit. Now I am just common enough to like a touch of fun. I remember that the Lord never said, 'Blessed are the dignified,' but I know that Paul said, 'The Lord loveth a hilarious giver.' To be sure we camouflage that under the more dignified term of 'cheerful' but the hilarity is there, in the original Greek. I hope the common people will rise up and smite the objectors, 'hip and thigh.' Why are we afraid of the homely, the simple and even the jocose? I am sure that we need something to lighten the gloom. Don't have an undertaker and if you do, please omit flowers." Helen Barrett Montgomery. She wants a paper for the people and she counts herself one of them.

Continuation Campaign of the $100,000,000 Fund

as Carried on by the WOMAN'S AMERICAN BAPTIST FOREIGN MISSION SOCIETY
and the
WOMAN'S AMERICAN BAPTIST HOME
MISSION SOCIETY

Sept. 14, 1921, will stand as an historic day in the annals of the two societies. On that day, in response to a call from Dr. Aitchison, three officers of each society met with him in conference. After a clear and searching analysis of the situation as related to the receipts for the first months of the fiscal year and the imperative need of reaching the financial goal of $30,000,000 which was adopted by the denomination at Des Moines and which is to be secured in pledges and payments by April 30, 1922, the officers of the societies agreed to present to their respective boards the sum of $6,000,000 as the share of the women of the denomination in the completion of the $100,000,000 fund; with the understanding that the $6,000,000 is to be secured in pledges on or before the close of the fiscal year, and that of the $6,000,000, $2,000,000 is to be paid on or before April 30, 1922.

This action of the officers was presented at once to the boards and was endorsed and adopted as the action of each board in the spirit of faith and prayer.

How great an undertaking was thus assumed by the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Missionary Society and by the Woman's American Baptist Home Missionary Society is more clearly understood when measured in terms of the Jubilee of the Woman's Foreign Society. The amount sought in recognition of the Jubilee Year was $365,000. The enthusiasm and devotion of the women, however, raised the final figures to $467,000. $6,000,000 is very nearly thirteen times $467,000.

Measured in terms of human ability the task assumed was seen to be impossible and again and again we reminded ourselves of our insufficiency and the sufficiency of God by the words:

We Cannot—God Can

The name chosen, The Continuation Campaign of the $100,000,000 Fund, indicates that we are not entering upon a new undertaking. The women of the societies are simply "carrying on" in a larger way in an effort to bear their full responsibility in the New World Movement.

The motto chosen is, "Have Faith in God" and the entire statement by Jesus from which these words are taken represents the spirit of utter dependence upon God in which we undertake the work.

"And Jesus answering saith unto them, 'Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, that whosoever shall say unto this mountain, "Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea," and shall not doubt in his heart but shall believe that these things which he saith shall come to pass, he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you what things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall have them.'" (Mark 11:22-24.)

The campaign song is "Faith Is the Victory."

The symbols are the cross and the altar, the cross representing His life, His gift; the altar representing my life, my gift.

Since the campaign is most truly a joint undertaking of the two societies, it is in charge of the Committee of Conference made up of officers and members of the two boards. The organization of the campaign is well under way and is based along familiar channels of the woman's societies and the districts. The National objective will be passed on to the districts, and by the districts assigned to their constituent states. The states will, in turn, pass the work on to the associations and the associations to the individual churches. The adaptation of the plans in a given district will be worked out in conference between the district and the state campaign leaders and the state directors of promotion.

The women's societies have been richly blessed with a host of volunteers who have always shown the finest willingness to respond to a great call. Their co-operation is deeply needed now and they will be used to the fullest extent. There is also back of the campaign a vast wealth of experience gained through the Jubilee movement and this experience will be invaluable.

Certain clearly defined principles underlie the campaign. These principles as adopted by the Committee of Conferences, follow:

1—This is not a new campaign. It is a part of the New World Movement and continues the effort to complete the $100,000,000 Fund.

2—The campaign is not undertaken for the two women's societies but by the women's societies for the New World Movement.

3—All pledges and gifts secured through the campaign are to be paid through the regularly established channels: namely, the offices of the state boards of promotion. Plans have been made whereby campaign leaders will be enabled to keep a record of every pledge and the payments thereon.

4—The women will solicit pledges and gifts only from the women of the churches, from the World Wide Guild and the Children's World Crusade. Any deviation from this principle shall be subject to conference between campaign leaders.

5—Churches which have raised their quotas will be given full information in regard to the campaign. Individual members of the church and congregation who have not formerly given will be approached. The promise made when the New World Movement was undertaken, namely, that a church which met its quota should not be solicited again as a church until the completion of the movement, will be faithfully kept.

There are certain recognized sources of income by which we believe the money can be secured without violating any pledge made at the beginning of the $100,000,000 campaign, and without overstepping the limits for solicitation laid down in the fourth principle. These sources may be stated as follows:

1—Churches which have not yet entered into the New World Movement.

2—Churches which have not yet reached their quota.

3—Churches which have reached their quota but which have not reached the New World Movement standard, i. e., every member of the church a contributor.

4—New members who have been received into the churches since the canvass was made.

5—Those who have already pledged but could and should give more.

The achievement of the goal set before us is possible only as we recognize our own inability and the power of God. He has never failed his people—He never does fail them when they throw themselves on him in a confident expectancy of his working through them. He will not fail us now.

WE CANNOT—GOD CAN
(Signed): Mrs. H. E. Goodman, Miss Helen Hudson, Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, Mrs. Howard Wayne Smith, Miss Ina E. Burton, Mrs. George Caleb Moor, Mrs. Katherine S. Westfall, Mrs. Geo. W. Coleman, Chairman.

In the King Row

Since the changed denominational policies the women have not entirely readjusted their organizational plans. There has existed the feeling that under the new arrangement some of our powers, perhaps of initiative, perhaps legislative, had been curtailed. Then it happened! What?

Merely, that the Correlation Committee of the Convention decided to go forward in the matter of Finance by raising the THIRTY unraised MILLIONS. Of these THIRTY MILLIONS, the Committee assigned to the two Women's national societies the task of gathering in SIX MILLIONS. The method suggested was taking it in triturations of TWO MILLIONS a year for the next three years.

The suggestion was sent to the Districts of which there are ten. It made all the women quite happy to note that the BOARD OF PROMOTION recognized the Districts. We felt somewhat like those political States which have loomed so large in that self-determination idea of little peoples. Not that the Women's Societies felt exactly small in as much as they represent over sixty per cent of the denomination. But as a matter of passing interest.

When suddenly we were called upon to reflect no more upon past glories but to mark out specifications for tomorrow's constructive efforts, we had huddled a little in our checkered career and when our "move" came we found ourselves in the "King row," a double decker at that. The proposition was presented by some courageous person to the boards of both the women's national societies. Whatever the result, one thing is certain. The women of the Northern Baptist Convention, through their executive committee and boards of managers, received the communication with a seriousness and earnestness and an expressed desire to give the idea the most thoughtful and prayerful consideration. After going over every phase and phrase, these women in their respective places took the proposition as a subject of earnest and fervent prayer. There was little doubt in any mind that not far away there were men of this denomination who knew what the women were praying for and that they too bowed themselves in supplication that the women would undertake the proposition. Oh, but it was a difficult place! But, with an exaltation of spirit, if not entire serenity of mind, the Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society, and the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, announced their decision to attempt the task. This determination was immediately conveyed to the women's district boards and we have little doubt that they too will confirm the national decision. Someone ventured a stanza from something as a fitting thought for our combined state of mind.

"Got any rivers you say are uncrossable? Got any mountains you can't tunnel through?"

We specialize in the wholly impossible. Doing the tasks no one else can do."

The Baptist

The Child and His Books

THE child—any child—is a reservoir of power. The book in the hands of the child is one of the factors which is to determine the direction in which the power shall act.

Reading is of importance at all ages. It is of special importance in childhood and youth. Both good and bad reading have less influence on the adult than on the child.

"As a man thinketh in his heart so is he." Reading determines thoughts.

There are times when it seems as if parents were not as sensitive on this subject as they should be. The reading of their children is determined by chance or by the counsel of friends who may not themselves be well advised. Yet this reading brings forth its perfect work.

The present number of THE BAPTIST is largely given to the consideration of this important subject. The editors are proud to be able to present articles of distinct merit. They are sure that parents and teachers of small children will find some of this material of the utmost value. If the child is to be trained in the Christian way, more and not less attention must be given to his books.

The Spirit of the Board

THOSE members of the churches of Indianapolis who took the time and trouble to see the General Board of Promotion in action during its recent annual meeting were fortunate. We wish that all our churches might be similarly favored. Could they do so, all charges of invisible government would fall to the ground and any feeling that our big problems are not prayerfully and carefully considered would vanish.

This Board of Promotion is a representative body. On it are representatives of our national societies, of our state conventions, of our city mission societies, and pastors and laymen. It is a large body, so large that meetings cannot be held frequently because of the expense of assembling the Board.

There are always present those who have a complete mastery of the actual facts in the case, no matter what the question under discussion. And there are present others who are determined to understand these facts in all their bearings and who do not stop their questioning until they do understand.

At Indianapolis there developed sharp differences of opinion on many points. The report of the committee on adjustments was debated for almost a day and a half before it was adopted, and even then supplemental matters took up further hours. During all the discussion, however, there was manifest the honesty, sincerity and truth of those present, as well as their prayerful determination to take only such action, no matter how it might affect individual organizations, as should best advance the kingdom of God.

A democracy is always cumbered somewhat in its action by the necessity of taking into account the opinion of every last man and woman. Yet one cannot attend these meetings without feeling a sense of security coming to him from the manifest ability and Christian spirit of those in charge and those taking part in the discussions.

What is more important still, perhaps, is the general determination, after a decision is reached, to play the game wholeheartedly. This may mean the putting aside of cherished plans, it may mean sacrifice and adjustment. But the whole program is in the hearts of all, and on the whole program the emphasis is placed. Nothing could give greater assurance that the goals set before us are ultimately to be gloriously reached.

The Future of Designated Gifts

NO ACTION taken by the General Board of Promotion at its annual meeting will occasion more interest than its reversal of policy in regard to designated gifts. There have been numerous criticisms of the former policy and hints that, in the event of a reversal, gifts of large size would come to various of the co-operating bodies. We shall now see.

The action taken, of course, refers only to future pledges. All pledges already made are contracts and not subject to change of designation. The honor of the denomination demands that every dollar shall be scrupulously expended according to the program submitted when the pledges were made. But new pledges or gifts will be subject to new conditions, a thing which is perfectly proper.

Designated gifts have always gone to the organizations for which they were intended. Not a dollar has been used otherwise. But they have been used as a part of the money to make up the pro rata share of the particular organization. That is to say, the amount of these gifts has first been subtracted from the total amount the organization was to receive and the balance has been made up from undesignated money. This was perfectly proper inasmuch as a man has a right to designate what shall be done with his own gifts but has no right to say what shall be done with the money coming from other people. The purpose has been to have all the societies share proportionately, according to their askings in the Survey.

The new plan, applying only to new pledges and gifts, provides first for the pro rata distribution among the various organizations of all undesignated gifts. Then the designated gifts will be added over and above these amounts.

The way is open, therefore, for people who wish to give to any particular society or group to do so with the feeling that their money will provide an "extra" fund with which that society can help carry on its work. It is provided, however, that no participating organization or institution shall make a campaign for designated gifts without the consent of the Administrative Committee.

It is earnestly desired that none shall designate gifts unless they feel in conscience bound to do such a thing. The sentiment of the Board was that we should go out for the whole fund and not for specifics. We have been building up a spirit of co-operation in the denomination such as we have never had before. We must lose none of that. Moreover we must not make designated gifts the whole thing. For such a policy might easily give some organizations a surplus and seriously cripple others.

The bulk of our people will make their new gifts and pledges for the whole work. But if there are those who wish to designate them, the way is now open, and they may know that their gifts will not be equalized but will be in the nature of special contributions to the societies in question.

The Laymen Are Called

LAYMEN are calling laymen to more continuous and effective service in the kingdom of God. There are tasks so great that only the best efforts of the best men the denomination has can possibly carry them through. Singly they do much. Organized they are irresistible.

Such considerations lie at the heart of the call to Baptist laymen which is printed in another part of this issue. That the laymen are ready for just such service everybody knows. There are many indications of this and they appear in all parts of the country. And organization is now to begin.

The present great denominational need is a thing which grips the hearts of all those who study it. Opportunities are boundless but we are checked at the very entrance upon them because of the financial conditions which prevail in our country and in our churches. There is no condition which, in God's power, cannot be overcome.

We are expecting to see such a response to this appeal as our denomination has seldom witnessed. The women are fast getting under way on their campaign. Let the men match them and even excel them, if that is possible. Fields are white and the demand is for laborers. We can now hear the men answering, both for the present and for future service, "Here am I."

To Know Is to Love

DIVISIVE tendencies, so far as any of them exist among Baptists, are due to misunderstandings. On one hand Baptist principles are not clearly conceived in relation to other systems of teaching and in distinction from them; clear thinking is always the road out of the wilderness of controversy. On the other hand, men fail to understand the phrases, the procedure and the purpose of each other, and consequently false impressions, antagonistic feelings and cross purposes are born among them.

One of the arts of the demagogue in either religion or politics is to evade consistent definition and to delude the people with catch phrases which play hide and seek between double meanings.

When Baptists come to understand each other they cannot be separated into factions.

They Love a Hero

IN TWO large cities of the Middle West, the editor has witnessed the greetings paid to Marshal Foch who was permitted of God to lead to victory the allied forces in France. The demonstrations, in their extent and enthusiasm, carry one back to the tense days of the war. Men and women and children have wanted to see and to cheer the hero. And they have now done so to their heart's delight.

Foch is a man of war. In our churches we honor a man of peace. But did he not possess the soul of a hero? Was anything ever more heroic than his action both in the face of life and of death? It may be that the hour is here in which we shall do well to think of this appeal of the heroic and to set before men, as the hero of heroes, our Christ. The mood is favorable and the One whom we honor is worthy of our cheers and our love and our devoted following.

* * *

"I am increasingly proud," said Dr. S. J. Skevington, as he participated in the discussions at Indianapolis, "of what God can do with a Baptist democracy." So are we all, brother! The method is somewhat slower than some others, but when a democracy, after full discussion, arrives, it knows why it is there, and every individual in it is prepared to co-operate.

* * *

"Conference and co-operation," remarks one of the saints, "solve all difficulties." The order is suggestive. Without full and fair conference, there can never be anything like real co-operation, whether in a church or anywhere else.

* * *

Attention is called to the noteworthy action of the state conventions which, in order to meet each other's needs and those of the general societies, voluntarily asked of the Board of Promotion, only 75 per cent of last year's operating budget. In the same spirit of sacrifice and service, the city mission societies asked for only 51 per cent of last year's operating budget. Such reduction means hardship, but nothing could witness more eloquently to the sincerity of the desire of the men of these organizations to work for the whole cause and not for their own part of it alone. All honor and success to them!

* * *

The United States Senate is being deluged with protests against the Treasury ruling permitting medicinal beer and urging prompt action in order that the legislation which would prevent such a sorry state of things may be passed and become effective. Individuals, churches and other organizations are sending in protests, the number of which has already mounted into the thousands. Let the good work continue! The "wets" have indulged in much propaganda. Let the Senate, which is the real guilty party, know the sentiment of the people on this matter. There can be no truce in this liquor war. Beer has no medicinal value which its substitutes do not have. It is the alcohol, not the medicine, some men are after,

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

II. CHRIST IN CREATION

AS the Father expresses himself in the Son, so the Son expresses himself in creation; first, in the creation of what we call matter; and secondly in the creation of intelligent beings. This is not a creation out of nothing, as some have imagined; for out of nothing, nothing can come. It is rather the differentiation of his one infinite Will into myriads of finite wills. We speak of Shakespeare as "myriad-minded"; but Christ's resources are infinitely greater than those of Shakespeare, for Christ is "made priest, after the power of an endless life" (Heb. 7:16). The simile of light may help us here also. Every ray of light may be divided into all the colors of the solar spectrum. So Christ, the Light of the world, may be said to express himself in all the works of his hands. His mighty Will may show its power in myriads of finite wills, some intelligent, some unintelligent, some spiritual, some material. Modern science is coming to the conclusion that what we call matter is only centres of force; and that force is simply will, in action. How else explain the fact of gravitation, the action of each particle of matter upon every other, so that my throwing of a ball into the air attracts the whole earth and, if not counteracted by other forces, causes the whole universe to move? "A distinguished philosopher has said that every body in the solar system is behaving as if it knew precisely how it ought to behave in consistency with its own nature, and with the behavior of every other body in the same system. * * * Each atom has danced countless millions of times, with countless millions of different partners, many of which required an important modification of its mode of motion, without ever departing from the correct step or the right time" (Ladd, Introd. to Philosophy, 269). The whole universe, from centre to circumference, is alive, and its life is Christ (John 1:3, 4, margin; Miscellanies, 1:220-238).

So we claim that something more than atoms is needed to explain the universe. A correlating Intelligence and Will must be assumed. Atoms by themselves would be like a heap of loose nails, which need to be magnetized, if they are to hold together. All structures would be dissolved, and all forms of matter would disappear, if the Presence that sustains them were withdrawn. The atom, like the monad of Leibnitz, is "parvus in suo genere deus"—"a little god in its nature"—only because it is the expression of the mind and will of an immanent God. And that immanent God is Christ. The creation of matter is only the beginning of his volitions in space and time, under the law of cause and effect. Matter is Christ's self-limitation under the law of Necessity; Humanity is Christ's self-limitation under the law of Freedom; Incarnation and Atonement are Christ's self-limitations under the law of Grace. In Christ "all things consist," or "hold together" (Col. 1:17): in short, his living will is the glue which keeps the universe, and all that it contains, from disintegration and annihilation. The creation of mind is only his adding to the bodies of his creatures a freedom of intelligent control which makes them relatively independent, capable of virtue, and therefore responsible. While the eternal Word is unlimited before creation; and, after creation, is limited only by his own volition; man's self-knowledge and self-control are subject to such change and growth as are required by the conditions of space and time.

I cannot leave this part of my subject without pointing out that there is a relation, hitherto seldom suspected, between the trinitarian element in man and the trinitarian element in God. As man lives, moves, and has his being only in God (Acts 17:28), created spirits can know themselves and have fellowship with one another, only by participating in what we may call the natural life of the Godhead. For as there is a natural activity of the Word, in all human consciousness and morality; and as Christ before his incarnation was in all men the principle of science, law, benevolence, progress; so the Holy Spirit was the principle of unity and fellowship, revealing to man the depths of his own being, and the sublime nature of his relations to God. Even before his incarnation, Christ was the Light that lighteth every man (John 1:9); and the Holy Spirit, even before he could reveal the crucified and risen Christ (John 7:39), was the persuader of social, national, and universal peace, the real author of all unity, organization and law (Gen. 1:2).

Let us pause to consider how completely this view of Christ's creatorship makes him Lord of all. Nature is not only "the living garment of the Deity," as Goethe declares, but it is the living garment of Christ. It is the same hand that was stretched out on the cross for our redemption that paints the sunset clouds with beauty, and directs the tides of life on the far shores of the universe. It is Christ who by his indwelling in humanity gives solidarity to the race, and in spite of its sin, ensures its civilization and progress. Separate races and separate men may seem at first sight to have no connection with one another; but they are like islands of the sea which the water holds apart, but which are bound to one another by a rocky foundation under all the currents of the ocean. Because we are "God's offspring" (Acts 17:28, 29), we have a natural oneness with all men in Christ, which antedates and prepares the way for Christian unity and fellowship. All the appearances of God in the Old Testament from Abraham to Isaiah were appearances of Christ (John 8:56; 12:41). He thundered from Sinai when he gave the law, long before he preached the Sermon on the Mount of Galilee. The Rock that followed Israel through the desert and gave the people drink was really Christ (1 Cor. 10:4). Every voice of conscience that has ever spoken to us was his voice. Every breath we draw is by use of powers with which he has endowed us, and which he sustains. Every heartbeat is a testimony to his personal presence and activity within our physical frame. "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend into heaven, thou art there; if I make my bed in Sheol, behold, thou art there" (Ps. 139: 7, 8). This ever present God of whom the Psalmist speaks is none other than the Redeemer against whom we have sinned, and who seeks to reveal himself within us for our salvation. How plain it is that there is "none other name under heaven that is given among men, whereby we may be saved" (Acts 4:12).

Christ is the ground of all individual existence. This I have illustrated by the underlying foundation for all the seemingly separate islands of the sea. We live, move and have our being in Christ, because he is the only expression of God. All our natural life is derived from him, and is shared by him, and the only exception is our will to do evil. Modern psychology makes much of subliminal consciousness. This we may believe to be the peculiar element of Christ's activity and control. A thousand impulses to do good come to us unsought. Dreams encourage us. Childhood and youth are blest with aspirations and ideals beyond the parent's power to explain. Wordsworth has well said that "Heaven lies about us in our infancy." But ordinary men are like islands in which a single slumbering volcano rears its head. Consciousness in them registers only occasional impulses of their better nature. Jesus was the only-begotten Son of God, so that in him the subliminal and the conscious activities become practically one. Limited as his earthly knowledge was, of the day and the hour of the end (Matt. 24:38), he knew what was of far greater importance, namely, all things that the Father was doing (John 5:20), and the fact that he and the Father were one (John 10:30). It was by this disclosure, to himself and to the world, of the infinite resources of his own being, that he was able to teach the truth, to work miracles, to retake his life after he had laid it down (John 10:12). The difference between Christ and common men is two-fold: first, that his life is the source of all other lives, while our life is only derived from him; and secondly, that in him was "all the fulness of the Godhead bodily" (Col. 2:9), while common men are only sparks from the divine flame.

Sanday of Oxford has made this possession of the divine fulness, in the subliminal consciousness of Christ, to be the explanation both of his absolute authority and of his earthly limitations (Syst. Theol. 2:699, 700; Miscellanies, 1:478-493). We can accept this suggestion of Sanday, if we clear it of all implication of pantheism by saying that in nature Christ is not only immanent, but also transcendent (Job 26:14); that the human soul, in spite of Christ's furnishing its powers, can use those powers to thwart the purpose of the Creator; and that humanity has actually, by its sin, so infected this subliminal source of good that it has become instead a constant source of evil, to be counteracted by providence and to be overcome by regeneration. This is the doctrine of original sin, in which we go further than Sanday. We also maintain that, since Christ is the manifested God (I Tim. 3:16), he is so identified with our humanity that he can suffer for, and in, each one of us, as fully as if the whole Godhead were engaged in the work of our salvation. God is free from all limitations of space and time; his omnipresence is the presence of the whole of God in every place; in Christ he is the inmost life of every human soul; in Christ he can therefore be the suffering, yet the blessed God; and our atoning Savior can also be our final Judge; in short, we have, in Christ, God's complete and final self-revelation (Is. 63:9; I Tim. 1:11; Misc. 2:310-328).

Christ is the God of nature, the God of history, the God of Scripture, the God of the church, the God of the individual soul. Robert Browning saw God's face in the whole universe when he wrote:

"That one Face, far from vanish,
rather grows,
Or decomposes but to recompose,
Become my universe that feels and knows,"

and he explains his meaning when he says: "That Face is the face of Christ." This explanation clears his poem from all charge of pantheism, and sets the poet side by side with Jonathan Edwards, as teaching the deity and omnipresence of Christ. Pantheism has no real Christ, and no personal God. The God of pantheism is a God conterminous with the universe and imprisoned within it; while the real Christ is transcendent as well as immanent, not only "in all" and "through all," but also "above all" (Eph. 4:6). Pantheism knows no more personality in man than in God; while the creatures of the personal Christ are personal beings made in God's image, free and responsible. Pantheism makes men automata, subjects only of the law of cause and effect; while Christ's human creatures are free to serve or to rebel, to choose heaven, or to choose hell. So our Christ, the Christ of Scripture, as our manifested God, gives us the only clue to the mysteries of the universe, and to the problems of theology. "Oh, the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and the knowledge of God! * * * For of him, and through him, and unto him, are all things." Rom. 11:33, 36; see my "Christ in Creation," 1-14).

Going to School to God

I like to go to school to God!
Because it always seems to me
He talks in every breeze that blows;
Through every bird and bud and bee!

He teaches me His love and care
Through every tree and blade of grass,
Here, on the hill, where I may sit
And listen while the wide winds pass.

He writes with rivers and they carve
The crevices He leaves to tell
A story of His living love
In temple, tower and pinnacle.

His books are beds of slate and coal;
His manuscripts are Redwood trees;
Volcanos punctuate the tale
And turn the pages of the seas!

I like to go to school to God!
I hear such strange, revealing things;
He talks to me where rivers run
And where a Sky Lark soars and sings.

He writes with glaciers on the rocks
And with the stars that blaze on high;
With fossil shells and ferns that fall
And leave their imprint as they die.

His blackboard is a canyon wall
Whereon He writes of ages past;
In even lines the strata tell
Of things that shall forever last.

WM. L. STIDGER in Pacific Christian.

The Reading of Then and Now

"A sloping meadow where the prim but lovely Rosa quiets the boisterous children with her gentle voice and Kitty aptly quotes, 'A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back.'"

By E. J. MARTIN

Assistant Librarian Bucknell University

IT IS Sunday, one of those glorious late Autumn days when the world seems turned to russet and gold and the intense blue of the sky lifts heaven to an ever more unattainable height by its contrast. Stay in doors on such a day? Squirrels and rabbits will be frisking at every fence post, and flocks of blue-birds, gathering for their long flight, will start up from wayside bushes. Stay in doors with grown-ups, sleepy from their heavy Sunday dinner! But that is the verdict, for it is Sunday. Well, if nothing can be done about it, there is the front room; no one will come in there, for the damp chilliness has not been routed by fire, and the hair-cloth sofas are too slippery for comfort. Which shall it be, the "Examiner and Chronicle" by many thousands the most widely circulated, or Headley's "History of the Rebellion"? Volume two of the history is the most exciting, and, as it is fairly heavy, the floor is the best place for it. In a few minutes the sky has disappeared through the battle smoke, and the earth is covered with marching men. Perhaps (for just a girl) it is "Little Kitty Brown and her Bible Verses" that changes the dim room to a sloping meadow where the prim but lovely Rosa quiets the boisterous children with her gentle voice, and Kitty aptly quotes "A whip for the horse, a bridle for the ass, and a rod for the fool's back." What matter that the book has but a dull cloth cover and a few crude wood-cuts as illustrations! Noble deeds and gentle thoughts need no aid to stir the soul, and imagination paints the most vivid of pictures.

History Has Taken New Life

As we pick up the heavy, somewhat discredited history we think of the splendid editions, worked over by famous and careful editors, which the children of today are handling. A text book tossed down by a high school boy is filled with photographic illustrations gathered from all the world. But the deeds recounted remain the same. Perhaps the detail differs, for India is not so far away and Africa is no longer an outline showing Egypt, the Sahara desert and a great white region marked "Unexplored." There is a little red book about China much thumbed by a child of fifty years ago, who little dreamed she would entertain, in her own home, many a missionary from that fascinating country. She did not have a beautifully illustrated series of "Little Cousins from Other Lands," nor magazines like "Everyland!" There were pictures of elephants in Mitchell's Geography, but no such tale as Kipling's "Toomai" to thrill with the feel of the beast's broad back as he slashes down the jungle trail.

They Cried Over "Uncle Tom's Cabin"

If geography and history books were few, story books were not much more plentiful. Ask the older people, and both men and women will tell you how they cried over "Uncle Tom's Cabin and little Eva," the little girls sobbingly and the boys surreptitiously, with much sniffing. Dickens and Scott found their way into homes in occasional volumes, and the Sunday School Libraries provided the boys with the "Rollo Books," and the girls with "Little Kitty Brown" and "Little Prudy," the forerunners of the "Elsie Books" and their successors the "Little Colonel" series of today. The "Wide-Wide World" and "Queechy," with their patient and dutiful heroines, were for the older girls and were not quite so prim, though the tears of the readers flowed almost as copiously as those of "Ellen" or "Fleda." Louisa Alcott brought a fresh breath of healthful companionship which keeps her books alive. A rather homesick college freshman with bobbed hair said the other day, "I brought 'Little Women' with me; I just can't get along if I don't have it to read every now and then." It has no modern rival.

Books of adventure seldom received a welcome from the parents of "Then," but if a boy chanced upon Swiss Family Robinson, what a glorious time he did have! To be confronted with several shelves of hairbreadth escapes, as is the modern boy in the Public Library, would perhaps have given him as many thrills as Robinson Crusoe experienced on finding Friday's footprints! The variety of companionship in adventure would make difficult choosing. The boy of fifty years ago did not spend half an hour or more, standing awkwardly, thumbing over the pictures in the books, trying to make his choice. There was just one book to read and he read it. After all there may have been some advantage in that! Little chance did he have at the classic tales of all the ages; they were fresh and new to him when he entered the Academy and wondered whom the big fellows meant as they talked of Homer and Virgil. A youngster of today can describe a Grecian youth without hesitation, and when you ask, "How do you know what he looked like?" the careless answer will be, "Oh, I was reading about one of them the other day," and the lad does not realize that the charming drawings of Willy Pogany taught him almost as much as the text. Robinhood was known, but the thirst for Mediaeval lore roused by Tennyson had not yet spurred Howard Pyle or N. C. Wyeth to their vivid, colorful interpretations which hold the attention of a thoughtful man as much with their accuracy of detail as with their grace and strength of line. And this man sighs gently as he pictures the cold front room and the boy flat on the floor, his elbows on either side of the dull-looking, heavy history.

Fairies Come in All Colors

Fairy tales too were somewhat discountenanced fifty years ago. Anderson and the brothers Grimm had a limited popularity, but were not for Sunday reading. The little black-bound, several volume edition of Grimm, with its quaint drawing of the King of the Swans, bears slight resemblance to the beautifully bound volumes illustrated by Arthur Rackham or Louis Rhead which even grown-ups can't resist handling. The dainty Kate Greenaway pictures had their charm for the little children but were scorned by the boys and girls. As for the wealth of fairy lore of all the earth, it was not dreamed of. Now we have not only Russian fairy books and Japanese fairy books, but also Blue fairy books and Red fairy books, and Yellow fairy books, till the "Little People" seem peeping out from every cover. Librarians and teachers as well as parents, say, "Yes, indeed, let them read; it helps their imagination." But where so much is pictured there is but little left for the imagination after all.

Among other books of fifty years ago there is a small thick copy of Wood's Natural History. The woodcuts scattered through it resemble the drawings found in a dictionary, and it reads much like one. What a contrast to the large nature books of today! Yet a beaver could be recognized just as quickly from the drawing as from the photograph of the living animal. Could you catch the smell of the woods, and feel the moss beneath your feet, and fear to stir lest you disturb the busy little chap, when looking at the drawing? It is in this field of bookmaking that the children of Now have their greatest advantage over the children of Then. City dwellers or country boys, they have but to open their books to be in the heart of the woods.

"Of the making of many books there is no end." The publishers tell us that every year there are about six hundred children's books issued in the United States. It is doubtful if there were sixty a year, a half century ago! But the juvenile books of Then were high in their moral tone. Among the many of Now, some are useless and insipid. The boy or girl in the great easy chair may not be fascinated by "Regina, or True Piety among the Lowly," but will respond to the highest ideals our truest manhood and womanhood can give.

Bucknell Univ.
October, 1921.

Impressions of Kinhwa

By ALICE PICKFORD BROCKWAY

I WAS reading the other day of the travels of one of our Baptist women in the Far East, and the different Mission Stations she had visited. I could almost follow her on her trip through Japan and China, as I myself had visited many of these same places and some of the same homes. My memories of dear old Canton were still vivid and tender, and I too had been a guest at the home of the Speichers in Swatow.

When she spoke of East China, my heart beat expectantly; then a sense of disappointment came over me, as I read the words, "In East China, I visited all the stations but Kinhwa"; and I thought, another one has gone back to America, without seeing this wonderful station.

I am sure the friend who loved mission work enough to find such joy in going from one station to another, did not omit to visit this one from any lack of interest or unwillingness to do so. I myself, having made the trip up and down the river four times, can understand that in all probability the only reason was because of the time it takes, and the fact that one cannot make that journey by native boat alone, without an escort. So few who visit China ever take the trouble to make that beautiful trip up the winding river, whose mountain sides in the spring time are brilliant with azalias; past little Chinese villages and through rapids. Finally Kinhwa's thirteen-storied pagoda comes into view; and then one passes under the arched stone bridge, a wonderful piece of architecture, and in sight of the old city wall, parts of which are supposed to have been standing since the time of Christ.

In this city, Northern Baptists are the only mission at work, excepting the China Inland Mission, who carry on evangelistic work, but no educational or medical work. Our own society has a boys' school, a girls' school, evangelistic work, with a fine new church and four outstations, and a hospital plant, the like of which it is hard to find. Said the friend who accompanied me on my last trip, as she stepped into the hospital compound: "This is the finest mission compound I have seen in China. I had no idea it was anything like this." It is the only hospital deserving the name for one hundred and fifty miles around: the nearest being at Hangchow.

The accompanying picture shows the Hospital Staff as it was last June. Since then, Miss Hewey, the foreign nurse, has returned to America on furlough, no one being sent to take her place. In the center of the back row is Dr. MacKenzie. On his right, Dr. Shen, Dr. Yet and Mr. Shen, the Hospital Evangelist. On his left, Dr. Leung, an American graduate, and at his left, the Registrar and Bible Woman. The second row comprises the graduate nurses, with Miss Hewey in their midst; and the front row, the student nurses. Let me say in closing, that I hope in the future, Kinhwa will be included when lovers of mission work visit the other stations; and I can assure them they will receive a warm welcome from the few faithful workers there, and feel well repaid for their trouble.

HOSPITAL STAFF AT KINHWA

Enough of the forces of modern education and the spirit of freedom are already let loose in China—and the world for that matter—to make impossible even the partial subjection of so vast and resourceful a people for very long.

China is peace loving. May she be allowed to remain in peace! Her period of ambition for world empire passed centuries ago. What China wants is a chance to grow in character and influence and modern life, not in territorial expansion.—RALPH A. WARD in "Western Christian Advocate."

The Bulletin Board

Nearly Nine Million Baptists in the World

There were 8,915,241 Baptists in the world in 1920, according to statistics that have been completed by Dr. E. P. Alldredge, Secretary of Survey, Statistics and Information of the Baptist Sunday School Board. Of this number 6,152,500, including Negroes, live in the Southern States. One hundred years ago there were only 2,600,000, according to the best available information, showing that during the century Baptists made an advance of 330 per cent. Figures for the various countries as reported by Dr. Alldredge are as follows:

Baptists of United States.....	7,789,165
Baptists of Dominion of Canada	144,502
Baptists of Mexico.....	53,74
Central America and Cuba.....	1,461
South America.....	23,272
Africa (four sections).....	282,372
Asia, India, Japan, China, Siberia, etc.....	255,134
Australia (seven provinces)...	30,88
Europe (not England, etc.)....	28,009
England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland .....	405,104

Ascent of Mount Everest is Attempted

The biggest and most difficult task left for the scientific explorer since the north and south poles have been discovered is the ascent of Mount Everest, generally believed to be the highest mountain in the world. Its height is estimated at between 29,002 and 29,141 feet, the latter figures being those of the London Alpine Club. Preparation for climbing Mount Everest has been made for some time, and word has lately come to this country that the expedition under command of Colonel Howard Bury recently has left Darjeeling for the attempt. The expedition of which Colonel Bury is the head is sponsored by the Royal Geographical Society and by the Alpine Club. Through the initiative of Sir Francis Younghusband permission has been granted by the Tibetan government to attempt the ascent. Treaties with the Tibetan and Nepal governments have hitherto prevented such an expedition.

"What's Hallowed Ground?"

—The original tomb of Napoleon on the island of St. Helena is unmarked and in a sad state of disrepair. Nothing is there to indicate to the tourist the fact it was at one time the resting place of the great military genius.

Mine Production

According to statistics compiled by the United States Geological Survey, in co-operation with the Census Bureau, the gold, silver, copper, lead and zinc mines in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, produced, during the past year, approximately 61,839,200 net tons of ore containing 1,833,300 fine ounces of gold, 51, 224,300 fine ounces of silver, 582,500 net tons of copper, 443,000 net tons of lead, and 549,200 new tons of "recoverable" zinc. The placer mines yielded approximately 464,000 fine ounces of gold, 45,400 fine ounces of silver, and 800 ounces of crude platinum.

Grand Island's New Prexy

On Sept. 28, Rev. John Mason Wells, for several years pastor of the First Baptist Church of Ann Arbor, Michigan, which is closely connected with the student life of the University of Michigan, assumed his duties as president of Grand Island College, at Grand Island, Nebraska. President Wells is a graduate of Amherst College and Yale University from which he received his B. D. degree in 1905 and his M. A. degree a year later. Beginning with his undergraduate years and continuing since he has been an especially able public speaker. He has taken a leading part in many public enterprises such as prohibition, charity organizations and chautauqua associations, and served as chaplain of the officers' training school at Camp Grant. Mr. Wells has been intimately associated with Michigan University and its students and has had previous experience in college work. Personally he is congenial, broad minded, sincere and deeply religious. He very quickly won the confidence of faculty and students and the good influence of his leadership and personal character has already been felt. In the short time since he entered upon his work he has demonstrated his ability as a wise Christian leader so that the college and all of its directors and supporters feel that the choice of Mr. Wells as president of the institution was very fortunate.

They are not Slackers

Protestant Christians in the United States do not fully appreciate how much the Protestants of France suffered during the war nor how well they are doing their duty under difficulties now. Of the four hundred churches belonging to the Evangelical Reformed communion, thirty-five were partially wrecked and twelve totally destroyed. To meet the increased cost of living these French Protestants have raised their annual church budget from 1,000,000 francs in 1912 to 3,000,000 in 1920. At the same time they have doubled their foreign missionary work, advancing from 900,000 francs in 1914 to 1,800,000 in 1920. These people are not slackers and leaners. They are workers and self-helpers. They are worthy of sympathy and aid, because they carry such a heavy burden so bravely. They are laboring in the common cause of human welfare which is dear to all true believers.

"What We Have Done"

The Literature Department of The General Board of Promotion has just published a pamphlet telling a large number of things that have been done by our various missionary societies with the money already paid in on the New World Movement pledges. It is entitled "What We Have Done," and is full of concrete facts and striking illustrations. It answers the question that a great many have asked, "What has been done with the money we have contributed toward the $100,000,000 Campaign?" Copies can be had free from your State Director of Promotion or from any of the Literature Bureaus of The General Board of Promotion.

Read and Act Today

Our State Promotion Board at a recent meeting considered the financial situation of our New World Movement pledges. During the summer months receipts have fallen off very heavily, and it is now necessary to make a strong effort to bring up all pledges. Our Societies are facing a grave situation. November is the month set aside for the semi-annual paying up of all money now due. It is exceedingly important that our Michigan Baptists do their full share in helping to meet the denominational situation. Our Societies cannot wait until business conditions change. They have hundreds of missionaries at home and abroad. These men and women must be fed and clothed. The Societies must have their current expenses. Every Pledge to our New World Movement ought to be redeemed even to the point of sacrifice. Let us make this a point of honor.—GENERAL DIRECTOR GRANT M. HUDSON.

The Devotional Life

"These Sayings of Mine."

By E. HOWARD BROWN
(In the American Friend)

Turn and read again the last few verses of Matthew seven. There you find these words, "These sayings of mine." If we hear them and do them we are like the wise man, if we hear them and do them not we are like the foolish man. What were "These sayings?"

Some of us have said a great deal about what we should believe and how essential it is that we believe certain things. There are certain things that we should believe. There are certain things also that we should do. Some will believe and not do, some will do but will not believe, but either without the other is a hard and hopeless task.

Perhaps enough has been said about what we should believe and why. I want us now to consider what we should do and why. "These sayings of mine," what are they? Read again the three chapters of the Sermon on the Mount. Jesus closes his sermon with these words. Here are some of his sayings in our words:

Let your light shine.

Do and teach the commandments.

Do not kill or even hate anyone.

Agree with enemies quickly, if possible.

Keep pure and do not even lust after women.

Love your wives instead of divorcing them.

Swear not but answer clearly and honestly, "yes" or "no."

Suffer wrong rather than do wrong. Love your enemies.

Do not "get even" with the one who wrongs you.

Give quietly and in humility.

Make your longest and loudest prayers in the closet.

Forgive men before you ask them to forgive you.

Do not seek to look religious but let your religion show itself.

Do not seek to be rich but seek to serve with what you have.

Do not worry over what you cannot help but trust in God.

Seek first the kingdom and count it above everything else.

You would lose an arm rather than die, you would lose an eye rather than go blind, give up anything, however precious, rather than imperil your soul.

Lend to the poor. Help the needy.

Go with the man farther than he asks. Give more than requested.

Can we do these things? Are we attempting to do these things? If we hear and do these sayings, says Jesus, we are like the wise man; if we do them not we are like the foolish man. Does it not behoove all of us, as Friends, to seek to do some things as well as believe certain things?

A Prayer for the Family

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

*L*ORD, behold our family here assembled. We thank thee for the place in which we dwell, for the love that unites us, for the peace accorded us this day, for the hope with which we expect the morrow; for the health, the work, the food, and the bright skies that make our lives delightful; for our friends in all parts of earth. Purge out of every heart the lurking grudge. Give us grace and strength to forbear and persevere. Offenders, give us the grace to accept and forgive offenders. Forgetful ourselves, help us to bear cheerfully the forgetfulness of others. Give us courage and faith and the quiet mind. Spare us to our friends, soften us to our enemies. Bless us, if it may be, in all our innocent endeavors. If it may not, give us strength to encounter that which is to come, that we be brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath and in all changes of fortune, down to the gates of death, loyal and loving one to another. As the clay to the potter, as the windmill to the wind, as children of their sire we beseech of thee this help and mercy for Christ's sake.

Bread and Roses

By JAMES OPPENHEIM

"Bread and Roses, too"—A slogan of the women of the West.—American Magazine, Dec., 1911.

I.

As we come marching—marching in the beauty of the day,
A million darkened kitchens and a thousand mill lofts gray
Are touched with all the radiance that a sudden sun discloses,
For the people hear us sing "Bread and Roses, Bread and Roses."

II.

As we come marching, marching, we battle, too, for men,
For they are women's children and we mother them again,
Our lives shall not be sweated from birth until life closes;
Hearts starve as well as bodies, "Give us Bread—but give us Roses."

III.

As we come marching, marching unnumbered—women dead,
Go crying through our singing their ancient song of Bread,
Small art and Love and Beauty their drudging spirits knew—
Yes, it is Bread we fight for—but we fight for Roses, too.

IV.

As we come marching, marching, we bring the greater days,
The rising of the women means the rising of the race,
No more the drudge and idler, ten that toil where one reposes,
But a sharing of Life's glories: Bread and Roses! Bread and Roses!

Perplexed!

Once upon a time not so very long ago there was a Baptist missionary in Africa named Mr. Richards who was translating a few verses of the gospel of Luke to his African neighbors every day. They were tremendously interested in the story he continued from day to day; but there came a day when he reached the 6th chapter and the 30th verse which read: "Give to every man that asketh of thee, and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again."

Poor Mr. Richards! He hardly saw how he dared translate such a "sweeping" verse when already these black neighbors were stealing his possessions and envying him for owning such marvels as, for instance, an umbrella which closed up like a stick in dry weather but opened up like a palm tree when it rained! And his "tick-tick animal" that told him the time of day, and his "squeaking twig" that made black marks on paper—oh he had fascinating possessions which they longed to own, and if he should translate this verse what would he have left?

So the first day he dared not translate it; the second and third day he wavered, then he nobly decided that God had put that verse in the Bible and it was the duty of a Baptist missionary to pass the Bible on exactly as it was written. So he translated the fateful verse!

No sooner was the meeting over than the congregation grabbed his things pell-mell—boots for their bare black feet, handkerchiefs for their black noses, chairs, tables, pillows—everything was gone by night. Everything! And I suppose Mr. Richards must have remembered that once the Lord Jesus also had no place to lay His head.

But there's a surprise coming! For when his black neighbors went home to their little hatched huts with their new treasures and laid down on their floors to sleep, behold a little Something-Inside-Them began to talk to them: Conscience, you know! "See here," said they to themselves, "this white man has come over from the tribe of Baptist Persons to do us good, and we are doing him great evil by taking the curious things he needs to make him comfortable!" They squirmed and fretted and communed with their secret hearts all night long, and toward dawn in that little village there was the patter of black feet tiptoeing to the door of the white man's hut to leave the "spoils" on his doorstep! So that when Mr. Richards awoke he thanked God and took courage, for he saw that where ten years of sermons had failed, one action of unselfish love had melted their cold heathen hearts!

And I am proud of such a Baptist, aren't you?—Selected.

The Chimney Corner

Creating a Book-Lover

"THE trouble with me is," sighed the Distinguished Lawyer, "that the exceedingly pious aunts who brought me up always made me learn a Psalm for penance whenever I was caught in a wicked prank. Consequently I still regard the Bible with the most peculiar sensations—"

"How wretchedly short-sighted of them!" said Mrs. Hathaway, then looking around her pleasant dinner table as if challenging a rebuke, she added: "Sometimes I think we shrink from the Bible, too, because it has a dreary black cover."

"Nonsense!" laughed the gentleman seated at her right, "it's because of what's inside those covers, dear lady! You can't make children love Deuteronomy, for instance, or Judges—"

"Oh, can't I?" laughed Mrs. Hathaway, "why, if you love it yourself you can surely pass on that love. Especially when there are such perfectly corking stories in Judges, for instance!"

"Corking?" gasped the lady in the lavender dress, "what a frightfully irreverent word for the Bible, my dear."

"Not a bit of it!" insisted Mrs. Hathaway, "I simply did it to emphasize the modern appeal of those splendid everyday stories in the Bible—the best in the world for growing children. As for Judges, it's brimful of some of my family's favorites. Come now, confess, who of you knows what's in that solemn-sounding book?"

A confused smile rippled around the tableful of guests, and only the host was able to answer: "You see," he pleaded (to explain his unexpected store of knowledge) "we've three insatiable young Bible-lovers in our family, and the boys know all about Jael and Sisera—The Gentleman-With-a-Nail-Through-His-Forehead!—and Gideon's Wet and Dry Fleece, also the Fate of Jephthah's Daughter, and Samson, The Strong Man. In fact," he added slowly, "it isn't until you turn your children into lovers of the Old Book that its real beauty and ageless appeal come home to you yourself."

"But Mr. Hathaway," said the Lavendar Lady rather breathlessly, "isn't the Old Testament simply full of war and immoralities and horrors hardly fit for children?"

Mr. Hathaway looked across the table at the little woman seated opposite: "You answer, dear. Tell them how we figured it out!"

Mrs. Hathaway leaned forward eagerly: "What if there are horrors? There's a glorious end in view! You know how the Bible opens in a garden, and closes in a city? Well, all that weary way between we read how God was training up a race of men to worship him in spirit and in truth. Story after story about that training—and some of the people misunderstood, some failed, some helped. That's the one big thing to keep in children's minds from the very beginning: God training citizens for his New City. So that all the Old Testament stories show how, little by little, God was coming down to men—in the person of Christ; and all the New Testament stories show how, little by little, man is climbing up to God—in the persons of Christians all over the world. It's a fascinating recital, that! Oh, I think we cheat our children out of real religion when we fail to make the whole motive of the Bible shine—that golden thread of redemption running clear through from Genesis to Revelation. Bit by bit, like some giant picture puzzle, you can fit in Adam and Noah and Abraham and Moses and Samson and David. Even a child can see in their failures that the Christ is all the more perfect." She stopped, a little confused by the rising tide of her enthusiasm.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

The gentleman sitting at her right pulled out his pencil and scribbled something on the back of his place-card. Whereupon his wife, across the table, said curiously: "Now what is he doing?"

He smiled ruefully: "Just jotted down that golden thread of motive—never realized before there was that continuity uniting all the Bible characters—"

Mr. Hathaway grinned: "And now I warrant you'll be passing the idea on to your boys on Sunday afternoons, Fred! Just try it out on the youngsters. There's all the virility and adventure any boy wants in those stalwart old patriarchs and prophets and saints. Linked up with that golden thread idea it makes it clear to any boy whose job it should be to finish the Bible."

"Finish the Bible?" gasped the Lavendar Lady, as if this conversation were all Greek to her.

It was at this point that the dark-haired Young Lady in the coral-colored dress grew animated: "I know exactly what Mr. Hathaway means about finishing the Bible; I learned it one day when I taught what I considered a 'perfect lesson' in the primary department. Simply perfect it was—all the nicest pedagogical methods in full force, so that the story of the Saviour's last day on earth was graphic and gripping to every youngster in that room. I was secretly elated to have a fringe of visiting parents seated around the room to watch the spell I was weaving! By and by I capped the climax of my perfect story by quoting Christ's last words on earth—of course I had been skilfully leading up to those words from the very beginning: 'Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature.' It was just as effective as I wanted, that climax! So with a satisfied smile I picked up the hymn-book to find a hymn, when there on the front seat I spied Jimmie. All eyes, he was! simply dangling with suspense. As plain as day one could see he was waiting for something. 'What is it, dear?' I asked, leaning down. 'But didn't anybody GO?' he asked breathlessly. You see, the story wasn't finished to him; and its graphic perfection shattered to a thousand bits by that eager question. 'Go!' I cried, 'of course they went, and what's more—they're still going in answer to that command.' That's the way I learned that there's a sequel to the Bible in the modern Acts of the Apostles—our missionaries. There isn't a child too young to understand we are to carry on the torch."

"Hear! Hear!" cried the hostess, delightedly, "Bible stories and mission stories, hand in hand. They're all one: a diet of heroes!"

The Lavendar Lady sighed: "You're too clever for me, you two. I would certainly need a book to help me tell those stories. Are there any?"

"I have three favorites, myself," said Mrs. Hathaway. "For the very little children there's 'Who-Was-It? Stories' by J. H. Johnston, I think. They are told in such a way as to arouse a new interest in well-known Bible characters. Then for the six-to-ten year olds is that perfectly delightful life of Christ by George Hodges, 'When the King Came.' It's lovely! Then for the nine-to-twelve age we gave our children Charles Foster's 'Story of the Bible'; it's a continuous narrative of the Scriptures, with lots of pictures. Those three books are all I have ever used. But even into them I had to inject every ounce of imagination and divine insight to make the thread shine forth in all its golden beauty."

The Distinguished Lawyer looked around the table first in silence, then he looked again with an impressive solemnity: "It dawns on me," he said quietly, "that we could all make real history here tonight, if we would each of us go home and build the Bible into the very warp and woof of our children's growth. God knows they need something basic. I wonder what we're thinking of, we Christian parents—"

"I'm ashamed!" cried the Lavendar Lady, "you just ought to see the fairy stories and the animal stories and the Scout stories and the boarding-school stories that line my book-shelves—why, oh, why, haven't I given the one real Book a fair trial, too? I didn't know it was so brimful of fascinations—"

"And begin early," sighed Mrs. Hathaway, "for after a certain age it's just about impossible to create a Book-lover."

Up to me sweet childhood looketh,
Heart and mind and soul awake;
Teach me of Thy ways, O Father!
For sweet childhood's sake.

In their young hearts soft and tender
Guide my hand good seed to sow,

That it's blossoming may praise Thee
Wheresoe'er they go.

Give to me a cheerful spirit,
That my little flock may see
It is good and pleasant service
To be taught of Thee.

The Young Reserves

The Spellbound Order of Book-Worms

"SOMETHING will have to be done," said the Fairy severely.

And the Boy-Whose-Nose-Was-Always-Buried-in-a-Book looked up long enough to grunt: "Uh-huh!" which is absolutely no way to talk to anyone—especially to a Fairy who only appears for seven short days in the entire year: in Children's Book Week. So in punishment for his impoliteness she fastened her gaze on his nose (which was buried in a book, of course) and it suddenly began to seem uncomfortably long, even to him.

"Mercy me!" cried Miss In-One-Eye-and-Out-The-Other, "just look at that boy's nose!"

Whereupon the Champion Forgetter snickered rudely: "Oh, his nose isn't a circumstance to your eyes, you silly girl! They leak, they positively leak! Whole sentences go in one eye and leak out the other eye!"

But at this, little Skip-and-Skim laughed heartily: "Now aren't you too comical? Why criticize her eyes, when your brain is certainly the leakiest in the world! Isn't it, Book Fairy?"

The Book Fairy stared sadly at Skip-and-Skim: "Tut! Tut!" she said gently, "don't talk about brains, poor dear, for it would seem as if you didn't even own one—certainly you never try to store anything in it!"

Now that each of them had reason to feel snubbed and crushed on account of owning such peculiar noses and eyes and brains, poor Skip-and-Skim said wistfully: "Then what's to be done about us? Are we to be banished forever from the Kingdom of Books?"

"Not a bit of it!" cried the Fairy, "but temporarily I must turn you each into a bookworm."

"Ugh!" shuddered Miss In-One-Eye-and-Out-the-Other, "Why a bookworm? Couldn't it be something nicer than a worm, dear Fairy?"

"No," said the Fairy, "for there's this to be said about a bookworm: he feeds and thrives upon the book he eats, and from print and paper makes a house for himself to live in. Which is exactly why boys and girls of your age should read—yet here is Miss In-One-Eye-and-Out-The-Other who sees words and sentences, of course, but they never stick inside her, they leak right out. The same way with this Champion Forgetter of ours, he thinks he has everything tucked away in his 'remember cells,' but he never, never, never can recall a thing he reads. As for foolish Skip-and-Skim, she dotes on the pictures in a book and invariably skips all the dull-looking pages. Oh, my very dear Dears, yours is no way to furnish the little house you live in."

"But my house is furnished," announced each and every one of the four in a shocked chorus, because had not their parents all the tables and chairs and beds and dishes which a cozy home should have?

But fairies have a curious little point of view all their own, so this Book Fairy waved her wand and instantly every one of those children's heads turned into a house. Indeed, yes! The front door was the mouth, of course, the windows were the eyes (the eyelids were shutters!), the ears were telephones and the hair was the roof, covering the brain which seemed to be a sort of attic. They thought they had never seen anything so fascinating in their lives as house-heads sitting on top of each other's necks.

"Walk indoors!" ordered the Fairy; so in they walked, inside themselves! And nobody seemed to like what they found.

"I'm all bed-room!" wailed poor Skip-and-Skim, "am I really such a dreamy, sleepy, stupid girl?"

"You ought to know," sighed the Fairy, "but look up in your attic. Maybe you've stored something worth-while up there in your memory chests."

Skip-and-Skim climbed up and looked inside the roof of her own head: "It's a nice big garret, but not one single littlest thing stored away!"

Miss In-One-Eye-and-Out-The-Other was actually weeping: "It's all parlor inside my house," she sobbed, "who wants to be a silly parlor where only giggling girls can sit and gossip? And there's nothing in my attic to help furnish another room—"

The Champion Forgetter interrupted: "I'm all playroom—all toys and hobby-horses and games that I've outgrown long ago. Empty attic, too! It's not a place where a fellow can grow very fast—"

"Don't talk about growing," groaned The - Boy - Whose - Nose - Was - Always - Buried-in-a-Book, "for I'm all dining-room—"

Answers to Puzzles in Last Number

Time To Go Nutting: (1) Beechnuts, (2) peanuts, (3) chestnuts, (4) walnuts, (5) Brazil nuts, (6) hickory nuts, (7) hazel nuts, (8) almond.

Up a Tree: (1) Bark, (2) leaf (leave), (3) trunk, (4) root, (5) branch, (6) laurel, (7) pear, (8) yew, (9) vergreen, (10) spruce, (11) fir, (12) pine, (13) elder, (14) poplar, (15) L. M. (elm).

in my house: evidently I just sit still all day long and gobble up books as some boys gorge on pancakes, and my attic is so cramful of odds and ends that I can't sort anything out. All the housekeepers in town could never house-clean up there, my memory cells are so over-stuffed. It just hurts me, I can't run around and play, I'm so top-heavy!"

The Book Fairy gave a little laugh: "My dears, you see now what comes of careless, rapid reading. It doesn't furnish the insides of your heads at all. A bookworm, on the contrary, feeds on the print he devours, so I am going to cast a charm on each of you! For one whole year you are to be bookworms and feed on the books you will find most highly praised in this issue of THE BAPTIST. Read them slowly and intelligently and lovingly. Store away plenty of material to furnish all the rooms you think you are going to need in the little House-You-Live-In. And next November, 1922, I will come back to lift the charm,—provided I see a real improvement in you."

"What kind of a charm will it be?" they asked in a doubtful chorus.

"Look in the glass and see!" cried the Fairy as she disappeared from off the face of the earth for a whole year.

So they looked in the mirror with fear and trembling, not daring to think what horrible thing a bookworm might look like—and what do you suppose? They had never looked half so attractive in all their lives before!! For behold, they looked intelligent—as if they were being properly fed on suitable diet; and eager; and spellbound. But maybe you know it's always that way with boys and girls who feed on what they read.

Rev. Angelo DiDomenica, pastor of the First Italian Baptist Church of Philadelphia, and editor of L'Aurora, on Monday evening, October 24, was walking peaceably and quietly along the sidewalk of South Broad Street, Philadelphia, from his home to his church to a young people's service, when all of a sudden without the least warning an automobile dashed off the road on to the sidewalk, knocked him senseless, and left him there and vanished to the unknown. Pastor DiDomenica was picked up by strangers, taken to the hospital, and an hour after was brought to his home where for days he suffered untold agonies of pain. Later examination showed no bones broken, but it will take weeks for his recovery.

Young People's Work

Topic for November 27

LIFE SKETCHES OF GREAT ADVENTURERS: THE MOFFATS.

Matt. 7:15-21; John 15:16-18.
(Conquest Meeting)

1. A Conflict. Robert Moffat, though only twenty-one, was fighting a mighty battle, for two great and burning loves surged in his heart. One was love for his divine Lord, whose voice was calling him to missionary service in foreign lands; the other was love for sweet Mary Smith, only daughter of his employer. There might have been no conflict in Robert's heart, for Mary shared his ardent spirit of Christian adventure for the kingdom's sake, but her parents thought otherwise and forbade her leaving England.

2. A Goodbye. So Robert bade goodbye to Mary and made a hurried trip to Scotland to bid farewell to his beautiful, dark-eyed mother, who had implanted in his boyish heart a purpose to serve God where He should call. Then on to London to receive his appointment by the London Missionary Society. It was proposed to send him with John Williams to Polynesia, but at the final farewell service on old Scotch minister, noting the youth of both candidates, declared, "Thae twa lads are ower young to gang thegither." Therefore John was sent to the South Seas, where in later years he met martyrdom; and Robert was sent to South Africa, to the kraal of Afrikaner, an outlaw chief, the terror of both natives and settlers, upon whose head the government had placed a price.

3. Facing the Desert. The sailing ship Alacrity belied its name on the voyage by which it carried Robert Moffat and a group of fellow missionaries from Gravesend to Cape Town. Eighty-six days of tedious journey by sea may, however, have proved in a measure training in patience for subsequent equally tedious and even more dangerous journeys.

At Cape Town, Moffat endeavored to obtain permission from the Cape Colony government to locate beyond the boundaries of the colony, and after some months set out in an ox-cart for his journey of several hundred miles. Fifteen miles a day was the speed limit for an ox-cart, and at the end of each day the young missionary was glad to accept the hospitality of a Dutch farmer. They fed him and lodged him with the best they had, and at the same time did their utmost to dishearten him. As the cart, drawn by several yoke of oxen, made its slow progress, farmhouses became fewer, until finally they disappeared entirely, and Robert found himself facing the unbroken desert, which he must cross with only three native servants for companions.

4. A Honeymoon in an Ox-Cart. Later in Cape Town joyous tidings came to Robert. A letter from Mary stated that her parents had at last given her leave to join him, and that she would come on the first vessel.

In December, 1819, Mary arrived at Cape Town, and a few days later a happy wedding was celebrated in Saint George's church. Early in the new year three ox-carts were made ready for the wedding journey. To Robert and his companion missionary, Mr. Campbell, the ox-cart was an old story, but Mary found the cart, the oxen, and the "crew" a never ending source of interest.

5. Return to Scotland. Many years sped by in busy service. Robert and Mary who had, on the threshold of life, dared all for the kingdom's sake, were facing the sunset of life. Robert was seventy-five years old when he and Mary bade final farewell to Kuruman, leaving the work of the mission in the hand of their son John. Throngs of black people blocked the way. When the wagon finally moved down the street crowds followed, and when they could go no farther, a long, haunting wall of grief followed until the travelers were out of hearing. They were going "home" to Scotland, but it was really home they were leaving in Africa.—Adapted from Service.

CAN YOUR SOCIETY MEASURE UP TO THIS?

The senior B. Y. P. U. of the Mill Creek near Mitchell, Georgia, reports their activities for the year 1920-21 as follows: "We furnished the following church and Sunday school officers: church treasurer and Sunbeam leader, Sunday school superintendent, Sunday school secretary and treasurer, two Sunday school teachers, four officers for organized class work. Furnished one associational B. Y. P. U. vice-president. Furnished one associational vice-president for Sunday school work in our association. Made eleven visits to other churches in interest of B. Y. P. U. work. Visited two churches and put on demonstration. Organized two unions, senior and junior at Gibson, Ga. Wrote forty-four letters in interest of B. Y. P. U. work. Gave out eighty-three tracts on soul-winning. All took study course and passed written examination.

GROUP OF DEAF AND DUMB YOUNG PEOPLE ORGANIZE A LIVE B. Y. P. U. IN AUSTIN CHURCH

This group of young people of the East Avenue Baptist Church, of Austin, Texas, can neither talk nor hear, but that did not prevent their organizing a B. Y. P. U. that will measure up to any in the state. All in the picture, except Bro. H. C. Morrison, the first on the left of the bottom row, are deaf and dumb. Mr. A. O. Wilson, on the right of the bottom row, is a deaf mute, and is assistant pastor of the church. The deaf and dumb members of this church have their services separate from the main church, in the Sunday School Annex.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson For November 27

PAUL'S VOYAGE AND SHIPWRECK
Acts 27:1-44. Golden Text, 2 Timothy 1:12

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

The writer, Luke, is one of the party to sail with Paul for Rome. He had come with Paul to Jerusalem and was with him all through his experiences in that city and in Caesarea. Evidently he was well acquainted with the sea and nautical terms because his description of the voyage and shipwreck is a masterpiece of vivid and accurate narration. The voyage is minutely described, the storm is so realistic that the reader can hear the roaring of the wind, feel the creaking of the ship, and see the panic on the faces of the passengers. Paul, of course, is the master of the situation. Luke, modestly hiding himself, throws the light of his inspired genius upon the great personality of Paul. It takes the storm to test the timbers of ships and the temper of men. Paul was never seen to better advantage than when he stood on the slippery deck of a grain boat tossing like a derelict on the Mediterranean Sea and calmed the terror of panic-stricken men.

The Lesson Taught

The lesson is capable of many applications, but the two which shine out of the narrative like the revolving lights on some dangerous reef are Man's Extremity and God's Opportunity.

Man's Extremity

The whole narrative is eloquent of the impotence and impoverishment of man. The greatest government the world had ever seen up to that time, the Roman Empire, represented by its military leader and soldiers in charge of certain prisoners who had appealed to Caesar was powerless to do anything in the grip of the storm. It was the extremity of Rome. The captain of the ship who had probably weathered the gales of the sea for years reached his extremity. The sailors were ready to desert at the first favorable opportunity trusting themselves to the sea in open boats rather than risk their lives in a sinking ship. The soldiers were ready to kill the prisoners. All the men on board the ship were paralyzed with fear and panicky with excitement except Paul and his companions. The storm was unusual in its severity and duration. Days passed into weeks while the sun refused to shine and the sea heaved and tossed with mighty waves and the wind blew mercilessly and unceasingly. "All hope that we should be saved was then taken away," Luke writes. The extreme of extremity had been reached. Hopelessness settled down upon the storm-tossed mariners with a deeper darkness than that which enveloped the sea on a moonless, starless stormy night.

This is God's method with men. So long as man has a prop of his own making to lean on he will be independent of God. Man proud of his intelligence will not accept God's revelation, confident in his own will he will not bow to the will of God, satisfied with earth-born fellowships he refuses to establish vital and conscious fellowship with God. It seems that God has to strip us naked before we are willing to let him clothe us with the garments of his righteousness, to make us hopelessly sick before we will look to him for health, to lead us down into the valley and shadow of death before we will reach out for his guiding and comforting hand. Poverty is often God's way to true wealth. Times of material prosperity are never times of spiritual power. On the contrary when wealth accumulates society disintegrates. Our faces have to be kept on the grindstone to make us dependent of God. During the war men and women prayed because it was the hour of their extremity. It is regrettable to face this fact and to know that mankind can not thrive under easy conditions. It takes the storm and the stress, the temptation and the trial, the burden and the heartbreak to make character and to bring out all the latent powers of personality. Paul's stormy voyage to Rome is the climax of his great career and the fitting close of Luke's account of the acts of the Apostles.

God's Opportunity

The storm brought out God. He sought opportunity to reveal himself as the transcendent God, that is, as the God who is over nature and all its forces. The poor Romans were pagans whose gods were numerous, fickle, often powerless, and always associated with the forces of nature which they sometimes used as weapons against one another. Pagan gods have always been and still are represented by the good and evil forces of nature, therefore nature in her warring moods has always been a terrifying power to superstitious peoples. On the other hand the God of the Jews or rather the God of revelation has always been associated with man. The tenderest things said about God in the Old Testament are anthropomorphic. "Like as a Father pitieth his children," and "As a mother comforteth." This anthropomorphism of the Old Testament finds its incarnation in Jesus Christ of the New Testament. And yet this human God is also clothed with the attributes of omnipotence and omnipresence. It is not Britannia that rules the waves, but Deity. "Therefore will we not fear * * * * * though the waters of the sea roar and be troubled." God is over all, not the Kaiser. Paul as the servant of the true God brought out this great truth in the extremity of the storm.

But he also brought out its companion truth that God is in all. The souls of the 276 men on that voyage were all dear to God. That truth had burned itself into the consciousness and conviction of Paul. It was this conviction that made Paul a missionary and that was taking him to Rome. The storm was God's opportunity of coming near to men and revealing himself as a God who cares, who sympathizes, who loves. God's messenger was also a passenger. "There stood by me this night an angel of God." What did God send his angel to do? To tell Paul that in spite of the elements which threatened to engulf the ship, all would be saved not only physically but spiritually. God over all and God in all are the two great truths which we need to learn and live by. It takes the extremities of loss and suffering and sorrow to bring us to this point, but when once we have reached it we see that our extremity was His opportunity.

This Moment

"A very present help."—Psalms 46:1

By ANNIE JOHNSON FLINT

*He's helping me now—this moment,
Though I may not see it or hear,
Perhaps by a friend far distant,
Perhaps by a stranger near,
Perhaps by a spoken message,
Perhaps by the printed word;
In ways that I know and know not,
I have the help of the Lord.*

*He's keeping me now—this moment,
However I need it most,
Perhaps by a single angel,
Perhaps by a mighty host,
Perhaps by the chain that frets me,
Or the walls that shut me in;
In ways that I know and know not,
He keeps me from harm or sin.*

*He's guiding me now—this moment,
In pathways easy or hard,
Perhaps by a door wide open,
Perhaps by a door fast barred,
Perhaps by a joy withholden,
Perhaps by a gladness given;
In ways that I know and know not,
He's leading me up to heaven.*

*He's using me now—this moment,
And whether I go or stand,
Perhaps by a plan accomplished,
Perhaps when He stays my hand,
Perhaps by a word in season,
Perhaps by a silent prayer;
In ways that I know and know not,
His labor of love I share.*

The Board of Promotion Meets

THE annual meeting of the General Board of Promotion was held this year in Indianapolis, Nov. 1-4, and was perhaps the most significant meeting of this body since the beginning of the New World Movement. There were present representatives of all the co-operating and affiliated organizations of the Northern Baptist Convention. The meeting of the Board was preceded by meetings of the administrative and sub-committees, especially by meetings of the adjustment committee which this year rendered service of the utmost value to Northern Baptists. The state secretaries also held numerous meetings. During the board meetings also committees were at work and a vast mass of detailed work was accomplished, the results of which will be reported from time to time. The utmost that can be done in this preliminary report is to indicate the spirit of the meeting and some of the most important actions which were taken.

The meeting began with a spirit of depression communicated to the body by the prevailing financial situation in the country which has greatly affected collections. But it began also with a spirit of prayer and of absolute dependence upon God. It was marked throughout by thoughtful and earnest discussion, by a sense that God's work must go on whatever difficulties may be in the way and whatever sacrifices may be demanded. And it ended with a spirit of optimism, growing out of the new plans made, and of entire consecration to God and to his work.

A few facts taken from the treasurer's report will indicate the situation which was faced. Collections for the first five months this year have been $1,539,060.99, or 51.5 per cent of the receipts for the same period last year. Only about 2000 of our churches have yet accepted and subscribed to the New World Movement on the basis of giving required to insure its success. From 30 to 40 per cent of the members of these 2000 churches have not yet subscribed to the fund. Not more than 30 per cent of our church members are contributing on the generous basis necessary to insure success.

The total amount pledged to the fund to May 1, 1921, is $48,758,191.04, of which $14,910,489.94 had been paid by May 1, 1921. At least one-third of the balance falls due this year. To this sum should be added the anticipated income for the year from invested funds, matured annuities and legacies, namely $800,000. This would bring the total to $12,082,567.03, or $7,917,432.97 short of the $20,000,000 needed this year. Northern Baptists have accepted the goal which calls for increasing subscriptions to the fund to $87,500,000 by April 30, 1922. This requires new subscriptions aggregating $30,000,000. Payments on these new subscriptions during the current year must approximate $10,000,000 in order to meet the situation. Such figures suggest the size of the task.

With such figures as these before them only three possibilities were present to the participating organizations. They must curtail the work, or they must incur increasing debt, or they must raise the balance of the $100,000,000. As the meeting went on, it became more and more evident that the last possibility was the only one which could be considered. For the committee on the financial situation, Dr. Emory W. Hunt reported (1) that there is reason for gratitude for what has been achieved. Our co-operation must continue. We must not return to the old condition of competition between the societies, and (2) that our present situation, due to the fact that pledges go only half-way to the goal, gives anxiety about the work at home and abroad. We cannot think of withholding appropriations to the workers. Our need drives us to God and to our hardest work. Man's extremity is God's opportunity. Let us give ourselves to God with all earnestness and then to the work as if all depended upon us. The future is as bright as the promises of God.

Just what method should be adopted became apparent after the report of the Committee on Laymen's Activities which was given on Friday morning. It will be remembered that the women have already undertaken to see that $6,000,000 in new pledges is raised during the year and that $2,000,000 of this shall be paid in by May 1. Plans have now been inaugurated for a larger use of laymen than has ever before been attempted. The report of this committee, which is printed elsewhere in this issue, was enthusiastically received and was felt to be the most encouraging forward movement made in this meeting, linked as it is with the report of the stewardship program to which reference will be made later. The report was unanimously adopted, most cordial words were had from many states in which it appears that machinery is already set up merely waiting for this report, and then the assembly gave itself to a service of prayer and praise, literally going on its knees before God. There have been no sessions of such power in recent meetings of any of our national bodies. Our readers are urged to read this report and to put themselves in line with its recommendations.

The question has often been raised as to how the organized work of the denomination is to be carried on when the five-year period comes to a conclusion. The answer is given in the report of the Committee on a Tithers' League and Stewardship Program, read by Dr. Gilbert N. Brink on Thursday morning and printed elsewhere in this issue. The program suggested also answers the important question raised regarding the systematic education of the people of our churches in principles of stewardship. The Board rightly feels that work of the most valuable kind has been done in this report and is making provision to see that the recommendations, all of which were adopted, promptly reach our churches and are, so far as possible, carried into effect.

Probably no committee of the Board worked harder during the entire meeting than the adjustment committee, to which many delicate and intricate problems were committed. The gist of this report will be published in the next issue of THE BAPTIST, with some interpretative comment. At the present moment, however, mention should be made of the splendid spirit of the state men, the city mission men, and the representatives of the national societies in making adjustments which involved a serious cut in their budgets, their supreme desire being that the whole program might be advanced. Nothing finer than this generous give and take has ever been seen in our co-operative relations.

The new officers are as follows: Chairman, Emory W. Hunt; Vice-chairman, S. J. Skevington, Mrs. W. C. Abernethy, G. A. Hagstron; Rec. Sec., Wm. B. Lippard; Treas., James C. Colgate; General Director, J. Y. Aitchison; Business Manager, H. R. Greaves; Conventions and Conferences, Hugh A. Heath; Publicity and Statistics, F. W. Padelford.

Administrative Committee. Representing the national societies and affiliating organizations: F. L. Anderson, Max Schimpf, Smith G. Young, Mrs. H. E. Goodman, Mrs. G. W. Coleman, A. M. Harris, C. A. Barbour, Henry Bond. Others. For one year: Mrs. John Nuveen, F. W. Ayer, W. H. Geistweit, A. T. Fowler. For two years: Mrs. N. R. Wood, A. L. Scott, J. M. Stider, Mrs. G. C. Moor. For three years: F. H. Robinson, F. E. Taylor, Mrs. C. D. Eulette, E. H. Rhoades.

Apportionment Committee: W. W. Everett, G. B. Huntington, C. L. White, G. N. Brink, Mrs. A. MacLeish, Mrs. K. S. Westfall, E. T. Tomlinson, A. L. Scott, W. C. Coleman, I. B. Mower, E. H. Dutton, D. B. Purinton.

Budget and Adjustment Committee: F. W. Freeman, A. H. Finn, C. H. Prescott, C. S. Dearborn, W. M. Mc Kercher, Mrs. R. W. Ramsay, Mrs. G. C. Moor, C. S. Shanks, Mrs. C. D. Eulette.

Report of Committee on Laymen's Activities

THIS committee was appointed to consider a recommendation made to this Board suggesting the utilizing in a larger way than at present of the laymen of our churches and to consider whether an organization should be effected to accomplish this purpose.

We have been greatly aided in the performance of our duties by the counsel and advice of the other laymen of this Board and of the city of Indianapolis. Besides private interviews two open conferences have been had and at the conference this noon the substance of this report was presented and unanimously endorsed and is now formally presented here.

A Present Need

We are in the midst of a most significant meeting. In but a few days our Baptist people all over our land will be aroused as by a bugle note.

Our General Board of Promotion after prayer and conference believes that the raising of the $100,000,000 should be completed and that the time to commence its completion is now.

Our General Board of Promotion after prayer and conference, has adopted a most comprehensive and far-reaching, yet absolutely workable, plan of tithing and stewardship, involving stewardship of life, of time and of property.

It is manifest at once that to accomplish these objectives there must exist not only the maximum of efficiency in our existing denominational machinery, not only the most absolute and loving loyalty of our pastors, not only the ceaseless and effective work of our women, but also a like loyalty and a like efficiency in service on the part of the laymen of our churches.

A Present Resource

How significant it is that as we face this great present need we find that the Lord whom we serve has already prepared a way in which the need can be met!

The laymen are ready for service. They speak through no national organization for now there is none. Yet from individual laymen, from brotherhood groups, from whole states, come unmistakable evidences that the laymen of this denomination are again ready at the call of the denomination to arise and to do their part in the work that our Lord has called us to do.

We therefore recommend:

1. That in the co-existence of the great present denominational need and of the re-awakened willingness to serve on the part of our laymen, we humbly recognize the leadership of our God.

2. That immediate steps be taken to re-organize our laymen for the work. That such re-organization be along the general lines suggested in the recommendation under consideration by this committee, to-wit: That there be created a National Laymen's Committee, which shall be a department of the Administrative Committee of the General Board of Promotion, and that in like manner laymen's organizations shall be effected in each state and in each association.

3. That all details for the carrying out of the plans herein recommended be referred to the newly elected administrative committee with power.

A Permanent Power

Your committee would be unworthy of the responsibility you have placed upon it should it fail to bring to you one further recommendation.

In these modern days of multiplied engagements and business duties, most of our laymen have become opportunists in their Christian service.

An extra million dollars is needed. Laymen meet and pray and arise from their knees and seize the opportunity for service.

Six additional millions are needed. The opportunity for service is seized.

But with the passing of the specific opportunity the organization that rendered the service ceased to exist and the very zeal for service was allowed to subside.

Your committee believes that the need of the type of Christian service which laymen are competent to render is a need that will be with us until our earthly task is done.

That while one phase of Christian service may need to be given special stress at one time, and another at another time, the opportunity for the layman to serve includes every form of Christian service and is an opportunity that will never pass away.

We therefore recommend:

4. That the organization of laymen to be effected, be of a permanent nature and that our laymen be asked to respond not only to a call for immediate service, not only to a call for a week of service or for a year of service, but for a life of service; to a call which has come down through the centuries to every Christian soul, those simple words of the Master "Follow Me."

Clarence E. Clough, Chairman; E. H. Rhoades, Jr., James R. Foree, Wm. McKercher, Dwight Chapman.

Report of the Committee on a Tithers' League and Stewardship Program

YOUR committee has had before it the following minute adopted by the laymen who met a few months ago in Cleveland, on invitation of the finance committee of the Northern Baptist Convention, to consider ways in which our great denominational program can best be forwarded.

"We believe that it would help to enlist the hearty co-operation of our entire membership if an advisory committee of five laymen were appointed by the administrative committee of the General Board of Promotion to serve in co-operation with the administrative committee and that one of the duties of such committee should be to endeavor to establish a tithers' league in each local Baptist church."

The committee also had before it the following recommendation which the finance committee later incorporated in their report to the convention.

"That an educational propaganda be inaugurated in connection with all agencies now operating, to educate all members of the convention, to become tithers, and establish as soon as possible a tithers' league, having as a goal sufficient members by the end of the present $100,000,000 campaign to carry the finances of the convention, its boards, societies and committees."

This recommendation was part of the proposal to create a "Laymen's Department of the General Board of Promotion" and as this proposal was later, upon vote, omitted from the report of the finance committee, the paragraph relative to tithing was left out also. But it none the less reveals the mind of the finance committee as to the need for a tithing campaign.

The Committee after canvassing the results of tithing in other denominations and after examining at length the stewardship material on tithing, makes the following report:

I. A denomination-wide education in Christian stewardship is needed.

(a) Your committee believe that the world-call for the practice of the principles taught by Jesus Christ is so great as to demand the whole strength and every resource of the churches.

(b) That the churches will be able to meet this call if,—and only if,—they systematically teach and train their people in stewardship. Stewardship is much larger than the question alone of giving money. Stewardship is the complete recognition of the Lordship of Christ. He who gave his life for us requires in return a loyal and a faithful use of the life, and the time, and also the means God has given us.

Your Committee recommend:

1. That a nation-wide "Baptist League of Christian Stewards" be organized with local chapters in the churches.
2. That as a measure of our stewardship, the league adopt the tithe as the normal minimum standard of giving and proportionate giving as God prospers us as the fundamental principle of stewardship.
3. That our aim this year be the forming of a local chapter in each church in the Northern Baptist Convention.

II. Reaching our Objectives:

The issue involved in the success or failure of our stewardship program is too great to admit of any carelessness in its preparation; or undue haste in getting it started and yet the urgency of the need is so great as to admit of no unnecessary delay. It must have our immediate and serious attention.

The fact that the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines set apart the month of February as stewardship month, makes it advisable to fix upon that month as the time when our stewardship promotion plans for the year shall have the major emphasis. Preliminary work should all be done before them. November, the month set apart for the financial canvass, will offer special opportunities for stewardship messages, and January, the month set apart for intercession, gives us opportunities for the exercise of the "Stewardship of Prayer."

A personal letter should be sent to every pastor, setting forth the spiritual and financial possibility in the tithe, both for the local church and for the worldwide work of the denomination, and asking him, for the sake of all the great interests involved, to put on in the church, of which he is pastor, a special stewardship campaign in which preliminary instruction will be given, between now and February, as opportunity offers, from the pulpit and through the distribution of stewardship literature; this to be followed by the four weeks intensive campaign in February, at the close of which, a local chapter of the Baptist League of Christian Stewards should be organized, and the members of the chapter be given responsibility for winning other members. Membership in the local chapter to be limited to those who are pledged to pay at least the tithe to the Lord's work. The pastor's attention should be called most earnestly to the fact that no stewardship plan which involves the tithing of the income will be successful unless the pastor is himself a tither.

Your Committee recommend:

4. That an intensive stewardship campaign be put on during the month of February as provided by the Northern Baptist Convention in the year's program adopted at Des Moines.
5. That this intensive campaign continue for four weeks, and that it be based upon the outlines in Cushman's book, "The New Christian" (pp. 117-126), or on the "Four Weeks Program" by Benjamin Starr of New York, or upon an adaptation of these.
6. That preparation for the intensive campaign begin immediately, the pastor, of course, using his own discretion as to how the preliminary work can best be fitted in with his own local program.

III. Helps for the Pastor.

The Board of Promotion can render an indispensable service to the churches in connection with their stewardship program by securing and making available for them the very best and most effective stewardship literature.

Your Committee recommend:

7. That the Board supply selected stewardship leaflets, free if possible, to the pastors for use with their own people, and
8. That it make arrangements by which the most effective stewardship book or books can be secured by pastors and others at the lowest possible costs.

IV. The Laymen co-operating.

The laymen are on record as favoring the establishment of a "Tithers' League in each local Baptist Church," and have suggested that a committee of their number be appointed to co-operate in establishing these leagues.

Your Committee recommend:

9. That this proffered aid be accepted and a laymen's committee be appointed at the earliest practicable date.

What Experts Say About Children's Reading

Can the Bible Be Made Interesting to Children?

BY NELLIE H. CRANDALL

One afternoon three little friends aged nine, six, and four, paid us a visit. The guests proved to be better entertainers than the hosts. For an hour they held a captivated audience with their realistic portrayals of Aesop's Fables. Without any attempt at stage setting, they put on "The Arab and the Camel," "The Wolf and the Lamb" and others.

Several days later we visited a daily vacation Bible school in South Chicago. There, too, histrionic talent was in evidence and children's innate love for dramatizing was turned to account. With a lump in the throat and with suppressed amusement, we watched the dramatizing of "The Good Samaritan" by some boys who had been lured from the street and had been tamed by this blessed rival of the idle summer time — the daily vacation Bible school. The fact that every boy was eager for the role of "slugger" in the play probably did not obscure the meaning of the story for the actors, and it surely did not detract from the humor of the situation for the audience. Nor was humor the real and lasting impression. It was serious and meaningful, that final rescue and the healing ministry provided by the neighbor.

No doubt the three little children from the home of culture, in common with these less favored citizens of South Chicago would have found as much interest in scenes from the life of Moses or Peter or John as they did in playing mythological stories and fables.

Palestine Became Real

It was a rare evening when Professor Myra Reynolds, in her inimitable way recounted some of the memories of her childhood: her father's method of reproducing the topography of Palestine in their own back yard, where the Jordan Valley, the Mount of Olives and the city of Jerusalem, set on a hill, became real before their eyes; their annual camping trips, when God's wonder-world was a daily revealing of the Creator; the telescope, which was shared by the entire village and which gave new meaning to some of the Psalms of David. All these and many other alluring devices were the product of a mind whose highest aim was the cultivation of the spirit in his own family and in his community, where he is to this day a patron saint.

In another home of blessed memory the methods were least captivating and more unconscious, perhaps, but nevertheless vital and of lasting worth, because the father and mother were genuinely and deeply interested in Bible study. Both teachers of Bible classes; it was no uncommon occurrence for them to introduce some question which had arisen in study, into the family conversation at the dinner table. How much of Bible lore the children gained from this table talk it would be difficult to estimate. Not infrequently a vein of humor would enliven the discussion if it took a theological turn, for these parents were not theological. With a twinkle in his eye, Mr. Business Man would contend that the world was better off because of "The Fall," since its penalty was labor and labor was an undoubted blessing to the world. Moreover, was not the joy of a redeemed soul infinitely beyond that of one who had never known sin and sorrow? The ramifications of this discussion were many and varied; industrial, economic, religious; but the final answer out of the heart of the most loving, the most unselfish of mothers always won the support of the children. "I would rather forego any excess of happiness that I may have as a redeemed soul, than that one should remain out of harmony with God."

Mrs. Nellie Crandall, Miss Mary Noble, Mrs. Antoniette Abernathy Lamoreaux, Mrs. Martha McLeish and Miss Margaret Applegarth have kindly supplied the material for this special number. All of the following material not otherwise indicated was supplied by Miss Applegarth.

In such a home atmosphere as this could the Bible be a closed book to the children?

Our Hearts Must Lead Them

We have cited the above instances in order to show that children can be led along a given path if our hearts are in the leading. It is idle to moan over the fact that "there are nearly 27,000,000 children and young people, nominally Protestant under twenty-five years of age who receive no formal religious instruction"; that our college students show an appalling ignorance of the Bible; that we are reaping today in lowered moral tone the neglect of moral and religious teaching. We may read, until we are hoary headed, the warnings and advice of great and wise men who tell us that the safety of our race and of the world lies in our acceptance of the moral ideals of the New Testament. We know that the Bible has no place, Alas! in public instruction. We know that our Sunday Schools offer, at the best, but one hour a week of Bible teaching.

It is clear therefore, that the responsibility for this part of the children's training, which is their rightful heritage, rests upon the home. The great question is what are we going to do about it and how soon are we going to begin?

Our children accept our values of life during their most impressionable years. Our standards become a part of the warp and woof of their being. The things which we think and talk about must find an abiding place in their hearts and minds. Home, after all, is the main spring of a child's culture. What shall it be? Shall we be satisfied if our children gain a good education, high social standing and a career? Or, are we most deeply concerned about their character? There is food for thought in the charge brought against our nation that, "Our knowledge has outrun our wisdom."

To a Child Shut in a Bedroom

*O dear, O desolate bright head!
O drooping mouth and shaken chin!
How could I ever lock you in?
They were too harsh, the words I said.
Should I have only smiled, instead,
At one small funny childish sin?
Already my regrets begin.*

*What would I do if you were dead,
Yet there is wonder in that place,
And I could show, did I dare,
How to throw back your tangled hair,
And in a round, mysterious place,
Looking upon your mirrored face
Find comfort in the beauty there.*

ALINE KILMER.

Food or Poison

BY MARY L. NOBLE.

Lead on, oh King Eternal
The day of march has come
Henceforth in fields of battle
Thy tents shall be our home.
Through days of preparation
Thy grace has made us strong
And now, oh King eternal
We raise our battle song.

The boys and girls of our glorious denomination are still in "the days of preparation."

What are they thinking about? Where does their imagination carry them?

Over the ranges to the wild excitement of uncontrolled passion, or out on the high seas with a pirate ship, or primping before a mirror or rehearsing the chatter and play of the most popular and successful heroine of light fiction? Intimacy with these abnormal types will not cultivate pure and wholesome youths.

So it is the purpose of the friends of these boys and girls to make available food for their thinking, which will be just as absorbing and much more valuable in the development of useful men and women.

Curl Up in a Corner and Forget

For most children, the idea of real recreation is to get a good story, curl up in a corner and forget the commonplace present. Fortunately for them some of the best story writers of the day have turned to the adventures of great Missionaries for their material and have given us a wealth of the best kind of literature. For those who want biographies, what could be found in the whole realm of letters more thrilling or fascinating than Livingston the Pathfinder, Judson the Pioneer, Lamplighters Across the Sea, A Noble Army, Under Many Flags, The White Queen of Okoyong; for travel stories, we have the Jack and Janet books, African Adventures, Stories from Far Away, The Land of the Golden Man, and Topsy Turvey Land; for tales, The Honorable Crimson Tree, Americans All, Stories of Brotherhood, Ten Little Indians, Mr. Friend O'Man, and Stay at Home Journeys. And the mere mention of the names of such authors as Jean McKenzie, Norma Waterbury, Anita Ferris, Margaret Applegarth, Harold B. Hunting and Dr. Zweimer insures instant interest.

The bravery and daring of the Tommies and Yanks, and the Canteen and Red Cross girls in the Great War, never failed to grip the imagination of these boys and girls. They were thrilled over the victories they won for the ideals of liberty and right. But just as deserving in their eyes are the deeds and spirit of the girls and boys who have fought for the right and the freedom to tell the good news of the gospel. One of a group of Crusaders listening to the vicissitudes of Dr. Catherine Mabie, who went back to her work in Africa while the war was still raging, broke out in the midst of the story with "Gee, she had the grit." These heroic souls, living today, whom we all anticipate knowing, are the heroes of these books and we follow them on their errands of mercy and love, and take up the cudgel at their side against cruel oppression and ignorance and pledge our support to the King, whose they are and whom they serve.

The question of getting these books into the hands of the eager children presented itself to the leaders of the Children's World Crusade about a year ago, with the result that a Traveling Library has been provided, so that four books at a time may be borrowed for a month and circulated among the Crusaders for the price of the postage to and from Buffalo. Eighty-seven Crusader Companies have applied for these books, some of whom are still waiting for their turn to come. Letters from leaders and children alike show the pleasure they have given and the interest that has been added to the Crusader meetings by the discussions that follow.

Crusaders Equip Library

The children of Washington, D. C. and Erie, Pa., have each, by the payment of $5.00, equipped a section of the library, in gratitude for the joy that has come to them through the C. W. C. Every section has been the gift of an individual or, as in these two cases, a group, who appreciate the possibilities of this project. The National Booksellers Association has declared its interest in our effort to induce the reading of good books by the children, by furnishing fifty of their beautiful colored posters to the companies reading the most books before December 1.

And a further bit of good news has just come, "Everyland," the missionary magazine for children, is to be ours again. Discontinued since the collapse of the Interchurch World Movement, it has been restored by its first sponsor, Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, and will be edited by her, with departments in charge of Miss Margaret Applegarth and Mrs. E. C. Cronk. The price is $1.00 per year in clubs of five, and subscriptions may be sent to Miss May Leavis, West Medford, Mass.

When the universal verdict is that everything considered, authorship, material, treatment and all, there are no better books to be had than these missionary stories, then we may surely expect that they have a place on the living room table and on the shelves of the Sunday school library. Then shall we look for the dawn of a better day, because we who are "the hope of the world," even we American boys and girls, will intelligently consider the rights and claims of all men.

"Lead on, oh King Eternal."

A Sweet Tooth

There is absolutely nothing to be said against the fascinating rows of fairy stories and animal stories and scout stories and boarding-school stories that line the children's book-shelves; they are delightfully clean and wholesome, and charmingly illustrated; yet when you look at them in the light of diet—to induce the growth of Tomorrow's Christians—how much they seem like dessert, don't they? And a meal which is all dessert day after day after day, produces malnutrition. Religious robustness can not come from indulging the sweet tooth indefinitely, so let us try balancing the meal with a few heroes.

"But maybe my children won't like missionary books!" objects the Mother-Who-Never-Tried-Them. All one can answer is that she has a delectable surprise in store. Listen to Bobbie Blake—"Gee Whiz!" he ejaculated when he finished the story of John G. Paton's astonishing career in the South Sea Islands: "parrots and shipwrecks and cannibals—and everything!"

It didn't sound as if Bobbie had been exactly bored.

Selecting Books for Children

By ANTOINETTE ABERNETHY LAMOREAUX

A normal child is eager for books when he is able to read with ease. This time varies with different children according to their advantages or the encouragement they may have had at home, but usually by ten the hunger for reading appears. Whether it will continue through life or die out depends upon the habits which are formed at this time.

The desire for reading arises because of the mental hunger of the child. It is not something which older people have to inject. It is born from within and will find satisfaction somewhere. A child has no taste to influence his choices at first, no habits of selection to assist him. His hunger reaches out to whatever lies at hand to satisfy. The problem which parents and teachers face therefore, is to direct this hunger toward the very best.

There are two principles which may serve us in deciding what constitutes good reading for a child. First, it must be enjoyable to him. Second, it must be constructive in some particular. This does not necessarily mean informing in character. Whenever the mental machinery is at work upon clean, wholesome material, whether one is acquiring knowledge or being stirred emotionally, working on something in imagination, purposing an action or even enjoying good healthy humor he is adding valuable character building material.

His Reading Craze

The reasons for these simple principles appear as we study conditions in the life of a child at this time. When the "reading craze" manifests itself, he is in the height of the habit and taste forming period. If the habit of good reading is to be established, now is the time to begin it, but this is peculiarly a habit which depends upon the element of pleasure for deep rootage. Reading is a very personal thing. Society does not demand it of an individual. It is not absolutely necessary to business success outside of its related technical field. One is guided almost entirely in the matter by his own inclinations. It is a law of life that we do not pursue what is uninteresting to us when there is no compulsion. Therefore it is evident that if good reading is to become a fixed habit, a child must find genuine pleasure in it. It must go deeper than enjoyment of the "funnies," jokes and Sunday paper or the printed page will be displaced by more stimulating sense pleasures as the great hungers of adolescence emerge.

What does a child spontaneously enjoy in reading? Anything which appeals to his natural interests. What are his natural interests? The average child, of whom there is in reality no specimen, likes action and more action. In the very early time of ability to read he enjoys action in the world of imagination, the fairy story, myth and nature story. As imagination becomes more constructive in the process of development and fancy is subordinated to fact, he craves action in human life. Hero stories, stories of achievement, daring and adventure in the physical world, history and simple biography if written from the standpoint of action without philosophizing, moralizing or drawing lessons, fascinate him. Stories which depict life familiar to him he likes immensely. Give a story to a child in which he sees his own life as he is living it or better still, wishes he could live it, for the hero is always himself in desire, and you have led him into one of the most gripping pleasures that his mind can know. In passing it is well to note that even this pleasure is enhanced if the physical features of the book are what they should be for children. Attractive covers, good illustrations, good paper and above all, type easily legible not only add to his enjoyment but predispose him toward further reading. This latter suggestion indicts most of the copies of the Bible given to children.

Combine Pleasure With Value

The second principle demands that in addition to giving pleasure the book should mean something of permanent value to a child's life. It is obvious that reading will make a full man but it will do more than simply add mental riches. A book that fills the imagination with pictures of fine men and women and splendid deeds will do more to mold a child in that direction than any amount of moral instruction. It is retro-active also for while it is filling the mind with healthy imagery, it is crowding out the unhealthy. A book of noble heroisms will nurture a child's latent possibilities of achievement. Embryo scientists, inventors, explorers, reformers, missionaries, ministers and champions of great righteous causes, are absorbed in these printed pages and one book may be all that is needed to quicken the possibilities into growing life. A book which emphasizes right standards and courses of action not so much by the final triumph of the right over the wrong as by its atmosphere and the attitude of the characters toward right and wrong has great value in strengthening moral choices. This will not be the result if the book is "preachy" but it can be wholesome and natural and still show that the right way is better than the wrong. It is not enough to have it "come out" ethically right if the wrong course is more alluring up to the end. Human nature is always dared to "take a chance" and a child instinctively wants to imitate the course that promises more thrills.

When the books a child is reading are making contributions to his general knowledge, to his imagery, to his moral standards and ideals, to his purposes to do worth while things and withal doing it so that there is genuine pleasure in the reading he is not only receiving the riches of the realm of good literature but the presumption is strong that he will become a citizen of the realm.

A Diet of Heroes

By MARGARET T. APPLGARTH

All over town the mothers are anxiously hurrying Jim and Jane to the doctor's office, where far too many children have already been weighed and found wanting: "What! Jim seven points below normal? — malnutrition! Did you ever? imagine a child of mine not getting the proper things to eat, right at a table like ours too?"

But there's all the difference in the world between a bill of fare and a diet; and now that the mothers are finding this out, one pictures a Tomorrow peopled by the most robust of giants and amazons. So surely it is not untimely to put in a plea with Christian parents for a diet of — heroes!

For there's all the difference in the world between books and—books:

"He ate and drank the precious words;
His spirit grew robust;
He knew no more that he was poor;
Nor that his frame was dust—"

What the Boys and Girls Like—Told By Themselves

Here are some letters written for this Children's book number of THE BAPTIST to Miss Applegarth and Miss Noble:

Dear Mr. Editor:

I like fairy stories don't you? they are so queer. I like animal stories like, "Peter Rabbit" and "The Wind in the Willows." I like "The Little Princess," about "Sara Crew," and I like "Little Lord Fauntleroy." I like fat books with pictures best. I like bed-time stories. Mama reads me "Friday's Footprints"; now, in it I like about "The Haunted Tooth" and "Red Polkadot Playmates." I like "Mother West Wind" stories two. I like a lot, don't I? That will be all for now, from your loving friend,

WILLIAM WALLACE SMITH
Detroit

175 Main St.
Agawam, Mass.,

Oct. 16, 1921.

I think it is pretty hard for a little girl like me who has read so many books to tell what her favorite is.

I always liked, "The Burgess Animal Stories." I like this series because it tells about the different animals and about their homes, and the food they eat, all about their habits and is written in such interesting stories that I never knew until I had read them that I was learning something nice all the time. Now my sister and I are always seeing something out of doors that reminds us of "Bobby Coon," or "Peter Rabbit," or "Striped Chipmunk."

I like "The Twin Stories" ("Japanese Twins," "French Twins," "Irish Twins" etc.). They tell about their country in a nice little story.

I like fairy stories always and often do things to surprise mother and make her think there are good fairies around.

I like missionary stories and especially "Lamplighters Across the Sea."

I am afraid I am telling you too many that I like but, you see, I read such a lot of different kinds of books and I like most all of them.

FLORENCE VENTRES.

175 Main St.
Agawam, Mass.,

Oct. 23, 1921.

I have read books ever since I learned c-a-t, cat. Once the librarian of the Juvenile Library, Springfield, said that they would have to get some new books for me because I had read nearly all the books there. Of course, I hadn't, but I had read a lot. It seems as if I liked them all and I really don't know what my favorites are. But I will try to tell you a few that I like very much.

It has always been one of the rules at our home, whenever we got a story book, to get a book of non-fiction.

I especially like "Polyanna" and I want to play the glad game immediately after.

I think "Daddy Long Legs" and "Dear Enemy" by Jean Webster, should be in my list of favorites. I guess one reason why I like them, is because of the funny pictures at the end of each letter. Then, too, you can hardly read a page without finding something to laugh at.

I enjoyed the series "The Story of Silk," "The Story of Cotton," "The Story of Wool," "The Story of Lumber," etc., by Sara Ware Bassett. These books are interesting stories packed full off things I like to know about.

Any book in Nature always interests me. Just recently I read "Lamp Lighters Across the Sea" and I think I shall have to put that down as one of my favorite books. It is told in such an interesting way that neither my sister nor I wanted to stop until we had finished. We just had to keep reading it.

These are only a few of the books I like very much.

Lovingly yours,
EVELYN FLOYD VENTRES

261 High Street
Newburyport, Mass.

Oct. 24, 1921.

In your letter you mentioned about sending a short account of my favorite books. I am not sure just whether you meant a list of them or not. I have read so many books I enjoyed it is hard to tell which are my favorites, however, I am going to send you the names of a dozen books I have liked well enough to read several times:

- (1)—"Nicholas Nickleby"
by Charles Dickens.
- (2)—"A Tale of Two Cities"
by Charles Dickens.
- (3)—"The Crisis"
by Winston Churchill.
- (4)—"Ivanhoe"
by Sir Walter Scott.
- (5)—"Quentin Durward"
by Sir Walter Scott.
- (6)—"The Oregon Trail"
by Francis Parkman.
- (7)—"The Man who Fell Through the Earth"
by Carolyn Wells. Not sure as to the author.
- (8)—"Still Jim"
by Honore Willise.
- (9)—"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine"
by John Fox Jr.
- (10)—"Freckles"
by G. S. Porter.
- (11)—"The Case at Seven Acres"
- (12)—"The Black Cloud"

Sincerely yours,
EDWARD TEDFORD.

Terra Alta, W. Va.,
October 23, 1921.

Dear Miss Noble:

Our home superintendent, Mrs. Pingley, told us that it was your request to hear from all the Crusaders.

We hear real interesting meetings, and we appreciate your interest in us. I have only read one of the books of the circulating library. The title of it was "Ann of Ara," and I liked it very much.

Olivian C. Lee.

I love to read but maybe I don't do it right. Mother has all our books on the shelves by colors, all the red books together, all the blue, green, etc. So sometime ago I decided to read all the blue ones, which were Dickens and Scott. But it was a hard shelf to wade through, so I skipped every other book, and oh, how I did like some of Dickens, like David Copperfield and Oliver Twist! But Mr. Scott is rather heavy, I guess he had too much time to write in. This may be a foolish way for me to read, by colors, I mean, but I have a very happy feeling when I look at those shelves.

I just love all the "Little Colonel" books and the "Patty" books, and I like to read about real people, too. When you answered my second letter I was simply delighted that you gave me some titles, and Mother gave me "One Girl's Influence" on my birthday. I just loved it. "Louise Andrews" was the kind of girl I would like to be. I read "Ann of Ava," too, and was thrilled. Was there ever such a heroine? I would like to be brave and true like that, and save my husband's life if I had one. Other favorites of mine are "Freckles," "The Girl of the Limerlost," "Daddy Long Legs." I just love to read.

ETHEL PIERCE.
Chicago, Ill.

Frenchtown, N. J.
Oct. 23, 1921.

Dear Miss Noble:

As you have asked the children who can to write and tell about the missionary books. I will write and tell what I think about the traveling library. It is very nice. Of all the books that you sent to us the "White Queen of Okoyong" is the nicest. It gave me the longing to be a missionary. I think it is wonderful how the missionaries help the poor people who do not know about God and the Bible. In our Juniors we have the Children's World Crusade. We have certain things that we do to get stars. We have blue, red, silver and gold stars. I like the gold and silver stars best. I have eight red stars for reading the books of the traveling library. And four gold stars, and two silver ones. I haven't any blue stars but I expect to get some. The children are quite enthusiastic about it. Since we have had the Children's World Crusade more children have been going to church. Rev. J. H. Higby, our pastor, said that he was very glad to see the children coming to church. A couple of Sundays ago he preached a sermon for the children. They seem to enjoy it. Our church has sent a box with clothing to Europe for the people who are freezing from the cold. We also sent soap for them as they haven't any and it is very scarce. The way we got the soap was to have a social. The admission was a cake of soap. Afterwards when the soap was counted there were one hundred cakes. We also sent a Christmas box to Burma. The Juniors helped to make scrapbooks and to paste postal cards. There were fifty-one dolls in the box as well as tops, balls and other things for the children. I am in the sixth grade up at school and am 10 years old.

Mildred Hillpot.

Frenchtown, N. J.

Dear Miss Mary Noble:

I have read "Lamplighters," "Mook," "Mr. Friend-o-Man," and "The White Queen of Okoyong."

I think they are all nice, but I like "Mook" the best.

One day at Junior I told how "Mr. Friend-o-Man" got his name. Some others told about "Mook" and "Lamplighters." On my birthday in September I got "Stay at Home Journeys" and I have read it nearly through. I like it very much.

I read "Hurlbut's Story of the Bible" all through and now I'm reading the Gospels. I am eight years old and I'm in the fourth grade. I hope you will send us some more of the Traveling Library.

Mabel Verga Hillpot.

Terra Alta, W. Va.
Oct. 23, 1921

Dear Friend:

I have enjoyed the meetings of the Children's World Crusade very much. We have our meetings the first Friday in every month.

My year will soon be up as president of the Crusaders. I certainly enjoyed being president of the class.

I have had the pleasure of reading two books of the second section. Wishing you great success in your good work.

Clarence Hartley.

Peterboro, N. H.
Oct. 26, 1921.

Dear Miss Noble:

I am writing to tell you the books I have read. I have read "Mook," "Everyland," "Bed-time Mission Stories." But of all that I have read I like "Mook" the best. I am glad that I have you to write to. Tonight we have a C. W. C. meeting. Wish you could be with us. I am writing this letter in school and have not much time. My first letter will be very short, but will write to you later and have a longer letter. With love,

Rose Lord.

Frenchtown, N. J.
October 23, 1921.

Dear Miss Noble:

I have read four of the Traveling Library books. I like them all, but I like "The White Queen of Okoyong" best. I hope you will soon send us some more books. We are each trying to get one hundred red stars and when we get one hundred red of them we get a reward. We get gold stars for the Bible work, silver for attendance at church and Junior, red stars for reading the Traveling Library books, and blue ones for learning the hymns. I have fourteen stars now. I am twelve years old and in the sixth grade.

I am president of the Junior's and we have a Children's World Crusade meeting the first Friday in each month.

Lovingly yours,
Miss Elizabeth Wells,

Dear Miss Noble:

I am writing to you to tell you about our Crusade. There are about eleven members in it.

The books we have had I enjoyed reading them very much.

I read five of them. All of the children like the Crusade work very well. We are all glad we started it.

Lovingly,

Terra Alta, W. Va. Vera Forman,

October 18, 1921.

Dear Miss Noble:

I belong to the Children's World Crusade and my teacher's name is Miss Hazel Wetter. I am going to write and tell you about the books I have read and liked. These are the books: "Jack and Janet Around the World," "Jack and Janet in the Philippines," "Mr. Friend-o-Man." I think those are all. I liked them all very much, but I like "Mr. Friend-o-Man" the best.

It is getting very late and I think I will have to close.

Yours very truly,

Peterboro, N. H. Edna Nelson.

What Sort of Christians Will the Next Generation Be?

By MARTHA H. MACLEISH

We are answering by our training in the home, especially through reading.

Whether we realize it or not, we Christians of today are largely determining how strong will be the Christian forces of tomorrow. The influence of the home is the most fundamental, the strongest, the most lasting. Out of homes that are founded upon a deep faith in God, that are sunning with his love and upright in all human dealings, will come those who stand for righteousness. The more truly a home breathes the spirit of Jesus Christ in all its life, the more naturally will its children take that spirit as the guiding principle of their lives.

But there must also be conscious religious training. It begins with the very little child, in showing him how truly God is the father of all the world, the One who makes the world so beautiful, who cares for the birds and all the little creatures as well as for the children. Certain fundamental principles must be taught, and perhaps first of all, here in America comes respect for authority. This means first, respect for parents, then respect for teachers, respect for law and for all property constituted human authority. Reverence is the same spirit, with something of mysticism added, carried up to God and holy things. It may be very early taught. It should be seen in the posture and the manner of the baby prayers, and in the mother's voice and face. A deep reverence for God carried through life is the best possible salvation from that over-wearing sense of self which sometimes sadly cripples human beings.

Added to reverence, indeed growing out of it, is faith. No life can be steadfast and happy through all the vicissitudes without an abiding faith in God. No one ever has accomplished great things in this world, nor ever can do so without a great faith. It is the most priceless heritage which we can give our children.

Out of faith grows the next essential, obedience. Children obey their parents because they trust them. We obey God because we believe in the righteousness of His demands. As we strive to teach obedience to our children we must remember to be worthy of their confidence both in the things that we require of them and in the manner of doing it.

One of the greatest helps to inculcating these lessons is reading and story-telling from the Bible. There is a mine of wealth in the Old Testament quite as much as in the New—stories that so aptly point the moral; instances that will remain in the memory of those whose lives succeeded because they had these fundamental virtues; those who failed for the lack of them. Another article will speak of reading in general, but in the multitude of good books don't overlook the best book of all.

In all religious training we must guard ourselves against the danger of casting the form of our children's faith in so definite a mould that it can never expand nor change its form. God's eternal truth endures forever, but the form of its expression changes from age to age. We are now in one of the periods of world history when great and fundamental changes of thought and expression are taking place. What we must try to develop in our children is a sense of the absolute reality of spiritual things, a strong personal sense of God in their own lives, a loyal allegiance to Jesus Christ as their divine Leader. It is a mistake to try to bind them too closely to the explanations of these things and the interpretations of the Bible that have satisfied our generation and those before us. Christ said, you remember, when asked why he was deviating from the religious customs of his day, "Neither do men put new wine into old wine-skins; else the skins burst and the wine is spilled, and the skins perish: but they put new wine into fresh wine skins, and both are preserved." How many an eager young spirit has been forced out of the Christian church because he found that he could not press his faith into the old forms, and his training had taught him that the form rather than the spirit was the essential thing!

Moral Calories and Spiritual Vitamines

When God made man it was not to squander twelve years that He ordained a period of childhood: by the play of care-free imagination every impulse of imitation, fair play, sympathy, friendliness, is to be given full time to be nourished. Someone has said that a hero is no braver than other men, only he is braver five minutes longer! But the highest heroism is not keeping your courage screwed up for that extra five minutes; there is a "moral heat" that distinguishes a spirit of red courage from the everyday gray courage which silently grapples with odds, and all the nine books already mentioned will contribute their calories in this diet of heroes. But there are others like "Livingstone, the Pathfinder," by Basil Mathews, with a blood curdling lion on the cover and its valiant hero inside the cover walking where no white man ever walked before. This same author has a splendid "Book of Missionary Heroes," the very thing for boys; another good collection is "Fifty Missionary Heroes Every Boy and Girl Should Know," by J. H. Johnson. There is that compelling career of "The Black-Bearded Barbarian" (by Marian Keith), the story of George Leslie Mackay of Formosa who besieged head-hunters in their own lair and lived through bombardments and perils galore. Surely you already know "Adrift on an Ice Pan," which is Wilfred T. Grenfell's own account of his experiences as a doctor in Labrador. Then above all, "The White Queen of Okoyong" (by W. P. Livingstone) that matchless story of Mary Slessor, the Scotch lassie almost too timid to cross the streets of Edinburgh-town but brave enough to penetrate the jungles of Savage Africa where by faith she subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness was made strong!

With bated breath we long for disarmament; and while we wait we recall Prof. James' statement: "We need to discover in the social realm the moral equivalent of war; something heroic that will speak to men as universally as war does, and yet will be as compatible with their spiritual selves as war has proved itself to be incompatible."

Surely this "moral equivalent of war" was discovered almost 2000 years ago when the Lord Christ sent men forth for the supreme conquest of human history. In just so far as Christian parents hate war and the things of war, let them nourish this new generation of boys and girls on a diet of heroes conspicuous for adventures unsurpassed in all the annals of exploits.

Our Own Folks

Mexican Baptists in Convention Assembled

By A. B. RUDD

In 1903 the Mexican Baptists organized here in Mexico City a National Mexican Convention. Annual meetings were held till 1912, when, because of the unsettled conditions of the country, a skip was made till 1919, since which time there has been no interruption. Monterey, Torreon and Mexico City were the fortunate cities for 1919, 1920 and 1921 respectively.

October 12-16 was a period not soon to be forgotten by Mexican Baptists as the date of the twelfth annual meeting of their Convention. Our church here in Mexico City counted itself honored in being the host of the one hundred or more delegates and visitors who from all parts of the Republic came up to study together the Kingdom interests. In this national convention we know no Northern Baptists or Southern Baptists. Churches and workers from the entire field are fused into one compact body. Nor are we so small a bunch as we once were: seventy-three churches, with some 4500 members, seventy-four native workers, sixty Sunday schools with some 3000 members, and with it all, a broadening vision, a united front and sixteen millions of Mexicans to be evangelized.

Among the outstanding features of the convention may be mentioned the following:

Promptness in the Dispatch of Business. Save a bit of dilly-dallying the first day—and what convention does not lose some of its time quibbling?—the business of the convention moved forward with marked ordiliness and promptness. There was much to be done, the work was important and the convention acted accordingly. The election of the new officers, which occupied last year nearly half a day, was pushed through at this session in about half an hour.

A Beautiful Spirit of Harmony. I am not sure that I have seen a finer spirit! In any convention I have attended during my many years of experience on the mission field. Our annual gatherings in the homeland, both North and South, would find it hard to surpass the beautiful spirit of harmony and co-operation which reigned from start to finish. There was no need—I am happy to say—for a conference on "Fundamentals." Mexican Baptists are sound to the core and have but scant patience with any trifling with the deep things of our faith.

Nationalization of the Mission Work in Mexico. There has been for years past—and rightly so—a growing desire for the Mexicans to have a larger hand in the administration of mission work on the field, and a committee of five, three Mexicans and two Americans, was appointed last year for the purpose of studying this question. Its recommendation at this session was that the convention authorize its board of missions to act in co-operation with the representatives of the Northern and Southern boards in the formation of the yearly budgets, the appointment of new workers, changes from one field to another, etc. This is an important step in the right direction, as it will not only enable our mission boards to avail themselves of the wise counsel of our experienced Mexican workers but will also contribute to the securing of more uniformity in methods over the entire field.

Evangelizing our Five Millions Indians. Enthusiasm reached its climax during the study of this subject. For a year past the convention has been supporting an intelligent, well-equipped Indian—the first full graduate of our seminary—as missionary among the Zapotecs, his own tribe. At this session, money was pledged for the continued support of this enterprise, the building of a chapel on his field, and the opening up of a new mission among another tribe—the Tarascos—at the beginning of the new year.

A Tarascan Indian who was present offered himself as missionary to his own people, and will take up the work early in January. Miss Sallie Hale, a consecrated self-supporting missionary, member of our church in Monterey, offered for this work among the Indians $1,000 (pesos) on condition that the convention would raise $3,000. At first the matter moved slowly, but at a later session, when all began to realize what it meant, the whole convention "took fire" and things were swept forward as by a mighty storm. It was good to be there and hear and feel it all!

This twelfth annual session of the Mexican National Convention has left a good taste in the mouths of Mexican Baptists and given them anew vision of the tasks ahead of them. The appointment of two trustees of our seminary to co-operate with the four named by our board of the homeland; the visit of the Rev. A. B. Deter, missionary of the Southern board to Brazil, and his message of Christian greeting from the large and growing body of Brazilian Baptists; the appointment of a messenger to the convention of American Baptists to be held next year in Rio Janeiro; the clear evangelistic note struck the two last nights of our meetings—all combined to make this, from every point of view, a memorable meeting.

Mexico City, October 28, 1921.

Northern Ohio Notes

By J. W. WEDDELL

The Baptists of Ohio are being given, under the auspices of the Board of Promotion and the department of religious education a series of "kingdom institutes" covering all the state. The purpose of the institutes, as arranged by secretaries F. G. Cressey and W. A. Holmes, has been to promote interest in missionary and religious education and to stimulate the churches in all their christian activities. It has been the honor and privilege of the church at Oberlin to entertain the institute for Northwestern Ohio, which has just adjourned. And it was fine! Our hearts flowed together as we studied, Bible and text-books in hand, the great calls of our present denominational situation, and a vote was passed at the close in appreciation of the program presented and in sympathy and co-operation with the State convention and the Northern Baptist Convention in the effort to bring to successful completion the one hundred million dollar drive for our denominational needs.

In this connection permit the writer to say that the Lorain Association, with which the most of the attendants of the institute were connected, has not withdrawn from the Northern Baptist Convention. There is a large difference between withholding support, which, in spite of earnest disuasion, a few churches have seen fit to do, as a protest against certain dangerous tendencies, and "withdrawing support," which would require a formal separation, a separation that, thank God, has never been made and, pray God, never will be made! Time will show that our churches and the rank and file of our members are with the general body in its noble efforts to carry the gospel into all the world and to strongly establish it in the hearts and lives of men at home and abroad.

This possibly is a farewell epistle from this part of the country, as these feet may, ere long, be led in other directions. Yet fond friendships abide. What would you think, my brethren, if when, as the years accumulate, you ask to be relieved from the active pastorate to engage in supply work elsewhere, to have your good people artlessly but quite sincerely say, "why not stay here and supply?" Did you ever? Well, the present incumbent is tarrying a bit—the time is short—till he finish the exposition of the entire Book, a sweet privilege he has had in more than one church. So, here or there, may we finish our course with joy!

Oberlin, Ohio.

Missouri Baptist General Association.

By W. E. DARROW.

The eighty-seventh session of the Missouri Baptist General Association was held in the meeting house of the First Church, Moberly, October 18-20, and preceded by the annual meeting of the Baptist Ministers' Conference on the day before. There was a large attendance of delegates and visitors, 1080 in all. There were splendid addresses by leaders of the Southern Baptist Convention, none better. There were splendid reports of missionary, educational, and philanthropic activities, showing marked advance in interest along these lines among Missouri Baptists. There were many additions to the churches of the State during the year and many of the churches have felt the power of spiritual renewal and blessing. Pastor E. V. Lamb of the First Church, Moberly, welcomed the association in a princely way, to which address of welcome Dr. R. B. Whiteside of St. Louis, gave appropriate response. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. L. M. Proctor of Independence, from Mark 5:19.

In the report of the executive board was a statement of the work projected and carried forward to success. There were 184 workers, including one general secretary, six field secretaries (three women), three state evangelists, one S. S. and B. Y. P. U. secretary, ninety-eight pastors, twenty-five Sunday school workers, forty-one associational evangelists and three special women workers. The only discouraging feature of the report was the disparity between the collections and disbursements in state missions. Balance Sept. 30, 1920, $6,516.13. Receipts, Oct. 1, 1920 to Sept. 30, 1921, $61,133.10. Total, $67,649.23. Administrative expense, $22,151.52. Sunday school and B. Y. P. U. expenses, $8,742.12. Enrollment work, $23,807.29. Co-operative work, $28,283.93. Excess of disbursements over receipts, $17,030.41. Including the balance in treasury Sept. 30, 1920, the excess is really $23,546.54. The following are the reasons, as reported: 1, the collapse in finances; 2, the increased appropriations—away ahead of former years; 3, the loading on to state missions the expense of everything. It was decided to lay out the work for the coming year on the basis of $100,000 for state missions, "so as to meet this deficit and keep the work up to, and above, the present proportions." Various economies in administration are projected. The general secretary will become superintendent of missions, the three mission districts of the state and headquarters for each will be discontinued, each district secretary being an evangelistic helper under the superintendent of missions. The work among the women will have a superintendent and two assistants.

Of special interest is the contemplated change of headquarters from Kansas City to a more central and a more congenial location. The organization of a pastoral exchange is projected. It was recommended that the board of the Ministers' Aid Society consider the propriety of turning over their work to the relief and annuity board of the Southern Baptist Convention. It was recommended also that two-fifths of our receipts for Christian education be set aside for definite aid to ministerial students, the same to be administered through the hands of the general secretary. The immediate building of a church structure in Columbia was strongly emphasized by Pastor T. W. Young and Hon. E. W. Stephens of Columbia, one that will accommodate the young people from all over the State who will attend. In Columbia is located the state university and Stephens College for women. The Baptist church has been recently sold to Stephens College for use in Miss Jessie Burrall's work there, an option on another site for the church having been secured. The officers of the association last year were continued. Bales Church, Kansas City, will entertain the association next year, Rev. L. M. Hale of St. Louis preaching the introductory sermon.

St. Louis

An enrollment and attendance campaign for the Sunday schools of the St. Louis Association is planned for the months of November and December, following largely the method of a year ago. Reports will be sent to Dr. S. E. Ewing each Monday morning by the enrollment superintendent of each Sunday school in the association. Before the succeeding Sunday the reports will be tabulated and reported for announcement to the school, thus adding interest to the campaign. It is hoped each Sunday school will arrange for a contest between its departments and classes for intensifying interest in greater Sunday school attendance and membership. The campaign last year boosted the average attendance of the schools nearly one thousand and much good ought to result from the present effort. The campaign is under the direction of the Sunday school and teacher training committee of the association, Rev. W. E. Darrow, president, and Dr. S. E. Ewing, secretary-treasurer.

This committee is projecting a training school for Sunday school workers, which will be held in the Third Church of our city the third week in January, next, Mr. J. C. Hockett, Jr., Director. Dr. W. H. Geistweit and his people will co-operate heartily for the success of the school and we look for the co-operation of all the other schools in our association. For the success of the training school the following committees have been arranged: registration, Miss Laura Lee Patrick of the Delmar Church; finance and entertainment, Dr. S. E. Ewing; publicity, Rev. L. R. Call of the Second Church; secretary of the school, C. J. Prince of the Third Church. Decision as to curriculum will be by the general committee.

On Monday, October 24, Brother W. B. Harris, veteran Sunday school worker, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday by a reception at his home, 5834 Ridge Ave., this city. Quite a number of choice friends and church workers attended the reception. It was our privilege to be among the number. Dr. W. G. Tyzzer, moderator, and Dr. S. E. Ewing, clerk, of the St. Louis Baptist Association, brought the greetings of the association to Brother and Sister Harris. Dr. Tyzzer offered prayer for God's continued favor upon them. Dr. Ewing told of his first acquaintance with Brother Harris and its influence in determining his own life and ministerial service, only one instance among many of the wide-reaching power for good of Brother Harris's life in our city. He was born in Wayne County, Indiana, and came to St. Louis in 1864. He was first identified with Sunday school work at 6th & Walnut Streets, later had charge of the Jefferson Avenue Mission, and still later took up the Sunday school work at Ella Avenue, this becoming in 1904 the West Park Baptist Church. Before the organization of the West Park Church he was an influential member of the Third Church, radiating sunshine to all with whom he came in contact. As a member of the West Park Church he is held in high esteem and lets his light shine. Resolutions congratulatory of the Brother's long life of usefulness were passed at the recent meeting of our association. May this young old couple be spared to us for many years to come. As suggested at the reception, it will take Brother and Sister Harris a long period in the eternity beyond to meet all who have been helped by their endeavor.

The work at the Delmar Church continues to prosper. Its Pastor, Rev. Lewis M. Hale, is in his sixth year of service. Seventy-three new members have been added the past Associational year, making the total membership 465. The Sunday school has an enrollment of 214, under John A. Bush as Superintendent. A. P. Brigham is Chairman of the Finance Committee. The total contributions of the Church last year were $26,368. In the last year three foreign missionaries were supported by this Church. Miss Laura Lee Patrick is assistant pastor.

Wisconsin News and Notes.

BY ROBERT W. SHAW.

Annual Meetings

This is the time of the year when many of the churches are having their annual meetings. Reports have come to the writer from several churches that have experienced unusual blessings.

The church at Janesville, with Rev. R. G. Pierson as pastor, has had an excellent year. Sixty-nine new members were received during the year, twenty-six of them coming by baptism. A total of over $17,700 was raised for all purposes, of which $7,688 was for benevolences. This is one of the churches that is making good use of the motion picture machine in connection with the evening service.

The church at Delavan, Rev. R. L. Kelley, pastor, has also had a great year. The amount raised for all purposes was above any other year of the church reaching over $9,000, of which $3,642 was for benevolence. During the year fifty-five members were received of whom thirty-five came by baptism. Pastor Kelley is beginning his fifth year of service with the church.

Milwaukee Doings

The Grace Baptist Church, with Rev. S. W. Phelps as pastor, is probably doing the best work of any church in our city at the present time. Pastor Phelps is on his fifth year. He has healed an old breach, and has slowly and patiently gathered about him a fine bunch of workers. The membership is growing. On November 4 and 6, the church had the pleasure of realizing a great dream. It dedicated its new pipe organ costing approximately $5,000. Beside this they have added other improvements to the extent of $1,000.

The Milwaukee Baptist City Union had its annual meeting on October 3, with the First Baptist Church. All the old officers were re-elected. The reports showed that about $3,000 had been expended last year. This was quite a showing as compared with what it had been in former years when the budget seldom exceeded $500. Work is being carried on in connection with the Poles and Negroes, and with the South Baptist Church. Dr. A. A. Hobson, the new pastor of the First Church was introduced, as was Miss Maimie Passolt and Miss Kathryn Garness, our two missionaries. Dr. A. LeGrand, an old First Church boy and now our superintendent of missions gave the principal address.

Pastor Robert W. Shaw, of the South Church, began his third year of service with the church the first of October. The church has made considerable progress in these two years. The Sunday Schools have increased over 100 per cent in attendance; a young people's organization has been started; and the goal of fifty new members for this calendar year has been achieved; twenty-eight have come by baptism. The new church plant will be begun next spring. It is expected that the Sunday school unit will be erected first, and our work in that important location be strengthened. Mr. Shaw was recently honored with an appreciation from the State of Kansas for distinguished voluntary service during the war. The church recently increased the minister's salary.

Wisconsin Leads

Many are the good things which Wisconsin Baptists enjoy. Under the leadership of Dr. D. W. Hulburt they have been willing to pioneer in the matter of denominational achievements and machinery. Dr. A. LeGrand is following in the path laid down by Dr. Hulburt. The action taken at the state convention at Beloit when Wisconsin Baptists came together is receiving commendation on every hand. Other states are beginning to ask how it was done. It can always be done if Baptists are willing to be led. They can never be driven. That is a characteristic of an orthodox Baptist. The good sense and sound judgement of Baptists can be depended upon to assert itself whenever there is a tendency of division. And what was done in Wisconsin can be done in every state in the Northern Baptist territory if it is earnestly desired on the part of Baptists of differing views and temperaments.

Our Retreats

For several years it has been the hope of some of the brethren that a series of ministerial retreats could be held. This year the dream is to come true. The retreats will be held during the week of December 5 to 10. They will be held at Barron, Appleton, Reedsburg, and Oconomowoc. Practically two days will be devoted to each place. There will be no set programs, but each session will take care of itself. Much emphasis will be given to prayer, and the stress will be laid upon evangelism. Drs. Stillwell and LeGrand will compose the team, and will be present at practically every session of the retreats.

New Plants

Several churches have remodeling projects under way. The church at Appleton will remodel its plant in the near future. Wyocena is just finishing up such a project and now has the desire to erect a community plant, and will likely do so. Wauwatosa has spent approximately ten thousand dollars on its plant and will have an up-to-date Sunday school equipment when they have finished. At Superior there is a move on that looks toward the union of the English and Swedish churches with an entire modern plant to house the church. Honey Creek will begin its new church next spring. They are now using their community house for worship purposes.

Some Notes From The Field

The church at Oconomowoc has extended a call to Rev. W. L. Harms, of Kansas City, Missouri. He has accepted the call and will begin his work with them the first of November.

Rev. J. Sherman Wallace has begun his work with the First Baptist Church, of Madison. He is greatly encouraged with the prospects of a great work with this important church at our State University town.

Principal L. P. Brown, of Wayland Academy, is laid aside with illness. Reports indicate that he is slowly on his way to health again.

Dr. A. A. Hobson, of the First Baptist Church, of Milwaukee, is getting a grip on things. He is demonstrating his powers of leadership in many ways. He recently spoke to the General Minister's Association on "Business Efficiency in the Church." It was a remarkable address. He suggests that some one should speak to commercial organizations on "Church Efficiency in Business."

Rev. L. E. Speegle, of Portage, has resigned in order to give time to a growing business. He will continue his oversight of the church, however.

Since the state convention a number of pastors have indicated their willingness to put on the New World Movement Program. Wisconsin Baptists are showing the other states how to do it.

The church at Augusta, Paul MacKinney, pastor, has received a number of members into its fellowship as a result of the union evangelistical services held in September.

Dr. D. W. Hulburt gave four addresses to the ministers of Indiana at the state convention on "The Kind of Ministers Needed in Wisconsin." There are a number of vacant fields in this state, but denominational co-operation and hard work are two essentials expected of those who are looking this way.

Philadelphia Letter.

ARTHUR C. BALDWIN

We have just celebrated the 6000th delivery of the famous lecture, "Acres of Diamonds" by Russell H. Conwell. In honor of the occasion Grace Temple was crowded. More than 3000 people were present. The great choir gallery was filled with people who are prominent throughout the city. William Jennings Bryan was present and gave a warm address of appreciation afterwards. This lecture was given for the first time more than sixty years ago. How many times a week it has been given since then is easy to calculate. Dr. Conwell, now in his seventy-ninth year, spoke with a fire and enthusiasm that did not indicate age. He was presented with $1000 afterwards. This will be devoted as usual to the needs of students.

A formal offer of Temple University to the city has been made by Dr. Conwell. He suggests that it be renamed City College and that other school buildings of the city be used in addition to the equipment already owned. It is not known what action will be taken. I have my fears, however, that on account of financial needs, the Board of Education will decline the gift.

Among the church items, I note that the New Berean Church has laid the corner stone of its new building. The Mount Vernon Baptist Church of Manayunk has installed its new pastor, Rev. Edwin S. Fry. The October rally of the Woman's Missionary Society of Philadelphia was held in the Bethlehem Baptist Church on October 13. The Baptist Social Union will welcome President Rush Rhees as its guest and speaker on November 3. The Social Union also hopes to be able to give a reception to Lloyd George. It has gotten an invitation from Mayor Moore to back its own. If New York Baptists will just "lay off" for a little we will stage a reception here that will be a credit to Baptists everywhere.

The annual banquet of Baptist students under the auspices of Rev. Fred B. Igler, Baptist student pastor at Penn and the Baptist Student Committee was held in the Chestnut Street Baptist Church on October 24. There were present 180 students and other guests, representing twenty-nine states, China and Latvia, and thirty-two college institutions either in the past or at present. Dr. Gilbert N. Brink of the Publication Society and Dr. John M. Moore, Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn, were the speakers. It was a great evening for Baptist young people.

"The Advantages of Long Pastorates" was ably discussed before our conference by Dr. Judson Conklin, long time pastor in Trenton. As he presented these advantages, if others were like your correspondent, they deeply resolved to remain for the next fifty years right where they were. But, there are always buts, on reflection one must say that it is not every church that will bear with one man for fifty years or half that time. Nor will every pastor endure so long a time of inspection. Before we reproach ourselves, we of the shorter periods, we can remember that a number of elements, not all within the control of the pastor, enter into these long ministries. Some men will do better work for the kingdom in the briefer period of ten years, and for the average man, I think that is quite enough. Some churches have suffered irreparable harm because their ministers stayed too long.

And yet in this restless, grasshopper period, a long pastorate challenges admiration. It suggests stability, patience, growth, reserves, and long suffering, much of it. Philadelphia Baptists have thirteen pastorates which have passed the fifteen year mark. That of Dr. J. B. G. Pidge is easily first with a record of forty-two years. Dr. Clarence H. Woolston is an honorable second with thirty-four years to his credit. The work of such men glorifies our ministry.

Oct. 27, 1921.

"Every Land" Will Continue.

BY HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY

"Every Land" will continue! This announcement will bring joy to countless mothers who are looking for a good missionary magazine for their children, and to children who subscribed for the old Every Land and have not yet received their full twelve months of magazines. With the crash of the Interchurch, Every Land went down. The story of its rebirth is a triumph of Christian faith and optimism. The women simply would not let it die. Their confidence has been justified, and the new Every Land starts on its way. It is backed by all the women's boards, of every denomination. The Presbyterians have given up their own publication and made this the official missionary magazine. The Presbyterians and Methodists each start off with a guarantee of 5,000 subscribers. Now it is up to the Baptists to do as well.

The Christmas number is to appear in the middle of December, in ample time for Christmas. "There will be thirty-two pages, and strong cover in color. There will be fine half-tone pictures, with stories of heroes and adventures in home and foreign missions, and the things you ought to know about world friendship. There will be a Finding-Out Club and contests under Mrs. Cronk. Miss Applegarth is writing a great Christmas story. There will be a serial running through the year by Evelyn Worthley Sites, author of "Mook." It is called "Jade Flower," and is a true and beautifully illustrated story of China. There will be other stories and a delightful little Book-shop Corner. There will be a corner for the very little children, but we aim to reach the boys and girls from ten to fifteen. They are reading, but what ideas are they getting of the people of other countries?

Miss Gulliver, author of "The Friendship of Nations," is the associate editor. She has travelled widely and has studied carefully the geography of the world. We hope she will give us, through the pages of the magazine, Miss Gulliver's Travels, which will be quite different from the old, old book that some of us have read. Miss Gulliver was the former editor of The World Family.

Internationalism must be taught. Every Land will attempt to do this in an attractive way. Public schools, as well as Sunday schools, will welcome this publication as supplementary reading.

The best news of all is that our own Mrs. Henry W. Peabody will be the directing spirit of the enterprise. She was the founder of Every Land. Under her personal supervision the magazine reached a circulation of 13,000, more than it has ever had since. Of course it could not pay at the price at which it was offered, and after carrying the burden herself, personally, for years, she turned it over to the Missionary Educational Movement. Now, with the strong backing of these boards, not only is the missionary character of the magazine assured, but its finances are secured.

Now go to work. Get up your clubs. If you can secure five subscriptions you can get it for $1.00 each. See to it that it is taken in your Sunday school, and in every way put our denomination squarely behind this wonderful enterprise. The boys and girls of today will be the church of tomorrow, and we, today, are deciding what the quality of that church will be.

Send subscriptions to Miss M. H. Leavis, West Medford, Mass.

Church News by States

Atlantic Coast

VERMONT

FIRST CHURCH, BURLINGTON, Rev. William Frederick Wilson, pastor, is opening up aggressively and encouragingly. Pastor Wilson came back from his vacation better and stronger than for many years and is taking hold of the work enthusiastically. The Bible School under the superintendency of Harry L. Ford, is increasing in numbers and interest. Two classes have been organized for the college students; one for young men taught by Professor Woodward, and the other for young women taught by Mrs. W. A. Davison. Pastor Wilson is teacher of the men's Bible class which had its monthly sociable last Friday evening with about seventy-five men present. Mr. Fred G. Safford is president of this organized class.

THE MANY FRIENDS of the Rev. J. C. Mitchell, pastor at Tunbridge and North Tunbridge, will regret to learn of the affliction and loss that has come to him through the removal of his dear companion. Mrs. Mitchell "went home" October 19th, and her body was taken to her former home at Saugerties, N. Y. Pastor Mitchell has the sympathy of all who know him.

WALLINGFORD CHURCH has called to its pastorate Rev. Dirk van der Voet of Hudson, N. H., and he is already at work on that field with all the people rallying to his support. The church and several personal friends are installing a new furnace in the parsonage. They are also putting in a bathroom and electric light fixtures and renovating and repairing the property throughout so that it will be modern and as good as new.

REV. THOMAS ADAMS has closed his work at Huntington and removed to West Haven where he has already begun his work as pastor.

REV. H. L. HOWARD, pastor of the Ilsley Memorial Baptist Church, Middlebury, is greatly encouraged in his work and recently has organized a men's Bible class which is now having a friendly contest with the men's class of the Bristol Church. This class is taught by the pastor, Rev. J. J. Fowler.

Woodstock Annual Association Meeting

The 138th annual meeting of the Woodstock Baptist Association was held at North Springfield, Vt., on Friday, October 14, 1921. The session was opened at 9:00

A.M., and lasted throughout the day and evening.

Rev. W. B. Chase of Ludlow was chosen moderator, and Rev. E. W. Johnson of East Wallingford was elected clerk.

The annual sermon was preached by Rev. G. E. Congdon, of Grafton, from the text, "Not Mine to Give," Mark 10:40, using the idea that our nearness to God in the kingdom is dependent upon certain things within ourselves, rather than being an arbitrary gift of God.

The devotional services were led by Rev. G. E. Congdon in the morning, Rev. R. N. Allen, of Cavendish in the afternoon, and Rev. John M. Maxwell in the evening.

Speakers of the day were as follows:

Rev. W. A. Davison, state secretary, "The Hope and the Outlook"; Rev. J. E. Norcross, of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, on the subject, "The Hope of the World is America."

Miss Isabel Crawford, worker among the American Indians, "Work Among the Indians"; Rev. J. F. Ingram, Burma, "Pioneering Among the Kachins" (illustrated lecture).

A short conference was held by the pastors on plans for the new year, when various campaigns were discussed.

The women's societies were represented by Miss A. A. Brigham, Bennington, for the Foreign Society; and Mrs. J. A. Greenwood, of Chester, for the Home Society. Miss Bertha Field and Miss Edith Preston, associational directors for the two societies were also present and reported their work of the year.

All present agreed that the association was the best in a long time, and that the inspiration obtained ought to produce large results in the year to come.

Every session began and closed on time, which in itself is noteworthy.

E. W. JOHNSON, Clerk.

CONNECTICUT

MACEDONIA CHURCH, Ansonia, held a memorial service for the late pastor, Rev. G. E. Hughes, on Sunday afternoon, October 23, Rev. J. B. Pharr, New Haven; Rev. I. W. Reed, Waterbury; Rev. Walter Gay, Bridgeport, officiating. Rev. A. B. Coats, D. D., secretary, represented the Connecticut Baptist Convention.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAM for the deepening of spiritual life and arousing of the church to measure up to her opportunity, was presented in the Stafford Church, October 25, Rev. F. W. Tholen, pastor. The speakers were: Rev. A. B. Coats, D. D., Rev. H. B. Sloat, Rev. E. E. Gates, all of Hartford, and Rev. C. A. Merrill, Noank. Several solos were rendered by Mrs. F. A. Manderson, Stafford, and Rev. W. V. Allen, West Willington, the latter having charge of the musical program.

Drs. Puffer and Rhees, pastors of Unitarian and Congregational churches, took part in the program. The church served an excellent supper.

GRAND AVENUE, New Haven, celebrated the golden jubilee on October 23, 24. Rev. P. L. Cosman is pastor. Impressive services marked the completion of fifty years of history. Only two of the original charter members are living today, Mrs. John McGregor, Stonington, and Miss Nancy Porter, New Haven. It is interesting to note that this church has given four men to the ministry: Rev. H. M. Thompson, D. D., now of Stonington; Rev. F. I. Luddington; Rev. Herbert J. Lane, and Rev. Louis J. Barnberg. Four young women from this church became queens in Baptist parsonages: Mrs. Henry M. Thompson; Mrs. S. W. Deizell; Mrs. L. J. Bamberg; Mrs. T. E. Busfield. The church has had twelve pastors: Revs. S. M. Whiting, A. H. Ball, T. E. Busfield, P. S. Evans, E. C. Sage, E. W. Stone, C. G. Smith, E. M. Sherwood, Sanford Fleming, D. S. Robinson, R. C. Lemon, and the present pastor who has been doing good work for more than two years. Many congratulatory messages were received from former pastors and were read at the exercises. Interesting reminiscences of the early years of the church were given by Rev. Dryden W. Phelps, D. D., and Sylvanus C. Stevens. Those making addresses during the celebrations were: Rev. E. E. Gates and Dr. A. B. Coats, Hartford; Mrs. H. M. Thompson, Stonington, and Mrs. Sheffield, New Haven; Rev. R. Maplesden, Suffield; Rev. M. R. Roshay, New Haven; the pastor, and Nelson A. Beebe, Senior Deacon. The outlook for the church under Mr. Cosman's leadership is encouraging.

REV. MYRON D. FULLER, for four years the successful pastor of the Jewett City

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL
 Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
 ESTABLISHED 1858
 THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

Beware of Contagious Diseases
THOMAS COMMUNION SERVICE
 INDIVIDUAL
 SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES
 Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer.
 Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

WANT ADS
 You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

Successful, interesting orthodox Chicago pastor, now in business, just closing pastorate of three and a half years, is open for work with a church that cannot afford resident pastor. Highest references. Address C. P. care of THE BAPTIST.

Wanted, copy each of the Annals of the Northern Baptist Convention, 1916 to 1921. Address Carelton College Library, Northfield, Minnesota.

For $2.00 we will send you a Fountain Pen, first-class self-filling, Fountain Pen and we will send The Expositor to your pastor 4 months as your Christmas Gift. F. M. Barton 701 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

132 page Homiletic Magazine sent to any pastor who will agree to examine same, return it if not pleased, or send $1.00 for 4 months subscription. The Expositor, 701 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

Greatly needed — thoroughly competent, trustworthy physician, active christian, opportune opening—wonderful country and climate—near good cities—western Idaho.

Baptist Church, closes his labors with the church October 31. Mr. Fuller had a successful pastorate and leaves the church united and the Bible school organized for efficient work.

REV. S. PARKES CADMAN, Brooklyn, New York, lectured in Calvary Baptist Church, New Haven, Monday evening, October 24. His subject was: "My Impressions of Europe," as gained from two recent trips on the Continent. Dr. Cadman was at his best and greatly delighted the large congregation present.

THE BRIDGEPORT BAPTIST COUNCIL is doing things. On Wednesday evening, October 26, 500 Baptists sat down to supper in the dining room of the First Church. Rev. Donald B. MacQueen, pastor. Post prandial exercises were held in the church auditorium. The object being to foster fellowship, stimulate faith and visualize tasks. The speakers were: Rev. James McGee, New Haven; Prof. Antonio Mongano, New York; Rev. A. B. Coats, Hartford. Music was furnished by the orchestra from the Italian Church and a male chorus of eighteen voices, selected from the Baptist churches of the city. Bridgeport Baptists are boosting for a bigger, better and busier brand of Baptists.

MICHIGAN

FIRST CHURCH, ADRIAN, Thomas J. Hopkins, pastor, subscribed on a recent Sunday morning $7,550, for a new roof and redecorating the interior of the whole church. The amount has since reached the figure of nearly $9,000. It is hoped to round out an even $10,000, though the original intention was to raise $6,000. The giving was so generous and so general, that that amount was over-subscribed and now more will be attempted in the way of repairs. The pastor reports that the spirit of that giving service on the Sunday when the $7,550 was subscribed, was as much like a revival meeting as could be. The church is in good condition for another year of good work. The Bible School has had its rally day service; the whole church has enjoyed a home-coming social and supper; the three young people's societies have had a union promotion meeting, and all departments are full and eager for the work. One of the best brotherhoods in Michigan will begin its regular meetings again the 18th of November, and will continue till warm weather. A big program will be followed.

NEW JERSEY

Roseville Jubilee

October 23 Roseville Baptist Church of Newark closed a jubilee celebration covering eight days from Sunday, to Sunday. The preachers on these two great days were the Rev. F. A. Divine, Prof. Edward Emmett of the Biblical Seminary, New York City, and Rev. H. Lawford Nicholls, pastor of the church.

Chaplain Warren P. Coon, U. S. A. and Professor Albert Davis were the chief speakers at the banquet of the Men's Welfare League on Monday. The presentation of a handbag was made to Mr. James Taylor together with a roving commission to boost Welfare Leagues on his leaving for Akron, Ohio.

On Tuesday Rev. Albert Foster of Albany, who had served Roseville for a quarter of a century, graced the "Church Home Night" by his presence and an address of great insight and spirit.

Letters were read from Dr. and Mrs. Steelman now serving on the faculty of the "Union Theological Seminary" of Porto Rico. At their request both were voted in by the church as honorary members. Dr. Steelman was pastor of Roseville as a young man for five years before Dr. Foster and is greatly beloved for his works sake. Indeed Roseville keeps him up to time by a gift watch which he carries always.

A letter was received from President George E. Horr of Newton Theological Seminary who was licensed to preach by Roseville during the pastorate of his revered father who was the first minister of the church.

The theme of Wednesday's meeting was "Baptists in World Relations," the speakers being Dr. Anna Daghering of Nellore, B. India, and President Frank L. Anderson of the new "International Seminary," East Orange, N. J. Miss Nakagi San of Osaka, Japan, was announced but prevented from being present.

Thursday was marked by a banquet and gathering of the B. Y. P. U. guests reporting from neighboring churches. Addresses were made by Matt Hogan "himself" (Rev. C. A. McAlpine) in his own inimitable style of teaching and Rev. James Monk, of Bloomfield, a college friend of the pastor.

The Friday meeting dealt with "The Church in Relation to the State and the Nation" and was presided over by Mr. Archibald, mayor of the city of Newark and a Presbyterian. The fact was gratefully recognized that the Presbyterians of Roseville opened their church home to the infant Baptist Bible school when it was turned on the street from the third story of the building it occupied in its beginnings, thus nursing the seed from which the church has grown.

The speaker of the evening was the Hon. William N. Runyan, ex-governor of the state of New Jersey, well known as a Baptist statesman and orator. His message climaxed in an evangelistic note that will not soon be forgotten by those who were there. The music of the evening was provided by the splendid "Masonic Male Choir" of fifty voices under the direction of Thurston Noe, organist, of Wannamakers.

Miss Anne Jago the Canadian contralto was also heard on the last Sunday evening.

The jubilee spirit was breathed through all the celebration, provoked by the transparent joy of giving. Under the leadership of Dr. Divine the first financial objective was lifted from Three Thousand Dollars to Ten Thousand and then by common consent on the first morning of the Jubilee was advanced to Fifteen Thousand which has since been exceeded. The amount underwritten to be paid within three years.

It ought to be added that the post vacation payments on the "World Movement" pledges made it possible in one month without any special appeal, for the treasurer to pay $800 into headquarters. This amount approximating the entire contributions of the church for a whole year to benevolences, before the world vision came to Roseville. Our church feels most gladly, that the Spirit of Jesus still leads on.

HARRY HOUSAL, Church Clerk.

RIDGEWOOD, EMMANUEL. Pastor, Dr. Thomas H. Sprague. The pastor is bringing to a close a series of Thursday evening discussions using the text book "The Kingdom and the Nations" as their basis. A series of Sunday evening messages concluded on last Sunday was on "Business and Religion," dealing with the themes of Imagination, Will-Power, Brotherhood and Service. Oct. 17 marked the first anniversary of the present pastorate. On a recent Sunday a tablet was erected in the church auditorium in memory of Jesse Eddy Douglas one of the young men of the church who lost his life in the world war.

WORK AT THE FIRST CHURCH, Decatur, is prospering greatly. Large Sunday night audiences. A great chorus of forty voices, with a deepening spiritual interest characterize the services. The pastor with the aid of the young people have put on a Bible reading course which is reaching nearly every home in the church and congregation. Dr. Marsh is loaned by his church for a two weeks' meeting with the Harvard Park Church in Springfield.

PENNSYLVANIA

WHEN SECRETARY FRANKLIN'S SUGGESTION to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" was called to the attention of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Wilkensburg Baptist Church they responded with enthusiasm to the opportunity. A letter outlining the need, the articles desired and appointing Sunday, October 23, as Ingathering Sunday was sent to every home in the membership of the church. The Bible School classes were asked to make a contribution as a class of either some useful articles or of cash. Fifteen minutes was set apart in the Sunday school program for the calling of the roll. Every class had entered heartily into the plan to send Christmas cheer to the Baptists of Europe. The volume of enthusiasm was amazing. New goods and articles to the value of $175 and cash contributions of $65, together with over fifty packages of useful used clothing were contributed. Christmas carols were softly rendered by the organist as the contributions were being brought forward.

THE 14TH ANNUAL MEETING of the Pennsylvania Baptist General Convention will be held in Franklin October 17-20, 1921. The sessions will be held in the spacious edifice of the First Church, whose pastor is Robert M. Green, D. D. Lodging and breakfast will be accorded to all delegates presenting properly certified credentials. A charge of 75c for dinner and 60c for supper will be made. Copies of the program have been mailed to all the churches in the state. With the programs will be found the necessary credentials. If additional blanks are needed, write, enclosing 2c stamp for reply to C. A. Soars, D. D., Executive Secretary, 1701 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa. or the Rev. Chas. A. Walker, Recording Secretary, 314 W. Union St., West Chester. Don't forget your credentials.

CHAS. A. WALKER, Recording Secy.

Mississippi Valley

SOUTH DAKOTA

REV. R. W. VAN ANDA who took up the work with the Baptist Church at Center-ville about July 1 is having increasing congregations. He is especially getting the young people interested. There has been a B. Y. P. U. organized. It has thirty-three members. Seven young people have recently professed conversion. A young people's choir for Sunday evening services is organized. Attendance of prayer meetings has materially increased. The Sunday evening services are evangelistic and drawing audiences nearly to the capacity of the house.

MITCHELL, WHITE TEMPLE.—The second annual spiritual life conference, held Oct. 16-23, was a pronounced success. This Bible conference has become widely known and has set before the churches an illustration of how to meet a growing demand on the part of the people of God for a deeper study of the Scriptures. The conference was under the direction of Rev. Walter Ingram, and was a part of the observance incident to the pastor's entrance upon the fifth year of his ministry in this church. The speakers included Mrs. G. W. Mingus, Sioux Falls; Rev. R. B. Holden, Badger (a Congregationalist); Dr. C. S. Bobb, Mitchell (Methodist); J. P. Parrott, Spencer; R. Burn, Mitchell; W. H. Bayles, Huron; and Dr. E. V. Pierce, Brookings, who spoke at each session. In the afternoons Dr. Pierce gave a series of studies in Colossians and each evening dealt with vital Bible themes. Each evening at the supper hour Mrs. Mingus led an appreciative class in the study of the Home Mission book "From Survey to Service."

NORTH DAKOTA

LEHR: The new church building was dedicated the second Sunday in October. The church belongs to the North Dakota German Conference.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Port Huron is without a pastor. Communications should be addressed to Miss Jennie D. Dalrymple, 625 Ontario St.

REV. P. S. HEALD, 2102 Cass St., Joliet, Ill., who has served as pastor for ten year in Illinois is available as pulpit supply or other service of that nature.

NEW LEIPZIG: Pastor G. Friegang has been compelled to move to Oregon on account of the condition of Mrs. Friegang's health.

NORTH DAKOTA Baptists are to make a special effort during the month of November to collect on all New World Movement pledges. The state has set its goal as $60,000 paid on New World Movement pledges during the present year.

KANSAS

REV. J. H. BRADBURY has just opened his work at First Church, Ellsworth. He has recently sent a list of subscribers to THE BAPTIST numbering more than ten per cent of the membership.

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

DR. E. L. KRUMREIG is now on his third year at Bethel Church, Denver. He began his pastorate with this church Sept. 1, 1919. During the two years he has been with the church 204 members have been received. A piano purchased for the primary department of the Sunday school, one-third of the mortgage paid off and some improvements made upon the interior of the building. The Sunday school is growing and the B. Y. P. U. is one of the best in the city. Bethel B. Y. P. U. took the banner of the Denver City B. Y. P. Union two years ago shortly after Dr. Krumreig became pastor and has held it ever since. At the last rally in Oct. held with the Beth Eden Church, Bethel B. Y. P. U. had all of its members, officers and pastor present which gave them a percentage of 110, and they took the banner with them for the seventh time.

AT THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN ASSOCIATION held in Ault, Colo., Sept. 20-22, the church reported a total membership of 669. There had been added during the Association year, 82 members—44 by baptism, 23 by letter, 11 by relation, 4 by restoration. There had been 7 deaths, 17 dismissed by letter. Of the 44 added by baptism, 23 only were from the Sunday school, showing that many adults outside of the church family had been reached. There was $4,751.91 raised for the current expenses of the church, and $9,108.48 was paid to the New World Movement and other benevolences. Rev. A. W. Atkinson, pastor of the church preached the annual sermon of the State Convention held in Canon City, Oct. 17-20, 1921.

Pacific Coast

WESTERN WASHINGTON

COSMOPOLITAN MISSION, SEATTLE: Miss Fannie I. Allen and Miss Laura Hill recently closed their work, which they have conducted so efficiently in this Mission for the past few years. Miss Allen goes to be with her sister, Mrs. J. W. Beaven, in Rochester, Minn. Miss Hill is going with her sister to California. Miss Dorothy Coye, of Tacoma, succeeds Miss Allen and Miss Louise Hunderup of Portland is in charge of the Kindergarten work.

REV. E. F. HAMBY, recently pastor at South Tacoma, has become pastor at Winlock and opened his work there on October 13th.

REV. PAUL GATES, formerly a missionary to Japan, has been secured to have charge of the Men and Boys' Work, also Industrial and Educational Work in the Japanese Mission in Seattle.

REV. D. M. McPHAIL of Bellingham assisted Pastor Earl Cochran at Concrete in a two weeks' series of meetings.

FIRST SWEDISH BAPTIST CHURCH, Bellingham, held special meetings conducted by Rev. Axel S. Wall.

EDMONDS: Rev. J. A. Banton and wife, of Seattle, assisted Pastor Thomas Howland in special meetings beginning October 3rd.

BURLINGTON: Rev. J. O. Bovee, as Pastor at Large, and Mrs. Bovee held special meetings on this field and had a very good response.

FIRST CHURCH, TACOMA, Dr. C. O. Johnson, pastor: The Sunday services which are now being held in the Tacoma Theatre are proving a marked success. Congregations are large and conversions occur weekly. The Sunday school is growing rapidly. A young woman's class has been organized and an adjoining theater has been secured free of charge where it will meet. Plans have been formed for three large auto-busses to gather the children in outlying sections to transport them to and from the Sunday school and morning service.

Puget Sound Association

Puget Sound Association met with the Central Baptist Church, Olympia, October 24 and 25. The attendance was good, nearly all the churches being represented by delegates and the reports from the churches were very encouraging.

Four new pastors who have come into the association during the year were introduced: Rev. D. W. Thurston, South Tacoma; Rev. G. S. Maness, Sumner; Rev. A. B. Baird, Elma and Rev. G. M. Lehigh, Central Church, Olympia.

Rev. W. H. Mumper, of Aberdeen, was moderator. The annual sermon was preached by Rev. A. J. Jacobson, pastor of the Tabernacle Church, Olympia, and the closing sermon by Dr. C. O. Johnson, of Tacoma.

Missionary addresses were delivered by Rev. Henry Topping, of Japan; Rev. F. P. Manley, of Nellore, South India; Miss Anna V. Johnson, of the Philippine Islands and Miss Mattson of the Kodiak Orphanage, Alaska.

Other addresses were given by Dr. G. M. Lehigh, of Olympia; Dr. C. M. Hill of Berkeley, Calif.; Dr. J. F. Watson and Mrs. Frieda C. Davidson, of Seattle.

Conferences were held on "Women's Work," led by Mrs. M. D. Perry, associational secretary; "The Church's Standing and Community Service" led by Rev. F. W. Wightman; "Religious Education," led by Rev. T. H. Hagen, Director; and "The Denominational Program," led by Dr. G. F. Holt.

One of the delightful features was a banquet commemorating the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Puget Sound Association.

The association will hold its next session with the Baptist church of South Tacoma. Officers elected for the ensuing year were moderator, Rev. W. P. Osgood, Puyallup; vice-moderator, Rev. A. J. Jacobson, Olympia; clerk and treasurer, Rev. Addison Self, Shelton; other members of the executive committee, Dr. G. M. Lehigh, Olympia, and Mrs. M. D. Perry and Dr. C. O. Johnson, of Tacoma.

Seattle Association

Seattle Baptist Association met with the First Baptist Church of Seattle, October 26 and 27. Rev. Elbert H. Hicks, was moderator. The reports from the churches were hopeful and showed an excellent year's work. Two new pastors have come into the association during the year, Rev. C. A. Nethery, of Kent and S. L. Brown, of Port Townsend. The annual sermon was preached by Dr. W. E. Henry, of Everett; also a sermon by Dr. Emil Friberg, pastor of the First Swedish Baptist Church of Seattle.

One evening the Mount Zion Church choir led a praise service and the other evening the choir of the Fremont Baptist Church rendered a similar service.

A conference on "Women's Work" was held. Mrs. J. H. Burch, associational secretary, presided. All departments of their work were presented in an interesting manner in short addresses by different women representing different lines of work.

The following missionary workers gave short, interesting talks: Miss Georgia Newberry, who has been assisting for the past nine months in the Japanese Mission and who sails November 10 to take up missionary work in Japan; Miss Mattson, who sailed from Seattle on Oct. 28 to resume her work in the Kodiak Orphanage, Alaska; Miss Edna G. Shoemaker, on furlough from her work in Huchow, China; Miss Alice Snape, worker in the Chinese Mission in Seattle and Miss Louise Hunderup, kindergarten worker in the Cosmopolitan Mission, Seattle.

Other missionary addresses were given by Rev. Henry Topping, of Japan and Rev. F. P. Manley, of Nellore, South India.

Much of the time was given to conferences and discussions. The conference on evangelism was led by Rev. F. B. Matthews; conference on "Church's Standing and Community Service," led by Rev. Charles L. Maxfield; conference on "Educational Work" led jointly by Rev. T. H. Hagen on "Religious Education" in the church and Rev. F. B. Matthews on "Religious Education in Secular Schools"; and a conference on "Denominational Program" led by Dr. J. F. Watson.

Addresses were given by Rev. F. W. Carstens, of Seattle; Rev. W. H. Eaton, of Bremerton; Dr. Chas. A. Cook, of Seattle, and Dr. C. M. Hill, of Berkeley, Calif.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: moderator, Rev. E. H. Hicks, Seattle; vice-moderator, Rev. W. H. Eaton, Bremerton; clerk and treasurer, Rev. A. H. Nickell, Seattle.

The place of next meeting will be the Bethany Church, Seattle; preacher of the annual sermon, Rev. F. G. West, Seattle.

The West Coast Relief Ship

All classes of people, organizations for public welfare, and especially The Boy Scouts, must have felt a personal interest in the "Esther Dollar" when she put into port at San Pedro, California, for the latter had spent one day in gathering up the supplies that the people of their town had donated to send to the needy people of the Near East, which were to go to their destination by this big ship. Nine-unique sign of the dollar mark on her funnels, the company which operates this line of ships is not wholly interested in the dollar, for the cargo is to be carried at reduced rates. From San Pedro, the vessel proceeded to San Francisco, and from there on to other northern ports, among them being Seattle and Vancouver. From all of these points she will take on more cargo for the relief of the people of the Near East. Her total cargo for the relief of the needy is about 6,000 tons, and hundred tons of food stuffs, clothing, etc., were taken on at the Port of San Pedro, among the donations being a carload of flour from Idaho. This had been shipped in to the port by rail.

THE "ESTHER DOLLAR" LOADING FOR THE NEAR EAST

Though the Esther Dollar bears the her final destination is to be Constantinople.

The pastor of the Baptist church in the port of San Pedro had charge of the collection of clothing and miscellaneous material, of which there was fifty tons.

Our Book Shelf

BOOKS FOR CHILDREN AND YOUNG PEOPLE

The following books for children and young people have recently been placed on the shelves of the Baptist by the publishers named:

DODD, MEAD & Co., 4th Ave. and 30th Street, New York:

Stories from French History, by Eleanor C. Price:

Price not given. The book is beautifully bound in light gray, with excellent half-tone and color plates; and the story is full of human interest.

Famous French Fairy Tales, by Barbara Douglas:

Binding, light gray; beautiful colored plates. Here are Cinderella, Sleeping Beauty, Little Red Riding Hood, Puss in Boots, Diamonds and Toads and others, told as they have been told in France for generations.

Paul and Rhoda, by Fanny Kilbourne:

Is a high-school story, full of the interest and atmosphere, tracing the life of these two students through to graduation. Of course they were lovers, of a clean and genuine sort.

A Princeton Boy Under the King, by Paul G. Tomlinson:

Is a story of Princeton life in pre-Revolution days, with a student for the hero. Binding, yellow with black decoration; crayon illustrations and an interesting picture of those times.

W. A. WILDE & Co., Boston:

Hiking Westward, by Roger W. Conant: Is developed from the actual experience of two boys who went west to make a home for their mothers. It is full of the flavor of pioneer life.

The Young Wireless Operator as a Fire Patrol, by Lewis E. Theiss:

Takes the reader to the woods and mountains and has enough of adventure to make it catch and hold interest.

From Tenderfoot to Golden Eaglet, by Amy E. Blanchard:

Is a breezy Girl Scout story.

Noel and the Little People of the Woods, by Nellie M. Pairpoint:

Is a live Wonderland story, beautiful in buff with delicate color decoration.

GEO. H. DORAN Co., New York:

Francis Rolt-Wheeler has two in a "round the world series":

"Plotting in Pirate Seas" and "Hunting Hidden Treasure in the Andes."

You get the aroma from the title: geography, adventure, peril and escape, and all sorts of lurid experience.

MOTION PICTURE USERS

Churches, Institutions

and other non-theatrical users, contemplating the purchase of motion picture machines and films, should obtain a booklet of valuable information which is supplied without cost by:

The Associated Manufacturers of Safety Standard & Films Projectors Suite 1408, 440 Fourth Ave. New York City

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
ROCHE'S EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
W. EDWARDS & SON E. FOUGERA & CO.
London, England 90-92 Beekman St. N.Y.

Read THE passion for Life ToDAY
HOCKING'S GREAT NOVEL
This Girl is a Wonder

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00 and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write today. Isabelle Inez, 43 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

PELOUBET'S Select Notes
The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.
Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1922
Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered
W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 ROYALTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS
Madison Terminal Building, Chicago

Missionary Stories for Little Folks.

First (primary) and second (junior) series, by Margaret T. Applegarth; George H. Doran Company.

It requires a special gift to combine entertainment and instruction in talks to children. Even when one possesses that gift the selection or invention of a message adapted to their minds and taste is another task for which the average child-talker is not especially fitted. It is to help the latter these volumes are offered. If the speaker has the rare gift for addressing children entertainingly these volumes will greatly aid in finding fresh and instructive messages. A vein of ethics and religion runs through them. Nature, society, travels, politics, home, history, biography, religion are some of the contributors to these "over one hundred 'Stories'" and all are arranged and presented in a manner to engage the interest, entertain and instruct children and youth.

FOR MATURE THINKERS

A Defence of Philosophic Doubt, by the Rt. Hon. Arthur James Balfour; George H. Doran Company; 355 pages, $5.00 net.

750 BIBLE & GOSPEL STUDIES
Brief Complete Outlines of Sermons, Talks, Studies for Christians, Students, Teachers, Preachers. Covering Old and New Testaments. Ready Help for Leading Meetings. Many Important Questions Answered. Apt References and Short Spiritual Explanations. All Subjects Fully Covered. Each Pocket Size, 128 pages. Cloth, 25c. Morocco 35c, postpaid. Stamps Taken. AGENTS WANTED.
GEO. W. NOBLE, Menon Building, Chicago, Ill.

OXFORD TEACHERS' BIBLES

An Oxford Teachers' Bible has references and 300 pages of helps that are a mine of information to Bible students. The helps are arranged in alphabetical order, like a dictionary. They are accurate, comprehensive and up-to-date. A few styles are listed here. Many others are described in our Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

04403 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 6 1/2 x 4 1/2 inches .....$4.00

0623x [Same Bible as 04403] Printed on Oxford India paper. Only 1 inch thick.....$7.00

04453 [This size print] French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, 7 1/4 x 5 in. $5.00

0773x [Same Bible as 04453] Printed on Oxford India paper. A remarkably thin and light Bible. (Only 1 inch thick) .....$7.65

05153 [Same Bible as 04453] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red .....$5.25

05453x [Same Bible as 0773x] With the words of Jesus Christ printed in red .....$8.35

04523 [This size print] A self-pronouncing Oxford Bible. Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, size 8 1/2 x 5 1/2 inches.....$5.50

0923x [Same Bible as 04523] Printed on Oxford India paper, only 1 1/2 inches thick.....$9.65

At all booksellers or from the publishers

Oxford University Press
American Branch
35 W. 32d St. New York

If you wish to review the ground on which faith actually rests; if you desire to find out how much we really know concerning the constitution of the universe; if you would trace anew the relations between science and religion; if you care to measure comparatively the strength and weakness of the various types of nineteenth century philosophy, especially in their efforts to determine why anybody should believe anything; if you would enjoy a masterly application of the principles of destructive criticism, whether of science or of religion; if the puncturing of certain inflated pretensions of science would afford you amusement; if you would reinvigorate your mind and restock it with such data and methods of reflection as will fit you for a profitable reading and a true valuation of Bergson and Einstein; if as a soul-winner you would avoid superficiality and mere empiricism (and that borrowed), would get to the root of religion and plant faith so that it will stand all weathers; read this book—if you can. The more you need such a book the harder you will find this one to read. But it will pay you to make the effort. The mastery of some such argument is the one and only thing that can save some of us preachers from resting our evangelistic appeal upon a stout reiteration of the absolute certainty of slogans inherited but never understood, and from planting the faith of our converts upon the same rickety foundation. Get it and read it—if you can.

The Church and the Immigrant, by Georgia E. Harkness; George H. Doran Co., 110 pages; $1.00 net.

"What the immigrant needs is less 'slumming' and more 'brothering,'" expresses the tone of this little book. The author, an instructor in Boston University in the School of Religious Education and Social Service covers a broad field of information, statistical and otherwise, concerning the immigration problem, and gives practical suggestions as to remedial measures, with special emphasis upon the place of the church in the solution of the problem. A comprehensive and useful bibliography is included in the work.

The New World Movement
Calendar

A real missionary trip around the world, guaranteed to open hearts and eyes, at a price that all can meet—that, in brief, is the New World Movement Calendar for 1922, now ready for you.

It isn't often that for the price of a calendar you can secure a passport to the heart of humanity, and an inspiration for every day in the whole year, as you can, in the present instance. More than 30,000 Baptists have already sent in their orders for this combination-calendar-and-missionary tour. Others who want to go along with them are urged to secure their passages now, by sending in immediate orders for the calendar.

The famous Gospel Ship sails the Inland Seas in a January cruise in the calendar. No later than February, however, we are transported back to our own Crow Indians, some of whom are so eager to learn of the Jesus-road that they walk a hundred miles to hear of it. From their humble church camp, we go to the stately Harper Memorial Library of the University of Chicago. The next journey takes us to the Mission Building in Bhopore, Bengal Orissa, while in May we find ourselves in the Home Mis-

Write for this Booklet

Write for Booklet Z.

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department

Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING and WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured. No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mgr., 1509 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

WHO SUPPLIES HOSPITALS,

Prisons, Hotels, Needy Homes with the Bible also immigrants, sailors and in raised type for the blind? You may help by sending your donation.

Every kind of Bible for sale. Scofield, Oxford, Bagster, Cambridge, Holman, Nelson, at special discounts.

Write us about Annuity Bonds

NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY
5 East 48th St. (112th Year) NEW YORK

sion School in Mangua, Nicaragua, getting back in time for graduation exercises to the Skinner Memorial Chapel, in Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota. The next month we look reverently on at a baptism in Morioka, Japan. In August we are visitors in the Van Deman Memorial Hall in West China Union University, at Chengtu, and in September we have the privilege of dropping in at our wonderful new International Theological Seminary in East Orange, New Jersey, where workers are trained to teach others of God. We get acquainted with the Garo girls in the Mission School at Tura, Assam, in October, and with the Chinese boys at the Kiating School in November. The end of the year finds us in the library of Colgate University, at Hamilton, New York.

The Calendar Department of the Board of Promotion at 276 Fifth Avenue, New York, announces that the retail price of each calendar is 30 cents, while the wholesale prices varies with the number purchased. The local church organization which undertakes the sale of the calendars may make a profit of from 10 cents to 15 cents a copy. Deliveries will be made when desired, but ORDERS SHOULD COME NOW,

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

AN OPPORTUNITY

The following letter which came to this office is reproduced because it offers a splendid chance for some more fortunately-endowed churches to perform a definite service at small expenditure of effort. Comment on the value of the work being done by this small church group is verbose; all we can do is to pass along what is asked for—some good, simple music which can be used by a small chorus or non-professional soloists. Every church has a surplus of anthems and such-like, probably a little shop-worn and over-used. Here is an opportunity to put them to work again. Read the letter; then act:

"Is it possible that some of our American churches have church music such as choir selections, solos, duets, quartets, etc., that they no longer have use for?"

This appeal comes from a foreign church where several missions have to be taken care of in the line of music; and I am sure some musical supplies would be greatly appreciated. Out of one of these churches an independent church was organized with about 27 members. So you can readily see that they have all that they can do to keep up expenses. The choir directress does all her work gratis; but does not have enough material. The choir is badly in need of an hectograph; but of course, first it needs music. I know that you have many requests for advice, etc., in the line of music, and our request might seem out of place. But our Lord said, "Ask, and ye shall receive," and naturally we come to you. May we hope for an early response from some of our churches?

Thanking you in advance, we are, The First Bohemian Baptist Church of Berwyn, Ill., by Miss Julia Picha, 5401½ West 25th Street, Cicero, Ill.

ANTHEM LIST NO. 3

In accordance with our plan to list effective anthems from the catalogues of the leading publishers, we offer in this issue, the third list of the series—tried-and-true choral numbers chosen from the issues of the New York firm of G. Schirmer, 2 East 43rd Street, New York City:

Be Ye Therefore Followers of God.—Rogers.

Comforter Divine.—Chaffin.

Come, Thou Holy Spirit.—Barnett.

O Gladsome Light.—Sullivan.

Have Mercy Upon Me.—Gaul.

Praise, My Soul, the King of Heaven.—Berwald.

Bread of the World.—Hyde.

The Lord Is In His Holy Temple.—Lester.

The Way of Righteousness.—Lester.

Sun of My Soul.—Van Vliet.

The Shadows of the Evening Hours.—Barri.

Jesus, Still Lead On.—Shelley.

Thou Wilt Keep Him in Perfect Peace.—Foster.

My Defense Is of God.—Huhn.

Great Redeemer, Friend of Sinners.—Gluck.

There Is An Hour of Hallowed Peace.—Barnaby.

The Lord Is My Light.—Speaks.

Behold the Days Come.—Woodward.

Future lists will feature anthems from the catalogues of Ditson, J. Fischer & Bro., Carl Fischer, The Heidelberg Press, Theodore Presser Co., The Lorenz Co., etc. Compare the titles with the contents of your choir library, and look over the ones not represented,—you will find some numbers, at least, adapted to your needs, —and a varied repertoire is the biggest asset to a choir, and an incentive to more active interest and more definite value.

A GOOD MUSICAL SIGN

It is sometimes a matter of marvel that so few of those who take up the study of a musical instrument or of the human voice ever become more than the veriest beginners in their performance.

Interesting as a contemplation of this condition may be, there is another that in some respects is of even greater interest, because it touches more persons and is more directly associated with the cultural advancement of all the people. This is a consideration of the proportion of people who patronize concerts and performances of music who have no idea of how to listen, or what to listen for. A well-known writer on this subject has said that not more than one in a thousand of those who attend a concert have any knowledge of what is to be performed in their hearing, or possess any training or experience that might enable them to pass intelligent judgment upon anything they hear.

The hearing of music should bring both pleasure and profit. It will do this in proportion to the intelligence of the listener. A high degree of intelligence in other branches of art and learning is no guarantee of musical understanding. Intelligent listening to music is guaranteed only by study and hearing. There are in every public library works especially helpful to all those seeking the things which will aid to making intelligent listeners of all music lovers. In all communities can be found men and women capable and willing to aid the searcher after light in acquiring the capacity to listen. Fortunate, indeed, is the town that has a school-music supervisor who is teaching the children how to listen; or has a club which is making sincere efforts to awaken a desire for intelligent listening by providing a way for the instruction of its members as well as finding a way for the application of their training to be made. One of the most promising signs of a greater day for music in America is the disposition on the part of our educational leaders to give our children the right to be trained in listening in its true sense.—Edward P. Kimball, in the "Deseret News."

MUSIC WEEKS VERSUS COMMUNITY SINGING

The editor of the musical department of the Grand Rapids (Mich.) "News" believes that the "music week" is destined in large part to take the place of community singing societies, and is a practical outgrowth of the earlier idea. One fault of the community singing idea, he says, was the difficulty of sustaining the popular interest through a number of months. Because of this, many of the community singing centers have failed of their purpose. On the other hand, music weeks are not prolonged to the point of weariness so far as the people are concerned, and are eminently practical in that they may be adopted by a community of any size, from the small village in the simplest way, to the most advanced music center in an elaborate way.

"It is not the events of life, nor its emotions, nor this nor that experience, but life itself which is good."

—Phillips Brooks.

Communion Ware of Quality

Best materials. Finest workmanship. Aluminum or silver plate. Memorial sets a specialty. Send for Catalog Individual Comm. Service Co.

Room 344 1701-1708 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.

Baltimore, Md.
CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL
BELLS Memorials a Specialty

A New Christmas Service Free

We want you to see

THE GIFT OF LOVE, our new S. S. Service of merit. You will like it. Sent free.

Our CHRISTMAS RECITATION BOOKLET, NO. 24 with cute songs, is the best ever. 15c.

WHEN THE KING CAME, a Pastoral Sketch for young people. Beautiful. No music. 12c.

CHRISTMAS FOLKS, a wholesome, amusing cantata for Sunday school or Day school. 12c.

HYMNS FOR TODAY, for Sunday school and Church, contains 30 Christmas hymns and two Christmas service programs. Sample copy sent for examination. Orchestrated.

Give us your address (for others interested) and we will mail free a new catalog of Christmas services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for women's voices, also men's voices, and anthems for mixed voices.

If interested in Sunday school orchestra music you should know what we have for you. Write.

FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE

528 Elm Street, CINCINNATI, O.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC FREE

FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT. PASTOR or COM.

6 new, original Christmas S. S. Services

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Helper No. 9. Price, 20c. (25c for Helper and 3 services.)

Herod's Vision, A Song Story—Cantata. Price, 30c.

Victorious Christmas, A Song Story for the Sunday School, 25c.

The Manger King, Choir Cantata by Dr. Adam Geibel, 50c.

Here Comes Christmas, Children's Cantata. Price, 25c.

Songs for Little Singers, No. 3, Price, 30c. All (except Helper) sent for examination.

Hall-Mack Co., 21st and Arch Streets, Philadelphia, Pa.

Adam Geibel Co., Philadelphia, Pa.

Lorenz's Christmas Music

SERVICES

"Worship the King" Wilson.

"Gift of Love" Holton.

"Christmas Echoes" Based on Carols.

"The Coming Messiah" Lorenz.

8 cents a copy, $6.00 a hundred.

CANTATAS FOR SUNDAY SCHOOLS

"When the Savior Came" Lorenz. Sacred. 20c.

per copy.

"A Christmas Secret" Wilson. Santa Claus. 30 cents per copy.

"The Spirit of Christmas" Lorenz. Secular but serious. 30 cents.

RECITATIONS AND EXERCISES

"Christmas Treasury No. 32" 25 cents.

CHOIR CANTATAS OR SEMI-ORATORIOS

"The Manger Prince" Ashford. 60 cents.

"The Light of the World" Holton. 60 cents.

CHRISTMAS ANTHEMS

Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state whether difficult, medium, or easy anthems are wanted, and about twenty samples will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at list price.

CHRISTMAS SOLOS AND DUETS

Advance 10 cents postage and packing, state voice desired, and about a half dozen sheet music selections will be sent you on approval, those not returned after 10 days to be paid for at one-third off list price.

Send for Free Packet of Samples and Catalogue.

Mention "The Baptist"

LORENZ NEW YORK, CHICAGO

Publishing Co. Z and DAYTON, OHIO

Exchange and Service Department

FILM SERVICE

CANTON CHRISTIAN COLLEGE is a union Christian school in China, with headquarters at 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. A moving picture of four reels, standard size film, has been made of this college and can be secured by any church of any denomination who desires to use it. There is no rental but shipping and expressage must be paid. There are three depositories, one in New York, one in Dayton and one in Kansas City.

Write to the New York office for information.

THE LECTURE which was given at the Des Moines Convention on Sunday night by Mr. Lippard is now known as "Baptist Movements in Europe." The text has been written by Mr. Lippard and Dr. Franklin and it gives a most excellent statement of our Northern Baptist work in Europe. The lecture is now in the depositories at 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Ford Building, Boston, Mass.; 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Granville, Ohio; 729 Occidental Building, Indianapolis, Ind.; 125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois; 1717 Wells Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; 420 Valley National Bank Bldg.; Des Moines, Iowa; 918 Kansas Avenue, Topeka, Kansas; 405 Tilford Building, Portland, Oregon; 313 West 3rd Street, Los Angeles, Cal. There is no rental on this lecture but the user must pay the parcel post charges each way.

COE HAYNE of the Home Mission Society has written a new stereopticon lecture entitled "From Alaska to the Antilles" which reviews the work of Home Missions for the last two years under the New World Movement and states specifically some of the things that have been accomplished. This lecture is at the stereopticon depositories at the following places: 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Ford Building, Boston, Mass.; 729 Occidental Bldg., Indianapolis, Ind.; 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill.; 1717 Wells Street, Milwaukee, Wis.; 405 Tilford Building, Portland, Oregon; 714 Exchange Building, Denver, Colo. There is no rental on this lecture but the user must pay the parcel post charges each way.

"IN THE FOREIGN FIELD with the New World Movement" is the last of the lectures on Foreign Missions that has been prepared by the Stereopticon Department and tells the story of the achievements in Foreign Missions under the New World Movement for the last two years. It is in depositories at the following places: 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Ford Building, Boston, Mass.; 213 1/2 Fourth Street, Parkersburg, W. Va.; 125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; 1717 Wells Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin; 529 Second Avenue S., Minneapolis, Minn.; 714 Exchange Building, Denver, Colo. There is no rental on this lecture but the user must pay the parcel post charges each way.

YOUR CHRISTMAS SURPLUS

Your help is needed in assisting the missionaries to give Christmas cheer at the many stations abroad. The Surplus Material Department of the World's Sunday School Association, 216 Metropolitan Tower, New York City, will send you the name of a missionary if you will indicate your denomination in writing for the information. Every year this Department is the means of having thousands of packages sent by parcel post to many missionaries. A leaflet has been prepared which offers numerous suggestions. The usual parcel post charge is 12c per pound in packages not exceeding 11 pounds, though any number of packages can be forwarded to the same party.

One missionary in West China makes the need very clear and shows some of his own problems. He writes "Now in regard to Christmas, we missionaries are every year placed at our wits' ends in planning what we can give these little people in the way of small gifts, etc., to help make them as happy as possible. And it is anything but easy to make our gifts go the rounds. And what we do for a few we should do for all. Last year a kind lady from Toronto sent me eighteen little dolls, some handkerchiefs, side combs, etc. But one of the greatest disappointments I have ever witnessed among children and their mothers was when we had to pick out those eighteen little girls and give each one a doll. While they were more than overjoyed the disappointment of the other 200 odd little ones was almost too much for me. So I determined that before another Christmas came around I would at least try to have a foreign doll for each of these little girls. Now you can understand my joy at reading your announcement about the Surplus Material Department."

These packages for Christmas distribution should leave America by November first and earlier if possible. The large Bible picture rolls and small Bible lesson pictures are also eagerly asked for, as well as any good picture. It would also be fine to add some thoughtful remembrance for the missionary, or the little ones in his family.

PASTORLESS CHURCH

ANY PASTOR desiring to get into communication with the First Church at Defiance, Ohio, left pastorless by the resignation of Rev. T. G. Erier, may do so by writing to E. J. Webb, 715 Holgate Ave., Defiance.

The response of the denomination to the call for clothing and other supplies to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship" is such that the Foreign Mission Societies are thinking seriously of sending a personal escort with the shipment. The ship would probably call first at Hamburg and discharge there such supplies as are intended for Czechoslovakia, whence they would be escorted across Germany. From Hamburg the ship would probably proceed to Danzig, the port of entry for Poland, where the larger proportion of the supplies would be discharged in care of Rev. K. W. Strzelec, a representative of the Foreign Mission Society, who has been serving with the Polish Baptists during the last year. At Libau it would be met by Rev. J. A. Frey, who will be responsible for the general oversight of the distribution of supplies in Latvia.

E. Park Brown on October 27, 1921 was ordained to the gospel ministry in the North Main Avenue Baptist Church, Scranton, Pa. Rev. W. G. Watkins acted as moderator and Rev. J. H. Carter as clerk. Mr. Brown has accepted the call of the Baptist church at Hilltown, Pa.

NEW BOOKS

ROGER BABSON'S

New Book

Making Good in Business

The latest work by the author of "Fundamentals of Prosperity" is crammed with the most valuable sort of hints and suggestions for the attainment of a successful business career. $1.25

WILLIAM GEORGE JORDAN

Author of "Self Control," etc.

The Trusteeship of Life

A Study in the True Values of Existence

A new volume of Mr. Jordan's winning Essays which have called forth the hearty praise of Henry van Dyke, who said: "They are suggestive and stimulating. His philosophy has three big little words—courage, cheerfulness and charity." $1.25

PROF. EDWARD A. STEINER

Old Trails and New Borders

The author of "On the Trail of the Immigrant" gives us an "inside" revelation of conditions to-day in the countries of Europe from which the ranks of the immigrant have been largely recruited. $1.50

CHARLES M. SHELDON

In His Steps To-day

What Would Jesus Do Regarding the Problems of the Hour

The greatest work from this author's pen since "In His Steps" reached the previously unheard of figure, 22,000,000 sold. $1.25

JOHN KELMAN, D.D.

Fifth Ave. Presbyterian Church

The Foundations of Faith

The new volume of Cole lectures is by one of the foremost and suggestive of living preachers. As always, Dr. Kelman's work is marked by strong, logical reasoning, distinctive thought, clothed in exceptional and choice language. $1.50

GEORGE MCCREADY PRICE, M.A.

Poisoning Democracy

A Study of the Present-Day Socialism

Professor Price shows that the conditions prevailing to-day are due largely to the acceptance of various socialistic and evolutionary theories termed "New" Theology. No more terrific moral and religious indictment of Socialism has ever been presented. $1.25

JOSEPH HOCKING'S

Amazing Novel

PRODIGAL DAUGHTERS

A Tale of To-day

OUT THIS WEEK!

As good as "The Passion for Life"? We'll say it is. If you want to recommend a tale that will hold you spell-bound as you live in its pages—just read Hocking's latest! $1.75

At All Booksellers, or

Fleming H. Revell Company

NEW YORK
158 Fifth Ave.

CHICAGO
17 N. Wabash Ave.

Volume II

November 19, 1921

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

NOV 18 1921

Number 42

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

(Ed. Annuaire) h. 24000. PARIS - Notre-Dame. Vue d'ensemble.

NOTRE Dame Cathedral in Paris stands on the site of an ancient pagan temple of Jupiter Ceraunus. The first Christian church was erected there in the year 375 A.D. Childebert rebuilt it in 520 and placed in it the first glass window known to be used in France. In 1163 Pope Alexander, then a refugee in France, laid the foundation of the present structure. Many additions and alterations have been made to it since; but in 1845-1855 it was thoroughly overhauled and restored to its original early Gothic design. Many of the most important ceremonies in French history have been celebrated in this noble sanctuary.

"The ablest and most influential religious paper in America"—says the London Westminster Gazette.

The Mind of Jesus and the Modern Mind

Is modern scientific and philosophic thought an approach to or a departure from the mind of Christ?

Is the prevailing public mood of our time congenial to or a relapse from Christ's principles and Spirit?

A STARTLING and illuminating article on the above subject by Edward Scribner Ames, professor of philosophy in the University of Chicago, will appear in an early issue of The Christian Century. The implications of such a theme are profound and challenging. Upon its interpretation our theological, ethical and social controversies hang. And personal religious faith is vitally involved. The article by Dr. Ames is but a single illustration of the service The Christian Century is rendering in bringing the mind of Christ into the closest contact with the living problems of our day. This journal of religion discusses the great issues of the social order, of industry and business, of states and communities, of Christian unity, of theology and ethics, of the personal spiritual life—and all with a candor unrestricted by denominational interests and horizons.

The CHRISTIAN CENTURY

A Journal of Religion

CHARLES CLAYTON MORRISON and

HERBERT L. WILLETT, Editors

FOUR DOLLARS A YEAR

Some Authoritative Writers of Current Articles

John M. Coulter
"Is Evolution Anti-Christian?"
Charles E. Jefferson
"Are the Churches Christian?"
Jane Addams
"The War on War"
Albert Parker Fitch
"Do the Churches Still Believe in Jesus?"

William Adams Brown
"Can Society Be Made Christian?"
Shailer Mathews
"Is Christian Theology Christian?"
John Spargo
"Is Preaching Futile?"
Vida D. Scudder
"Can Public Opinion Be Christianized?"

Harry F. Ward
"Jesus and the Competitive System"
Rufus M. Jones
"War and the Mind of Jesus"
Robert E. Park
"The Black Man, the White Man and Christ"
Peter Ainslie
"A Reevaluation of Sunday"

Herbert Croly
"Religious Education"
Richard L. Swain
"Can Christ Rule Modern Business?"
Robert E. Speer
"Christ and Our Social Customs"
H. D. C. MacLachlan
"A Bourgeois Church in a Proletarian World"

Other Distinguished Writers for this Year

Roger W. Babson
Author "Religion and Business"
John R. Mott
International Secretary, Y. M. C. A.
William E. Barton
Moderator Congregational Nat'l Council

Bishop William F. MacDowell
Methodist Episcopal Church (Washington, D. C.)
John Kelman
Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York

Lynn Harold Hough
Ex-President Northwestern University
Charles A. Ellwood
The University of Missouri
Bishop Francis J. McConnell
Methodist Episcopal Church (Pittsburgh)

A Great Series on Great Preachers

DR. JOSEPH FORT NEWTON, recently of City Temple, London, now of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York, contributing editor of The Christian Century, is presenting this year an outstanding series of studies of some great preachers of today: Dr. George A. Gordon, Dean Inge, Rev. W. E. Orchard, Rev. S. Parkes Cadman, Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, Rev. E. L. Powell, Rev. John A. Hutton, Bishop Quayle, Rev. T. R. Glover, Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, Rev. Frederick F. Shannon, Rev. R. J. Campbell, Bishop Williams and others. This is the most luminous and instructive set of characterizations of living preachers published in many a year.

The Christian Century Is the New Voice for the New Time

Fill out one of these coupons and mail today. Addresses outside U. S. must provide for extra postage.

The Christian Century, 508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Please enter my name (a new subscriber) for a year's subscription to The Christian Century at your regular rate of $4.00 (ministers $3.00). I will remit upon receipt of bill and you will please send me without extra charge a copy of [ ] "The Daily Altar," by Willett and Morrison, or [ ] "The Next War," by Will Irvin, or [ ] "What and Where is God?" by Swain, or [ ] "What Christianity Means to me," by Lyman Abbott, or [ ] "Wanted—A Congregation," by Douglas, or [ ] "The Proposal of Jesus," by John Hutton.

Name..... Address.....
(Use title "Rev." if a minister.)

Baptist, 11/10

The Christian Century

508 S. Dearborn St., Chicago

Dear Sirs: Enclosed please find $1.00 for a twelve weeks acquaintance subscription to The Christian Century.

Name.....

Address.....
(Use title "Rev." if a minister.)

Baptist, 11/10

The Baptist

Vol. II November 19, 1921 No. 42

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam

Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HORN PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

Page

FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	1324
EDITORIAL .....	1325
A PRIMER OF THEOLOGY III, by A. H. Strong.....	1328
THE LITTLE COUNTRY WITH THE BIG COLONY, by P. H. J. LERRIGO.....	1330
WHO'S WHO AMONG BAPTIST'S, by William B. Lippard .....	1333
THE PASTOR AND HIS YOUNG PEOPLE, by Milton McGottrell .....	1334
THE OTHER SIDE OF THE AVERAGE COUNTRY CHURCH, by Arthur E. Cowley.....	1335
ONLY ONE MARION NOW, by J. J. Ross.....	1336
BAPTIST MISSION IN HUNGARY, by Attila Csopjak.....	1337
BOARD OF PROMOTION REPORTS.....	1339
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	1340
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1342
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.....	1343
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	1344
CHURCH NEWS BY STATES.....	1346
OUR MUSIC CORNER.....	1351

Counting the Vote

Counting the votes in the referendum has begun. It is already evident that our judgment to the effect that a considerable number of the readers of THE BAPTIST were human beings will be confirmed. It is also clear that the "many" who oppose the Kollum are a kindly folk who hesitate to put in black and white the convictions which might hurt the editor's sensitive soul. We promise to maintain a just ratio in the answers printed for and against the department.

Killam's Kollum

To Kill Unscriptural

Mr. A. O. Kinney of Temperance, Mich., quotes Ex. 20:13, "Thou shalt not kill." He thinks this should settle the matter. THE BAPTIST stands four square for the scriptures.

Boy, Page the General Director

"Say, who is said 'General Director'? Tell him for me to forget it. For the love of Mike, don't kill the Kollum." Signed, Robert E. Kennedy, Civil Engineer, Worland, Wyo. Before the Administrative Committee in Indianapolis we made a plea for more paid publicity. Here is another illustration of its need.

Undertaker Gives Advice

We received from San Bernardino, Cal., a photo of a fine undertaking establishment bearing the name of Mark A. Shaw. Mr. Shaw writes: "Bury the Kollum now and in a week dig him up and his toes will be turned in showing premature burial. That is the most attractive part of the paper—cheerful you know. Please, please don't kill." This vote awakens anything but cheerful possibilities. Who wants to be buried alive? No one. And yet we know some editors who "toe in" all the time. Then too there are preachers and professors "buried alive" by superimposed rituals, creeds and conventions which hamper quite as much as grave clothes and winding sheets. In all seriousness is there not a pressing need for a genuine recognition of our individual responsibility and accountability not to men but to God? THE BAPTIST believes that the day is at hand when the spirit of the hymn "Faith of Our Fathers" should again find embodiment in men. Let the voice of the prophets be heard in the land. Let us "toe out."

With All Due Respect to Others

Dr. Henry C. Vedder, Chester, Pa., writes, "Kill the Kollum! Perish the thought! It is the one thing in the paper that I always read. I read the rest when I have time, but I invariably take time to read the Kollum. Kill the editorials, or the news letters, or the departments if you must, but spare, O spare that Kollum." We only wish the professor had shown the same consideration for what we had to say in the class room twenty years ago.

The Sooner the Better

"Kill the childish undignified thing. The sooner the better."—A. F. Howell, Cedar Rapids, Neb. This speaks for itself. We should print sixteen for to one against the Kollum, but we want to be generous.

Fresh from the Field

Mrs. Helen B. Montgomery addressed the Ashtabula Baptist Social Union at the First Baptist Church, Ashtabula, Ohio, of which Rev. Herman Lang has been pastor for nearly eleven years. About 300 were fed; others could not be accommodated. The crowd filled the main auditorium of the beautiful new church until almost every pew was filled. Mrs. Montgomery was born only a few miles from here in Kingsville, Ohio. The great audience was wonderfully impressed with her Baptist message, her loyalty to the Bible, to missions, to our denomination.

The Norwegian Baptist Conference of the Eastern States, held its annual meeting with the First Norwegian Baptist Church of Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 20-23. Officers elected: president, Rev. O. E. Hansen; vice-president, Rev. L. J. Anderson; secretary, Ida Knudsen; treasurer, E. J. Morris; members of board, Rev. A. Krane, P. Danielsen, John Anderson, O. Moland. The afternoons were given to business and the evenings to evangelistic meetings. The Sunday meetings were of special interest. In the morning Rev. A. Krane, from Boston, preached effectively. In the afternoon Rev. W. J. Sly, of the Publication Society, gave a very fine and helpful address to the young people. Rev. L. J. Anderson gave the address in the evening. In the after-meeting a young couple accepted Christ as their personal savior.—IDA KNUDSEN, Secretary.

Rev. J. H. Rushbrooke, Baptist Commissioner for Europe, recently returned to London after making a visit to Poland for conference there with leaders in the Baptist work. His careful study of questions in that country, in which the Foreign Mission Society is interested, has been of great value. The office of Baptist Commissioner for Europe is proving to be exceedingly useful for numerous Baptist bodies on the Continent as well as for outside missionary agencies which are attempting to lend assistance.

Rev. J. H. Shakespeare, secretary of the Baptist Union of Great Britain and Ireland, and also Secretary of the Baptist World Alliance, is reported now as having recovered his health. This news will be welcomed by his friends in America and in other countries.

The Associated Press has given to newspapers in many sections of America the story of the movement of Northern Baptists to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." Scores of clipping are being received which indicate that outside of our own denominational circles the plan of our Foreign Missions Societies to fill a ship with supplies for the suffering peoples of Northern Europe is receiving wide publicity.

Rev. Oliva Brouillette, director of relief work which is being conducted in the devastated regions of Northern France and Southern Belgium under the auspices of the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society, sailed from New York a few days ago after a brief visit to America for conference with the Board of Managers of the Society. Mr. Brouillette's work is highly commended by American visitors who have had opportunity to observe it. Foyers, or large "huts," have been erected in four centers in the devastated regions, from which the relief work is conducted. One feature of the work is assistance given regularly to more than eight hundred war orphans. Mr. Brouillette is returning with authority to enlarge two or three features of the relief program, such as furnishing text books and other equipment for school children in some of the devastated regions, and agricultural implements for the use of peasants not able otherwise to procure them.

Preaching in the Bradford Cathedral on "Industrial Sunday" Bishop Gore, one of the best known liberals in the Church of England, said: "I hate established churches, because whenever Christianity becomes an established religion and a man must belong to it as a matter of course, you eliminate the necessity for personal choice and adopt the method which is exactly opposite to the method of Jesus."

So long as Christianity was a persecuted religion, so that nobody could join it without risking his life, its principles were kept pure on the whole and its practice corresponded with these principles."

The chapel of the new University Place Baptist Church of Baltimore, Md., was dedicated with appropriate ceremony on Oct. 30. No pastor is to be chosen for a few months, the thought being that an increased membership is desirable before this is done. Dr. A. C. Dixon is serving as acting pastor, having begun his work on Nov. 6.

The District B. Y. P. U. of Tacoma, Wash., has established a monthly to be known as the "B. Y. P. U. Beacon," which is largely financed by advertisements. The object is to help bind together the young people of the district.

The East Washington Convention (539 Rookery Bldg., Spokane) is issuing a series of "Finish the Task Bulletins" which are remarkably effective. They should help greatly in enabling this convention to bring to a successful conclusion its effort for the New World Movement.

Helen Wells Allen, wife of Jay B. Allen and a member of the City Temple Church, Sioux Falls, S. D., died Oct. 14 of cerebral meningitis after an illness of only thirty-six hours. Two children survive: Judson, aged three, and Jane, aged one and a half years.

Allan Walcott Lee was ordained to the gospel ministry on Oct. 21 by the Grandview Church of Kansas City, Kan., which he has been serving as pastor. The ordination sermon was preached by Dr. P. W. Crannell.

David P. Ward of Pasadena, Cal., writes that the Baptists of the coast owe a debt of gratitude to the Publication Society for sending Miss Myrtle Love to work among the Sunday schools of that section. She is a Sunday-school specialist of the first rank. The school that secures her service is fortunate. Rev. Geo. L. White, 313 W. Third St., Los Angeles, has charge of her itinerary on the Pacific Coast.

Memorial Church, Toledo, Ohio, has been without a pastor for about two months. Rev. Edward F. Randall, who has been engaged in business in Toledo, served the church as supply during this period. At a recent meeting of the church a call was extended to Mr. Randall to become permanent pastor, beginning Nov. 1. The call was accepted and the church is now planning a campaign for souls during the coming months.

Dr. O. C. S. Wallace has accepted the call of the Eutaw Place Church, Baltimore, Md., and will begin his work there on Dec. 1. There is very profound regret in Canada at his leaving for the greatness of his work is generally recognized.

In one of our Negro exchanges we notice reference to one of the "prompted members" of a certain church. We cannot help wondering how many such members, if the words are to be taken at their face value, are to be found in our white churches. And yet possibly "prompted" activity is better than none at all.

Friday, March 3, 1922, will be observed throughout the United States and Canada as the day of prayer for missions.

Kansas City, Mo., has been chosen as the place for the Sixteenth International Sunday School Convention, which will be held June 21-27, 1922. The last meeting was in Buffalo in 1918.

On the occasion of his seventieth birthday recently, Sir William Robertson Nicoll, editor of The British Weekly, was entertained by Sir Ernest Hodder Williams at a private dinner at the Hyde Park Hotel, London. Premier Lloyd George was present and proposed a toast to the guest of honor. Sir William is the oldest in point of continuous service of any London editor.

The papers carried recently an announcement of the death of Mrs. R. K. Maiden, wife of the editor of the Word and Way. The many tributes to Mrs. Maiden indicate how useful and beautiful a life hers was. The editors of THE BAPTIST unite with his many friends in an expression of loving sympathy to Dr. Maiden.

If we work upon marble, it will perish; if we work upon brass, time will efface it; if we rear temples, they will crumble into dust; but if we work upon immortal minds, if we imbue them with principles, with the just fear of God and love of our fellow-men, we engrave on those tablets something which will brighten to all eternity.—Daniel Webster.

Those who would rather have Lloyd George stay away from the Washington Conference will have to reckon with Rev. T. Rhondda Williams, Brighton, England, a pronounced Liberal. He writes to the Christian Register expressing his desire that Lloyd George represent Great Britain at that important assembly. He thinks his canny Welsh sense will be needed in effecting practical results. "He will find there," he adds, "a flood of sturdy idealism that will be a great strength to him. He had a great deal of bad company in England, and a visit to America would go a long way to rebaptize him into his old self."

After a history of seventy-three years the Independent of New York has been consolidated with the Weekly Review. The new publication will bear the name of the Independent and Weekly Review. There was a time when the Independent played a prominent part in religious journalism, but it is one of those papers which gradually became secularized.

The Baptist and Reflector asserts that there are only ninety-seven universities and colleges maintained by states and cities while there are 477 private colleges and that these latter still educate twice as many students as the public universities and colleges. It further quotes Pres. Blackwell as saying, "A system of education that does not educate half of the men and women can hardly be called the national system."

The Baptist

Thanksgiving in a Distaught World

FOR what shall we be thankful in the present disordered state of the world? The President of the United States calls us to a day of thanksgiving, and state executives follow his example. This is the custom; it could not well be passed. But why be thankful? We are, so we are told, at peace—of a sort. Our crops are bountiful and are gathered in. The sore afflictions which have visited many of the people of Europe have not reached us. Famine and hunger and wretchedness, while they may be known, are not general in our midst. Our nation is rich and powerful and not yet utterly selfish. Ambassadors of mercy, giving help to the needy in our name, may be found in all the world. But is this all? Are there no deeper grounds for thanksgiving? We think that there are. One need not be unmindful of the things just mentioned, but he should be more concerned with the greater reasons for gratitude.

Let us be thankful that God is. This is not a universe without a soul. Man himself is not the beginning and the process and the end. He comes from God and goes to God. If there were no God, then this would be a wretched world. If Jesus were a false witness, then we are indeed living in a "barren vale, between the ice-clad peaks of two eternities." But the fact that we can believe in the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ puts life and soul and hope into life.

Let us be thankful that God rules. He laughs at the defiance of men and smiles with them in their enthusiasm. But he does not take his hand from the helm. Men work with him, but he is the great worker. Through history an increasing purpose runs. He moves as fast as is possible for one who is dealing with stubborn material. But he does move, his will is slowly being accomplished, the law which is supreme love is in process of fulfillment. After the events of the last few years who of us would wish for a moment that man should be Lord of the universe? We fall back with profound gratitude on the fact that God lives and rules.

Let us be thankful that the kingdom of God shall come and that his will shall be done. Jesus taught us to pray for this and we may be sure that he knew what he was doing. Delays may be long and progress may be slow, but the kingdom shall certainly come and the kingdoms of the world shall then become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ. One can have good heart to do his best work when such a hope is in him. Difficulties and obstacles may be laughed at while he is resting secure in the divine promise and the divine program. We do not have to take the whole load of the world on our shoulders. It is enough that we do well the part which God has assigned to us. Knowing that he will not fail us, we may highly resolve not to fail him.

Meanwhile, we may rejoice in him. We may do our best and then rest in him. We may seek to discover his way and to walk in it. We may remember that the Lord is our keeper, that "as the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about them that fear him." Who would not be thankful that he can look in the face of Christ and call him not only Savior but also Brother! Who would not rejoice in the peace and safety which come to him through the manifested God!

May we not then gather our families about us on Thanksgiving Day and pray, "Father, I thank thee for these whom thou has given me, for love and work and play, for human sympathy and comradeship and human service, for the chance to help men everywhere and to receive their gifts in return. But most of all I thank thee for thyself as I have seen thee in Christ Jesus, and for the confidence I have that the world and all I hold dear in it is safe in thy hands, and for the assurance I have of thy final victory on the earth. Help me to keep my life clean and my faith pure, to be a good steward of thy gifts, to love unselfishly, looking for nothing again, to receive with gratitude all thou dost send, and to tread with joy the path over which my Master went. Be this my daily thanksgiving and my inspiration for a life of love and service to all men, for whose sake I sanctify myself."

Thanksgiving based on such considerations, is not the result of chance circumstances and cannot be taken away by such.

From Depression to Optimism

AS was noted a week ago the meeting of the General Board of Promotion at Indianapolis began in a spirit of depression. The financial situation weighed heavily on men's minds. They had spent their best efforts on a great task and not only had not succeeded but seemed to be facing certain failure. They were good sports, but they distinctly felt that they were "up against it." And the meeting ended with a feeling of confidence. Men and women went away feeling that the task could and would be done. They went prepared to call their states and churches to the effort which means victory. They had faced the mountain and found that it could be moved. How did this change come about? Can we analyze the process in such a way as shall be helpful to our churches? Perhaps not entirely. But we note the following:

The facts were faced resolutely. That is always wholesome. The worst is never too bad to be known. Suspicion or uncertainty is more trying than accurate knowledge. A desperate situation calls out energies and a heroism which easier conditions might not evoke. We have no reason to fear publicity. To know the full extent of a bad situation is to gird ourselves to make it better. There is no reason why the financial facts faced by the boards should not be in the hands of all our churches.

The members of the board were driven nearer to God. Without him no success is possible. Perhaps an easy success at first in our New World Movement would have made us self-confident and boastful. Now it is perfectly clear that, if success is to be achieved, it will only be by his grace and help. Such a spiritual discovery and victory is in itself beyond price.

As our representatives came nearer to God, they began to estimate anew our resources. Foremost among these is this renewed faith in and dependence upon God. Then there is the unused wealth of the churches, both in people and in money. Few churches have done their utmost; many have as yet done nothing at all.

The courage of the women who are seeking new pledges for $6,000,000, thirteen times as much as was raised in the Jubilee Fund, proved an inspiring thing. The laymen were not willing to lag behind, and so provided, on the recommendation of their committee, for their own organization. Vast power is latent in our Baptist laymen as past events have indicated; their intention now is to organize nationally and in all the states that this will be progressively and continuously available. We have every reason for expecting great things from this source in the near future.

Increasing recognition is given to the Biblical principles of stewardship. The success of the proposed tither's league and stewardship campaign will place beyond a question the future financing of the Baptist share in promoting the kingdom of God on earth. To follow God's leading in this is to make certain his promise. No action taken at Indianapolis has more of cheer in it than that which has to do with this matter.

And so little by little, as the facts were faced and new plans made to meet the new emergencies which God has provided, the men and women in conference began to see that what must be can be, and resolved that, by the grace of God, it shall be. They are under no delusions. They know that the task is hard. They are aware that sacrifice will be demanded. But they believe in God and in the people of our churches and in the spiritual ends of the New World Movement. And they are sure that their new optimism is not ill-founded but based on the sure promises of God.

As this spirit is imparted more and more to our churches there will come to them the same optimism and we shall see them, in this middle year of our great movement, girding themselves, as many already have done, for that continued, sacrificial, prayerful effort which spells certain victory.

Send Them Forth

FEW SIGNS of the times are more hopeful than the growing practice in our colleges of sending out evangelistic teams from their student bodies. It gives a distinctly evangelistic significance to college life and culture. It trains workers. It emphasizes and honors the life service movement. It calls attention and interest to the ministry of the gospel as a life work. It helps the churches. It brings the lost to salvation. It weaves the life of the college into the life of the people and sanctifies each to the other. Send them forth.

Paralyzing Our Right Arm

MR. LINCOLN STEFFENS refers to the proposal that people pray for the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments in terms which, if he were not morally in earnest, would give the impression of a sneer. This is the way he expresses his mind:

"There is a movement on to ask the people to pray for disarmament. That would be terrible. That would be like the pitiful scenes we saw when Wilson came to Europe.

"The peasants of France knelt in the dark night beside the railroad tracks where his train passed. And we reporters saw people in Italy set the American President's picture up beside that of their saint, and, sobbing, prayed to him. And the Germans and the Balkans—he, we were the only hope left them in life.

"Don't repeat that. It was a tragedy when these people, watching Paris, gradually realized that their faith in us Americans—that that was a false hope.

"I think the thing to do is to ask the people to watch Washington, without hope; just calmly keep their eyes on the conference to limit disarmament, so as to see that we cannot get rid of the effect till we deal with the cause; so that they may see and some day understand that we cannot get rid of poverty, graft and war until we are ready to deal with the causes of these evils; and that that calls for knowledge; not prayers, but science and the scientific method."

Now his remarks are justified only upon certain assumptions, namely that people are substituting prayer for intelligence, depending upon pious sentiments to take the place of duty, and seeking to enlist divine help where it is not available.

But these assumptions are far from true in fact. Among the people who are promoting the prayer movement are many who know as well as Mr. Steffens that "We cannot get rid of poverty, graft and war until we are ready to deal with the causes of these evils." They know that this "calls for knowledge . . . science and the scientific method."

But why not prayer also? Cannot one be scientific and prayerful at the same time? Is an effort to commune with God necessarily an act of ignorance? Does the fact, if it be a fact, that some desperately distressed people in Europe seemed to him to cry vainly in blind agony to Mr. Wilson as if he were God, constitute a reason why people who are proceeding to study and remove the causes of war should not seek counsel of God?

Now, if ever, the voice of the people ought to be the voice of God. How can it be so unless they listen to him, come into close intimacy with him, enter deeply into his counsel and receive his Spirit? Now, if ever, they need a vision of his righteousness in all human relations and on a world-wide scale, a passion for human welfare that will purge them of all schemes of individual or group self-interest, and a resolute purpose of justice and peace. Prayer alone will not produce all that is involved in such a preparation of mind; but does any man know how they may find it without prayer. Why, the very quest for it is prayer.

The more clearly the people understand the causes of strife, the more they realize the need of real prayer, and see that it is involved in the "scientific method." He who dissuades them from it is in the way of paralyzing the right arm of the peace movement.

Editorial Comment

WHAT JAPAN WANTS

What professor Yoshi S. Kuno has done for Japan ought to have been done by somebody equally well qualified for every one of nations having an interest in the pending negotiations for the limitation of armaments. He has written and the Thomas Y. Crowell Company of New York has published a little book of 154 pages, under the title, "What Japan Wants," in which he presents briefly, in simple language, with apparent scholarly accuracy, with the most engaging frankness and with almost judicial fairness, what Japan wants in America, on the Pacific Ocean, in China, in Korea, in Siberia and at home, why she wants these things and how far she ought to have them, and what she and the other nations ought to do under the circumstances with reference to her desires.

This syllabus and a similar one stating the point of view of each of the other nations ought to be placed in the hands of not less than two millions of the more thoughtful class of American citizens. Such material for study would go far to clarify the minds of the people, now obscured and confused by partial information and by diligently incited prejudice.

That Japan will get everything she wants, or even everything that Prof. Kuno, temperate as he is, thinks she ought to have, may be open to question; but such a statement of her rights and aims will go far towards securing for her an intelligent, sympathetic and just hearing. A million of the more thoughtful Japanese ought also to read it, in order to clear their own minds and to temper their demands to actual conditions and to the practical possibilities of international negotiation.

A PROHIBITION ENFORCEMENT TEXT BOOK

Disregard for law constitutes a serious problem in the United States at the present moment. The most active agent in encouraging such disrespect is the remnant of the liquor traffic which is doing its best to bring into disrepute the 18th amendment.

An increasing demand is heard for the enforcement of all law and particularly of the prohibitory law. How is this to be done? How can good citizens cooperate to this end? The answer to these questions will be found in a pamphlet of ninety-six pages entitled "The 'Yonkers Plan' of Prohibition Enforcement," which has just come to our desk. The author is William H. Anderson, state superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, who combines within himself a shrewd political knowledge with a passion for righteousness. Few men have been better fighters in a great cause.

THE TRUTH ABOUT JAPAN

William Axling, for twenty years a missionary in Japan and a close observer of things Japanese, has the entire confidence of the Baptist churches of America. He also knows the Japanese mind and heart. During his present furlough he has been interpreting in a masterly way the one nation to the other. So important have been his services that his furlough has been extended for three months in order that he may remain in the city of Washington and serve in every possible way those who are to take part in the discussions of the conference on limitation of armaments.

In the face of continuous efforts to bring about misunderstandings between the United States and Japan. Mr. Axling's conclusions, as found in a little booklet issued by our own Publication Society and just off the press, are worth noting. He believes heartily in the peacefulness of Japan's intentions and in the loyalty of the heart of her people to their ancient friends, the Americans. The booklet is called, "On the Trail of the Truth about Japan."

CONVENTION MEETS ON JULY 5

A report of the meeting recently held in Indianapolis of the executive committee of the Northern Baptist Convention is published in another column. Two items are worthy of special mention. The date for the holding of the convention at Seattle is set at Wednesday, July 5. In many cities such a date would mean torrid heat, but all Seattle assures us that the weather there on this date will be delightful. In accepting a report of progress from the program committee the executive committee voted "that there be constructed a unified program which will make unnecessary the holding of preliminary conferences." This is in line with Mrs. Montgomery's suggestion that places be found on the program for all interests and subjects which should properly have attention and with the request of the Western Washington convention that there be this year no pre-convention meetings.

LET HIM WHO PRAYS ALSO TALK

When a Washington correspondent to a daily newspaper gives as his advice to church people, "Keep up prayer and agitation," there is every reason why Christians should keep right on availing themselves of these two forces. Who knows what God may work through this Washington conference if we pray as though the whole issue depended upon us, and then take every practical method at hand for making public opinion in our church and city count in the results?

MAY NOT THE FOUR BE REAL?

In the readers' forum in one of our exchanges there appeared in a recent issue two letters, the first with the title, "Where Four Men are Wanted," and the second, "Where a Real Man is Wanted." Readers may draw their own inferences. We are reminded of the old advertisement, "Wanted: a strong horse to do the work of a country minister."

SHALL WE ADVERTISE?

A course on religious publicity, with special reference to advertising and the relations of churches and newspapers, has been introduced into the curriculum of Rochester Theological Seminary for the current year. In some way the benefits of such a course should be made available for the men who are already in the pastorate and who are anxious to do the right thing along this line. Why not some correspondence courses?

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

III. HOLINESS AND SIN

THE fundamental attribute of God is holiness. Holiness is self-affirming purity. In virtue of this attribute God eternally wills and maintains his own moral excellence. Justice and righteousness are only forms in which holiness manifests itself. Holiness is not self-communicating love, but rather self-affirming righteousness. Holiness limits and conditions love; for love can will happiness, only as happiness results from, or consists with righteousness, that is, with conformity to God. All nonconformity to God in moral relations is sin; and sin is hateful in God's sight, for it is not only the enemy and destroyer of all purity and peace, but it is in itself the opposite of the right, the true and the good. God therefore attaches suffering to sin, as its proper penalty, even though he himself shares in that suffering, as the Creator and Life of the sinner.

Years ago I stood on the deck of an ocean steamer, listening to the talk of the captain. A steward came suddenly forward and told the captain that a hostler, in charge of horses in the hold, had thrown a lighted match into the straw, and that the men near found difficulty in putting out the blaze. The captain turned pale, rushed to the gangway, seized the offender by the collar, dragged him from the stall, and put him in irons for the rest of the voyage. And all for throwing away a lighted match? Yes, because that lighted match might have meant the loss of the ship a thousand miles from land, and the drowning of all her passengers and crew. The captain hated fire.

The fire that God hates is sin. The least sin is self-multiplying. Left to itself, it will set on fire the whole course of nature, and it is itself set on fire by hell (James 3:6). God has permitted sin to begin in so small a way, in order that its evil may be the more manifest. How small a thing seemed the first transgression—the eating of the fruit of the forbidden tree!

"Twas but a little drop of sin

We saw this morning enter in;
And lo, at eventide, the world is drowned!"

A single flesh-fly, with its progeny in the tropics, will devour a sheep's carcass as quickly as will a lion. Sin is a principle in course of development. Do not judge it by what it is now, but by what it may become. Its small beginnings hide an infinity of evil. We can stamp out tuberculosis only at the start; when it is developed, there is no cure, and no staying of its ravages. And sin is plausible and deceitful at the beginning; it even comes to us as an angel of light (2 Cor. 11:14); but, "when it is full-grown, it bringeth forth death" (James 1:15). God, who sees the future in the present, cries to us with most pathetic voice: "O, do not this abominable thing, that I hate!" (Jer. 44:4). And Christ was "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world" (Rev. 13:8), because even from the beginning he suffered Excuse it as we may, apologize for our own sinfulness as we will, let us remember that the black, dire fact is here—an opiate in the will, a frenzy in the imagination, a madness in the brain, a poison in the heart. Culture cannot extract it; art cannot conceal it; indifference cannot forego it; foolish cults cannot clear it away.

—FREDERICK F. SHANNON.

for human sin. Can a father see his daughter the victim of a betrayer, lost to purity, and going down to death, without shame and agony that blanch the hair and paralyze the heart? Christ saw ten thousand cases like that; aye, the whole mass and weight of the world's sin and sorrow fell on him, till not only beads of sweat stood upon his brow, but the very blood was forced through the pores and fell in great drops upon the ground. All this, with the darkened heavens and the broken heart of the cross—these were not simply Christ's sufferings, they were God's also, and the apostle does not hesitate to speak of the church of God which he purchased with his own blood (Acts 20:28), for Christ's blood was the blood of God (Miscellanies, 2:340-359).

And yet the dreadful consequences of sin are not the main reason why God hates it. He hates it because it is the opposite of his nature. In itself, and apart from its consequences, it is condemnable. As you abhor dirt, filth, lust, cruelty, hypocrisy, so God abhors sin. It is rebellion over against his sovereignty; darkness, over against his light; impurity, over against his purity; selfishness, over against his love. Sin is his antagonist and would-be destroyer. Sin would dethrone God, and set up its own rule upon the ruins of God's empire. Sin is the effort of the creature to take the place of the Creator; of the planet to make itself the center of the solar system; of finite man to "oppose and exalt himself against all that is called God or that is worshipped; so that he sits in the temple of God, setting himself forth as God" (2 Thess. 2:4). All sin is the attempt, consciously or unconsciously, to secure what Satan promised in his first temptation, namely, "Ye shall be as God" (Gen. 3:5).

But God aims to show, not only the greatness of sin, but the greatness of Christ. If sin abounds, grace abounds much more (Rom. 5:20). As the ship captain starts to extinguish the blaze, so Christ leaves his throne, and endures the cross, that he may put down sin in this revolted province of his empire. It is a revelation to principalities and powers in heavenly places, as well as to mortal men. So he may preserve other worlds from falling, and the sad experience of our planet may work out the lasting good of the entire universe. This little sphere, though it is not the material center, may yet be the spiritual center, of God's whole system of worlds. Here is enacted the greatest drama of the ages. And the most important thing in history is the Cross, "Where Christ, the mighty Maker, died

For man, the creature's sin."

Let us estimate our own sins by God's standard. Let us see in the least of them the beginnings of infinite evil. Let us fly to Christ as our refuge from their guilt and power.

The one object of God's self-revelation in creation is to restore in man the image and likeness of God by making him a son, in union with Christ's sonship, and by giving him experience of his own greatness, in the reception of Christ's Spirit. For man, as we have seen, is essentially, not matter, but spirit. Like God himself, he can exist without body, and freed from the limitations of space and time. But being a finite, and not an infinite spirit, he can enter into this rest and dominion, only through growth and education. He must learn the alphabet before he can read, and must master the multiplication table before he can use the calculus. Space and time, with the limitations of a material body, are the necessary conditions of this education. And especially the possession and exercise of free-will are necessary for moral development and progress. Without freedom man's obedience to law would be merely automatic and mechanical. Power to do evil must exist, if there is to be any virtue in doing good. And God submits to the sorrow and suffering, which are the penalty of disobedience in his creatures, only because he can share that sorrow and suffering with them, and can make these evils the means of their restoration. The holiness of God, which punishes sin by its consequences of misery, has for its first effect his own suffering, so that God himself is the greatest sufferer of the universe (Gen. 6:6; Jer. 44:4, Is. 63:9).

God's plan, from the very beginning and before the beginning, included the permission of man's fall, together with the provision for his recovery. The first man was a child, but he was not a savage. He was undeveloped, but he had right intuitions and inclinations, and he was free to choose between good and evil. In the exercise of freedom, he might have chosen the path of upward progress; but he chose to take the downward road; and evolution may be downward toward hell, instead of upward toward heaven. We have numberless instances of animal species which have deteriorated and have finally gone out of existence; indeed, those which have perished outnumber the survivors a hundred to one. Herbert Spencer tells us that "retrogression has been as frequent as progression." And Tennyson contrasts the two tendencies in his couplet:

"Evolution, ever climbing after some ideal good,
And Reversion, ever dragging Evolution in the mud."

Is the world growing better? Yes, but it is also growing worse. Every increase of goodness makes evil more intense in its opposition. The free-will of man counteracts his upward growth in the arts, in science, and even in civilization, though these are proofs that the Spirit of Christ is still working in him. A very high artistic and poetic development may coexist with great moral degradation; as in the days of Raphael and the Borgias, when a pope could have his paramour painted for an altar-piece representing the Virgin.

In my essay on "Degeneration" (Miscellanies, 2:110-128), I have quoted the conclusions to which men of broad understanding have come with regard to the beginnings of the human race. "Cannibalism and infanticide," says Gulick, "are unknown among the anthropoid apes. These must be the results of degradation. Pirates and slaveholders are not men of low and abortive intelligence, but men of education, who deliberately throw off all restraint, and who use their powers for the destruction of society." "There is no cruel treatment of females among animals," says Mark Hopkins. "If man came from the lower animals, then he cannot have been originally savage, for you find the most of this cruel treatment among savages," and not among the lower animals. The apostle Paul, in the first chapter of his Epistle to the Romans, has given us the key to history, when he declares that primitive man knew God, but glorified him not as God; that he exchanged the truth of God for a lie, and in consequence was given up to a reprobate mind (Rom. 1:18-32); and John declares that this degeneration can be counteracted only by regeneration from above (John 3:3).

If what I have said thus far is true, we should regard human history as God's evolution of his plan for man's redemption through the work of Christ and of the Holy Spirit, which culminated in the suffering of the cross and the founding of the church. Little by little God has revealed himself, as the world has been able to bear it. Only in the fullness of time could the incarnation take place (Gal. 4:4); for, until man knew himself to be a lost sinner, there was no propriety in proclaiming to him salvation. Only to a chosen nation and to a prepared people could the clear prophecy of a Redeemer be given, while other peoples had only scattered rays of the true light (Rom. 3:1). Yet God did not leave himself without a witness in any land (Acts 14:17). Confucius and Buddha and Zoroaster were his partial agents, doing a little to reform evil systems and to improve moral conditions. Mixed with error as their teachings were, the coin they furnished had more of lead in it than silver; and the washing of silver that gave it currency did not prevent it from being a counterfeit of the true, nor from making its authors "thieves and robbers," when their doctrine stole the hearts of men away from Christ (John 10:8). When Christ himself comes in human form, he sums up all the truth of these partial revelations, and adds his personal testimony and example, to show that in him man may come to union and fellowship with the infinite God. The Holy Spirit who has put eternity into our heart (Eccl. 3:11; Miscellanies, 1:313-331), lifts us up at times to see things from God's point of view, sub specie aeternitatis. Inspiration, indeed, may be only the reinforcement of a faculty normal to sinless man, but which he has lost by transgression; and the prophets were men who "searched what time or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ which was in them did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glories that should follow them" (1 Pet. 1:11). So we have in human history a downward evolution caused by man's sin, side by side with an upward evolution due to the presence in humanity of the life-giving Christ. The tares and the wheat grow together till the time of the harvest (Mat. 13:30). Then the tares shall be cast into the furnace of fire, but the wheat shall be gathered into God's storehouses. The holiness of God shall at last be vindicated. The Cross of Christ on the one hand, and on the other hand the heaven or hell which follow its acceptance or rejection, show God's estimate of sin.

God Save the People

When wilt Thou save the people?

O God of mercy, when?

Not kings and lords, but nations,

Not thrones and crowns but men!

Flowers of Thy heart, O God, are they,

Let them not pass like weeds away,

Their heritage a sunless day:

God save the people!

Shall crime bring crime for ever,

Strength aiding still the strong?

Is it Thy will, O Father,

That man shall toil for wrong?

"No," say Thy mountains; "No,"

Thy skies;

Man's clouded sun shall brightly rise,

And songs ascend instead of sighs:

God save the people!

When wilt Thou save the people?

O God of mercy, when?

The people, Lord, the people,

Not thrones and crowns, but men;

God save the people! Thine they are,

Thy children, as Thine angels fair,—

From vice, oppression, and despair,

God save the people!

The Little Country With the Big Colony

Africa is large enough to hold Europe, India, China and the United States and still have plenty of room left. "Congo's past is as full of hidden horrors as its jungle fastness: slavery, oppression, drunkenness, exploitation, rubber atrocities."

By P. H. J. LERRIGO

CONGO could swallow Belgium at one bite, and the process would merely serve to whet its appetite. The area of the Colony is approximately eighty times that of the mother country. Congo is still the country of mighty rivers, exuberant vegetation, mysterious forests, wild animal life, cannibal savages and unestimated possibilities for the Kingdom of God; a wonderful monster to be held in leash by so diminutive a mistress. And Congo's past is as full of hidden horrors as its jungle fastness; slavery, oppression, drunkenness, exploitation, rubber atrocities. From the fifteenth century when white men first entered the mouth of the mighty river from which the district takes its name, Congo natives have had good cause to fear and hate white-skinned visitors from other shores.

AFRICA'S GREATNESS

The Visit of King Albert

King Albert, then Prince Albert, had plenty of time to think the situation through when he made his famous visit to Congo Belge. His uncle, King Leopold, perhaps for obvious reasons, was not especially anxious for him to take the journey to the great colony. But the prince decided to see the country for himself and to see it thoroughly. The task in itself had its fascinations and was bound to be illuminating. The Prince gave such time as was needful and whatever a prince may be expected to see, both of surface and subsurface conditions, Albert saw. It may be suspected indeed that he saw considerably more than some princely eyes might have discerned in the situation, and during the leisure of the homeward journey it is not improbable that he soliloquized thus within his princely soul: "Perhaps I am coming to the kingdom for such a time and such a task as this."

The interim of the terrible war, during which all but a fragment of little Belgium lay under the iron heel of the invader, did not wholly check the development of Albert's plans for the advancement of the great colony, and when the King of the Belgians came again into his own they were taken up with renewed interest.

A New Government Policy

Congo bulks large in the thinking of the Belgians. It stands for glamour, romance and tropical foliage. It spells adventure, hazard, novelty and possible riches. And with it is the underlying fear which compels respect. Under King Albert some of the best of Belgium's sons are devoting their lives to the development of the colony. The Compagnie Belge Maritime du Congo is building up a foreign passenger service. Two well-built modern steamers, the "Anversville" and the "Albertville" are in commission. The first was built at Glasgow, but national sentiment led to the building of the second at Hoboken, Belgium. It is modeled closely upon the original Scotch vessel. A third, the "Elizabethville," will be launched shortly. Formerly all the officers and a large part of the crew of vessels plying to the Congo were British, but Belgian officers have now been trained for all the places except those in the engineering department.

King Albert is a good Catholic and did not fail to attend mass while on his journey; but that he is not unappreciative of the evangelical standpoint is manifested by the cordial respect in which he holds Protestant missions and the efforts he is putting forth to give them opportunity to carry on their work. Perhaps the residence of Albert's family in the home of Lord Curzon of England during a large part of the war may have served to give them a closer sympathy with the Protestant viewpoint. He is, of course, specially interested in those phases of the work which have to do with the social and industrial development of the natives. Two members of Protestant missions, Rev. H. Ross-Phillips, representing the English Societies, and Rev. H. F. Hensey, representing the American Societies, serve upon the important government Commission for the Protection of the Natives.

Decline in Population

The Commission, at the request of the government, has recently made a careful study of the reasons for the serious reduction in the native population of Congo and has recommended important and radical measures to remedy the causes. It is supposed that the region now known

TYPICAL MISSIONARY BUNGALOW ON CONGO

REV. HENRY RICHARDS, 42

REV. JOSEPH CLARK, 41

REV. P. FREDERICKSON, 40

DR. A. SIMS, 39

Four Great Baptist Missionaries on the Congo and the Number of Years They Have Served.

as Congo Belge contained thirty million inhabitants or more at the time of Stanley's appearance at the coast after his memorable journey down the course of the Congo. This number has steadily declined until at the present time the state estimates that the population is little more than eight million. It is thought by some careful students that Stanley's figure may have been an unduly high estimate. The estimate of the present population given by the state is based upon the tax returns. It is considered by those who are in a favorable position to know the facts, much under the actual figure. Without doubt, however, the population has declined.

The Ravages of Sleeping Sickness

The chief factor in the decline is unquestionably the sleeping sickness which has been responsible for the disappearance of whole villages and the decimation of many others. An earnest effort is being made by state officials and missionaries alike to combat the disease. Protestants and Catholics are joining in it. Pere Dolan of the Premartane Fathers tells of the effort made by himself and his six colleagues in a section in the northeast part of the colony. He considers that they have succeeded in well-nigh eliminating the scourge from an area of one hundred square miles. Our own medical missionaries and those of other societies are engaged in a similar effort, each in his own section. The method involves the careful treatment of each case as soon as discovered. They are removed to the hospital for this purpose and kept under observation until every trace of the disease has disappeared. It was formerly thought to be incurable, but it is now considered that practically every case in the first degree may be cured. As the cases are weeded out of the community there occurs less and less opportunity for the tsetse fly which carries the parasite to become infected, and it is believed possible that in this way the community may be freed and kept free from the pest.

Making Medical Missions Effective

The Colonial Minister, M. Louis Franck, has recently written to the various missions at work in the Congo suggesting the importance of all its missionaries becoming familiar with the principles governing the recognition and management of diseases prevalent in the colony. The government had previously urged us to give our medical missionaries the opportunity of taking the course in tropical medicine at the University of Brussels, even expressing willingness to contribute toward the expense involved in such a plan. They now extend the offer to include every missionary working in the Congo, and are prepared to confer a diploma upon the satisfactory completion of the course which will give the recipient the right to treat the diseases in question. In case the missionary's knowledge of French is insufficient to take the course, the government suggests its willingness to assist in arranging for a preliminary course of study in the French language.

The journalist, Mr. Isaac F. Marcossan, who recently made an extensive visit to the Congo, has this to say regarding the Colonial Minister: "Franck represents the new type of Colonial minister. Instead of being a musty bureaucrat, as so many of them are, he is a live, alert progressive man of affairs, who played a big part in the late war. To begin with he is one of the foremost admiralty lawyers in Europe. When the Germans occupied Belgium he at once became conspicuous. He resisted the Teutonic scheme to separate the French and Flemish sections of the ravaged country. After the investment of Antwerp, his native place, accompanied by the burgomaster and the Spanish minister he went to the German headquarters and made the arrangement by which the city was saved from destruction by bombardment. He delayed this parley sufficiently to enable the Belgian army to escape to the Yser. Subsequently his activities on behalf of his countrymen made him so distasteful to the Germans that he was imprisoned in Germany for nearly a year. For two months of this time he shared the noble exile of Monsieur Max, the heroic burgomaster of Brussels."

The New Governor General

The King's earnest desire to bring about progress and development in the Congo is shown by the recent appointment of a pronounced progressive to the Governor Generalship of the Colony, M. Lippens of Ghent. He has a perfect command of English and is a student of progressive government in England and America. His metal was shown by his administration of the department of Belgium of which Ghent is the principal town. Here he succeeded in persuading both clerical and socialist parties to join in progressive measures, and so impressed King Albert with his ability along this line that the latter practically insisted that he should undertake the more important task of governing the nation's great Colony. Gov. Lippens has only recently assumed his duties, but has shown his practical wisdom by entering his new domain by the back door, making the long journey northward from the Cape by the Cape to Cairo railroad. He entered Congo at Elizabethville and is making a leisurely survey of the whole field, so that by the time he reaches the seat of administration, Boma, at the mouth of the Congo, he will have familiarized himself with conditions throughout the entire territory. Mr. Lippens is favorably disposed to the work of the evangelical missions.

AN OUTDOOR CONGO CONGREGATION

The Need of Evangelical Christianity

It must be borne in mind that in Belgium the Catholic faith is overwhelmingly predominant. The country is, for example, far more Catholic than is France. It is of comparatively recent date therefore that the evangelical Christians of Belgium have gathered sufficient strength to attack the problem of evangelizing the Congo. Before the war they were giving consideration to the establishment of a mission as soon as circumstances permitted. Following the conquest of German East Africa, the suzerainty of the newly conquered territory was for a time in dispute between Belgium and England, both of which had taken a substantial part in wresting the colony from German hands. The question was finally settled, amicably and happily by England's recognizing Belgium's right to the rich provinces of Urundi and Ruanda. These lie immediately to the east of Congo Belge, bordering Lake Tanganyika and Kivu. They are plentifully supplied with cattle and will do much to help the solution of the food supply problem of the adjacent provinces of Congo Belge. The call of the newly won field has proved irresistible to Belgian Protestants, and their Secretary, Dr. Henri Anet of Brussels, is now visiting these remote sections with a view to the establishment of evangelical centers.

Congo's cry of bitter need, however, has reached evangelical ears long before Belgian Protestants had gathered sufficient strength to enter the work, and Northern Baptists may thank God that from early days they have been permitted to take part in the inspiring task of giving the gosleaders in these departments, but Belgium cannot furnish men of simple faith, evangelical fervor and Christian vision for leadership in the task of creating a substructure of moral integrity and spiritual in-pel to a section of the globe the depth of whose spiritual poverty and need is perhaps without parallel. Barely had Stanley emerged from the impenetrable shadows of the Congo forests when the Baptist Missionary Society of England recognized the call of duty and privilege. The Livingston Inland Mission was no whit behind them.

A GROUP OF GRADUATES IN THE CONGO EVANGELISTIC TRAINING INSTITUTION

American Baptists Enter the Field

In 1884 the latter became the Congo Mission of our own Foreign Mission Society, then known as the American Baptist Missionary Union. Of the pioneers in the work four still remain, Rev. Henry Richards, who went to the field in 1879; Rev. Joseph Clark, 1880; Rev. Peter Frederickson, 1881, and Dr. Aaron Sims, 1882. These four men have given 162 years to Africa. The apostolic faith, the unremitting zeal and the undiscourageable determination of these men should be a clarion call to the youth and vigor of our denomination. When these men pass—God grant that it may be a long day from now—who will fill their places? Four new missionaries have sailed this year, Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Wakeman, Mr. H. Erickson, and Miss F. N. Crane, but there have been losses through illness and there are urgent needs to fill. Moreover, a new day has dawned for Congo, a day of progress and opportunity. Belgium is showing a determination to bring the colony abreast of modern development in commerce and government. Belgium can provide able sight capable of bearing the weight of modern development in other lines. Before Belgium had assumed governmental responsibility for the great wild territory, even before the fertile imagination of King Leopold had been stirred with the acquisitive vision of Congo's possibilities, God had laid upon the hearts of evangelical Christians in England the burden of responsibility for the spiritual tutelage of the children of the forests and jungles. American Baptists accepted their share of the burden before the lapse of many years. Four decades of service have been given, wresting from the midst of almost unimaginable degradation a spiritual harvest which is the wonder of the Christian world.

The Appeal of Congo

Moreover, it should not be forgotten that great English and American commercial and industrial interests are sending wide awake, vigorous young men into Congo Belge, the Lever interests for the exploitation of the palm oil industry and the Forminiere Company, which has enlisted American capital, for the development of Katanga. Where America sends its young men to undertake commercial and engineering tasks the church must also send its young men and women for Kingdom tasks. Our Congo Mission has need of educators, builders, agriculturalists, industrialists, business experts, physicians, nurses and above all trained evangelistic workers, for a complete missionary program.

Who's Who Among Baptists

A Review of Contemporary Denominational Biography

By WILLIAM B. LIPPHARD

THE HON. CHARLES E. HUGHES
Secretary of State of the United States of America

THE eyes of the world are looking toward Washington. By the time this issue of THE BAPTIST reaches its readers a conference will have convened in the American capital in whose hands lies the destiny of humanity. The people of the earth look toward this great assembly of the nations with mingled feelings of hope and apprehension, of faith and anxiety, of confidence and fear. If the conference succeeds in its object, racial harmony and international understanding will rise above the horizon like the morning sun. But what if it fails? The world crisis of 1914 will seem negligible in comparison with that which might easily result in the not distant future if this conference fails.

What a tremendous fact it is that the presiding officer of this solemn assembly is the son of a preacher. From a humble Baptist parsonage has come a world leader. The most ambitious dreams of a father for his child have been far eclipsed by the actual achievements of the son. Here is an outstanding refutation of the altogether too prevalent notion that the sons of ministers are liabilities rather than assets in human society. Who knows but that this son of a preacher has come to the Kingdom for an hour such as this.

Charles E. Hughes, son of the late Rev. David C. Hughes, was born in Glens Falls, N. Y. He is just now in the prime of manhood, at the peak of intellectual accomplishment, at the summit of moral influence, and on the threshold of the crowning achievement of his career. Few men in any walk of life present to the biographer a more complete and satisfying example of what is generally understood as a career. He has been splendidly equipped for his tremendous task. By profession a lawyer, he has throughout his career given evidence of such unusual legal ability and of possessing such a masterly judicial mind that he has come to be internationally recognized as one of the great jurists of the world. Ten American universities have conferred upon him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws.

After studying at Colgate University and at Brown University, and graduating from the latter in 1881, he took his law course at Columbia University, and in 1884 was admitted to the New York bar. From that year until 1906 he practiced law in New York. He soon built up a successful practice and large corporations, business leaders, fiduciary institutions came in great numbers to secure his legal services. They were impressed with his remarkable ability, and they soon learned that here was a lawyer whose work rested upon fundamental principles. In addition to practicing law, he devoted considerable time to teaching, serving on the faculty of Columbia, as special lecturer at Cornell and as special lecturer at the New York Law School.

CHARLES E. HUGHES

In 1905 and 1906 two outstanding achievements brought him into national prominence, one being his service with the United States Attorney General in the Coal Investigation, and the other his service for the New York State legislature in the famous Insurance Investigation. Every man who holds a life insurance policy owes a debt of gratitude to Charles E. Hughes for the unwavering, fearless manner in which he uncovered and corrected the gross irregularities and the immense corruption in the handling of insurance funds. In recognition of this constructive service he was nominated Mayor of New York City, but declined in order to continue his law practice.

The people of New York then demanded that a man of his unflinching personality and moral earnestness serve them as Governor, he was elected by an overwhelming majority. For two terms he administered the affairs of New York State at Albany, resigning in 1910 in order to accept his appointment as Associate Justice of the United States Supreme Court. With the exception of the Chief Justiceship this is the highest honor which can come to an American lawyer. In 1916, ill advised by those conducting the presidential campaign, he lost the election to the White House, and having previously resigned his justiceship, he returned to New York to re-enter the practice of law.

Appointed by President Harding in 1921 as Secretary of State, he has been filling this responsible office with unprecedented success. Already men are proclaiming him the greatest Secretary of State in the history of the Republic. Not in many years has a Cabinet appointment met with such universal and unqualified approval. Secretary Hughes is today one of the most popular men in public life, delightfully approachable, refreshingly courteous, yet inspiringly dignified. Every act and word indicate the fine balance and the matchless poise of a judicial temperament. Nevertheless, he enjoys pleasantries, even in the midst of serious conversations. When Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke and the writer called by appointment at the State Department, he seemed immensely amused at the prestige which Dr. Rushbrooke had enjoyed as a Baptist in his visit to certain European capitals, because he belonged to the same denomination as the Secretary of State and the President.

Secretary Hughes has been actively identified with the work of the denomination. Wherever he has lived he has been associated with a Baptist church and has been deeply interested in its work and progress. He holds the distinction of having served as the first President of the Northern Baptist Convention.

The unknown author of the "Mirrors of Washington" has appropriately described the intellectual acumen and the unquestioned integrity of Secretary Hughes: "No matter what subject was up at a Cabinet meeting, it was always the Secretary of State who said the final convincing word about it, summing it all up, saying what every one else had been trying to say but no one else had entirely succeeded in saying. Conclusions with him rest upon the absolute rock of principle, as morality for his preacher father rested upon the absolute rock of the Ten Commandments. His mind rests somewhere on the eternal verities."

How fortunate it is that America, in this critical hour of her relations with the world, has as the presiding officer of this momentous conference, a man of such sterling character, such moral earnestness, and such fearless adherence to principle.

We may rest assured that it will be no fault of his if the Conference on the Limitation of Armament does not achieve all that its ardent advocates may have desired.

*"Revere the Maker; fetch thine eye
Up to His Manner in the sky.
Not of adamant and gold
Built He Heaven stark and cold;
No, but a nest of bending reeds,
Flowering grass and scented weeds;
Or like a traveler's fleeing tent,
Or bow above the tempest bent;
Built of tears and sacred flames,
And virtue reaching to its aims;
Built of furtherance and pursuing,
Not of spent deeds, but of doing."*

The Pastor and His Young People

BY MILTON MCGORRILL

Director of Young People's Work, American Baptist Publication Society

IF leadership is the touchstone of progress and accomplishment, the pastor as the leader of his church is the touchstone of his young people's problem. Leadership of young people by young people is desirable and necessary but the relationship of young people to their pastor, if it be warm, will solve many a problem of inefficient leadership, and if it be cold and divisive, will suppress many a good leader and create further problem. The average pastor is known to be the busiest of the busy and one against whom every disgruntled member or organization may have its fling of criticism. The young people, however, constituting such a considerable group in his parish are entitled to a hearing on his relationship with them. They do not ask that the details of leadership be his but they do demand that he develop and control in himself and the church at large an atmosphere that is favorable to young people.

Young People a Live Issue

In this regard five things stand out prominently in the relationship of young people to the church, of which they are a part, and to the pastor. (1) The pastor is responsible for the spirit of the church in regard to young people. The question has often been asked, "Is there any room for young people in the church?" Is it simply for mature and older people or is it for all ages? Theoretically this question is asked no longer, for it has been answered that the church should appeal to the full range of life. Practically, however, in hundreds of churches the question is still a live issue. Some young people keep their relationship with the church in spite of, rather than because of, the spirit of the pastor and the church. In a New England church the Boy Scouts were forbidden by the trustees the use of the vestry or any part of the church because one boy broke one of the chairs. The writer holds no brief in favor of boys breaking chairs but he does hold that such procedure on the part of trustees will result, as it did in this case, in antagonism and ill feeling toward the church perhaps for the whole life of some of those boys. Such action is suggestive of the experience of Christ after healing the man with legion devils. The people were disturbed more about the loss of two thousand swine than they rejoiced to see a man's sanity restored. Saving property at the expense of human character development is not Christian. The spirit of the church regarding young people is largely the matter of the pastor to foster.

(2) The pastor is responsible for the democracy of the church as it touches youth. If young people are an integral part of church life then their wishes and counsel should be considered. It has long been an axiom in work with young people that a program imposed from without will not succeed. Autocracy may develop efficiency, but by imposition; democracy develops character by individual responsibility. Young people on church committees, boards of deacons, as assistant officers are proving valuable. Young people recognized in all the activities of church life is not an impossible or impractical ideal. The training element embodied in such recognition will insure efficient, mature officers later.

(3) The pastor is responsible for the recognition of developing personality. Young people are changing constantly, personality is developing. Instruction must be on a basis of the development attained. Expression as well should be based on the development of the personality. The girl who yesterday took orders submissively from her mother, to-day questions and debates her mother's demands—she has developed. Yesterday the boy's mind was a sponge sopping up everything told him. To-day he is questioning, his mind challenges authority—he has developed. Unfortunately is the pastor who does not understand the opportunity that development gives him not only in instruction but in expression as well. Adult formulas imposed on youth will not succeed. The pastor is recognizing and meeting the needs of changing and developing personality.

(4) The pastor is responsible for the contact of his own personality with that of young people. A friendly pastor will develop a loyal group of young people. Enthusiasm, humor, being interested in their interests, unaffectedness, sincerity, sympathy are some of the qualities desired. Personality, however, is difficult to define. It is the totality of that personality that influences so tremendously. The sum total of what a pastor is, is viewed by the eyes of youth that do not err in judging personality—it is that which in the final analysis wins or loses young people.

Interpret in Terms of Youth

(5) The pastor is responsible for the interpretation of the gospel in terms of young life. Whatever else may be his duties the pastor is the interpreter of the message of life in Jesus Christ. Here his task is two-fold—first, to keep his ear close to the partition that encloses the spiritual resources that he may hear the eternal message; second, to keep close enough to the needs of his people that he may give the message in terms that can be understood. Young people want and need a message in these formative years, but it must be a real message—not an emotional splurge. It must be in terms they understand—namely of their needs. The pastor does not know their needs until he knows them—and knows them not wholly from books but from life. Groups of young people are not the same—in fact their chief uniformity is in their

There was a man, there was a man,
Who hated meddling so,
He saw his neighbor's house burn down
And closer drew his dressing-gown
And let the building go.

There was a man, there was a man,
Who always lent a hand,
What'er his neighbors did, he'd try
To have a finger in the pie;
They drove him from the land.

And old Diogenes remarked
The difference to hit:
"Twixt meddling when you do no good
And bravely helping when you should Requires a pretty wit." —Selected.

lack of uniformity. The group of factory girls is very different from a group of college girls of the same age. The farm boy is different from the city boy. Certain fundamental instincts will constitute some problems that are the same in all, but environment creates many others that can be ascertained only by knowing the particular group of young people. The pastor's message must take cognizance of these if it is to have meaning.

In addition to the general characteristics there are certain definite characteristics which young people demand in a message. These have been analyzed by the writer out of copious criticisms of pastor's messages which have come from young people themselves, voluntarily in conversation, class work, one or two from written work on other subjects. No criticism was asked for, but when one was given spontaneously the writer noted it. This statement is made in order that the validity and sincerity of the criticisms may be justified.

What Their Ears Will Hear

(a) The message must be vital not academic. Speculation on unimportant matters may be profitable mental gymnastics but youth is asking for something that helps solve its problems. (b) It must be fearless. The most successful college preacher in an Eastern college is a man who gives his message about the short coming of youth in a "straight-from-the-shoulder" manner. The men respect him. Youth is accustomed "to call a spade a spade." Why not the preacher who talks to youth? (c) It must be definite, not so general that it includes everything, and therefore nothing. (d) It must be scientific. All the evidence must be in before conclusion is given. Disregard of any tried facts disgusts youth. The message must meet the test of the evidence brought in from whatever quarter. (e) It must be suggestive, not dogmatic. The true scientific spirit leaves the way open for the consideration of more evidence and a possible changing of conclusion. This does not undermine the surety of present opinion based on the evidence but it does insure the possibility of carrying the thinking and investigation further. (f) It must be tolerant, not suppressive or superior. One of the chief difficulties the doubting youth many times has with his pastor is the pastor's intolerance with the youth's questions and doubtings of what seem to the pastor the vital parts of his creed. Tolerance of the developing mentality is essential. (g) It must be sincere. (h) It must be directive in conduct. Methods of carrying out the message in life are essential to its success. Change in character is the aim of preaching and teaching. The only way change in character is observable is by conduct. Relationship of conduct to the message, then, must be clearly shown.

What has been written is only an attempt to interpret the spirit of young people toward pastors and their duties. Altogether the regard of young people for pastors is one of respect and love and loyalty. They want him to be their friend and they want to be his friend. Only by being mutual friends can either pastor or young people attain the relationship desired.

The Other Side of the Average Country Church

"Every problem in the church is a spiritual problem. In these days of organization, of wheels within wheels, the only stream that can successfully start the wheels and keep them steadily turning is evangelism."

By ARTHUR E. COWLEY

IF I wanted a text for this article, it would be Mark 4:35—"Let us go unto the other side." I have read with keen interest and appreciation the article by Mr. T. H. Alvord on "The Average Country Church," which appeared in THE BAPTIST recently. I would like to dwell upon some things which were suggested by that article, and then offer a suggestive program which might help the condition.

First of all concerning the relation between the country church and the seminary student. What about it? Surely it is one of mutual benefit. I know men of rare spiritual insight and splendid leaders who are serving such churches for a mere pittance. These churches could not begin to have such a ministry were it not for their proximity to the theological seminary. If they paid a man on the field what they are paying the student, the kind of man that they would get for the same money would not do the good that the student is doing. If they paid more, it would not be necessary.

Who is Responsible?

But is the seminary student-pastor responsible for the condition of the average country church? I think not, since I find things about the same elsewhere, even with a pastor on the field. The cause is deeper than that. In regard to the over-church communities the pastor is rarely to blame. In the village where I am pastor we have two churches while the community only needs one. My predecessor, a fine conscientious worker, heartily believed and advised church union, but they, the churches, would not have it. Each one is waiting for the other one to die. But even mere uniting will not solve the problem. If the whole is but the sum of the parts, such a union would give us centralization without power, if both churches held to their old program.

The constituency of the average country church is very difficult to work with. I have worked in cities of 30,000 and of 250,000, and the work there was not as hard as here in this little village. These conventionalized communities will test any man's heart and brain. Because of this, the condition of the average country church is as much due to its people as to its pastor. Oftimes the fresh young life leaves us at its peak of greatest usefulness and we are left with nothing but self-satisfied, complacent retired Christians.

Now I would like to suggest a program that might help to solve the problem. I not posing as an expert, but I have tried these things and they have given a measure of success. I think that if used with a local application, they would change the condition of many an average country church. Some of the suggestions will also work in the small city church as well.

In the two larger places mentioned and now in this little village of a thousand, gratifying results have followed. In the town of 30,000 these methods helped to organize into a flourishing little church a work that had been a struggling mission for about fifteen years. In the town of 250,000 the membership doubled, the church was the first in its state to make its New World Movement pledge, and added five Sunday-school rooms in less than three years.

The program is a fourfold one. I would not be arbitrary about it, but I think all of the elements are needed to adequately develop the church. Here is the program:

1. Evangelism.
2. Wise Publicity.
3. Community Service.
4. Business Methods.

First, Evangelism. A friend asked me if the first thing I did when I went to a church was to present a program. I told him that I never did this. The first thing to be done, it seems to me, is to have an atmosphere of evangelism, or, if you like, spirituality. In such hours of vision, the power that alone can make our programs successful is generated. Many a man fails because he brings his cut and dried program out too soon and the thing never gets the right start. We must remember that every problem in the church, whether financial or otherwise, is a spiritual problem. In these days of organization, of wheel within wheels, the only stream that can successfully start the wheels and keep them steadily turning is evangelism. By this I do not mean an evangelistic spurt once a year, but an evangelistic spirit that permeates the whole program of the church for the whole year.

Second, wise publicity. I believe tremendously in "consecrated printer's ink." Just remember that America with only 5 per cent of the world's population has 40 per cent of the world's papers and magazines. Every year over 15,000,000 papers and magazines are turned out by the presses in America. Why should the average country church ignore such a great factor in life? About a week after the latest book is published the farmer knows about it. The great mailing houses reach the smallest villages quickly with their latest merchandise. But the average country church has the "usual" announcement of the "usual" services which the community has noticed so long that now it ignores them.

The Gospel on Blotters

At the beginning of the school year every child in our village school received a blotter with something like this on: "A house is not a home; a home needs religion and religion needs a home. Why not make the Baptist Church your church-home?" Then there was an attractive invitation to all of the services at "The Home of Friendliness." These blotters were also put in the post-office and the banks. The cost was small, but the influence great.

We have been paying 75 cents for a three-inch space in the town paper. This has a circulation of 1,100, so you can easily figure how much of a cent it is costing us to reach each individual. Of course, the advertising needs to be done judiciously and attractively. Here are two samples:

"THEODORE ROOSEVELT SAID:

'A churchless community is one on the rapid down-grade.'

"If every one went to church as often as I, How long would it take this town to die?"

Hear

Rev. A. E. Cowley, Sunday, 10:45
Subject 'The Open Windows'.

The Baptist Church
'The Home of Friendliness' "

Recently the whole village was having a general exit to a nearby city to see John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln." Our advertisement for the following Sunday was:

"Abraham Lincoln said:

'God bless the churches and blessed be God who giveth them to us.' Why? He knew their worth. Do you?"

Then the invitation and announcement of sermon in an interesting way.

Where the People Pass

We had no bulletin board when I came. I noticed a fine location right in the centre of the main street. The space was right next to the board of the moving picture show. I knew everybody looked there. We were allowed to use the ground free, and for five dollars had a bulletin board and glass made. I buy the gummed letters and make my own signs. My wife keeps her eyes open for good pictures in magazines. We cut them and our bulletin becomes a work of art. Soon the whole town was reading the Baptist Bulletin. It simply demanded attention, and like everything else interesting in life, folks could not resist its appeal. Any one can make these bulletins at a small cost. The letters in some ways are better than the steel ones, and only cost four cents for ten.

Now what about the cost? Can you afford it? You can't afford not to. On a recent Sunday our loose collection was $13, enough to pay our advertising bill for almost three months. When I was a student in college, I took a course in the psychology of advertising. It was a study of appeals that reach men. I got more from that than from any other more ministerial subject.

Third, community service. Every church should remember that as long as it keeps aloof from the community, the community will hold itself aloof from the church. If it is only open on Sunday for the church services and once a week for the "weakly" prayer-meeting, it can scarcely demand more than an artificial respect. It must mean more than this. In my town there is really nothing for the young people except the weekly moving pictures, a card club and an occasional dance. Now it is very easy to pharisaically criticise these practices, but what are the young people to do? Sit at home and twirl their fingers? They can't get a train back from the city in the evening. So the youth is simply fritting itself out in these things which are really not re-creational, never mind elevating.

We are struggling with this problem. Once a month we are having community night. Sometimes we use the stereopticon. I gave a picture lecture on "The Grand Canyon and Yosemite Valley" at one of these. No admission is charged and the voluntary offering pays expenses. We would suggest a forum, a night of community games, a play put on by the young people, a community sing or concert, men's social meetings and other such events. If the community realizes that the church is not a parasite, always selling tickets or begging, but is there to actually serve, it will respond to the appeal.

Lastly, I suggest business methods. This means a better organized church and Sunday-school. In matters of finances and other things the average country church is often far behind. The Sunday-school especially is often poorly planned and conducted, and this is the center of a church's weakness or strength. Special days should be held, and a determined effort made to put the instruction on some kind of a graded basis. We had a Surprise Rally Day recently. Each class, from the primary to the adult had to give an item in the program, and none outside the class knew what that was. Everybody got busy and we had a rally day that rallied with the best attendance in ten years.

Once a month every member receives a letter giving the average attendance for the past month, and the financial state, items of interest in the past month, and the program for the next month. It is a regular business letter. We do this on the mimeograph.

The results here are that our average attendance at church and Sunday-school has just about doubled, and the finances are showing the increase. I was told that a Sunday-evening audience was impossible. With fine effect we have used the illustrated hymns for solo work. Our average attendance recently was over 10 per cent of the community population.

The work of the average country church is hard, but worth while. In this article I do not claim originality of thought so much as originality of selection. Others have sown where I have reaped. To the aggressive leadership which will solve every church problem I pass on these suggestions which have in some measure changed a dying institution into one living, and pulsating with passion and power.

Only One Marion Now

By J. J. ROSS

I HAVE just returned from a three days' series of meetings which were held in the Trinity Church, Marion, Ohio, where the Rev. Thomas Hugh McAfee is the honored and much-loved pastor, and the Rev. George M. Landis, a student of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, is the highly respected associate pastor. Dr. McAfee has been laid aside through serious illness since the "Campaign," during which time he did not spare himself. This is the church in which Warren G. Harding, the President of the United States of America, holds his membership. I had no sooner entered the building for the first service, than a lady pointed out the seat where Mr. Harding sat and worshipped for years. I sat in the space which he occupied while attending the services, and felt, while there, dignity creeping up all over me, and national and international obligations, like wave on wave, roll and break against me. I did not sit there very long, for I felt it was no place for me. I was informed that the great majority of the church membership desired to put a gold plate on the end of the seat to indicate where Harding sat, but those in the church who are not of his political color were not in favor of it, and so the matter, for the present is being left in abeyance. I noticed that the Harding seat was well occupied at each service, and one man, while occupying the Harding space, dared to doze off to sleep while the message was being delivered. He certainly did not know of his whereabouts! Many come from the four points of the compass to see the church where Harding worshipped.

Eighty Years Luscious

I had the pleasure of calling on Mr. Tryon Harding, M.D., the father of the President. I found him a genial, cultured, luscious old gentleman, well on into the eighties. He still practices his profession, and naturally is greatly interested in all things that concern "Warren." He receives about one hundred letters a week from different parts of the country, asking him to intercede with his son for political and other honors. He informed me that he read all the letters and then burned most of them. There was a large bunch of letters on his desk that looked very significant.

He also said in the course of our conversation, "I have tried by Divine Providence, to bring up all my family sincere Christians and good Baptists." When I rose to leave the old gentleman, he clasped me by the hand, and at that time I felt myself very near the President, and he said, "I want you to accept from me a photograph of Warren," which I did with real pride and honor in my heart.

One of Twenty-nine

Are you aware that 89,475 people in the United States could justly claim that they reside in Marion? However, not all of them live in Marion, Ohio, for there are no less than twenty-nine Marions in this country. Marion, Ohio, is at the head of the list, with a population of 27,891, and Marion, Maine, and Marion, Oregon, divide honors at the other end of the list, each having a population of one hundred. The second Marion on the list, is the one in Indiana, with a population of 23,749. There are ten cities by this name, with populations from 1,000 to 10,000, the other seventeen having less than 1,000 people. Of these seventeen, seven have fewer than 300 people. The average population of the Marions is 3,085. Since the election of Harding as President, these Marions all have considerable trouble with mail addressed to the right town in the wrong state. To help this situation, the larger Marions have exchanged city directories with Marion, Ohio. It is claimed that the post-office heads in Marion, Ohio, now are nearly as familiar with the names of the streets and the people in the other larger Marions of the country as they are with local names and addresses.

This all indicates what a change has come over Marion, Ohio, on account of one of its citizens becoming President of the country. But this is not all, for I went out into the country, a distance of about fifteen miles, and all the finger boards which previously pointed the direction and distance to Cleveland, now point the direction and distance to Marion. Since the inauguration of the President, thousands upon thousands of people have come from all over the country, and many from other countries, to see the Harding city and home. They have thought so much of the Harding home, as to completely destroy the beautiful hedge that surrounded the spacious lawn by tramping it beneath their feet and carrying bits of it off as souvenirs. They also destroyed the spacious lawn so that recently it had to be re-sodded. Other homes near by were in danger of being injured, and so now, over the front entrance to the Harding home, they keep afloat to the breeze a large flag, the insignia of the country.

At the present time, a magnificent drive is being pushed through Marion, but whence it cometh and whither it goeth, we know not, and that drive is to be called the Harding Highway. In the near future, a large inn is to be erected in Marion and it is to be called the Harding Hotel. The Board of Education in the city has changed the name of the Marion High School to the Harding High School. On the first floor of the school, hanging in the corridor, there is a beautiful tablet which bears the following inscription:

"This Tablet was Erected by the Class of 1921
to Commemorate the Changing of the Name of this School to Harding High School
in Honor of
Warren Gamaliel Harding
Twenty-ninth President of
The United States."

It was a splendid testimony to the character and conduct of the man to hear his fellow members in the church and others outside of the church bear witness to his sterling qualities. Unless absent from the city or ill, Warren Gamaliel Harding was always in his place in the public worship of God on the Lord's Day, and at the prayer services on Wednesday evenings. I was informed that for many years he was a Bible student and a man of prayer. He loved his church. Through his great kindness, it is possible for the church to pay the sick pastor his full salary, and to provide for an associate pastor with a reasonable stipend. It is sincerely hoped that the pastor may be restored to his health and to his work again. The people love him and honor him. The Rev. George M. Landis, a young man of even temper, good common sense, meek spirituality, and earnestness for the salvation of souls, is doing a splendid work there. On all sides I heard agreeable testimonies concerning him. As divinely commanded, let us all pray with holy uplifted hands for God's servant, and our brother, the Honorable Warren Gamaliel Harding, the President of the United States of America.

"To work, to help and to be helped, to learn sympathy through suffering, to learn faith by perplexity, to reach truth through wonder; behold! this is what it is to prosper, this is what it is to live."
—PHILLIPS BROOKS.

Baptist Mission in Hungary

"Her husband had died . . . and the bereaved one, with six orphans, stood there bravely fighting for life. . . . It was heart-rending to see that pale and meager woman carrying tiles and mortar."

By ATTILLA CSOPJAK

BEFORE the great world-war the Baptist Union in Hungary was unknown to most Baptists of other countries. It was a rule to confound us with Austria. But now, since Hungary became an absolutely independent state, the evangelic activity in this country is getting more notorious in those foreign circles that are anxious to enlarge the Kingdom of God and to plant the Christian doctrine into practical life. Hungary's people are a spiritual soil wherein labor can produce very much in a short time and where the seed of the gospel is ripening abundant fruit. Two-thirds of the population are Catholic, one-third Protestant, but in matter of faith for the greatest part lifeless. In the seventh decennium of the last century there existed a few Baptists in this country already, but regular mission-life began only in the year 1873; and from that time their number was continually rising from year to year and in 1914 it surpassed 23,000 already. We possessed seven periodicals, a printing-office, plenty of psalm-books and tracts, furthermore, two asylum-houses; and we went on establishing a preachers-school. All that we have reached almost without any help from abroad, as the inconsiderable pecuniary support arriving from Germany was rather given to the assemblies of German tongue.

In the Path of the War

We were rightly entitled to cherish the best hopes for the times coming, when that unfortunate great war came to an outbreak. I do not wish to describe at present our brethren's sufferings from loss of men and strength; but, with the loud cries of sorrow of a desperate big number of widows and orphans still ringing even now, our Hungarian organization has lost more than two-thirds of its members. The neighboring states snatched away from us so large territories that there remained only a middle-piece, one-third of the whole, and so with the loss of those territories our organization has lost also 16,000 Baptist brethren, who verily kept their faith, but a direct intercourse with them ceased. There remained in the dismembered Hungary only 7,000 Baptists, and we must endeavor to reconstitute the old figure as soon as possible. Our mission-laborers do their best in this behalf, and many a place having given signs of spiritual resurrection, we succeeded in restoring part of the damage already. In the course of this year, till today, we have baptized on forty-five places and at fifty-one occasions 791 converted persons, this making 5 per cent of the whole loss and we possibly may add thereto still further 2 per cent till New Year. We purpose to work with compound interest and hope to attain, with the Almighty's assistance, the old peace-figure in ten years.

The number of our journals unfortunately fell down from seven to four, but the old standard of our readers is nearly attained; it will be surpassed, so we hope, in one year. We are possessing a printing house. We have erected two orphan-houses with sixty children and five branches with four to five orphans each, under the survey of their mothers or other guardians. We have two asylum-houses for our old, poor and disabled brethren, with forty persons placed in for the present. In the Central Office there is a relief committee, soothing from the donations arriving from home and abroad the sufferings of many hundreds widows, orphans and poor families.

We have a preachers-school already, with nineteen scholars and four teachers. We are needing preachers very urgently and ought therefore to enlarge our schools. The provincial mission is under the care of a head-committee; the secretaries of the mission and the Sunday-schools frequently are traveling.

Churches Small and Poor

Heavy difficulties are arising, however, from the circumstance that about in 300 communities the assemblies are but very small, consisting of fifteen to thirty members only. Such places cannot be supplied with separate preachers, they therefore are united into districts and so one preacher is providing for a whole district. Thus many a preacher has twenty to twenty-three assemblies or stations to provide for. The wife of a preacher was complaining of being able to count the days when, since her marriage, her husband stayed at home. It would be exceedingly desirable to divide such circuits and to give them preachers with central help.

Amongst the Hungarians there are but very few analphabets (illiterates) and the lecture of the Bible does not cause any difficulty. Youth loves song. We have our own country singing chorus with a great many members. Also singing festivities are frequently held. In larger assemblies there are wind and string orchestras. Such music bands are making excursions and proved a most proper help in the work of evangelizing. In the municipality of Kiskoros the choirs and bands met in a gigantic tent of boards and discharged their duty there with an interruption of a slight pause, from 3:30 in the afternoon till 11 o'clock, greatly delighting the auditory.

The development of our mission is owing very much to the noble-minded care bestowed on us at present by our American, English and Hungarian brethren, more particularly by the Southern Union. From the latter material support is coming since the 15th of November, 1920, and we well know this would not miss its spiritual profit. Also our native brethren are ready to sacrifices; and though those few wealthier ones might give more, the poor sometimes do so in a way exceeding their strength, especially at Budapest and its surroundings, where misery is enormous, but where also zeal is heating the hearts.

God Help Her!

In the community of Kispeszt, having 65,000 inhabitants, the brethren though mostly penniless, have resolved to erect, on the place of the old chapel, a new and larger one. Till then they would meet in the gymnastic hall of a school. Once I went there to inspect the constructions and perceived a very poor widow working. Her husband has died all of a sudden and the bereaved one, with six orphans, stood there fighting for life, wholly without any subsistence. It was heart-rending to see that pale and meagre woman in such a hard labor, carrying tiles and mortar. But what happened! Next Sunday the same widow appeared at the preaching-table and deposited there 100 Hungarian crowns for the new chapel, and put down furthermore her golden wedding-ring, perhaps the sole remainder of happier days. Well, if things are going on in this way, the chapel will certainly be erected by—widows.

Church Week-Day Schools

By THOMAS S. YOUNG

At the invitation of Rev. J. H. Palmer, pastor, First Baptist Church, Cambridge, Ohio, was visited. Mr. Palmer with his assistant, Miss Edith L. Place, is doing an aggressive work. The conditions are right for the church week-day school. The public school board has granted time for the holding of these schools. A committee is working on plans. The expectation is for the creation of a community council of religious education composed of official representatives of all co-operating bodies. Local community boards of religious education will be formed by the several communities in the city. It is probable that some communities may desire a community school while others will want denominational schools, but co-operating formally with the community board. These two types of school are satisfactory, working side by side.

In Cincinnati it was found that the public school had for many years practiced excusing pupils for religious education, when so requested. This fact seems to have been overlooked, and no Protestant church has been utilizing the privilege until recently. In the spring of the present year, one Episcopalian rector asked for and secured the dismissal of pupils in one school district. In October he requested the pupils in two more districts. In one his request was granted, but refused in the other. This brought the matter out into the open. The assistant superintendent of public schools ruled that pupils whose parents so requested might be excused for religious education, and instructed the superintendent of the district in question to excuse pupils bringing requests.

Four districts in Kansas City, Mo., are excusing pupils for church week-day schools. The public school board has doubled the amount of time granted last year. Two sessions of one hour are used by each group each week.

This city has been working toward church week-day schools for nearly a year. A general committee has been formed and sub-committees are at work preparing details. It is expected the schools will be opened in January.

The interest in Church Week-Day Schools in Minnesota is growing in a remarkable way. A number of cities throughout the state are carrying on the work. There is strong reason to believe this number will be largely augmented during the present year.

During the State Convention held at Beloit, Wis., October 10-14, an entire afternoon was given to the interests of Church Vacation and Church Week-Day Schools. As a result of the testimonies of pastors who had engaged in vacation schools, together with other material presented, an intense interest was developed. The president of Beloit College presided at the men's banquet on Wednesday evening. In his opening remarks the president made the following statement and read the resolution involved:

The College Association of Wisconsin, representing ten colleges, one of which is a Catholic institution, passed a resolution suggesting that the school boards of the various communities of the state be asked to grant one hour each day for religious education of pupils. This resolution had already been submitted to and passed by the state convention of the Presbyterian, Congregationalists, and Methodists. The resolution was presented, through the committee on religious education, at the convention on Thursday, and passed unanimously, thus endorsing the suggestion of the College Association. This is the most advanced step taken by any state in the matter of Church Week-Day Schools up to the present time. It should make Wisconsin the leader in the movement.

Two interesting things have come to us from the Evanston Church week-day schools. The schools are no longer permitted to use public school buildings, but they have been given public school time for their work. We feel that both of these are to the advancement of the work, and we believe that Evanston will greatly profit thereby.

Churdam, Iowa, has organized with a community board of religious education under which each church is carrying on its own school, thus making community denominational schools. Mrs. C. S. Osborne, wife of the pastor of our Baptist church is the superintendent of these schools.

Ninety-two per cent of all children in the eight grades of the public school are in these church week-day schools. The remaining eight per cent are Catholic children, and will be provided for by their own church.

Notes

Certain things are becoming more clear and fixed as the work of church week-day schools advances. The following may be noted:

1. Public school time is an essential for the best quality of work, and a large percentage of the available students is thus secured.
2. The use of public school buildings is unfortunate, if it is at all possible to make use of churches or other desirable buildings.
3. The community council of religious education with local community boards seems to be the essential of organization in large cities. In smaller places one community board seems to be sufficient.
4. Co-operation with the community enterprise is an essential for the best work of church week-day schools whether these schools be conducted by the various denominations or united in one community school. A community program is vital.

Lloyd George Unable to Accept Invitations While in America

Several weeks ago the officers of the Foreign Mission Society anticipated that American Baptists would desire to recognize in some appropriate way the presence in the United States of Mr. Lloyd George, in connection with his proposed attendance at the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments in Washington City. At the same time it was clearly recognized that on account of the nature of his mission to America, the Prime Minister might not feel it appropriate to accept invitations from any denominational groups. Accordingly a communication was sent to London to Dr. J. H. Rushbrooke, European Commissioner, requesting him to ascertain from Mr. Lloyd George whether it would be possible for him to attend any functions arranged in his honor by American Baptists. At the request of Dr. Rushbrooke, who was on the Continent when our communication was received, Dr. J. H. Shakespeare conferred with the Prime Minister, and has written the officers of the Foreign Mission Society as follows:

"Mr. Lloyd George wishes me to say, with reference to your suggestion of his meeting representatives of the Northern Baptists, that in the event of his visiting the United States, he will only be able to remain there two or three weeks at the longest and that he will be obliged to devote practically the whole of his time to the work of the Conference. He therefore feels that he will be quite definitely unable to avail himself of the many kind invitations which he has received from various organizations in America, and that it will not be possible for him to receive the numerous delegations and deputations which have expressed a desire to see him. Mr. Lloyd George wishes me to explain that it is only the short duration of his visit which forces him to make this decision."

We are sure that our people in general will appreciate fully the demands which will be made upon the time and strength of this distinguished Baptist in connection with his anticipated visit to America, and will understand clearly how impossible it is for him to make any engagements which might in any way conflict with obligations that are of primary importance.

JAMES H. FRANKLIN,
Foreign Secretary.

To All Churches and Colleges in the United States

The Joint Committee on Union Christian Colleges for Women of the Orient, representing ten great denominational mission boards, earnestly requests that prayer be offered in all churches and colleges on behalf of these colleges to which we must look for strong Christian leaders for the women of India, China and Japan. An effort is being made to secure the conditional gift of $1,000,000 from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller Memorial Fund. The committee has no expensive machinery and will not attempt a drive, but will depend on prayerful presentation of the needs of these new colleges which must secure land and buildings. Oriental girls are being turned away by hundreds. There is no room.

This is not a request for an offering but for prayer throughout our land Sunday, Nov. 27.

Free literature will be sent on application to Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, 300 Ford Bldg., Boston, Mass., or Mrs. Oliver Williamson, 1808 Stevens Bldg., 17 No. State St., Chicago, Ill., or Mrs. Paul Raymond, 105 Montgomery St., San Francisco, Cal.

Women's Foreign Mission Boards ask that ministers and college leaders will pray and that groups of women will meet for prayer. "Prove me now herewith."

(Signed) Mrs. Henry W. Peabody, Rev. Frank Mason North, Mrs. W. E. McDowell, Miss Elizabeth R. Bender, Mr. Robert E. Speer, Miss Margaret E. Hodge, Mrs. Charles K. Roys, Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, Rev. Jas. L. Barton, Miss Kate Lamson, Rev. W. I. Chamberlain, Mrs. DeWitt Knox, Mrs. Anna R. Atwater, Miss Mabel K. Howell, Mrs. P. M. Rossmann, Miss Rose Beatty, Joint Committee.

Relief Supplies for Russia

November 10 was the last date on which packages could be received at the Foreign Mission Society warehouse for shipment to Czechoslovakia, Poland and Latvia. Many packages are still to come, and arrangements have now been made for baling these for shipment to Russia, later in November or early in December. The American Relief Association has informed the Foreign Mission Society that they will transport to Russia all supplies contributed by Baptist churches. Our people who forward their packages late or who for various reasons have not yet sent their contributions, now have an opportunity of doing so. Further announcement will be made in next week's issue. In the meantime, if you did not send a package in October, you can do so in November and thus come to the assistance of unhappy Russia. The address is still American Baptist European Relief Warehouse, 348 East 23rd Street, New York City.

Dr. Hector C. Leland has supplied the First Baptist of Savannah, Ill., the past seven months and assisted in securing Rev. E. K. Masterson for a permanent pastor. The latter began his services Oct. 30. Dr. Leland has been of great help to the church not only with sermons of superior quality, but with wise and safe counsel. His work is greatly appreciated.

Pastor Chesley A. Morehouse has resigned the pastorate of Clyde Baptist Church after nearly four years of service. His is the longest pastorate in the history of the church. In spite of losses due to the shifting of population, there have been large audiences, a good Sunday school and about forty conversions. The church is without debt and all bills are paid.

A parish church was being beautified with a stained-glass window. The old sexton was watching the work. The rector, seeing him thus intent, remarked, "Well, John, and what is your opinion of the window?" "Weel," was the reply, "in ma opinion they might hae been content wi' the gless as God made it"—London Town Topics.

Gist of Board of Promotion Reports at Indianapolis Meeting, November 3

Recommendations of the Adjustment Committee

BY FRANK H. ROBINSON.

The report of the committee on adjustments presented to the General Board of Promotion at its annual meeting is of the utmost importance. Owing, however, to the fact that it is expressed in technical language, we have asked a member of the committee, Mr. Frank H. Robinson, to present our readers with a simple interpretation of the various recommendations. This service he has done the denomination in the present article.—THE EDITORS.

Recommendation No. 1: Hereafter each organization shall receive its pro rata share of undesignated gifts on the basis of its asking in the Survey, as modified by mutual agreement at Indianapolis. The designated gifts will be paid over without reference to any organization's share in the undesignated gifts, with the modification contained in paragraph two. The fund set aside for the support of the Board of Promotion and for miscellaneous purposes, having been exhausted, hereafter it will deduct monthly one-twelfth of its approved operating budget, from total monthly receipts in the campaign. The Board of Promotion voted to authorize the state conventions to retain 75 per cent of their budgets, and also 75 per cent of the budgets of the city mission societies within their areas, in remitting receipts in the New World Movement to the General Board of Promotion. Should the collections exceed the collections of the same month last year, they may retain, in addition, such percentage of the excess collections over 75 per cent, up to 100 per cent of their budgets, as the collections may exceed the total receipts of corresponding months last year.

Recommendation 2: This means that while each organization is to receive its pro rata share of undesignated funds, without any reference to designated funds, it is not to receive anything from the undesignated funds if the total of designated and undesignated funds received by it equals 100 per cent of its budget, as adopted at Indianapolis. Furthermore, should designated and undesignated gifts equal 100 per cent of the budget for endowment and permanent equipment, any overplus would not be applied on the budget for operating expenses, as that might work a great hardship to the organization.

Recommendation No. 3: Heretofore, because of the great necessities of some societies growing out of our failure to complete the $100,000,000.00 fund to date, and owing to unforeseen contingencies that have arisen, these societies have received a larger per cent of their operating budget than other societies. It was recommended that hereafter the societies that waived their full percentage, should be reimbursed out of undesignated funds; that any organization whose share of designated and undesignated gifts totaled less than 100 per cent of operating budget, should receive such aid as would avoid incurring debt,—such indebtedness as has now been incurred to be paid as soon as is possible without crippling the work of any organization. The Board of Promotion is to set aside the funds as they can be spared from time to time, to this end.

Recommendation No. 4: That the solicitation of designated gifts is to be made without the full approval as to objective and method, of the General Board of Promotion.

Recommendation No. 5: Heretofore the state conventions have been paying on an average about one-third of the expenses of the state boards of promotion. Hereafter the entire expense of the state boards will be borne by the General Board of Promotion—the state conventions to pay their pro rata share of the entire expense of the General Board of Promotion.

Recommendation No. 6: To provide emergency funds for such societies as may not receive sufficient amounts on their operating budgets; to provide for the urgent necessities of some colleges; and for the partial reimbursement of the Ministers' and Missionaries' Benefit Boards, of amounts now due them on collections to date, the committee recommended the distribution of the balance of the adjustment fund for this year, as itemized in this recommendation.

Recommendation No. 7: The Home Mission Society generously agreed to put their operating budget on an equality with the Women's Home Mission Society and the Publication Society in the distribution, hereafter, of the undesignated gifts. Because, the Home Mission Society had a much larger percentage of asking for endowment and permanent work than the other two societies (in fact, the Publication Society had nothing for that purpose), the other two societies were adversely affected, owing to the incompleteness of the campaign. In this action the Home Mission Society signifies its willingness to wait until the fund is complete, for the balance that will be due it on its operating budget. It further agreed to relinquish $2,500,000.00 of its askings for permanent work, for the benefit entirely of certain other participating organizations and the local philanthropies.

Recommendation No. 8: Approved the setting aside of $500,000 for philanthropies out of the askings of the Home Mission Society.

Recommendation No. 9: That the allotting of the $400,000 relinquished by the Home Mission Society, for the benefit of city missionary societies and state conventions, be under the direction of the administrative committees of the Board of Promotion.

Recommendation No. 10: This recommendation was not to accept the adjustments made by the various groups in their askings as worked out at Indianapolis, and to secure a more equal distribution of the funds, according to the necessities of each society.

Executive Committee of the Convention

The Executive Committee of the Northern Baptist Convention met in the First Church, Indianapolis, Indiana, Nov. 3. The following matters were referred to subcommittees to report at a meeting of the executive committee to be held next March: Resolution relating to May meetings of the convention, Annual 1921, page 199; resolution relating to time of the report of the committee on resolutions, Annual 1921, page 301; action of convention relating to permanent meeting places. The matter of appointing a Commission on Christian Education, Annual 1921, page 206, was referred to the Board of Education. A committee of five was appointed to consider the possible reduction in the size of the General Board of Promotion, and the General Board of Promotion was requested to appoint a committee on the same matter to confer with the subcommittee of the executive committee. A tentative agreement concerning overlapping of work between the Publication Society and the Board of Education was announced. The president was authorized to appoint a committee of reference in matters affecting the relations of the Publication Society and the Board of Education. Mr. F. T. Field of Cambridge, Massachusetts, was elected a member of the executive committee in the place of Rev. A. L. Snell, deceased. The treasurer reported an indebtedness of $15,000. A committee was appointed to consider the relation of city mission societies to the convention budget. Upon its application the Kansas City City Mission Society was recognized as a standard city mission society of class A. The date for the meeting of the convention was fixed for Wed., July 5, 1922. The committee on program reported progress, and the executive committee voted that there be constructed a unified program which will make unnecessary the holding of preliminary conferences. Rev. A. W. Beaven of Rochester, New York, was chosen to preach the convention sermon, with Rev. W. H. Geistweit of St. Louis, Mo., alternate. The executive committee chose the following representatives upon the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America: Vice-president, Pres. C. A. Barbour, Rochester, N. Y.; Delegates, Rev. R. A. Ashworth, Yonkers, N. Y.; Rev. A. T. Fowler, North Orange, N. J.; Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, Rochester, N. Y.; Rev. H. B. Grose, New York City; Rev. A. G. Lawson, New York City; Alternates, Prof. W. H. Allison, Hamilton, N. Y.; Sec. G. N. Brink, Philadelphia, Pa.; Pres. C. D. Gray, Lewiston, Maine; Rev. C. W. Petty, New York City; Rev. D. B. MacQueen, Bridgeport, Conn. Delegate to fill vacancy caused by resignation of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., W. S. Richardson of New York City. The executive committee after statement from Rev. J. F. Watson, chairman of the Seattle local committee of arrangements voted to express its favoring sessions of the convention to be held in the First Church of Seattle.

"Advance Notice"

The announcement is hereby given of the Baptist Social Union—City Mission Dinner to be held at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Tuesday evening, December 6th, at 6:30 o'clock. Speaker will be announced later. This is the outstanding Baptist social gathering of the year and it is hoped that every Baptist church will be well represented.

Confiscated liquor poured into the sewers of Los Angeles destroyed the lining for a distance of 304 feet. And yet human beings are asked to put this stuff into their stomachs.

The Chimney Corner

Love Song of a Germ

COME, bacillus, let us wander,
Wander ever, hand in hand,
Down the capillaries yonder,
Down that yonder shady gland.

Myriad microbe relations

Have no claims upon you, dear;
Leave them to their occupations;
You deserve your own career.

Countless cousins will not miss you,
Happy in their own disease;
Tripping through the tender tissue,
We may work what ills we please.

Does the wanderlust possess you?
I'll indulge it, dearest germ;
We will roam to regions, bless you!
Named by no researches' term.

Camping in the mountain muscles,
Bathing in a quiet vein,
Dodging vicious red corpuscles,
Summering at Aches-le-Brain.

Gliding in a light gondola
On abdominal canals,
Only fancy shall control a
Pair of perfect poison pals!

Slipping past the epiglottis,
By the tonsils to the tongue,
Traveling tilk the days have caught us
When we are no longer young.

Then, our tastes become domestic.
We shall search a quiet home,
Snug and safe from antiseptic,
There to breed and not to roam.

Come, bacillus, my infection
Grows too potent to suppress—
Quick, here comes your Auntie Toxin!
Hide with me and tell me "Yes."
(C. P. IVINS, in "Life.")

Are Professors Infallible?

A certain professor explained to his class that a thing is the same notwithstanding substitution of some of its parts. A sharp student undertook to argue with him.

"You see my pocket knife," said the student.

"Yes."

"If I lose the blade and get a new one in its place, it will be the same knife?"

"Undoubtedly," assured the professor.

"And then, suppose I lose the handle and put a new one on, would that be the original, identical knife?"

"It certainly would be," said the professor with rising choler.

"Now," said the student, squaring his shoulders and drawing a deep breath, "suppose some one found the old blade and the old handle and put them together again, what knife would that be?"

"You are impertinent, sir," was the professor's reply.

OUR EDUCATIONAL NUMBER

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Another Professorial Flight

"Now in case anything should go wrong with this experiment," said the professor of chemistry, "we and the laboratory with us will be blown sky high. So come a little closer, boys, in order that you may follow me."

Education

A little knowledge of the ways of men,
A little reading of their deeds and fates,
A little guessing at their thoughts, and then
A quick forgetting of their names and dates—

That's History!

A little delving in the tomes they penned,
A little conning of the verse they writ,
A feeble grasping of their aims and trend,
A show mem'ry of their mirth and wit—

That's Literature!

A little dabbling with a salt or two,
A little mussing with a sticky mess,
A few experiments half-blundered through,
A twilight testing of a groping guess—

That's Science!

Where Were We When Babel Fell?

A Frenchman learning English had laboriously compiled a table of how words ending in "ough" ought to be pronounced:

rough—ruff
cough—coff
bough—bow through—threw though—tho

But in spite of careful consideration he rendered this sentence: "Though sitting on a dry bough he caught a cough so rough that it racked him through and through" as follows: "Tuff sitting on a dry bo he caught a cow so rew that it racked him throff and throff. Confused; but why not?"

A little later he was again mystified when he discovered that if he was quick he was fast, and if he was tied he was fast, and if he became drunk he was fast, and if his socks did not fade they were fast. Yet in all his class he was the only one who won one prize!

Gray's Elegy—for Campus Use

Ed. (touching her slender hands and quoting): "Hands that the fate of empire might have swayed."

COED (sarcastically, quoting): "Or waked to ecstasy the living lyre!"

Ethics

I shot an arrow into the air; it fell in the distance, I know not where, till a neighbor said it killed his calf, and I had to pay him six and a half ($6.50). I bought some poison to slay some rats, and a neighbor swore it killed his cats; and rather than argue across the fence, I paid him four dollars and fifty cents ($4.50). One night I set sailing a toy balloon, and hoped it would soar till it reached the moon; but the candle fell on a farmer's straw, and he said I must settle or go to law. And that is the way with the random shot; it never hits the proper spot; and the joke you spring that you think so smart, may leave a wound in some fellow's heart.

A Bit of Modern History

The Travel Class relished these latest traffic rules sent by a tire magazine ("Portager") to the United States for guidance of Americans touring in Japan:

"As the rise of the hand of the honorable policeman stop with rapidness greatly. Do not pass him or otherwise disrespect him.

"When a passenger of foot hove in sight tootle the horn trumpet to him melodiously at first. If he still obstacles your passage tootle him with large vigor, and express by word of the mouth a warning, 'Hi, hi!'

"Beware of the wandering sow that he shall not take fright as you pass him. Do not explode the exhaust noise box at him. Go smoothly by.

"Give space to the festive dog that makes play-sport in the roadway. Avoid entanglement of the dog with your wheel spokes.

"Go smoothly on the grease mud, as there lurks the skiddy demon. Press the brake of the foot smoothly as you roll around the corners and save collapse and tip up.

"Thank you honorably."

Newest Things Just Out in Biology

A fly and a flee in a flue
Were imprisoned, what could they do?
Said the fly, Let us flee!
Let us fly, said the flea—
So they flew through a flaw in the flue

Theological: Pomo-Logical

Apples hanging on a tree,
They're as moral as can be;
Apples crushed to get the juice,
Naughty are, beyond all use,
Eve behaved herself, you know,
While she scanned the fruit denied her
Never did she make a show
Till the apple was in cider!
(BEECH HILTON, in "Life.")

The Young Reserves

Two Plus Two Equals Ten

PROBABLY as soon as you heard the title of this story you began smiling all over your face. "Oh, but two plus two doesn't equal ten at all! It simply couldn't, since it always, always equals four. I guess I know my arithmetic tables!"

Well, you do, of course. Yet just this once two plus two really did equal ten, as you will now hear.

For once upon a time there were two little sunbonnets under a bush. And under the sunbonnets were two little girls, which is all that sunbonnets are good for, anyway—to cover little girls, and overhear their secrets.

One little sunbonnet girl was saying: "All I know is, that a man wrote it down in black and white that if every church member invited some one else to join church this year, then every single person in the whole United States would be going to church before the year was over. So there!"

Sunbonnet number two was quiet for a while, then said very solemnly: "Mary Ann, if that's true, then we haven't a minute to lose, for it's September now and we ought to get our extra two before January. Our living in the country makes it awfully hard, for wherever will you find people who aren't church members. I'd hardly know how to begin."

Mary Ann wrinkled her nose in doubt: "Well, Susan Brown, if they won't come to church, we'll have to carry the church to them, I guess."

"What? Steeple and all? Why, Mary Ann, you're crazy!"

"No, I'm not, for it isn't the outside of a church that matters, it's what goes on inside that God cares about. Now, why couldn't we carry Sunday school to the Homer twins, for instance?"

"Oh, you wouldn't dare go there!" gasped Susan, "why, the farmers down around the postoffice say that Ephraim Homer swears from morning till night and curses every one in sight; and that Mrs. Homer is the queerest woman, she lets the children run wild, and once she even slammed the door in the minister's face when he went there to call. Oh, we couldn't begin on them, Mary Ann!"

"But Susie, it's the very place we seem to be needed most. And just think how surprised our pastor will be when we bring a twin apiece to church with us."

And he was surprised, you may be sure! Because it was not only Molly and Polly, the twins, but also Mr. Ephraim Homer came to church, and Mrs. Ephraim Homer, not to mention Horace and Morris and all the in-between children who came trooping into church one December Sunday, stamping the snow off their boots.

The pastor stared. And the congregation stared. And Mary Ann stared. But Susie Brown whispered: "My goodness gracious me! We went for two, and look what we get!"

So you must be wondering what they did back in September to bring such a pleasant result in the month of December. It was really too simple for words; for they just went to the Homer's farm and swung on the broken gate calling to the twins: "Hello, Molly! Hello, Polly! we know an awfully nice game to play."

"Come in and play it," called the twins in a duet.

So in they went.

And they played Sunday school, with nasturtiums for the scholars. (You can see for yourself how very much like sunbonnets the little flowers looked!) The nasturtiums sat in rows, with a Mr. Aster as the superintendent, and a Miss Peony to teach the girls' class. Molly and Polly did not know a single hymn when the game started, but because Mr. Aster had to teach the words to his nasturtium scholars, Molly and Polly learned the words unconsciously. They learned golden texts in the same way, and Bible stories. Yet it really was just playtimes, every bit of it. Even the offering was fun, for every good nasturtium laid the petal of a golden glow flower on the green leaf collection plate, while all the flowers bent their bonnet heads and prayed with Mr. Aster:—

"Father, take the money brought Thee,
Give it something sweet to do.
May it help some one to love Thee,
Father, may we love Thee, too."

They even had a missionary speaker at their flower school, for a yellow Miss Chrysanthemum came over from Japan. Her real name was O Kiku San, and Susan Brown helped her to bow with true Japanese politeness as she told about her pretty home across the sea where people worshiped idols until a missionary came to tell of Jesus. She thanked each and every nasturtium for their gifts of golden glow, which had brought the Bible to that heathen village. And you must admit this was a clever way of telling Molly and Polly about missions and idols and God.

"Come and play again, won't you?" they begged wistfully when it was time to stop the game.

"Indeed we will," said Mary Ann and Susan Brown. So they went again and again, until one day Polly said to her mother: "Oh ma, won't you scrub up me and Molly, and leave us go to church tomorrow?"

"Church?" gasped Mrs. Homer, "land sakes! whatever put that notion in your heads, when there ain't been a Homer inside a church for years on years. And what's more, there ain't going to be any there now—so quit your teasing!"

They stopped begging, but they kept on playing, for there is no doubt that Mary Ann and Susan Brown had brought the church to them. They played make-believe church suppers, and prayer-meetings, Christian Endeavor—yes, everything, until by and by Polly made as good a pretend-preacher as anybody could.

"I guess we've filled them to the brim with church," laughed Mary Ann.

"Indeed we have," said Susan Brown, "So now you wait and see."

So they waited and they saw. Saw every Homer, big and little, walking into church that crisp December Sunday. And Mary Ann said afterwards: "It was such an easy little thing to do, just play them into church!"

Indeed, it makes me wonder why YOU don't play church yourself sometimes—maybe you could carry your church and all its meetings straight into the hearts of families who have forgotten all about it!

Winning Essay

I am very much afraid that as Baptists you Young Reserves are not very observant boys and girls. In any case, very few of you handed in essays about "The Baptist Who Interests me the Most." Those that reached me were all good, but every one of them was about some one who lived in the same town with the Young Reserve. That is all right, only from what you wrote about these nice Baptists I knew that if you only read "Missions" you would find the world is brim-full of Baptists doing immensely interesting, difficult things. We will soon have some fascinating stories about them in this column. Meanwhile here is the essay which won the prize:

Dorothy Dobbs (Dayton) is 11. Her mother certainly is splendid, isn't she?

"The most interesting Baptist I know lives in the same house with me. She is mother. Mother used to be sort of a Unitarian, but when she was only 18 she loved Jesus too much to stay a Unitarian, so she read the Bible and got baptized the Baptist way, which was hard for her as her family did not approve. But now she has made every one a Baptist, even my stepfather. She does the most uncomfortable things because she feels she ought. One is writing papers for the woman's society. Her legs tremble because she is scared, but she pretends they don't and they say no lady in church interests people in missions like she does. Another way she is interesting is because she gives more money than she ought to our church. Once she gave all her dress money to a collection and instead of missing the dress she was very happy. She is nice to strangers and calls on them and altogether she is how I want to be when I'm old too."

Santa Claus's Partner

This is the title of the new contest. Did you ever give some one a wonderful Christmas—some one who was lonely or poor or sick? Write me about it by Dec. 1. Or send a "pretend" story about being such a partner.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for December 4

PAUL IN MELITA AND IN ROME
Acts 28:1-31. Golden Text: Rom. 1:15-16.
By JOHN A. EARL.

The Lesson Text

This lesson closes Luke's account of Paul's earthly activities. The chapter stops abruptly. In fact it is not a formal closing of a great narrative at all. Evidently Luke knew that Paul's prison epistles to the Philippians, the Ephesians, the Colossians and to Philemon and later to Timothy would indicate in Paul's own way what he had failed to record. He leaves Paul in Rome as he started with him at Antioch. The shipwrecked crew and passengers found friends among the rude inhabitants of the island of Melita or Malta as it is now called. With characteristic activity Paul is described by Luke as helping and healing, and while nothing is said about it, probably preaching and teaching. For three months this ministry continued. In the spring the voyage to Rome was resumed. Reaching Rome Paul is given large liberty for a prisoner, dwelling in his own rented house and conducting a mission of teaching and preaching and writing for two years.

The Lesson Taught

Paul in Melita, Paul on the road, and Paul in Rome are the three main divisions of this lesson.

Paul in Melita

Two things mark Paul's activities in Melita, first, helping to add to the physical comfort of shivering, weary men huddled together on a drizzling winter day awaiting information about the island upon which they had been cast and doubtful of what the reception might be from the barbarians who could not speak either Latin or Greek. Paul, though a great man, was not above doing the most humble tasks. In fact that was a mark of his true greatness. While others were standing helpless in their misery keenly feeling their discomfort, Paul busied himself on the beach by gathering firewood. The man who could kindle a flame of devotion to a great cause in the hearts of men could also kindle a fire of driftwood on the stormy beach of an unnamed island in order to contribute to the comfort of his fellows. And how often it happens that when in the line of service the viper fastens on the hand and the adverse criticisms are spoken. But as every good Christian should do, Paul shook off the viper into the fire and felt no harm, and with equal equanimity he shook off the rude judgment of the islanders concerning him as a murderer. The second thing that marked Paul's activities in Melita was his healing ministry. He was the physician and not Luke. Luke as a physician knew the disease of Publius and gives it the technical names, but strange he did not heal Publius. Have we not forgotten in some degree the healing ministry of the Christian religion? Sometimes the medical man has to stand aside and let the spiritual physician have access to the sick room, and when he does not stand aside the two should work hand in hand for the recovery of the sick. There is a ministry of healing represented by Paul which the Lukes have too long neglected,—a ministry that does not deal with symptoms or diagnosis or technical medical processes, but that goes to the spiritual sources of energy through prayer and personal touch. There should be no conflict between the science of the medical man and the prayers of the spiritual man. In fact it is a happy combination when both men are found in a Christian doctor.

Paul on the Road

On the road to Rome Paul found again the fragrant flower of friendship. He found friends in Puteoli on the Bay of Naples, and with them he stayed seven days. One must fill in the seven days spent there by the aid of sanctified imagination. One must picture to himself the relaxation which must have come to Paul's tired body as he rested in that salubrious climate after a winter on Melita. The reader must also live over again with Paul seven days of fellowship with congenial companions after months of forced confinement with cut-throat criminals, rough Roman soldiers, and pagan mariners. His reaction when he left the brethren in Puteoli to tramp to Rome left him somewhat distressed and discouraged. He was leaving friends to appear before Caesar as a prisoner of Rome. Therefore when the brethren from Rome appeared at the Market of Appius and later at the Three Taverns having walked about fifty miles to meet and convoy Paul and his two companions to Rome, Paul was inspired with new courage and broke out into a prayer of thanksgiving. Sam Walter Foss has written the best commentary on this incident in the life of Paul in his poem, "Let me live in a house by the side of the road and be a friend to man." Such friendship as these brethren from Rome manifested for Paul and his companions is the hope of the world.

Paul in Rome

Three days after Paul arrived in Rome he sent for the leaders of the Jews in that city with the hope that he might enlist them in his behalf when his trial before Caesar was called. He explained the situation to them and why he had appealed to Caesar. With characteristic caution they informed him that they had no official communication from Jerusalem concerning him; but suggesting that they would be interested to hear him declare his faith at some time to be mutually agreed upon. However, they could not let the opportunity pass of telling him that his sect was everywhere in disrepute. When the day arrived for the conference Paul spent the hours from morning to evening explaining his position with regard to the kingdom of God basing his arguments upon the law and the prophets and persuading them concerning the Messiahship of Jesus. Some believed and some did not believe and so the conference broke up, but not before Paul had warned the disbelieving Jews by a quotation from the sixth chapter of Isaiah, adding that what the Jews rejected the Gentiles would be only to glad to receive. The Acts of the Apostles closes with a picture of Paul the impassioned evangelist preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching the things concerning the Lord Jesus Christ with all boldness, none forbidding him. "The hired house" of Paul the Roman captive was greater than the palace of the Caesar because it incarnated the gospel which would continue to be the power of God unto salvation, when Rome had gone to pieces. In these days of great world powers struggling for supremacy in commerce and industry, it is well to remember that the thing which Paul embodied in Rome is still the only hope of bringing heaven down to earth and making the will of God the principle of all national and international integrity.

The Home Field

It very frequently happens, when men and women have been redeemed by Christ, that they are filled with a strong and even passionate desire to enter some prominent sphere of service. It is not that they are proud and lifted up, and therefore seek exalted places. They are of quite lowly disposition, but their passionate gratitude drives them to seek some public ministry in the field of the kingdom. And so they turn to the pulpit. Or they look toward the missionary's calling. Or, if it be not so far away, it may be a piece of public work at the other end of the town in which they live. And God says: "No, nearer still! Not even at the other end of the town! Go back home! Go back to your own kindred! Go back to your own little circle of friends, and be my witness! Go back to your own workshop or office, and tell your mates what great things the Lord hath done for you!"

I remember that one of Spurgeon's congregation went into his vestry after service, and asked to be allowed to join in Christian work. "What are you?" said Spurgeon. "I am an engine-driver." "Is the stoker converted?" "No." "My dear fellow, that is your piece of work."—DR. J. H. JOWETT, in The British Weekly.

Young People's Work

Topic for December 4

THY WILL BE DONE. IV. WITH MY PLANS
Matt. 6:7-15. (Consecration Meeting)

*If I had youth no chains of fear should bind me;
I'd brave the heights which older men must shun,
I'd leave the well-worn lanes of life behind me,
And seek to do what men have never done.
Rich prizes wait for those who do not reaver;
The world needs men to battle for the truth,
It calls each hour for stronger hearts and braver;
This is the age for those who still have youth!"*

EDGAR A. GUEST.

"Forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—PAUL.

Available Material

Send to the Baptist Young People's
Union of America, 125 N. Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, for a free package of literature containing the following leaflets:
"What Shall I Do With My Life?"; "Objectives for Life Work Education"; "The Ministry of the Church of Life"; "What Constitutes a Call to the Ministry?";
"What Constitutes a Call to Missionary Work at Home or Abroad?"

1. What Shall I Do with My Life? Margaret Fuller once said: "I accept the universe." When Carlyle heard it, he said: "Egad, she'd better." There isn't anything else to do. We may try to ignore it or even imagine it is naught, but always we must take account of it and finally work with its laws to our making or against them to our breaking.

Much the same thing is true of life.
We must accept it and do something with it, even if it be nothing more than destroy it. Whatever we think, or whether we think at all or not, two things we cannot escape: we must become something and we must wield some kind of influence. Life does not wait on thought.
As Bergson says: "Life cannot be judged,
it must be lived."

Since life must be lived, since we must become something and exert some kind of influence, it is a fairly reasonable assumption that most of us want to be our best and do our best.

And since none of us can hold that we either create ourselves, the materials with which we work, or in the main the opportunities into which we enter, it would seem that we should be and do our best, not for selfish ends, but that we may

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAP-TIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

render the largest service to God and man.

Every business occupation or calling, which makes really useful contribution to life, may be made a Christian service.
And surely the only adequate reason for doing any kind of work in the world is to make a better and happier manhood and womanhood. Every person's life should make the world richer and better, whatever the particular calling may be.

2. Every Man and Woman Called. In addition to expressing the Christian spirit in our vocation, there is abundant opportunity and need for leadership and service in the communities where we live. The common good, community betterment, programs, religious education and other helpful work among boys and girls, burning social, industrial and political problems,—all these rightly claim our interest and support. The call to consecrated effort is to each one of us, not to some particular group whom we set apart and expect to do work we ourselves should do.

3. The Giving of Life. The call for men and women to earn and use money for building the Kingdom is urgent and the opportunity for investment is strategic.
But Europe cannot settle her burning issues by giving gold only. Out from the homes of rich and poor the choicest young lives have gone, thousands of them never to return. Life must be given. Many of those who have fallen would have been leaders in Christian effort around the world. Fortunes have been wiped out; ruinous indebtedness is being created;
life-blood is being freely offered on the altars of patriotism. Who is to take the place of those fallen on the battlefields of war and lead the Christian hosts in the greater battles of peace? Shall it be said that American college students are less heroic and sacrificial than those of Europe, and that the challenge of Christian leadership in the face of world problems and world needs went unmet because we lacked their devotion? I refuse to believe it. The response is coming.

The power we are developing is not a personal perquisite to be used for our own gain and gratification, but is a sacred trust binding us to the service of fellow-men. By every inheritance from a splendid past, by every opportunity of a tremendous present, by every sacrifice of our college comrades in Europe, yes, by that supreme sacrifice of the Christ, are we bound to dedicate our lives to that Christian leadership for which the world imperatively calls. (Adopted—Ed. Ed.
Leaflets.)

Field Notes

From Alberta

Aside from my little message at the convention at Cincinnati, I did not contribute much to the proceedings. But the proceedings contributed a great deal to me, and I am passing it on up here. We had a city rally, such as the one you saw here last autumn, but it included negroes, Germans and all, this time. I did not attempt of course to rehearse the addresses given, but I did try to interpret the convention to our city unions, and they decided when I was through that although we are away out here on the frontier of things, we are part of a great big influential organization, and that sense of being part of such a powerful organization has gripped them. Along with that I have tried to bring to them the consequent responsibility.

Merits of the Group Plan

"I wish you could have seen my own union last Monday night. There were forty-five present. It was a missionary topic—Livingstone—taken by one of the four groups into which the society was organized, the All-Faithfuls, the Irre-pressibles, the Eureka's, and the Action Group. Eleven different persons took part last Monday night, including three who spoke to the topic, taking different sections of the life of Livingstone. The group idea worked out by our executive is leading the young people on by leaps and last Monday night was the best thing I have seen them do. Incidentally I discovered one young fellow who is a beautiful speaker, a lad I had never suspected as having such power. It was his first time to take a topic. The executive meetings are a delight. My president is a leader of merit. But their activities are not stopping with their meetings. The society has undertaken to put its four groups into different sections of the gallery on Sunday evenings, when those galleries are filled nearly to capacity with young people, for the purpose of welcoming strangers and doing personal evangelistic work in my after-meetings. They have a committee undertaking to visit two hospitals every Sunday afternoon, to go through the wards with papers, flowers, books, etc. In fact they have been doing that for some months now.

Off to Service

"One of the most gratifying things is that one of my young men from the union has decided to study for the ministry, and has gone off to Brandon College this fall.
He is one of my best fellows, with a fine gift of public speaking. Another young girl—teaching just now—is going to train for a nurse and volunteer for medical missions. Already this church has four of its members on the foreign field in Baptist work, and two others in Y. M. C.
A. work in Japan." G. A. CLARKE.

Our Own Folks

Danish Baptist General Conference

The sixth general conference of the Danish Baptists of America was held in Chicago recently. The First Danish church of that city (Belden and Kildare) entertaining the conference.

President Aug. Broholm, Storden, Minn., presided over most of the sessions, ably assisted by the vice-president, Rev. J. D. Vinding, Newell, Iowa. The attendance was not as large as usual, nevertheless the conference was one of the best ones ever held, a splendid spirit of efficient leadership, Christian fellowship and brotherly harmony prevailed throughout the sessions and services.

A few of the most significant events and decisions shall here be mentioned:

The reports of the missionaries from the different fields were encouraging and hopeful. The recording secretary in his statistical report gave the information that 250 had been added to the churches by baptism during the past two years and that over $200,000 had been paid out for various purposes. A number of the Danish churches have had a share in the New World Movement, several of these "going over the top" in meeting their apportionments.

Seminary Affiliates

The Danish Theological Seminary affiliated with the Des Moines University under the efficient leadership of the dean, Dr. N. S. Lawdahl, is sending out a fine type of young ministers, five being ordained last spring.

Being the sixty-fifth anniversary of the Danish Baptists in this country an interesting "exhibit" in charge of Rev. I. Fredmund, attracted the attention of the delegates and visitors, and the historical lecture given by Rev. A. Broholm created much inspiration and hope for the future.

The presence and addresses of Dr. J. W. Million of Des Moines University, Dr. H. F. Stilwell of the Committee of Evangelism, Dr. Otto of the Chicago Executive Council were much appreciated and were a great uplift for the conference; so was the address of Miss Helen Crissman, secretary of the W. W. G. given at the women's session.

Following the general discussion of the mission-fields it was decided to have one evangelist, one general missionary or pastor at large and districts-missionaries.

Following workers were elected: evangelist, M. A. Wesgaard; general missionary, N. L. Christianson; missionary for Michigan, and Christophersen; missionary for Montana, Oregon and Washington, H. H. Sorenson. The national B. Y. P. U. decided also to have a director of S. S. and B. Y. P. U. work.

The discussion concerning the Ministers' Pension and Aid Fund resulted in a decision to have the fund enlarged, the adoption of new rules and by-laws.

A committee was also appointed, whose duty it is to investigate and report at the next conference the necessity and advisability of erecting an old peoples' home.

The new-elected officers are: President, Rev. J. D. Vinding, Newell, Iowa; vice-president, L. Thompson, Council Bluffs, Iowa; corresponding secretary, A. W. Warren, Clarks Grove, Minn.; treasurer, H. E. Monk, (president of the Farmers Guaranty Bank) Viborg, S. Dak.; recording secretary and statistician, Rev. I. Fredmund, Viborg, S. Dak.; assisting recording secretary, Rev. A. L. N. Sorenson, Cedar Falls, Iowa.

The next General Conference will be held at Cedar Falls, Iowa, September, 1923.

I. FREDMUND,
Viborg, So. Dakota. Rec. Sec'y.

How San Diego Grows

A fine spirit of co-operation and a growing faith in God's purpose of grace for the people of Southern California and the world, to be wrought out in a measure through the Baptists of the city of San Diego and vicinity, are readily seen by those in close touch with the work of our denomination there.

The great First Church, known as "The White Temple," mother of us all, is going forward grandly in its many-sided life-activity. Frank O. Belden, pastor, is a tower of strength who finds time and a way, not only to lead his own flock in ministries near and far in the name of Jesus, but is also the wise and energetic "Belden the Brotherly" for the rest of our people. The organization of the church upon the family group plan has proven very valuable in the social, financial, educational and administrative work of the church. Dr. Belden's sermons, especially the evening ones, have been largely evangelistic. The invitation is extended and the "doors of the church" opened at nearly every service with gratifying results. During the last year seventy-five were received by baptism, 160 by letter, and twenty-two by experience. The present membership is 1157. The Bible school has shown a steady increase in attendance all through the year, the enrollment now being nearly 700. During the past year the debt upon the church building was reduced $7,000.

School Too Big for Room

Logan Heights Church, Wesley J. Beaven, pastor, held its annual meeting recently when thirty-one baptisms were reported for the year. The Bible school is the largest in its history, the adult department overflowing the seating capacity of its room by fourteen or fifteen. Sunday congregations are good. The Young People's Union is much alive and growing. They are preparing to entertain the State B. Y. P. U. Convention November 25-27, 1921, which will be a great event for this vicinity, and for all of Southern California. The church is planning to have the help of Evangelist Marshall again, in a series of meetings during March.

Scott Memorial Church, L. P. Valentine, pastor, when re-organized about two and one half years ago had forty members; now they number 112. The Sunday school at that time had an attendance of thirty-five, now it runs around 150. The Bible school unit of the proposed new house of worship has been built during that time and is now all paid for excepting about $300. There was never a better outlook for the future of the church. The community is being built up rapidly and new members are coming continually. The church went well over its quota for the New World Movement and pledges have been paid in well, only about $100 remaining unpaid October 1, as due on that date. The pastor is completing his fourth year with this church on December 1.

The Ocean Beach Church, Rolla E. Brown, pastor, is the youngest church among the Baptists in San Diego and vicinity. Its membership is small, being less than sixty all told. It is in a new, growing section of the city, somewhat remote from the center of the city, and where there is no church of any considerable strength and no house of worship (except tiny chapels) within a radius of some five miles. There is a population of 3,000 or more within two miles of the church. Ocean Beach is on the western side of the base of the famous Point Loma, having the Light House and Military Reservation (Ft. Rosencrans) out on the point of the peninsula, with the beautiful buildings of the Headquarters of the Theosophical Society, Roseville, and elegant residential Loma Portal occupying the rest of the Point. Ocean Beach is growing with the city; San Diego doubled in size between 1910 and 1920. The government is spending many millions preparing the great marine base and naval training station out in the direction of Ocean Beach.

Will Erect New House

The Baptists, through the impetus of the New World Movement, are about to erect a new house of worship for the church at Ocean Beach, to cost about $15,000, with provisions for additions to the capacity later as needed. It is hoped to lay the corner-stone on Thanksgiving Day. About $12,000 is provided toward the new building; and it is hoped that the balance needed will be secured before the dedication of the church, that is, within the next three or four months. The building is greatly needed. The Bible school has had an average of 105 present during August. The Young People's Union has an attendance of from twenty-five to fifty. The Boy Scouts number fifteen or so at each Friday night meeting. And other departments are handicapped correspondingly. A tent-house is used as an annex to the tiny chapel which is itself only twenty by forty feet. And a cottage across the street affords two class rooms of a kind. A lot 50 by 140 is now owned by the church, centrally located, and a San Diego architect, Clarence E. Decker, has prepared plans for a building which will be a source of joy and pride to the denomination and the community.

A notable work is being done here through our Baptist representative among the service men, Rev. Floy T. Barkman. The dimensions of this field of Christian influence are astounding. Of the 45,000 service men whom our Uncle Sam has in Southern California, about 18,000 are in or near San Diego. On October 30 there were in the harbor of San Diego government ships (war craft) representing about $300,000,000. The monthly payroll here is over one million per month. New marine barracks accommodating 5,000 men will be opened November 15. A naval training station to take care of 5,500 men is under construction. A 1,000-bed hospital in Balboa Park is half completed, to cost over two millions. A new repair base which was used during the war by a private concern will soon be ready to take care of any government ships along the western coast. Both army and navy air service fields on North Island (across the bay from the city) have a large number of men who are continually experimenting, using machines in forest patrol, etc. The entrance to the harbor is well protected at Ft. Rosecrans by about 500 men. The hospital at Camp Kearney (only a few miles away from the city) has some 400 patients, mostly overseas men and all tubercular.

From the above bird's-eye view it can be readily seen what an opportunity and need there is to minister in the name of Christ. No part of this wide field presents a closed door to our Baptist representative. Religious services are held on ship and in camps; personal work is being done in much visitation; sons are being located at the request of anxious mothers, and, best of all, many men are being converted and uniting with our Baptist churches.

A Baptist city mission society has been organized recently in San Diego, of which Rev. F. O. Belden is president, Prof. George R. Livingstone, vice-president, Rev. L. P. Valentine, secretary, and Mr. W. M. Reinheimer, treasurer. Much remains to be done through this society for getting the Baptists of this vicinity into well-directed efforts for reaching the foreign speaking peoples in our midst and for the large areas unreached by any denomination with the gospel of our Lord and Saviour.

Iowa Baptist Convention

BY CHARLES G. WRIGHT

The Iowa Baptist State Convention met with the Walnut Street Church in Waterloo, in its eightieth annual meeting, Oct. 26-30. The weather was ideal most of the time, the place of the meeting was fairly central, the attendance was large, over 450 delegates and visitors being registered.

For many years the pastors of the state maintained a pastors' conference, but some years ago it was discontinued. Two years ago, however, it was reorganized and this year held its second regular meeting. Three sessions were given to it, Tuesday evening and Wednesday morning and afternoon. President P. W. Crannell of Kansas City Theological Seminary was the guest of the conference, giving three thoughtful, inspiring addresses. The subjects presented were: "The Person of Christ in the Twentieth Century," "The Three Adjustments of the Minister" and "The Educational Task of the Church." Rev. J. F. Catlin of Council Bluffs told of a local survey and its value, and Rev. H. J. Moore of Keokuk presented the subject of church advertising in a way to awaken much interest.

The first session of the convention was on Wednesday evening.

Above the platform was suspended a banner with the slogan for the coming year, the most important and timely that could be chosen, "A Revival in Every Church." Above it, arranged in the form of a triangle, were the watchwords, "Enlistment, Enduement, Enlargement. After the customary words of welcome and response, the key-note address was given by Rev. H. R. Best of Des Moines. It was a message characterized by clear thinking and intense earnestness and reached a high level. Tactfully yet plainly it was shown that if the proposed objectives are to be realized, divisive influences must cease and a common ground of unity must be found.

The morning sessions on Thursday, Friday and Saturday were devoted largely to the presenting of reports and the transaction of necessary business. Each morning session was opened with a Scripture study by Rev. B. M. Osgood of Fort Dodge. In connection with the devotional period Rev. J. A. Hurley of Estherville gave what was called an inspirational address on the first morning, and Rev. T. J. Giblette of Clinton on the second.

Taking Stock of Resources

Thursday afternoon included two important addresses upon the general subject, "The Baptist Position in Iowa." The first was by Rev. R. B. Davidson of Ames, who discussed "Appealing Conditions." A careful study had been made of some of the statistics of the annuals for the past twenty years. The results were not conducive to optimism, but they presented food for thought in the facts which ought to be frankly faced by us all, religiously and educationally. It was shown however, that there is another side and a new day now before Iowa Baptists. The second address was given by Rev. A. W. Tandy of Mason City, "Meeting the Challenge" was the theme. Some of the things needful were clearly indicated. President J. W. Million of Des Moines University was then introduced, this being his first appearance before the Iowa Convention since he assumed his duties at the beginning of the college year. His address was upon the subject, "The Essentials of Christian Education." Although the hour was late close attention was given until the close.

After the song service on Thursday evening a tender memorial service was held in honor of Rev. R. R. Sadler, for many years recording secretary of the convention and for twenty years editor of The Baptist Record. It will be of interest to many to know that his son, H. H. Sadler, will continue the publication of The Record under the editorial management of Prof. J. A. Lapham, so long connected with the work of religious education in the state.

Rev. H. R. Greaves of New York, representing the Board of Promotion, then gave an illuminating and much needed address, setting forth the background of the movement and the present condition and outlook.

Rev. S. R. Vinton also presented the missionary needs and work undertaken, by means of pictures thrown upon the screen.

Friday afternoon the women had charge of the program. Needless to say, it was a good one. In the absence of Mrs. W. A. Montgomery, who was prevented from attending by illness, Mrs. Goodman of Chicago gave an inspiring address. The outstanding feature of the afternoon was the thrilling address of Mrs. Ellora Clough Martin, a daughter of John E. Clough, as she told again the story of that remarkable life. This was of special interest to Iowa Baptists, because Dr. Clough's boyhood and early manhood were spent in this state.

The women contributed an interesting feature of the convention also by the giving of a pageant on Saturday evening, largely the work of the workers of the First Church of Waterloo.

Friday evening was given to two banquets, the women meeting at one place, and the men at another. These were well attended, the fellowship was delightful, and the speaking was of a high order.

One of the most important matters acted upon at the business session on Saturday was the adoption of the reports, after full deliberation, of the committees on ordination and on standardization of the ministry. The substance of the action taken may be thus summarized: In order to secure and maintain recognized, recorded ministerial standing as the basis of the work of the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board, it is urged, "First that in each association and throughout the territory of the convention there be, in effect, a committee on ministerial standing; that the list made include all accredited ministers within the bounds of the association and within the boundaries of the state; that when a minister removes from one association to another or from one state to another he shall be granted a certificate of ministerial standing and that churches be urged to have dealings only with those having such certificates.

Second, in the case of ordination, the church of which the candidate is a member be urged, first, to confer with the ordination committee and call an ordination council only upon the recommendation of this committee. That when a candidate is ordained he be granted a certificate signed by the members of this committee, and that only such names be published in the convention annual as have such endorsement by this committee.

Sunday morning a large congregation assembled for the convention sermon, which was given by Rev. C. A. Carman of Shenandoah, "Perfect love casteth out fear," 1 John 4:18, was the text. It was a tender, thoughtful, uplifting sermon and a blessing to all.

New Man Stirs Audience

In the afternoon was the B. Y. P. U. session, when a fine company of young people came together. Mr. Wetter, the newly elected director of religious education, was present and gave a brief address. William Pressnell, a student of Des Moines University, spoke earnestly of the Life Service League, which now has 150 enrolled in the state. The principal address was given by Dr. Howland Hanson, the newly chosen director of religious education in Des Moines University. The subject was "The Appeal of the Cross." It was one of the greatest messages of the convention and will not soon be forgotten by those fortunate enough to have heard it.

The convention closed on Sunday evening with a sermon by Prof. A. T. Robertson of Louisville Theological Seminary, who will lead the entertaining church in a series of evangelistic meetings.

Looking back over the convention as a whole it was doubtless one of the best in recent years.

At the meeting at Keokuk a year ago some rather radical changes in organization and methods were under discussion and were adopted. The spirit of the meeting was sometimes uncomfortably critical. This year the spirit of the meeting was fine, some great addresses were given. Various matters of business were wisely disposed of. The survey of the year indicates much of real progress and a hopeful outlook for the future. There have been over 3,000 additions to the churches and many churches are now planning special meetings. The churches today are far better supplied with pastors than a year ago. And not only that, but the number and quality of the younger men who are coming to positions of leadership is most encouraging. An increasing number are men of adequate training, progressive in spirit, in sympathy with modern methods and the modern spirit and with evangelistic and missionary zeal. With such leadership a new day seems to be dawning for Iowa Baptists.

It would be impossible to review the convention year just closed without a word of appreciation of the retiring president, J. O. McClelland, who has given so largely of time and thought; of the director of state missions, Dr. G. P. Mitchell, one of the hardest workers in the state, and of Dr. G. W. Cassidy, who, as director of promotion, is entering so heartily into a great task.

The officers for the coming year are: President, E. H. Williams of Fort Dodge; vice president, J. M. Mercer of Burlington; recording secretary, Mills Aldredge of Des Moines, and treasurer, J. H. Cochrane, also of Des Moines.

The next meeting of the convention will be at Marshalltown, Mount Ayr, Iowa, Oct. 31, 1921.

REV. E. J. DUNLAP has accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Church of Prescott and has begun his ministry on that field.

REV. F. E. HAWES of Marion, Ohio, has accepted the call of the First Church of Mesa and has begun his pastorate.

EVANGELIST CARL BASSETT will come to Arizona to begin work under the auspices of the Home Mission Board, on December 1st. Pastors wanting help in meetings write to Superintendent of Evangelism Darnell or to Secretary Morton.

REV. LEM R. CARTER of Seminary Hill, Texas, has become pastor of the church in Safford. Brother Carter is a recent graduate of the Southwestern Baptist Seminary of Fort Worth.

REV. R. P. POPE has resigned as Colporter Missionary and will move to California. We regret to lose Brother Pope from the state. He has done a splendid ministry among us and he is loved by all who know him. He has recently undergone medical treatment in El Paso, Texas.

A TEAM composed of the state workers will hold a number of workers' institutes in many of the churches not visited by the conference team, from November 20 to December 20.

REV. A. C. RUSSELL has become pastor of the St. John's Church (Col.) of Prescott. He is making a good start with this splendid church.

REV. J. LAWRENCE BELL, pastor at Nogales, and Miss Lotta Jameson were married by Pastor Beal of Tucson, September 9. The church at Nogales is making rapid advance under the ministry of Brother Bell.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Pacific Coast

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA Southwestern Association

Southwestern Association held its twenty-eighth annual meeting October 18, 19, and 20 with the church at East San Diego, of which Rev. J. D. Page is pastor; and who gave the address of welcome. All the meetings were well attended; and were of more than usual interest. This association consists of the seventeen church in San Diego and Imperial counties; and delegates were there from all of the churches but one. Rev. R. E. Brown, of Ocean Beach, was moderator; Rev. J. E. Malley, of Holtville, was clerk; Mr. E. Dickson, of San Diego, was president of the B. Y. P. U.; and Rev. F. O. Belden, of San Diego, was chairman of the advisory and missionary committee. The song service was led by Rev. R. V. Whealy, of La Mesa. Devotional services were led by Rev. G. M. Parks, of National City, Mrs. J. L. Phillips, of San Diego, and Rev. Wm. Thomas, of Escondido.

The annual sermon was delivered by Rev. J. W. Beaven, of the Logan Heights church, San Diego.

Addresses were delivered by the new state evangelist, Rev. J. Holmes; Miss M. A. Greene, state secretary-director; Mrs. E. M. Wells, of San Diego; Miss Viola C. Hill, of Ningpo, China; Rev. T. F. McCourtney, and Rev. J. E. Malley, of Imperial county; Rev. Theodore Fieldbrave; Rev. L. P. Valentine, of San Diego; Rev. F. T. Barkman; Chaplain F. L. Albers; and Dr. F. G. Davies and Dr. W. F. Harper. Mrs. D. T. Forbes presided at the woman's session on Wednesday afternoon, and Mrs. F. O. Belden was toastmistress at their banquet.

The reading of the church letters awakened great interest. Some of these churches, especially those in the mountain districts, are manifesting great devotion in their struggle against adverse circumstances.

Rev. T. Fieldbrave, a converted Hindu, was listened to with thrilling interest as he depicted his work among his countrymen in Imperial county. These Hindus are quite intelligent, and often are well-to-do; but are hard to reach, being scattered over the county, mainly in the cotton fields; and are without women or children. Most of them are Mohammedans. Rev. F. T. Barkman, our representative among the U. S. service men in and around San Diego, of whom there are nearly 20,000, spoke encouragingly of the work already accomplished; and entertained large expectations for the future.

Rev. L. P. Valentine, after quite a careful and extended missionary study of San Diego and vicinity, showed that in the last ten years the civic population had increased about 84 per cent, while the number of our churches had increased 100 per cent and that the membership in our churches had increased 98 per cent and in our Sunday schools 70 per cent. Total church property valuation is $217,700.

In the Association's work for the coming year, Rev. F. O. Belden was chosen moderator, and Dr. Wm. H. Geistweitz Jr. of First Church of San Diego, was chosen president of the B. Y. P. U.; and all are to meet with the Logan Heights Church.

Rocky Mountain States

ARIZONA

FIRST, PHOENIX, has called the Rev. E. H. Shanks, Ph. D., of Clinton, Iowa, to become its pastor. Mr. Shanks comes to the church after a successful ministry in Erie, Pa., and in Clinton, Iowa, and as general field secretary of the Layman's Missionary Movement in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, and more recently pastor at large of the Iowa Baptist Convention. He is on the field and hard at work.

CALVARY, PHOENIX, has called the Rev. Sam P. Gott of Jackson, Missouri, to its pastorate. He has accepted.

THE FOREIGN SPEAKING DEPARTMENT of the Home Mission Society has recently appropriated four thousand dollars for a chapel for the Mexican Church in Yuma. Work will begin on the new structure in a few weeks.

Mississippi Valley

OKLAHOMA

ON THE SECOND OF OCT. Evangelist V. E. Thompson closed a good meeting with pastor Rev. Joe B. Johns of the McLouth Baptist Church. This is a noble band of workers, in the midst of a fine opportunity for kingdom building. There were a number of professions of faith and additions. From McLouth he went to Arma in the southeastern part of Kansas, and for near three weeks labored with Rev. T. R. Wade, pastor.

IOWA

MR. AND MRS. JOHN IMRIE, singing evangelists, are with Rev. Elmer Kirkpatrick in special meetings at Hamburg. The meetings began Nov. 6. The pastor is preaching.

MICHIGAN

THE GILBERT MEMORIAL CHURCH, of Mount Clemens, has just closed the most successful evangelistic campaign in its history, under Evangelists Littrell and Moody of Columbus, Ohio. There were about ninety decisions for Christ and most of these people will unite with the church. Thirty-two have already been baptized.

THE CHURCH AT TECUMSEH, Rev. W. R. Curtis, observed rally week during the period Oct. 24-30. There were special sessions each evening under the charge of some of the church organizations, with speakers from away. On Oct. 30, four candidates were baptized and two were received by letter. All departments are rallying for a forward move during the winter.

NEBRASKA

REV. B. J. MINORTS, third quarter in the pastorate, reports sixty-eight additions, mostly by baptism, salary paid up, evangelistic meetings in progress; among other things, the pastor has been made a member of three labor unions.

SOUTH DAKOTA

REV. E. A. GILMORE has accepted a call to the Windsor Park church, Chicago, after a five-year pastorate at Aberdeen. During his pastorate at Aberdeen the church has been rebuilt at an expense of $20,000.

MINNESOTA

THE CORNER STONE of the University Baptist Church, Minneapolis, was laid Sunday afternoon, Nov. 6. Most of the exercises were held in the present church building, and then a processional was formed, marching one block to the new edifice. It was a beautiful fall afternoon and the congregation practically filled the church. The main addresses were given by E. B. Pierce, of the University of Minnesota, on "The Challenge of the University to a University Church." He told us of the splendid work of the university and recognized the necessity and large value of the church in its ministry to the students. Dr. Allen Hoben, professor of sociology at Carleton College, Northfield, gave the main address of the afternoon, emphasizing the influence of the church in all lines of community life. The historical statement by E. R. Pope showed that the denominational interest in this enterprise began about five years ago when a resolution was passed by the Minnesota Convention at Park Rapids in 1916. The project has been delayed from various causes, but the Home Mission Society, the State Convention, and the Baptist Union of Minneapolis have co-operated with the church in carrying it forward. The individual Baptists in Minnesota have made considerable contributions. The cost thus far has been paid but additional funds must be secured in order to carry the whole undertaking to a successful completion. It is proposed to finish as speedily as possible the social part of the building, and it will undoubtedly be ready for occupancy next fall when the university convenes. The church, under the leadership of Dr. N. B. Henderson, is making fine progress and the work on the field was never in better condition than at the present time.

DR. GEO. E. BURLINGAME, who has just closed a series of meetings as one of the evangelists in Duluth, begins Nov. 9 at Brainerd and will remain in Minnesota for a few months doing special evangelistic work.

ILLINOIS

THE CHURCH AT PARIS, of which Albert A. Gordanier is pastor, is making splendid progress. The pastors of the city have united in organizing a college of Sunday-school efficiency at which there are now an even 100 studying. This organization was put in motion by Mr. Gordanier at a Sunday-school banquet last spring. Extensive repairs are being made on the church building, every cent of which has been raised in small amounts among children as well as adults. On Oct. 23 the first men's banquet of the year was held. Dr. Morton secretary of the Arizona convention was the guest of honor of the evening. The aim set by the men at the banquet is "sixty men enrolled in the class by Dec. 4." The pastor believes they will do it for they are getting up steam.

WORK AT WINCHESTER is taking on new life under the leadership of the pastor, W. R. Johnson; the B. Y. P. U. was recently organized with over forty members in attendance; a large orchestra has been formed for the Sunday school; a Sunday school class composed of younger married people recently organized has an enrollment now of forty-five, and the attendance at the preaching services of the church has increased 100 per cent. This church will put on an every member canvass for local expenses and the New World Movement on Sunday, November 27.

THE FIRST CHURCH of Joliet has just closed a successful series of special services. The preaching was done by the pastor, Rev. R. T. Gasaway, and he was assisted in the singing by Rev. W. S. Dixon of Wheaton. An addition of forty new members is expected, and thirty of these will be by baptism. Mr. Gasaway speaks highly of Mr. Dixon's ability as a song leader.

THE CHURCH AT TAMPICO recently called a council with the view of ordaining their pastor, S. L. Cobb, to the ministry. Several churches sent delegates and after examination the council expressed itself as satisfied and recommended that the candidate be ordained; the ordination sermon was preached by Rev. G. P. Burdon; the charge to the candidate was given by Dr. George W. Taft; and charge to the church by Rev. H. E. Miles; the presentation of the Bible by W. H. Dickman; and the fellowship by R. W. Barber; ordination prayer by A. W. Fleischman. W. H. Dickman was the moderator of the council and A. W. Fleischman clerk.

REV. MORRIS F. GILBERT recently resigned as pastor of the church at Campbell Hill to accept the call extended by the church at Troy. He will continue his half-time preaching at Willsville in connection with the work at Troy, and will occupy the parsonage at the last-named place.

DR. H. C. LELAND continues to render valuable service to the denomination and pastorless churches in the state by acting as permanent pulpit supply. He has recently closed a seven months' service with the church at Savanna and leaves it in fine condition for the new pastor, Rev. E. K. Masterson. Last Sunday Dr. Leland began a similar service at First Church, Rock Island. He was greeted with full houses both morning and evening.

SPRINGFIELD ASSOCIATION: The associational board of promotion met recently and formulated plans for an aggressive year along lines of Bible conferences, evangelistic campaigns, religious education, rallies and conferences of church organization, financial and New World Movement.

PANA CHURCH is in the midst of a building campaign. Rev. T. J. Phillips, the pastor, is leading this splendid church in a masterly way.

WEST VIRGINIA

CLARKSBURG, J. W. GRAVES, pastor. There are now seventy-five boards, societies, standing committees, classes, departments and organizations connected with and a part of the church, besides a large number of special committees connected with the various groups, which meet in the church or the Church Home. There are from one to a half-dozen meetings a day or night throughout the year, except during vacation time.

NEW BOOKS FOR Church Work

Evangelistic Preaching Ozora S. Davis' new book, with Sermon Outlines and Talks to Children and Young People, is "the best help on this important subject that we have ever seen."—C. E. World. $1.50.

Evangelism—Its Justification—Operation—Value William E. Biederwolf's book "is a text-book and a call. Every chapter is full of value. It is a book for every one who is interested in doing evangelistic work."—Herald and Presbyterian. $1.75.

Parish Evangelism Frederick L. Fagley is Executive Secy Commission on Evangelism, Congregational Churches. An Outline of a Year's Program of work, including the formalities and maintenance of an evangelistic committee, a program of preaching, methods of personal work, deepening of the prayer-life, etc. $1.00.

The Assurance of Salvation J. W. Porter's Evangelistic Sermons are "of the distinctly orthodox type and suggestive in outline and illustration. Warm the soul and stimulate the thought."—Evangelical Messenger $1.25.

The Future of the Churches Roger W. Babson shows how the future prosperity and achievement of the church are dependent on its ability to enter fully into the manifold life of the people. $1.00.

The Church in the Present Crisis Pres. William Allen Harper's book is a refreshing, stimulating antidote to the host of works concerning the church's "failure." $1.75.

The Roman Catholic Bible and the Roman Catholic Church Allen W. Johnston's book examines the cardinal doctrines as taught by the Church of Rome, and indicates the dissimilarity between this body of teaching and Holy Writ. $1.25.

Thinking Through the New Testament J. J. Ross has prepared a volume which can be used by the individual student as well as by study groups. $1.75.

Making the Bible Real Frederick B. Oxtoby brings his readers into close, intimate contact with the wonderful story of God's chosen People, their Land, their History, their Prophets and their Literature. $1.00.

Send for New List of Books for All Fields of Religious Service

REVELL'S BOOKS Fleming H. Revell Company New York, 158 Fifth Av. Chicago, 17 N. Wabash

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

SOUTH BERWICK. The remarkable success of the South Berwick Church, Rev. E. A. Elwell, pastor, continues. The annual reunion will occur Nov. 19. A significant feature of the reunion will be the address of Dr. Clarence A. Barbour of Rochester Theological Seminary. This will attract all of South Berwick and

The Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society needs immediately:

- 1 TEACHER (for ungraded school)
- Salvador, Central America
- 3 DAY NURSERY DIRECTORS
- 3 TRAINED KINDERGARTNERS

Communicate with Jessie Dodge White, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City

"The Master is here and calleth for Thee."

Hudson Avenue congregation, Detroit, is about to build an $80,000 structure on Grand River Avenue. We are the only Baptist Church among 200,000 people. We need help and want 10,000 Baptists to send $1 each. Send to

Rev. Robert White, Pastor
4024 Euclid Avenue, W.
Detroit, Mich.

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home. Electric Organ blowing out fits for organs of any make. Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinnners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise

Write for Booklet Z,
American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

many from beyond. Something of vital importance to the church of Christ in this day will be said and with the great personality of Dr. Barbour behind it. Another significant thing will be a "Free Will Offering for the Repair Fund." An evangelistic campaign will begin in December with William George Cooper, the London evangelist, as the director.

HUDSON: Pastor Evangelist Perley E. Miller has been holding special evangelistic meetings and has done a great deal of house-to-house work on this field. Eleven, numbering some of the leading citizens of the town, have been baptized. The entire outlook of the little church has been changed.

DEXTER, in the union evangelistic campaign recently conducted by Dr. Franklin Swift registered 217 decisions for Christ, instead of seventeen as stated in a former report.

MASSACHUSETTS

AT NORTH AVENUE CHURCH, Cambridge, they have been celebrating the seventy-fifth anniversary of the Sunday school. It was thoroughly and intelligently done, vividly recalling the strong early leaders. Probably the outstanding voice in the cel-

CONNECTICUT

CALVARY, NEW HAVEN, Rev. James McGee, minister, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary with an elaborate program running through the week of November 13.

NEW YORK

LYELL AVENUE CHURCH of Rochester, N. Y., has called the Rev. George Frederick McElvein of Raymond Church, Fairport, N. Y., who will on December 1 succeed the Rev. William E. La Rue as pastor. On the evening of November 8, a $10,000 mortgage was publicly burned. The payment of this mortgage leaves the church entirely free of all incumbrances. On this same evening the church and community gave a public reception to Pastor La Rue and his family. Mr. La Rue departed on the evening of November 14 for his new field—the Takoma Park Church, Washington, D. C.

REV. CYRUS A. JOHNSON, pastor emeritus of the First Church of Batavia, who was in his eighty-third year, died recently from an acute attack of bronchitis at his home in Batavia. Mr. Johnson was born in Connecticut; graduate of Wesleyan University in 1865; Union Theological Seminary in 1868; settled as pastor of the First Church of Cohoes, N. Y., where his health failed him, after which he traveled through Europe and Egypt; returning to this country, he took up the pastorate at Whitehall, N. Y., and supplied other churches until 1882, when he became pastor of the First Church of Batavia. The present handsome church edifice of the First Church was erected under his administration. In 1898 he was made pastor emeritus of the church. The long and honorable ministry of Mr. Johnson has endeared him to the people, not alone of Batavia, but throughout the state. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Bertha F. Woodward of New York City.

REV. HAVARD GRIFFITH of the First Church, Geneva, is an energetic believer in religious education as the minister's concern. He has three classes in teacher training, one of young people which meets at the Sunday-school hour, doing first-year work. Another class of eight members sets aside the entire week beginning with Nov. 7 and covers ten lessons and the examination in the single intensive week.

This class is also working with first-year courses. A third class of seven members is doing third-year work this fall. All these classes are studying the New Standard Course. Week-day religious schools are also conducted this fall in Geneva in nearly all the churches. The children are dismissed from the public schools at 3 p.m. on Friday and go to their churches for this work. Mr. Griffith is president of the city council that put this work on this fall. The pastor of each church is directing his own school, and in most cases does the teaching. An auto race contest in the Bible school has put new "ginger" into the whole organization. The men's class is driving a Hudson on the Lincoln Highway, and forging ahead of the rest of the school. Adult interest in the school puts backbone into all other classes and departments.

A New Christmas Service Free

We want you to see

THE GIFT OF LOVE, our new S. S. Service of merit. You will like it. Sent free.

Our CHRISTMAS RECITATION BOOKLET, NO. 24 with cute songs, is the best ever. 15c.

WHEN THE KING CAME, a Pastoral Sketch for young people. Beautiful. No music. 12c.

CHRISTMAS FOLKS, a wholesome, amusing cantata for Sunday school or Day school. 12c.

HYMNS FOR TODAY, for Sunday school and Church, contains 20 Christmas hymns and two Christmas service programs. Sample copy sent for examination. Orchestrated.

Give us your address (or others interested) and we will mail free a new catalog of Christmas services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for women's voices, also men's voices, and anthems for mixed voices.

If interested in Sunday school orchestra music you should know what we have for you. Write.

FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE
528 Elm Street, CINCINNATI, O.

A Cruise to the Orient

By The Rev. Andrew W. Archibald, D. D.

Author of The Bible Verified, The Easter Hope, etc.

A sequel to the World War whose dramatic ending is vividly sketched. Fascinating travel to the Near East under the changed conditions.

A compact yet graphic portrayal of the wonders and antiquities of Rome, Athens, Cairo, Karnak or Old Thebes, Constantinople and Jerusalem.

The volume not only contains clearly etched word-pictures of the places visited, but it is also illuminated with 64 illustrations, including the Pantheon and Parthenon, St. Peter's and San Sophia, Athenian Stadium and Pharaoh mummy, Jaffa Harbor and the Bosphorus, etc.

On the title page as guiding all the thought is the Christmas quotation, "We saw His star in the East" making the book an appropriate holiday gift.

Price $3.50 net. Postage 15c

The Stratford Company, Publishers
12 Pearl St., Boston, Mass.

WANT ADS

You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 60 per word per insertion; cash with order.

The Baptist Missionary Training School is in need of tables 2 or 2½ feet wide by 5 or 5½ feet long, for use in the sewing-school at Raymond Chapel. We would gladly pay cartage charges on same.

LEM T. ROOT, General Evangelist. Twenty years' experience from Pacific Coast to Kentucky. References. Mail addressed 3206 Sixth Ave., Tacoma, Wash., is forwarded.

Successful, interesting orthodox Chicago pastor, now in business, just closing pastorate of three and a half years, is open for work with a church that cannot afford resident pastor. Highest references. Address C. E. care of THE BAPTIST.

For $2.00 we will send you a Fountain Pen, first-class self-filling Fountain Pen and we will send The Expositor to your pastor 4 months as your Christmas Gift. F. M. Barton, 701 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

132 page Homiletic Magazine sent to any pastor who will agree to examine same, return it if not pleased, or send $1.00 for 4 months subscription. The Expositor, 701 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland Ohio.

AT PHELPS an interesting piece of week-day religious education is being done. The public school board of education places the school buildings and all scholars at the disposal of the churches an hour a week for religious teaching. The Catholic priest and the four Protestant ministers go to the schoolhouses. The priest gathers his Catholic children into one room and teaches them. The rest of the school is taught by the four Protestant ministers, each taking a grade or grades. Rev. Russell Crane, the Baptist minister is teaching the junior high-school department, using two text books on Bible history, and requiring his classes to pass examinations on this work as they would on any other school subject. This plan has the advantage of giving Bible study and religious and moral instruction to every child of the community, regardless of whether they go to a Sunday school or not.

PASTOR E. M. A. BLEAKNEY of First Church, Hyde Park, wins from his people a merited recognition of his successful leadership there in church and Sunday school. It is a story of marked increase in attendance, in addition, and in systematic and benevolent giving. That is now one of our strongest churches.

DR. GOODCHILD'S address before the ministers on his "Visit among the Blanket Indians" was a most interesting and informing recital. Rarely have we had a speaker who for a full hour held his hearers so delightedly to the end.

AT TREMONT TEMPLE they have been hearing different preachers every Sunday. Recently among the number have been Dr. M. A. Levy of Pittsfield, Mass., Dr. W. W. Weeks of Richmond, Va., Dr. John Snape of Oakland, Cal., and Dr. John W. Sam of Atlanta, Ga., who it is announced will fill the Temple pulpit the rest of the month.

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

THE BAPTIST TABERNACLE of Lee Park and South Wilkes Barre, Rev. Chas. M. Bond, pastor, is successfully carrying out its fall campaign which opened with a rally week, beginning Sept. 26, followed by an educational week, Oct. 2-16. The plan includes emphasis upon stewardship Oct. 23-30 and an every member canvass Nov. 6-13. Evangelism will be stressed Nov. 20-Dec. 14, with special services Dec. 1-14. The building project has received a temporary check because of high costs.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS are coming in from various churches. Hickory St., Scranton, Pastor Wm. L. Leimbach, rejoices that the average attendance of the Sunday school has increased thirty per cent over last year. Pastor Alfred Jeffery and the Dimock Church have reopened an abandoned church building three miles away with promising results. Pastor W. H. Savage and his people at Watsontown are cheered by the reception of seventeen new members this fall, eleven of whom came by baptism. The church at York is making substantial progress; Pastor C. C. Cox is to have the assistance of Dr. H. M. Wharton of Baltimore in evangelistic meetings from Nov. 20-30.

REV. E. PARKE BROWN was ordained in the North Main Avenue Church, Scranton, Oct. 25, 1921. He will continue as pastor of the Hilltown Church.

PROF. HENRY C. VEDDER has been supplying the Upland Church, now pastorless, at stated times. He was selected to occupy the pulpit on Armistice Sunday.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

AT BELLE VERNON, Henry Madtes, pastor, the Young Men's Class of the Sunday school, V. L. Everett, teacher, lost out by a small margin in an attendance contest with the Young Women's Class. They gallantly banqueted the successful rivals on Oct. 27. Rally Day was observed Oct. 30, and the banner attendance of 156 was registered, twenty-six more than the best previous record.

A PENNSYLVANIA LAW requires all employees of the churches, including ministers, to be insured by the churches. Most of the churches have provided for workmen's compensation according to law.

THE OAKLAND CHURCH, R. M. Safford, pastor, has begun the publication of a weekly bulletin. The first copy is very attractive in appearance and has a page of valuable notices and suggestions.

NEW JERSEY

THE FIRST CHURCH, NEW BRUNSWICK, Rev. J. Bruce Gilman, pastor, held its roll call and banquet Nov. 2 with over 300 present. The supper was followed by a brief address by the pastor on the work of the church, followed by H. B. Zimmerman, a deacon for more than forty years, and by Profs. J. H. Logan and C. H. Whitman of Rutgers College. Enlistment cards for service were signed during the evening.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

THE CONTRACT has just been let for the main superstructure of the National Baptist Memorial, in Washington, D. C. The foundations were laid in the early summer, and it is expected that the work of the main building will now go steadily forward. Mr. Charles E. Hughes, Secretary of State, has consented to give the address on the occasion of the cornerstone laying, when the time comes. In the exhibition recently held by the Architectural League, both in New York and in Washington, the Memorial design was given a very prominent place, and was counted one of the finest of all the exhibits.

RODEHEAVER PUBLICATIONS VICTORY SONGS

Our great gospel song book prepared under direction of our Mr. Homer Rodeheaver—unsurpassed for general church and religious purposes. 288 pages of choice music—70 new songs. PRICE $0.80 to 25c manila—30c limp—40c cloth, in quantities not pre-paid. Single copies—30c manila—30c limp and 45c cloth, postpaid.

AWAKENING SONGS, 256 pages; SONGS FOR SERVICE 288 pages. Same rates as Victory Songs. JOYFUL PRAISE, 128 pgs, adapted to all religious services, 25c limp—20c manila post/d single copies: 20c limp, 15c manila, not prep'd in quantities. RAINBOW SACRED RECORDS—85c

Each—Ask for list. Write for complete catalog.
THE RODEHEAVER COMPANY
1053 Monon Bldg. Dept. B, 814 Walnut St.
Chicago, Ill. Philadelphia, Pa.

Van Duzen Bells
formerly Van Duzen & Tift
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.

The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC FREE
HALL-MACK CO'S
FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT. PASTOR or COM.

6 new, original Christmas S. S. Services

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Helper No. 9. Price, 20c. (25c for Helper and 3 services.)
Herod's Vision. A Song Story—Cantata. Price, 30c.
Victorious Christmas. A Song Story for the Sunday School, 25c.
The Manger King. Choir Cantata by Dr. Adam Geibel, 50c.
Here Comes Christmas. Children's Cantata. Price, 25c.
Songs for Little Singers, No. 3. Price, 30c. All (except Helper) sent for examination.
Hall-Mack Co. 21st and Arch Streets,
Adam Geibel Co. Philadelphia, Pa.

CHURCH FURNITURE

Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outlets, Desks—EVERY THING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DEMIGULIN BROS. & CO., 9st 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

SNOWDEN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Improved International Uniform Series, 1922. By REV. JAMES H. SNOWDEN, author of "The Personality of God," "The Coming of the Lord," etc.

Enough material to make the people and events of each lesson for the year 1922 interesting and human without over-loading and confusing the busy part-time teacher. $1.50. Send for Circular.

"This very attractive and handy volume, covering in 329 pages, the entire course of the International Uniform Sabbath-School lessons for the coming year, is a volume to be commended. The Bible text is printed in the Authorized Version, as it should be, in all due respect to conservative opinion. From six to eight pages are taken for each lesson. Sound views are presented, and valuable instruction. The appearance is attractive and neat, and the arrangement is artistic and pleasing. The volume is light and easily carried in the pocket or hand."—The Herald and Presbyter.

"There are any number of notes, lesson helps and miscellaneous material designed to help the workers in the field of religious education. Most of them are of indifferent value, but the one which is now given to us will be a distinct asset. It is more scholarly than any of the others and the Sunday School teacher who desires to be a real educator should by all means possess it."—Christian Education Monthly.

"We have recommended it for adoption by the teachers of our Sunday School."—Rev. A. T. Fowler, North Orange, (N. J.) Baptist Church.

Mr. S. S. Superintendent:—Purchase a sample copy and show it to your teachers.

The New Testament in the Twentieth Century

By Prof. Ernest F. Scott
Union Theological Seminary

This report of the latest forms taken by New Testament problems, and the direction future inquiries are likely to take, is something that ministers and studious laymen cannot afford to miss. Boards, 12 mo. $1.00.

The Fundamentals of Christianity

By Henry C. Vedder

Professor of Church History, Crozer Theological Seminary

The main object of this book is to convince its readers that the future belongs to a Christianity that will determine its doctrines, program and methods on the authority of Jesus alone. Cloth 12 mo. $2.00.

Spiritism and the Cult of the Dead in Antiquity

By Lewis Bayles Paton, Ph. D.

Nettleton Professor of Old Testament Exegesis and Criticism in Hartford Theological Seminary, late Director of the American School of Oriental Study and Research in Jerusalem

All the things known to psychical research—hypnotism, somnambulism, ecstasy, motor-automaticism, dreams, visions, auditions, second sight, mind-reading, apparitions and others—were known also to antiquity. This book contains the main evidence in regard to these spirit manifestations. Cloth, 8vo. $3.75.

What and Where is God?

By Richard L. Swain

Every Church heard from that has formed a group of ten or twenty or more adults for the study of "What and Where is God?" is enthusiastic over the result. $1.50.

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Mathews and Smith: Dictionary of Religion and Ethics.....	$8.00
Sinkovitch: Toward the Understanding of Jesus.....	2.00
Machen: Origin of Paul's Religion.....	3.00
Hurt: Self-Help in Teaching.....	1.00
Wodehouse: Sunday Talks to Teachers.....	1.25
Streeter: The Message of Sadhu Sunder Singh.....	1.75

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

64-66 FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

"It Is to Laugh"

(Contributions for this column are solicited from our readers. Especially shall we value the story of any humorous incidents occurring in connection with the life of our churches.—THE EDITOR.)

The story is told of an Irishman who saw on a wharf a fish of most unusual size. He looked at it for a minute or two and then, turning to a bystander, remarked, "The man who caught that fish is a liar."

The following couplet, quoted recently in an address by Dr. J. Y. Aitchison, is attributed by him to Bob Burdette. Possibly board of trustees will relish it as much as some ministers:

"Tell my trustees when I am dead that they need shed no tears;
For I shall then be no more dead than they have been for years."

One of the several pat stories told at Indianapolis by Mrs. C. D. Eulette, but repeated here without the charm with which she invested it, follows: A dough-boy on his way to Europe on a transport was given his first pair of hob-nail shoes. He put them on, dragged their weight about the deck for a short distance, contemplated them again, and remarked: "Now if the ship sinks, I know that I shall go down at attention."

Some husbands appreciate the possession of a remarkable wife. One such, boasting of his wife to a friend, asserted that in all their married life she had given him but one curtain lecture. "To be sure," he added after a pause, "it has been occasionally interrupted."

The family was Scotch. It consisted of James, the husband, his wife, the daughter Isabel and a son, Jimmie. They were all devoted to the church, the husband somewhat contentiously. Speaking of their consecration one day the wife said:

"Our family almost runs the church: Isabel plays the organ, Jimmie pumps and James does the objectin."

Our Book Shelf

BOOKS RECEIVED

A Memorial Wreath (to the World War Martyrs Lee's Veterans, B. H. Carroll and J. B. Gambrell) by George W. McDaniel; Baptist Standard Publishing Company, Dallas, Texas; black cloth, 94 pages.

Jehovah in the Old Testament and the New, by Lyman B. Tefft; black cloth, 96 pages; published by the author.

The Life of Jean Henri Fabre, by the Abbe Augustin Fabre; Dodd, Mead and Co., Fourth Avenue and Thirtieth Street, New York; brown cloth, 398 pages.

Sailing Under Sealed Orders by Commander Thos. D. Parker, U. S. N.; W. A. Wilde & Co., Boston; a book for boys; green cloth, decorated, 286 pages.

The Vindication of Robert Creighton, by Daniel Frederick Fox; Fleming H. Revell, New York; blue cloth, 272 pages, fiction, $1.75.

Rose and Rose, by E. V. Lucas; George H. Doran Co., New York; fiction, rose cloth, 290 pages, $1.90 net.

Peter Binney, by Archibald Marshall; Dodd, Mead & Co.; reprint of an English novel; cloth, 280 pages; $2.00.

The Arant Rover, novel by Berta Ruck; Dodd, Mead & Co.; rose cloth, 373 pages.

Vigils, a book of poems by Aline Kilmer; George H. Doran Co., New York; 51 pages; $1.25.

Self-Development, essays by H. Addington Bruce; Funk & Wagnalls Co., New York; 332 pages; $1.50 net.

The King's Trumpet, a study in the book of Revelation, by Jasper Seaton Hughes, Holland, Mich.; published by the author; paper, 174 pages.

Fireside Prayers, by Dwight E. Marvin, Summit, New Jersey; published by the author; paper, 68 pages.

The Infinite Artist, sermons by Frederick P. Shannon; MacMillan, New York; cloth, 133 pages.

How Much Shall I Give? by Lilian Brandt; The Frontier Press, New York, 100 West 21 St.; $2.00.

In the Eyes of the East a book of travel by Marjorie Barstow Greenbie; Dodd, Mead & Co., 420 pages.

Nightfall, a novel by Anthony Pryde; Dodd, Mead & Co.; 370 pages.

The Policy of Nations, a study of the World War by Frederick Palmer; Dodd, Mead & Co., New York; 408 pages.

(What we think of some of these books will appear later.)

BOOKS READ

The Passing of the Third Floor Back, by Jerome K. Jerome (in the dramatized form as presented by Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson); Dodd, Mead & Co., New York.

Those who have read this beautiful allegory, or seen it played, and have felt its warm religious and friendly appeal, will need only to be told that this new form of 1921 is beautifully printed and bound in light blue mottled boards. As soon as one sees it he wishes to get his hands upon it.

Obituary

Elsie Palmer Grenell, wife of B. B. Grenell of La Grange, Ill., entered the heavenly life October 18, 1921.

She had been identified with Baptist interests for many years. She was a member of the board of directors of the Chicago Baptist Social Union, was a faithful member of the Woman's Mission Union of Chicago, also of the Woman's Society of Illinois State Convention. She had served as secretary of the Interdenominational Missionary Society of La Grange and was active in the work of the La Grange Baptist Church. Her husband, parents and brother and sisters as well as an unusually large circle of friends, mourn her loss.

DR. F. H. DARBY

Dr. F. H. Darby was stricken with paralysis on Thursday evening, August 18, but lived until August 29, when he peacefully passed away at his residence in Columbus, Ohio. He had attained the age of seventy-five. He was a faithful member of the Central Baptist Church and a regular attendant upon all its services. In fact he was present at the prayer meeting on the Wednesday evening preceding his last illness and took part in the same. He was a reader of Baptist papers and well informed concerning all our denominational activities. He was also a regular patron of the Ohio Baptist Assembly from the very beginning. He was keenly interested in all the affairs of life and was a vigorous ally of many a good cause. The funeral services were held on Wednesday evening, August 31, at the Central Baptist Church. The pastor, Rev. Wm. Pieffer, was in charge, assisted by Rev. D. F. Rittenhouse and Rev. Mr. Lindenbolt. He was buried on the following day at the old home in Morrow, Ohio.

ROSENA DOWNING ROWE

The death of Rosena Downing Rowe, wife of Dr. John B. Anderson, of the Colgate University faculty, occurred Oct. 25, following an operation performed in a Utica hospital three days preceding. Through her self-sacrificing service in the interests of the Kingdom covering a considerable number of years, Mrs. Anderson became well known in the denomination and her passing will cause wide-spread sorrow.

Mrs. Anderson was the daughter of Susan Ann and Daniel Chase Rowe. She was baptized at Wappingers Falls, N. Y., when fifteen years of age. While a student at Wellesley her leadership in religious activities attracted the attention of Dwight L. Moody and she was appointed a teacher at Northfield Seminary where she served for five years. She then became a member of the faculty of the Missionary Training School in New York City. In 1899 she was married to Mr. Anderson in Poughkeepsie after his graduation from Colgate, and resided in Camillus, N. Y., where Mr. Anderson was pastor of the Baptist church. They came to Hamilton in 1900 when Mr. Anderson was appointed a member of the Seminary faculty. She was a member of the National Board of Promotion, and was College Counselor in New York State for the Woman's Home and Foreign Mission Boards. In the activities of the local Hamilton church and in the life of Colgate University her influence was especially helpful.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. P. D. Elmer, pastor of the Hamilton Church, assisted by Rev. Dr. D. H. Clark, North Adams and Dean J. F. Vichert and Rev. Dr. W. M. Lawrence of the Colgate Seminary. Interment was in the University cemetery.

Rev. E. A. Hanley has accepted the call to become pastor of the First Church, Berkeley, Cal. The church is planning an aggressive campaign. Dr. Hanley will begin his pastorate the first Sunday in November.

Adapted to the Needs of Each Grade

Peloubet's Graded Quarterlies

The advantages in the study of a uniform text are found in uniform family Bible study; a common subject in teachers' meetings; substitute teaching made possible; fresh texts and treatments each year; additional material found in PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES and denominational and secular papers.

Teachers' Quarterlies

Very popular with progressive teachers, because exceedingly helpful in fitting the mind to present the lesson to the scholar with vividness and clearness that holds the pupil's interest.

Send for Sample Copies

W. A. WILDE COMPANY 120 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.

Western Office: Madison Terminal Building, Chicago, Ill.

Based on the New Uniform Lessons

Edited by Leading S. S. Workers

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

A FINE LETTER FROM BARRY. ILL.

From the Choir of the Plainfield Street Baptist Church of Providence, R. I., comes the following little note. We are glad to give it space.

"We have two orchestras, the 'Peerless' and a Junior orchestra, for the Sunday school hour. These are both doing good work. They add much to the attractiveness of our work. The 'Peerless' orchestra has done much outside work for picnics, school functions, lodge meetings, banquets and chautauqua. The amount of money taken in for such in the last eighteen months will total more than $500. The Junior orchestra played acceptably at the last meeting of the Quincey Baptist Association. The 'Peerless Orchestra' plays each Sunday evening, and occasionally gives a short preliminary concert which is well attended. We look on the work done by these two organizations as of inestimable value to the service of the church. Most of the members are members of the church, but there are some from other churches who play with us, at least on occasions."

"The pastor, Rev. T. Elmer Jones, is president of the Barry Illinois Band, an organization that is new, but is beginning to attract attention. Music is a great power in toning up any community and giving our younger folk an out-let that will be valuable through life."

"Perhaps some of the people who read his column might be interested to know of a little musical play of the right type which has just been given very successfully by the choir of the Plainfield St. Church of Providence. It is entitled 'Our Minister's Birthday' by Will T. Bingham, Bingham and Radcliffe of Millville, N. J., publishers, and was received with great enthusiasm not only by the local church but also by the Calvary Baptist. The Choir plan to give it several more times in order that they may finish paying off their pledge to the New World Movement."

ADVICE TO CHURCH ORGANISTS

"Prelude, Offertory, Postlude," is the ending of an article containing wholesome advice to church organists in a recent issue of the "Etude."

"To many organists," says the author, Dr. Roland Diggle, "the above three words stand for a great deal; to others I am afraid they only mean the beginning, middle and end of a church service. Some organists are content with a 'Simple Aveu' relude and a Scotson Clark Postlude year in and year out; at the same time they wonder why the congregation talks during the prelude and hurries out during the postlude. It seems to me a plain case of self-defense."

The average good organist will plan his choir music at least a few weeks ahead, but how few of them plan their organ solos that way. Too often do we hear an otherwise fine service spoiled by a poor organ solo, or an organ solo that is out of keeping with the rest of the service. It may be a fine piece and well played, but somehow it does not fit, and even the unmusical in the congregation feel that something is wrong.

The Prelude, while in some ways more important than the Postlude, is much easier to "fit." Its special function is to create a spirit of reverence. To my mind, a piece taking from five to seven minutes is about the right length. As to the style of music a little thought will soon show you what is most suited to your own individual needs. Take into consideration our organ, the season of the year and the "make-up" of your congregation. At the outset you will discard all pieces of the Gavotte from "Mignon" type, which are quite out of place in a church service.

Outside of such a general directions as this it is difficult to suggest pieces, for organs and conditions vary so completely. Personally, I have found that there is an unlimited supply of splendid music suitable, but you will have to hunt it out yourself.

How many excellent organ preludes have been utterly ruined by the organist adding a few rambling chords to get into the key of G for the doxology with which so many services open. I must confess I have never been able to understand this tacking of the doxology on to every prelude. Why not finish your piece, make a slight pause and then start the doxology in the key of the prelude or a related key? I would suggest that if you cannot transpose the doxology, you write it out in a number of keys. In this way you will have no difficulty in fitting it in with the prelude without the aimless modulating that is so often heard.

The Offertory is too often looked upon as only an excuse for taking up the collection. Even that in no way excuses its being out of keeping with the rest of the service. There are so many beautiful little pieces suitable that I see no reason for the secular transcription so often heard. The organist should have an understanding with the minister as to how long he can have for the offertory. It should, of course, be long enough to take up the collection of the congregation with perhaps a minute or two extra. Have the time fixed and stick to it. How often have we heard a piece hurried through, cut off in the middle, or lengthened by some meaningless chords. There is no excuse for this sort of thing, and if a time is set and the organist will time his pieces, things will run smoothly.

As to the style of music, I would suggest Faulke's "Berceuse" in D-flat, Hollins' "Allegretto Grazioso," and "Intermezzo" in D-flat, Kinder's "Idyll" and "At Evening," Demarest's "Evening Meditation" and a charming "Pastorale" by Katherine Davis. I am inclined to think the field of music for the offertory is even larger than for the prelude. Don't play over the heads of the congregation, avoid commonplace transcriptions, and I believe you will find the offertory becoming a worthy part of the church service.

The Postlude—who of us has not sinned in this respect? Few indeed have not been guilty at some time or other of the noisy march cut short just as soon as the last person has passed from view. I am afraid to think of the thousands of services that have been ruined by the organ postlude.

In the first place, there can be no excuse for the full-organ two-step that is so often heard. If you must play a march, why play it on the full-organ? I have heard many fine postludes spoiled because the organist would insist on playing them as loud as possible. Here, it seems to me, is the real fault with the postlude, not so much with the music played as with the performance of it. Because there is a certain amount of noise in the congregation we get an idea that no one is listening, and that therefore it doesn't matter what we do just so long as we make enough noise to drown them out. Before we can make our postlude effective we must do away with this idea and take as much care with it as with the offertory.

PELOUBET'S

Select Notes

The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Its suggestions to teachers, its maps and pictures, are comprehensive and thorough, and all this material is presented in a form which can be easily and profitably utilized.

To every student its study is an inspiration.

Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1922

Price $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered

W. A. WILDE COMPANY

120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

Madison Terminal Building, Chicago

FOR SALE AT ALL BOOKSTORES

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1859

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

OXFORD CHILDREN'S BIBLES

The best gift for your child is an Oxford Bible. Nothing else you can give has such wonderful possibilities in enriching their lives. Oxford Bibles for Children have black and colored illustrations that interest as well as instruct. Some have special helps for children.

A few styles are listed here. Others are to be found in the Oxford Bible catalogue, mailed upon request.

02145 [This size print] Bound in Keratol (imitation leather), overlapping covers, red under gold edges, size 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches. 32 black illus. ....$2.30

02153 [This size print] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, red under gold edges. Has 32 colored illustrations .....$2.70

03325 [This size print] Oxford S. S. Scholar's Bible. Has special helps for children, alphabetically arranged, and 32 illustrations. Bound in Keratol (imitation Morocco), overlapping covers, red under gold edges. (Size 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches) .....$2.85

02327 [This size print] A beautifully illustrated Oxford Bible, French Morocco leather binding, overlapping covers, red under gold edges. With 32 colored illustrations. Size 5 1/2 x 3 3/4 inches. ....$3.70

At all booksellers or from the publishers

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
AMERICAN BRANCH
35 W. 32d St.
New York

"Buy from Your Own House"

CHRISTMAS SUPPLIES

Christmas Service

The Road to Bethlehem

This new Christmas Service by C. Harold Lowden and Edith Sanford Tillotson can be truly said to be just a little better than the dozens of other popular services by these two talented writers. The service is unique in both story and music and is built upon the Christmas story as told in the Word. The music is charming and impressive.

$6.00 a hundred
80 cents a dozen

$3.25 for fifty
Sample copy, 7 cents

Christmas Offering Envelope

An entirely new design, lithographed in Christmas colors on strong, white paper. Size  $2\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$  in. 50 cents a hundred in any quantity.

$2\frac{1}{4} \times 3\frac{3}{4}$  inches

Candy Boxes

New and original design, printed attractively in Christmas colors, with tape hanger. Holds one-half pound. Shipped flat, $2.00 a hundred delivery extra.

Christmas Cards

[SERIES 802]

Series 802. A set of ten entirely new Christmas cards. Beautiful designs of winter landscapes with holly. Christmas greetings with Bible verses and suitable poetry. Each with strong envelope. Size  $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Set of ten for 30 cents, postpaid.

Christmas Folders

Series 803. A set of ten new, beautiful Christmas folders. Exquisite designs of landscapes with winter scenes and holly. Christmas greetings with appropriate Bible verses and selected poetry. Each with strong envelope. Size  $3\frac{1}{4} \times 4\frac{1}{2}$  inches. Set of ten for 50 cents, postpaid.

[SERIES 803]

Pastor's Christmas Greeting Cards

No. 890. Designed especially for a pastor to send the members of his church or congregation. A good Christmas sentiment with a beautiful Christmas scene lithographed in full colors. Each card with envelope at $2.50 per hundred.

Send for a copy of our "Selected Books Catalog," containing the Holiday Bulletin, listing Gift Books, Children's Books, Fiction, Greeting Cards, Calendars, and Novelties for the Holiday Season

Established 1824

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
(THE JUDSON PRESS)

Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Seattle, Toronto

"Use BAPTIST Lesson Helps"

"Order from Our Nearest Branch"

Volume II

November 26, 1921

NOV 25 1921
Number 43

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

A COLONIAL KITCHEN

THANKSGIVING time carries the mind back to New England. Here is a reproduction of a kitchen of the Old Colony days. Walk in and inspect it. Whose great-grandmother sat in those chairs, whirled that old-fashioned spinning wheel and reeled the yarn on the "windin' blades" sitting near the wall? See the shining "dishes" ranged in rows on shelves in the "cup-board" in the wall. Crane, kettles and andirons in the wide fireplace invite to good cheer. The long flintlock rifle and powder horn on brackets above the mantel provided meat from the woods, and by them hangs from the joist overhead a chunk of dried venison. Well, those were glorious homes, the birthplaces of America's greatness.

Fresh from the Field

The Baptist World Alliance has received a unanimous invitation from the Swedish Baptist Board to hold the third Baptist World Congress in Stockholm in July, 1923. Those who were present at the European Baptist Congress in Stockholm in 1913 have such delightful memories of Swedish hospitality that they will look forward with eager expectations to a second visit. Baptists in Sweden are strong in numbers and in influence, so that they are well able to entertain even the large number of delegates certain to accept their invitation. Stockholm itself will prove an irresistible attraction. It is easily accessible and is one of the most beautiful cities in the world, and these facts will help to swell the attendance at the congress. Altogether, the third Baptist World Congress should surpass both its predecessors in numbers, interest, and usefulness.

The Student Volunteer Movement has become by all means the most important agency of the church in the recruiting of the missionary force in foreign lands. Since the movement began, a total of 8,742 young people have gone to foreign lands under the direction of the various mission boards. These young people were in their college life filled with the missionary passion and made intelligent with regard to the needs of the great fields of the world. The distribution of these young people on the various fields is significant. China leads with 2,709; India follows with 1,703; then come Japan and Korea with 1,052; Africa with 942; South America with 624; Western Asia with 289.

At the recent national meeting of the American Legion, Rev. Earl Blackman, Disciples pastor of Chanute, Kan., and widely known in his state as the "fighting parson," was made chaplain. The office was one for which there was considerable contest, but the man from Chanute won by a big majority and it was made unanimous. During the war he issued a challenge that he would box any other chaplain in the army. His challenge was accepted by six other parsons, but the higher-ups stopped the fight, to the great disappointment of the "dough-boys."

A church in New Jersey has presented its pastor with a deed to one of the choicest lots in the village cemetery. So many constructions of this action are possible that The Church Advocate refuses to even venture a guess as to the meaning.

The question, how far is Rabindranath Tagore a Christian, is answered in a decisive way by Mr. E. J. Thompson in his book on the poet published by the Oxford Press. Mr. Thompson writes with full knowledge, not only gathered from books, but from personal intercourse with the author of Gitanjali. "His father was the least Christian of the Brahmo leaders. The poet repelled the suggestion that he had been influenced by Christian thought in writing Gitanjali, by saying that he had never read the Bible—a confession which helps to explain the remarkable thinness of his essays on Christ." And yet, though this is true, it is not the whole truth: "Nevertheless," continues Mr. Thompson, who is principal of the Wesleyan College, Bankura, "Christianity is in the air of India, and Rabindranath has not escaped its influence. What is best in Gitanjali is an anthology from the ages of Indian thought and brooding; but it is the sun of Christian influence that has brought these buds into flower." —The Christian World.

Andrey Martin was ordained at Morris, Ill., on Nov. 14 in accordance with the advice of a regularly called council. Rev. Geo. A. Sheets was moderator and Rev. A. S. Carman preached the sermon.

The Chicago Church Federation sent a message representing 350,000 Chicagoans to the opening session of the conference on limitation of armaments. This message urges the conference to remain in session until its purposes have been accomplished, and also contains a prayer for the success of the great gathering. On Nov. 6, 450 Chicago pastors preached special sermons on disarmament or limitation of armaments. Of the 311 congregations which approved the message, thirty-eight were Baptist.

American consumers of luxuries from abroad are apparently among the last to yield to the general demand for a reduction of expenditures. While the total value of imports into the United States shows a reduction of 51 per cent in September, 1921, and 57 per cent in the nine months ending with September, when compared with the corresponding periods of last year, the importation of many articles usually classed as "luxuries" shows an actual increase in the same period, and in nearly all instances the fall off is far less than in other lines of merchandise imported. Among the luxuries showing an actual increase are precious stones, laces and embroidery and furs.

ANNOUNCING "THE VOICE OF THE LAND"

a series of
MOTION PICTURES of the entire
BIBLE LANDS
50,000 feet of film

THE LARGEST FILM PRODUCTION IN THE WORLD

portraying every place of Bible mention, every city, every mountain, every river or lake in Palestine of history value. Lay your finger on the name of any place of scriptural interest in your Bible—we have it.

A series of pictures that tell just what church films should tell, just what you would see if you carried your congregation to the Holy Land—and much more. Every nook and corner of the land, not only the beaten ways of travel, but also the remote and unfrequented sections have been filmed to make the series complete.

Characters of every type, their manners, customs and habits are elaborately shown in their native environment.

Just what the churches have wanted, asked for and demanded.

Produced and distributed by

The Geographic Film Company, Inc.
CINCINNATI, OHIO

J. E. Holley, Genl. Mgr.
138 West Seventh Street

The Baptist

Vol. II      November 26, 1921      No. 43

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire

Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HOOR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
REV. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date. ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill. BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....1354
PRESIDENT SURVEYS FIELD AND RESOURCES, by Helen Barrett Montgomery .....1356
EDITORIAL .....1357
PRIMER OF THEOLOGY, by A. H. Strong .....1359
KAREN-LAND NEEDS ITS LOST BOOK, By Blanche Brace.1360
WHAT THE TITHING MOVEMENT MEANS, by E. Y. Mullins .....1361
THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE—OPENING SCENES AND SENSATIONS, by Wm. Axling .....1364
WHO USED TO BE WHO, by W. Scott .....1365
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....1368
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....1369
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....1370
OUR OWN FOLKS .....1372
CHURCH NEWS BY STATES .....1378
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....1383

It Will Do No Harm

We have told you in this Kollum about the list of subscribers to THE BAPTIST in the church at Ovid, Mich. Rev. George Woolcock is just beginning the fifth year of his pastorate. He has secured practically all the families in his parish as subscribers and to our amazement his last list brought the name of Rev. G. W. Plews, the pastor of the Methodist Church in his city. We shall soon expect a 10 per cent list from the Methodist congregation. Mr. Plews is reported to have said, "You certainly have a fine paper. Send in my subscription."

Killam's Kollum

He will pass the Sanity Test

Rev. John R. George, promotion field director of the East Washington and North Idaho Convention, writes: "Don't let any one joke you out of Killam's Kollum. I have never seen anything in there that I would regard as a joke." We are greatly comforted. From the first certain ill-advised persons have been trying to make themselves and others believe that this Kollum savors of the superficiality of the age. They are absolutely wrong. This is the publishers' page. Its editor finds delight in one thing only—telling of the indispensable service of THE BAPTIST. Its policies and ideals, its friends and enemies, its hopes and fears, its successes and failures, its virtues and vices, its past and future, all grow out of an honest effort of a great Christian body to meet its full obligation to a world worn and weary with its suffering and sin.

Shows Growth In Grace

Mr. G. H. Bishop of Dunedin, Fla., writes: "Keep Killam's Kollum. I have read our denominational papers for years from a sense of duty. I now read THE BAPTIST regularly because it is different. I think that there are many like myself who do not want a paper tied down by traditions." This letter shows that this good man is growing in grace. Many people still read their church papers from a sense of duty. All honor to them! Many, many more do not read them at all. It is this large group to whom all our readers owe a debt. To know our many-sided work intimately, to enter into service to the limit of our ability, means a more abundant life and greater satisfaction for every Christian. Will you not remember some bright young man or young woman with a Christmas gift of THE BAPTIST and Missions?

Christian Criticism

"For mercy's sake kill the Kollum for the following reasons: 1. The 'stuff' is imprudent, impudent and impious. 2. The 'stuff' is uncultured, unscholarly and unspiritual. 3. In the Kollum Killam mistakes his outstanding asininity for up-standing astuteness. 4. In the Kollum Killam mistakes his smart-Aleck sallies for the sagacity of Solomon. 5. The Kollum shows Killam to be a half-baked bigot toward those not in authority, but toward those in authority a boot-licking fawner. 6. The Kollum shows Killam to be neither Baptist nor Papist, neither Protestant nor Pagan. Fire Killam and send him out here to me please." Rev. W. D. Bolton, pastor of the church at Sabetha, Kan., writes the best criticism of the Kollum, in fact it includes practically all that the other fifteen or twenty good people have had to say. We gladly print it because it expresses all and more than all the others combined.

President Surveys Field and Resources

"It is easy to announce our firm belief in miracles that took place two or three thousand years ago. What we are asked to believe in is a God who does not change. His promises abide."

TO THE CHURCHES OF THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION, GREETINGS:

I am recently returned from a speaking trip to five of the state conventions, and I come back with my heart full of cheer. Everywhere there was a note of courage, of conviction, of consecration. There was much attention given to such topics as prayer, stewardship, personal evangelism. A new earnestness and a new fellowship were discernible. The women were everywhere alive. In Nebraska they were pushing the standard association and the standard society, and getting results, too, as you always do when you attack a definite task in a definite way. As some wit has said, "If you aim at nothing in particular, you are quite likely to hit it." Now are you a standard society—are you? Do you belong to a standard association—do you? If you are hazy about the answer, why not write to the Literature Department, 276 Fifth Ave., New York, and get free literature that will define for you a standard society and a standard association, and then set out to be one?

Those Undaunted Women

The women of Michigan were working hard on the reading contest, as were those of Illinois, and determined to bring in lots of the men, too. A man can win just as many points for his district in the reading contest as a woman. Both were stressing the reading of the junior books to the children as a way of winning points and building up intelligent Christians.

Kansas, too, had a thoroughly alert body of women, who are planning big things; and New York women were simply on their toes. Mrs. Orrin Judd had been appointed campaign manager for the big task, and was bringing to her work courage and vision.

Of course the big topic everywhere was the completing of our task. The announcement that we sought $30,000,000 pledged this year and $20,000,000 paid in, and that the women, with the hearty co-operation of the state men, were to begin the task of securing $6,000,000 of this amount, with $2,000,000 paid in, dazed most of the conventions. The way they rallied to it was magnificent. "We must complete the Fund;" "The only way through is straight ahead;" "We can not do it, but God can," were some of the expressions heard.

In many ways it was a blessing that we did not get the entire amount pledged at first. If we had all gone over the top, rejoicing together, there would certainly have been a big element of pride and vain glory. We should have rejoiced in our efficient machinery and have given the credit to that. But now, in this year of inaction and despair, with business prostrate and thousands out of work, with our denomination weakened by suspicion and torn with dissensions, for us to raise that amount will be due to the energizing power of God, alone. We are between Egypt and the Red Sea. It will be God who leads us over. It is easy to announce our firm belief in miracles that took place two or three thousand years ago. What we are asked to believe in is a God who does not change. His promises abide. He still owns the cattle on a thousand hills and still claims that the silver and the gold are His. He has His secret access to human hearts and can turn them as the water courses are turned. He still promises us that whatsoever we ask in accordance with His will, shall be ours.

Is there a man standing in the way of your church's co-operation? Don't scold him; don't give up. Pray him into a new frame of mind. Do our great causes languish for lack of needed funds? Lay our wants before God in confident expectation. Pray as if everything depended upon God, and work as if everything depended upon us!

Where is the money to come from? There are at least three sources. First, the five thousand churches which have given nothing. Some of them are rich and careless; many of them are small and poor. They ought to be approached. There were many able men and women in these obscure churches. One dead church that had not been holding meetings for five years was approached in faith. The seven scattered members were told the needs. They gave $500. The women ought to canvass in faith that dares expect big things from feeble churches. Sometimes the only live Christian will prove to be a woman.

2000 Churches Content With Little

Then there are the more than two thousand churches that have satisfied themselves with a small effort. Hard work ought to be done to revive these churches and bring them into line, rejoicing. Some of them have been misinformed. What they object to is not the New World Movement, inspired by the Spirit of God, but a caricature of it that has no real existence.

Then there are the churches that went over the top. They were promised that if they succeeded, there should be no further appeal until the end of the five-year period. That promise must be kept. No assessment of that church must be permitted. But what about the non-participating members? One church that raised $140,000 and has been rejoicing in new life ever since, has 40 per cent of its members who did not give. Is that great section to be left to an arrested Christian life, to spiritual deadness or loss of power? No one can approach that church from without; but has not the church a duty toward its own feeble in the faith? Might not those who did not give at first be granted another opportunity? Are they to hide behind the fact, "Our church went over the top?"

Reinforcements are 112,000

Then there are the 112,000 new members baptized last year and the equally large number we mean to reach and win this year. They must be canvassed. Perhaps some one who says, "I cannot give one penny more," can win one who can make a great gift. If we cannot double, then can we not double the givers?

Then there are those who pledged only for one year, and paid their entire pledge, the first year. Ought they not to be asked annually to renew that pledge? There are some also—perhaps they are not numerous—who have amassed wealth since they made their pledge. In the light of their changed circumstances do they not want to change their pledge?

We have the money. We are able to do this great thing. The question is "What do we think of Christ?" How much is He worth to the world, in our thought? Our answer will be given not in words, but by how we measure up in the New World Movement.

From all these and other sources we can look for funds.

But chiefly we must depend upon God. Let us take Mark XI, 23-25 as our watch word:

"Have confidence in God. In solemn truth I tell you that if any one should say to this mountain, 'Remove and hurl thyself into the sea,' and should admit no doubt in his heart, but steadfastly believe that what he says will happen, it would be granted him. That is why I tell you, as to whatever you pray and make request for, if you believe that you have received it, it will be yours. But whenever you stand praying, if you have a grievance against any one, forgive it, so that your Father in heaven may also forgive you your offences."—Weymouth.

It is Jesus who tells us this. He prefaces it by His solemn affirmation. He does not qualify or hedge it in. Can not we have mountain faith for a mountain task? Have faith in God. We are not told to have faith in prayer, anywhere in the New Testament. Our faith is in God. Our prayer is simply a method of laying hold of His strength.

Our goal is impossible. Without superhuman strength we cannot accomplish our task. But we are promised God's omnipotence. Christians ought to do the impossible, which with God is the possible. Cannot we go to God in prayer until we receive from Him the gift of the faith, that can remove mountains? Let us claim it for His glory. Let us all seek a new enabling from Him.

Faithfully yours,
HELEN B. MONTGOMERY.

*They tell me thou art rich, my country;
gold
In glittering flood has poured into thy chest;
Thy flocks and herds increase, thy barns are pressed
With harvest, and thy stores can hardly hold
Their merchandise; unending trains are rolled Along thy network rails of east and west;
Thou art enriched in all things bought and sold!*

*Oh, dearest country, is it well with thee
Indeed, and is thy soul in health?
A nobler people, hearts more wisely brave,
And thoughts that lift men up and make them free.*

—HENRY VAN DYKE.

The Baptist

The Pulpit Must Make Good to the Pew

CURRENT interest in what is called the "problem of the country church" is a good thing. The little meeting-house at the cross-roads or on the hill has not only kept the fires of religious faith burning in country and village but has also been a constant feeder to the city churches, sending to them a stream of men and women who have developed into their strongest workers. Any disaster to the country church would be a disaster to the whole cause of religion in both city and country.

The Outlook for November 16 has an article by M. B. and R. W. Bruere on the subject, "The Country Pew vs. the Country Pulpit," which is worthy of a good reading. For it is a diagnosis, based upon personal experiences, of conditions in some sections of the North. Remedies are hardly hinted at. Perhaps that is because there is no universal remedy for conditions such as these people saw. But the larger the number of people who face a set of conditions, the more likely is there to be a solution. Such an article is therefore a service.

In a day now past, says this article, the minister was the best-dressed and the best-educated man in the country community. Spiritually and socially he was a power. But this is not so now. The pew often has an intellectual and social pity for the pulpit. It can starve the pulpit when it desires to do so. Contributions to the minister's salary are often listed under charity. The great reason is that the culture and the efficiency of the pew have risen. The country minister, with a limited education and a small and poorly selected library, has not kept pace. In Southeastern Ohio, in certain counties investigated, "one-third of the ministers have nothing more than an elementary education, over one-half have not gone beyond the high school, while only 16 per cent have had both a college and seminary training." In three counties in Indiana, 72 per cent do not have a college and seminary training. But in these same sections public and normal schools are alert and boys and girls have the advantages of free colleges, with the result that the intellectual authority of the pulpit has vanished.

Further complaint is made in the article that in many cases the people who do go to church are not fed spiritually. They are hungry for something and are not fed. As to the minister, "his training had killed whatever feeling for realities he ever had; he had been brought up on 'theology'—not even remotely upon life." People object to going to church because it "does not give them anything."

Moral leadership is lacking in many places, these writers declare. And the reason is stated. The pulpit is so insecure in its leadership that it does not dare to come to a show-down with its rich members who are engaged in unChristian practices.

And then comes the conclusion, so far as there is any: "Either the church will be transformed into a democratically ruled club with a president instead of a pastor, or the pulpit, through a high type of service that the pew cannot refuse, will train itself for the leadership that is so much needed. The time has come when the pulpit must make good to the pew."

Now, it is not necessary to give a blanket endorsement to this article in order to profit by it. Undoubtedly it over-stresses some factors and leaves out others. Nothing, for instance, is said concerning the changing character of the population of many country towns. Neither does it take into account the excellent work which has been and is being done in many towns where a church has become a center of all the best life of the community. But it is the result of observation on the part of people who are trained to see and to report what they see. Other denominations may do what they will, but we Baptists, who have always been strong in the country places, should take notice.

It is true that the level of education has risen, demanding a higher standard of culture in our ministry. We are perfectly right in insisting first of all that our ministers shall be real men of God. But that does not prevent them also from having all the education we can make available. The Ministers and Missionaries' Benefit Board is doing some valuable work in helping to raise the standard for ordination. It would seem that state conventions might follow the matter up by making possible increased opportunity for study to men who are already on the field. It is also true that there have been in churches deacons and others who have neglected to follow in their business dealings the ethics of the gospel. By all means our ministers and churches should have protection against them. A prophet need not be without common sense but he is of little worth if he is prevented from prophesying because of the fear of the loss of his salary. It may also be true that ministers here and there have lost their message. Retreats such as those which have been held in many states in recent years might be useful in a limited number of such cases. Communities, on the other hand, may have a rather hazy idea of what the church ought to give them. What do those critics mean who say that the church does not give them anything? What do they want? The agricultural colleges have been doing good work in making preachers familiar with the problems of the men to whom they minister, and annually more ministers are taking the courses offered, but certainly the farmers would not be content with a man who was merely an agricultural expert.

Probably we all agree that the pulpit must make good to the pew. Is it not also true that the pew, if it is Christian, must make good to the pulpit? A church can easily make or break its minister. A few consecrated laymen can often stimulate the pastor to study and work of which he was not thought possible. And they can put a spirit into the church which will be well worth while. Is it necessary that they should sit back and wait for the minister to start something? THE BAPTIST has been publishing a number of articles on this general problem of late, and expects to publish more. Just at the present moment it wants to call attention to the laymen's movement which is just getting under way in our Northern Baptist Convention. During the past year, Unitarian laymen have done wonders, not only in their own churches, but through going in teams to their weaker churches. Baptist laymen are not one whit behind the laymen of any other body. They also can do magnificent deputation work. If they will give their attention to this country church problem, they will be mightily forwarding the big movement they are now projecting. And as they might go in groups of two or three to the small churches they would not only bring new intellectual and spiritual horizons to the ministers of these churches, but would also help the churches to realize what they are for and what great unused resources they have in their own hands.

Making Stewardship Definite

The Southern Baptist Convention, through its laymen, is engaged in an effort to enroll half a million tithers during the present convention year. A pamphlet written by Dr. Mullins explaining the meaning of the movement is printed on another page of this issue. It is his firm belief that if stewardship, in which we all believe, is to become definite, Christian people must accept the tithe as the minimum of their giving. Northern Baptists are about to engage in a similar campaign. We heartily commend to all the arguments of this article. Surely no Christian will be willing to give less than the Jew was accustomed to devote to religious purposes.

The Unknown Soldier

CUSTOM has it that great monuments shall be erected to statesmen and generals. A leader astride a horse occupies the place of honor in our military cemeteries. The little white stones, row on row, mark the resting place of the common soldier. There are so many of him that he could not be given the place of honor. Humbly he fought and served; humbly does his body lie in death.

But custom has been reversed in these strange days when the mighty have been pulled down from their thrones. It has actually happened that the humble have been exalted. Great Britain and France have each given royal sepulture in the shrine of the nation to a common unknown soldier. And on Armistice Day the United States followed their example.

Who the man was who was buried in Arlington on Nov. 11, nobody knows. He may have been native-born or foreign-born. He may have been white or colored. He was an unknown. A multitude of mothers have a right to dream that possibly he was the child they bore. And indeed in spirit so he was. He had shown the last supreme devotion and made the final sacrifice just as their sons had done. He is before the world their representative. The honor done him is the honor done every man and every woman who counted not his life dear unto him but gladly laid it down in a cause which seemed to him worthy.

It is the common people who bear the brunt of war. It is the common people who pay the price of war.

Now at length we recognize their heroism and pay them long-deferred honors. Whatever other bodies may be laid to rest in Arlington, no monument will be more frequently visited in days to come, and no grave will call more tears or excite greater devotion than that of this unknown soldier of the army of liberation.

The world is coming to its proper base at last. Kings and thrones and generals are only incidental. People, just people, are the great thing. If there is sacrifice they make it; if there is heroism, they show it; if there is honor, it is theirs.

THE BAPTIST is glad to be able to announce that, during the period of the conference on disarmament, Rev. William Axling will serve as our special correspondent in Washington. Dr. Axling is staying in the United States three months beyond the time he expected because of his familiarity with Japanese thought and because of his ability to interpret the real aspirations of the Japanese people. The Foreign Mission Society believes that in thus retaining him in this country it is doing both the conference and the cause of missions a real service. We are expecting to print weekly letters, the first of which appears in this issue, outlining the significant actions taken by the conference.

The American Baptist Year Book for 1921, which is just off the press of the Publication Society, is one of those volumes which is indispensable for any man who wishes to have in detail information concerning the work of the denomination. It contains lists of officers and fields of our general societies, of our foreign-speaking bodies and of our state organizations; also denominational statistics, lists by states of all ordained Baptist ministers in the United States, of the missionaries of our various boards, North and South, and other similar information. The price is 75 cents. "The Church and Sunday School Builder," is a catalogue of "everything for the church and Sunday school," and may be had on application to any branch of the Publication Society. We believe that before purchasing supplies elsewhere, our churches should make sure that these cannot be had through our own society.

The world war has introduced many new elements into the religious conditions of European countries. Openings for evangelical bodies are greater than have ever been known. Baptists are well aware of the opportunities and are pressing forward to meet them.

THE BAPTIST wishes to do its part in introducing the Baptists of these countries to the people of the Northern Baptist Convention and in helping to create a larger fellowship with these bodies. It is therefore building up with care a European news service which promises as time goes on material of the utmost interest and value.

We commend these stories to the very careful reading of our people. God is about to open a new chapter in the history of many of these ancient countries.

In a recent issue there was printed a letter from Italy; in the present number is a communication from Budapest, Hungary; and in later issues will appear from time to time communications from those countries in which Northern Baptists are directly cooperating in the work.

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

IV. CHRIST AND SCRIPTURE.

WE come now to the consideration of Christ's relation to holy Scripture. The whole matter is summed up in the statement that the written word is the expression of the eternal Word. But as the eternal Word was made flesh and appeared in human form, so the written word comes to us through the weak and halting methods of human composition. As the Father expressed himself in Christ under the limitations of space and time, beginning as a mere speck in the womb of the Virgin, coming to the full consciousness of his dignity and mission as he grew in stature and wisdom, and learning obedience by the things which he suffered, so Christ expressed himself gradually in the Scriptures, beginning with the prophecy that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head (Gen. 3:15), enlarging the revelation by occasional theophanies and by the types of the Mosaic service, by the rough denunciations of the herdsman Amos and the surpassing eloquence of the courtier Isaiah, until at last, in his personal manifestation in human form, he furnished the key to all the past and made God understood to all the future (John 1:17, 18).

After what I have said of Christ, as the life and light of men, I can speak without hesitation of the evolution of Scripture. Evolution is simply the ordinary method of Christ's working. He uses the past in his building of the future, as he uses the seed in his bringing forth of fruit (Gen. 1:12). But this method is not exclusive. It leaves room for absolute creation, for incarnation, miracle, resurrection; indeed, these are required either to precede, explain, or supplement the evolutionary process. Christ can work from within, as easily as from without (Gal. 1:16). There need be no denunciation of an evolutionary element in the composition of Scripture, so long as we recognize to the full that holy men of old wrote as they were moved by the Spirit of Christ (1 Pet. 1:11; 2 Pet. 1:21).

In this evolution of Scripture, Christ may use all the methods of literary composition which are consistent with truth—poetry as well as prose, proverb as well as history, parable as well as dogmatic teaching, apologue and drama as well as legislative enactment. Even hyperbole and fable are found in the Old Testament (Deut. 1:28; Judg. 9:14). This variety of method has given such interest and popularity to the Bible that it has become the most widely circulated book of the world. Christ's revelation may be a progressive one, requiring a final and personal appearance of the Lawgiver, to show the connection of its parts and to disclose the meaning of the whole. But because one mighty Spirit of Christ has breathed through the whole process of Scripture growth from the beginning to the end, Christian experience recognizes the written word as the expression of the eternal Word, and, when taken as a whole and rightly interpreted, the supreme rule of our faith and practice. The higher criticism has its rights, and we must concede that it has thrown valuable light upon the methods employed in the composition of Scripture. But the higher criticism is not master, but servant, of our spiritual sense; and its surmises must bow to the total testimony of the word of God. The Bible is given for the use and comprehension of ordinary Christians; the same Spirit that inspired the Bible is given to Christ's followers to interpret what he has permitted to be written; and each Christian is to be judged at the last day by his obedience or disobedience to the plain teaching of the Bible. The confessions of faith which have marked the history of the church show clearly that the great majority of believers have found Scripture to teach the deity and preexistence of Christ, his incarnation, virgin birth, miracles, vicarious atonement, physical resurrection, his omnipresence in the hearts of his people, and his final coming to be Judge of the living and of the dead.

The Bible is, therefore, not simply revelation; it is also literature. Not all of it is divine dictation; most of it is human utterance. The relation of Scripture to Christ, as its principal author, enables us to interpret many problems which would otherwise be insoluble. For Christ was the Word of God made flesh. The written word which expresses him is therefore the word of God made human; adapted to ordinary human comprehension; limited by many shortcomings and imperfections. It is a record of man's downward progress, in spite of Christ's restraints and incentives to obedience. "By diverse portions and in diverse manners" (Heb. 1:1), and usually through man's own reports, though selected and supervised by Christ, it tells the story of the downward progress of the human race until man's sin culminated in the effort to murder man's Creator, and to quench in darkness man's only Light. That record of sin must be taken as a whole, gathered as it was from human life and from conflicting sources. No single utterance can be taken as complete truth; it must be taken in connection with its context; like the railway coupon, it is "not good if detached." The sentence, "There is no God," must have its explanation from the words that precede it—"The fool hath said in his heart" (Ps. 14:1). The Old Testament must be taken in connection with the New, and the words of Jesus in connection with the later words of his apostles.

So long as essential truth is conveyed, there is almost no limit to the methods which may be employed. Single words have more than one meaning, and while the lesser meaning may best teach the child, the larger meaning may best teach the man. The word "day," in the history of creation in Genesis, does not necessarily mean a day of twenty-four hours, for the prophet Zechariah (14:7) speaks of "days known to the Lord, not day nor night," and the six days of creation may be age-long periods of time. Christ ordinarily lets men tell their own story. There was once a cold-blooded murder in Florence. Differing accounts of it were given by the murderer and by his victim, by the prosecuting counsel and by the pope. Robert Browning makes all these witnesses describe the matter in "The Ring and the Book." We are left to make up our own minds about the facts, after the reading of these differing reports; but we do not, on that account, doubt that there occurred a real murder. Shall we doubt the death of Christ, because the evangelists do not precisely agree as to the superscription on his cross? King Arthur of the Round Table was a historical character. But Tennyson, in his Idylls of the King, has made him and his knights the subject of an imaginary story which will teach great moral truth to the end of time. Shall we deny the poet's right to weave around King Arthur a work of imagination? Job was also a historical character. Must we therefore say that the speeches of Job's friends were also real utterances? Let us rather regard them as incidents of a poet's drama. Shall we refuse to Christ the use of parable in case of the prodigal son, or of apologue in the case of Jonah and of Daniel? These last are historical characters, mentioned elsewhere in Scripture; but it is still possible that there are legendary incidents in their stories, and that Jesus himself may have referred to them as such (Matt. 12:40). Many a modern historian like H. G. Wells, quotes varying reports of a battle like Waterloo, or of an important piece of legislation like that of Spain in the Netherlands, and we do not deny him the privileges. If he who antedated Moses gives us varied reports of Moses and his law, and leaves us to judge between them, shall we say that there was no Moses and no law? All these sceptical objections fall to the ground when we remember that he who permitted these methods of literary composition was himself the Truth, and that he took these humble ways only to impress the truth more readily and more forcibly upon the minds of men. Remember who Christ was, the manifested God, the one and only medium of God's revelation, and we shall see that the whole Old Testament was composed under his superintendence and so cannot be "broken" up into fragments (John 10:35). Isaiah "saw his glory, and spoke of him" (John 12:41); and the same Jesus, who had "many things to say" which his disciples could not bear while he was with them, could "bring to their remembrance all that he had said unto them," and actually did this in John's gospel (16:12 and 14:26). This superintendence of Christ makes the written word, with all its literary and human shortcomings, an expression of the eternal Word, and gives it unity, sufficiency, and authority, as a rule of faith and practice (Miscellanies, 1:251-260).

Karen-Land Needs Its Lost Book

If a child bruises his toe he must find a stone as big around as his thumb, buried deeply in the ground, and must swallow it.—Think of going toeless through eternity.

By BLANCHE BRACE

BAMBOO huts with thatched roofs, baking in the Eastern sun, with yellow pariah dogs in the doorway, and buffalos, pigs and chickens under the house. At the threshold of one of the huts a baby three years old, with a pipe in one hand, and a cigar in the other, taking alternate puffs. In the narrow street, men, women and children, chattering and chewing betel nuts.

Off in the distance, a native is ringing a prayer-bell as he chants his prayer, to awaken sleeping spirits to his needs. A mountain girl is carrying water in a bamboo joint down the hillside, her dress, heavily embroidered with seeds, flapping around her. In the plains natives are transplanting the paddy, as rice is called before the husks are off, spear by spear, and as they bend over it they are voicing the ancient plaint:

"Ya phi sa du da le ya thee lah!" ("My back aches as if I would die!")

A Karen heathen wedding is taking place in one of the villages. At the doorway of the bride's house three men stand, holding aloft two water-pots. The guests pass in unmolested, but, as the groom approaches, the contents of a water-jar descend upon his head. He wears a dress woven by the bride, in token of her fitness to become a wife. After the ceremony is over, he will remain for three days by himself.

In another village, a child has died, and the women are tearing their hair and beating their breasts,

A band plays loudly to comfort the mourners. Men are bringing up an ox-cart without oxen, into which the little coffin, decorated with silk turbans, is put. Then four men in front try to pull the cart forward, while four men in the rear do their utmost to pull it backward again, suddenly spinning it around and around in circles, that the evil spirits may be confused and lose their way.

In a Buddhist school just around the corner, the pupils are lying flat on their faces and studying their lesson aloud. There are no girls in the group for the Buddhists believe that a woman has no understanding. To educate a girl will surely drive her to the deepest hell.

Such is the picture of Karen-land painted by Miss Violetta Peterson of Tharrawaddy, Burma, for twenty-two years a missionary among the Karens under the auspices of the Woman's Foreign Mission Society, and now on furlough in the United States. No Northern Baptist work anywhere is more interesting or more significant than that being done among the Karens. Our Baptist missionaries found the Karens a people without a written language, without a definite place in Burman life, almost without hope. Our missionaries have given them a written language, they have taught the Karens a new self-respect, they have fostered the native energy and courage that cause the Karens to support their own mission work in a large degree. And they have given the Karens back their lost book.

"The old Karen tradition," Miss Peterson explains, "said that the Karens had once owned a book of life, which has been carelessly mislaid and lost. So they are very ready to welcome missionaries with the Bible, and to see in it their lost book."

The same traditions, which make them receive the gospel readily, causes the Karens to be the despair of medical missionaries, Miss Peterson says. No people clings more stubbornly to old superstitions.

"If a child bruises his toe, for instance," she relates, "he or his parents must find a round stone, perhaps as big around as the thumb, buried deeply in the ground, and this the child must swallow to cure the bruise. Even if the toe becomes so badly infected that blood-poisoning is about to result, his parents will not consent to amputation for if the child's toe is cut off now, will he not be toeless through all eternity?"

"The Karens also have a great fear of being smell-struck. In case of measles, for instance, they often varnish the body of the patient, so that no smell can escape—a treatment which usually results in the cessation of both patient and smell. The Karens have an unique remedy for faintness—one part rhinoceros blood, and one part python bladder, at five rupees a drop. They have a profound distrust of fresh air when they are sick and they believe that the use of water for washing during illness is deadly.

In time of cholera, I have often seen a cross roads offering of fruit or food of some kind, left by the natives to appease the disease spirits, which may come over either road. Sometimes, they try to terrify the angry spirits, by a particularly ugly picture set at the cross roads on a bamboo pole. In case of illness, they make sacrifices of chickens or pigs, or sometimes even a buffalo. If, in spite of all this, the patient dies, boiling water is poured over the spot where he has lain, to destroy any lingering evil spirits."

Missionaries are doing a great deal to overcome these superstitions, and succeeding particularly well with the younger generation. Hygiene is given a great deal of attention in the Baptist schools for the Karens. In the boarding schools for girls, like the one at Tharrawaddy, in which Miss Peterson is stationed, the pupils are taught the importance of keeping their persons, their homes, and their villages strictly clean. The students hear with surprise that the earth is not flat, as the native Karen schools teach it is, and that caterpillars do not evolve from leaves. Miss Peterson tells an interesting story of a stubborn youngster, who, with his own eyes, watched the butterflies emerge from a cluster of cocoons in her class, and then remarked, "As for me, Mamah, I don't believe it." (Mamah is a Burman word, meaning 'lady.') A little later, however, he conceded, reluctantly that seeing is believing.

"But the difficulty of overcoming the Karen superstitions is more than atoned for by many excellent native qualities," Miss Peterson declares. "The Karens are very honest. Formerly, everyone built his granary in the field, miles from his house, yet none ever thought of stealing the rice. Affection and kindness are the rule in Karen family life. The Karens are energetic, intelligent, and very appreciative. They desire to support their own mission work, and they take an interest in what is being done in other lands."

"We are so glad that you have brought us back our golden book," the Christian Karens say.

What the Tithing Movement Means

Why should the Christian be asked to give at least one-tenth of his income to the cause of Christ? Answer this and you have the reason for the movement.

By E. Y. MULLINS

A NEW and significant movement has been started by the laymen of the Southern Baptist Convention. I refer to the effort to enroll half a million tithers during the present conventional year. This movement is full of promise, because it is the best possible preparation for our next great campaign. The doctrine of stewardship is one that is rapidly being recognized by all our people. But the doctrine of stewardship is not always one which influences people to give proportionately. This is because, unless interpreted, it is apt to be vague and indefinite.

The movement among the laymen to secure half a million of our people who will pledge themselves to give at least one-tenth of their income to the Lord's causes will go a long way toward making the doctrine of stewardship practical. It will be a means of clearing the principle of stewardship from its obscurity, at least in part.

What Does the Movement Mean?

What, then, does the tithing movement mean? Perhaps this question can best be answered by indicating first what it does not mean. It does not mean that any one is seeking to enforce the requirements of the Jewish law upon Christians. It does not mean that the Mosaic or the Levitical requirements, with penalties attached, are to be introduced into our churches. Nor, as I understand it, does it mean that our laymen claim that the New Testament specifically commands that we shall give one-tenth. Jesus indeed recognized that tithing was a duty under the old dispensation, and does not himself annul the obligation in express language; but I take it all will agree that the New Testament standard of ownership is that all of our property belongs to God. We ourselves belong to him, and the Christian obligation requires that we shall give to the Lord whatever he requires of us in the material good things which he has bestowed upon us. One-tenth of the annual income, therefore, does not at all exhaust our Christian obligation, so far as the ownership of property is concerned. Our obligation to God extends to the utmost limit of our possessions. Christian stewardship means that all we have is held at the disposal of our Lord and Master.

Why, then, should the Christian man be asked to give at least one-tenth of his income to the cause of Christ? Or, to put it in the other form, why should the Christian himself adopt one-tenth as the minimum of his giving? The reply to this question is that the tithe or tenth was widely recognized throughout the world among other nations than the Jews before the age of the Mosaic Law. There are instances in the Old Testament where one-tenth was given long before the requirements of the Mosaic Law were given. Abraham gave a tenth. One of the most interesting examples of the giving of a tenth is the vow of Jacob after his remarkable dream and his vision of the ladder set up between heaven and earth, with the angels of God ascending and descending upon it. (Genesis 28:22). It will be seen by referring to this passage that the next morning Jacob vowed that henceforth he would give the tenth of all his increase. In this instance there was no legal requirement. So far as we know there was previous command of God, and there was no priesthood or temple service to be maintained. There was no penalty attached to failure to make the vow to give a tenth. The vow was simply the voluntary and free act of God's servant, whose heart was filled with gratitude for the mercies and blessings which he had received. Jacob did not exhaust his obligation to give in vowing to give him a tenth, but he did make his giving definite and practical. Thousands of Christians have made the same kind of vow because of the blessings of God, and have found that the divine mercies increase continually with the gifts.

What is the Motive?

The motive behind what is called the Tithing Movement, therefore, is the strong conviction on the part of Christian people that the Christian should give no less than the Jew gave. If the Mosaic dispensation required that the Jew give a tenth, and especially if the Jew gave a tenth before that dispensation, in its legal form took shape, surely no Christian man can be content with anything less than a tenth. The tenth, therefore, is merely a minimum. It is the servant of God saying, I will give at least this much; I may give more. Many of God's servants do give more. Many of them give several times a tenth of their income. Some of them devote all their profits, except enough to live on, to the Kingdom of God.

On the other hand, if there is no standard of giving, no minimum below which one will not permit himself to fall, the whole question of giving is vague and indefinite. The doctrine of stewardship means that everything we have belongs to God, and this in the hands of the avaricious man may at once be translated into giving in the most inadequate ways. Unless there is a definite standard or minimum for giving, what is to hinder the covetous man from withholding practically all his increase from the Lord's cause. The human heart then becomes the interpreter of duty and encouragement is given to the carnal nature to retain for self rather than to give for the cause of Christ.

One of the most remarkable results of the practice of giving a tenth of the income has been the prosperity of those who have adopted the rule. There is not space here for me to go into details, but there are many published accounts of great prosperity coming to those who thus deal in a definite and faithful manner with the Master.

It is not possible for any one to interpret absolutely in detail the duty of the man who gives a tenth of his income to the cause of Christ. I would say that the man receiving wages or a salary should give a tenth of his wages or salary. Of course, this does not include support for his own family or those dependent upon him. I think it would include contributions to suffering people in distant countries or for the relief of people who are not naturally dependent upon the giver. For the man who does not receive wages or a salary, the tenth should be taken from the profits of the business, but not after the support of his family has been taken out. The total net profits should be the amount from which the tenth should be taken. The Lord's cause of course includes all the objects of benevolence toward which one contributes. My own judgment is that the Baptist giver should specialize in the work of our own churches and denominational movements. The causes are many and the needs are great, and we have adopted a program so large that it is going to take the utmost resources of all our givers to maintain the high standards which we have adopted.

In closing, I wish to say that in adopting the tithing plan, we should never feel that our duty is fully exhausted, but should always hold ourselves in readiness to give more if the cause requires it and if our ability enables us to do so. In giving in this spirit we are not pursuing a Jewish method, but are putting the spirit of the gospel into the tithe itself. If all our people would adopt this plan of giving, it would undoubtedly supply the needs for which our many causes are so loudly crying.

[Reprinted by permission. This article may be had in leaflet form from the Laymen's Missionary Movement of the Southern Baptist Convention, Holston National Bank Bldg., Knoxville, Tenn.]

The Path to Spiritual Harvest

for

A Christian, A Local Church, An Association, A State Convention, The Northern Baptist Convention

By FREDERICK A. AGAR

1. The Fallow or Ordinary Stage

Presents: Failure, inadequacy, lethargy, mediocrity, isolation, ignorance, unused resources, a perverted sense of values. Then comes the plow,

A Prophetic Gospel Proclamation

It produces a prepared soil—spiritual dynamic, unrest, repentance, intercession.

A Survey Then Results

2. The Seeding or Spiritual Stage

Presents: Discussion, opposition, attention, vision. Then comes the seeder,

Education and Inspiration

Produces a prospect of harvest—Divine reactions, unfolding of life, study, the needed time, projection.

A Planned Program Follows

3. The Cultivating or Intensive Stage

Presents: Conviction, enlarging vision, action, unity of purpose, intelligent interdependence, developing resources. Then comes cultivation,

Service with Christ

Produces an assurance of harvest—fellowship, love, personal ministry, evangelism, a new sense of values.

Progress Is Shown

4. The Reaping or Extensive Stage

Presents: Lordship realized, obedience, growth, joy, a world to conquer. Then comes the reaper,

Stewardship

Produces the harvest—Enlistments, achievements, a world evangelism, full treasures, a sense of victory.

Victory Won

Did You Start On This Path? Are You Making Progress On It?
If Not, Where Did You Turn Aside, and Why?

The only Christlike Road to Victory is to make each stage successively. To skip any stage is to endanger the Harvest.

To Build or To Destroy?

By DOUGLAS G. HARNIC

IN THE cold region of North Japan the chief city is Morioka. There has been Baptist work here

THE RED LIGHT DISTRICT

One is the little white church, located on a good site on a prominent street. It is respected by the best citizens. The pastor is doing faithful work and the church bears an increasing share of its own support.

The other is the main street of the red light district. Vice is open and unashamed in Japan. The evil men and women of this section prey on the youth of the city and the surrounding country.

For two years owing to a severely depleted missionary staff the American Baptist Foreign Mission Society has had no missionary in Morioka. That arrangement was entirely satisfactory to the denizens of the resorts pictured here.

Now a young missionary and his wife have gone to live in Morioka. After two years of language study they are throwing themselves into the work. We now hope for the return to Japan of another family which will again give Morioka its normal force of workers.

But we have no mission residence!

The climate is rigorous and the missionaries who formerly worked here endured real privation. The new family now lives in a Japanese house; and Japanese houses are designed for summer and not for winter.

A new residence for Morioka is one of the approved needs of the Japan Mission. When you give to the New World Movement, that Morioka residence becomes less of an air castle and more of a reality.

THE LITTLE WHITE CHURCH

History Without God

By R. L. VAN DEMAN

THE hour of the conference has come. Will it accomplish more than could be accomplished by the Paris conference toward a permanent world peace? All the idealists hope that it can. Many others, among them some of the ablest writers, seem to have little hope.

These notes are a protest against much of the writing of recent weeks. Let us be idealists! Let us accept at their face, the dreams of the second chapter of Isaiah where swords shall be beaten into plowshares, and of the eleventh chapter where the scion of David's line shall bring effective influences of peace into human life!

Why should a newspaper man or an author be as blind as a bat to anything but selfishness? In the lower orders of life we expect the rule of claw and fang but among men the pack becomes the tribe and the tribes form a confederacy, and there are such phenomena as cathedrals and foreign missions, schools and hospitals, international law and peace conferences. Peoples who differ in language, in thought, in standards of living, and in manufactured products may be bound into the same bundle of life by other than ties of trade. And they are. There are certain human interests which outweigh economic considerations.

All this is because of God in history. It is idle for H. G. Wells to conceive of the course of world development in deistic terms. His admirable two volume world-history, praised by the President of Bryn Mawr and used already by university students as a text, would be immensely more valuable and more true to fact if he could have had the insight to trace the work of an immanent God, hidden in the spaces of his universe. A deified humanity is not enough. The giant minds of the past have rejected that path. Why not see the growth of the race from pre-glacial times to the confederacy of the world as a fabric wrought by the wisdom of a provident God? And why not teach university men that view of history instead of a misleading and ultimately disappointing theory of the upward self-lift of humanity by its boot straps? To be frank with history and scientific with facts is the essence of honesty.

When Frank Simonds estimates the interplay of European, American and Asiatic interests, week after week, in terms of commercial advantage and traditional nationalism as if there can be nothing new under the sun, he is no better or worse than some other newspaper men. The contribution these men have made to an international understanding and a world settlement have been valuable. But why look at only one side of the shingle? There are always two sides. History has witnessed the struggle between altruism and selfishness with altruism ever on the increase by the grace of a good God. Why not acknowledge it in the newspapers? Some newspapers have been eager to do that. All honor! Noblesse oblige. We expect public writers to influence public opinion according to all the truth. No man can do that in whose consciousness God is not a dominant factor in history.

The open sore of the world cannot be healed without a Great Physician. History cannot be interpreted without a God. The epochal labors of the present peace conference cannot be guided to any measure of success except by the waiting Statesman of the Ages. We pray that the history now in the writing may be dictated by the mind of the Great King.

The Washington Conference—Opening Scenes and Sensations

"For three long years idealism had been lying prostrate with her face in the dust. In that daring proposal Secretary Hughes took her by the hand, raised her to her feet and bade her hold her head erect."

By WILLIAM AXLING

THE SETTING

ON November twelfth, one of the greatest scenes of history was staged in Washington. The setting was superb as well as sublime. It was as though a master mind had purposely planned the background and the time.

November eleventh—Armistice Day—not only America, but the nations of the world—both the friends and the foes of those five awful years—mourned the fallen and prayed for those bereft. The Allies honored the heroic dead and made their deeds to live anew. But the three distressing, distracting years that have followed peace threw a solemnizing influence over men's hearts. Victor and vanquished alike were in a sober mood.

For twenty-four hours the world again looked war in the face. They saw its fearful features from a post-war perspective. Ten million slain arose from their graves and marched in endless line across the memories of men. The hatreds, the heart-breaks, the broken homes, the shattered nations, civilization itself grappling with death; they saw it all from a new angle. And as it looked, war-sick humanity grew sicker and vowed a new war on war.

In Washington American's Unknown Soldier with face and form so mutilated and torn that even his mother could not recognize him was carried to his last resting place. President Harding, Vice-president Coolidge and General Pershing were his immediate escort. Thousands upon thousands of people followed with bowed heads and saddened hearts. As his broken form moved through the silent throng that lined the thoroughfare it called aloud to all to bow their heads in shame that it had to be, and made mute appeal that it never be allowed to happen again. And marching in that line listening to that wordless appeal were the delegates from many nations who on the morrow were to gather around the table in Continental Hall and plan for permanent peace. What a background? what a setting!

THE ATMOSPHERE

The atmosphere in which the conference opened its work was dynamic with the spiritual. The day before, in the services at Arlington, a high spiritual note was struck. As the procession left the Capitol Building there was the boom of cannon. All along the line of march the tinsel pomp and circumstance of war was much in evidence. But at Arlington the aspect of a military funeral shrank into the background and the spiritual loomed large.

A sweet singer sang, "Lead kindly light." Later, voice after voice took up the strains of "Nearer my God to Thee." Mr. Harding, as president, gave a message shot through with spiritual ideas and ideals; then, as priest, he summoned that vast audience to prayer saying, "Let me lead you in the Lord's Prayer." For two minutes, from twelve until twelve-two, that whole mass of people stood together in silent prayer.

This atmosphere was taken over into the opening session of the conference. During the opening moments the thirteen hundred people in that historic hall—many of them the world's greatest leaders—were figuratively on their knees as Dr. Abernathy of the Calvary Baptist Church tenderly and pleadingly took up the yearnings of their hearts and the yearnings of the world's heart in prayer to God. This ushered the conference right into the presence of the King of Kings.

President Harding followed with an address in which he put God in the center of things by saying, "Inherent rights are of God, and the tragedies of the world originate in their attempted denial." In speaking of the war and its awful toll he asked, "How can humanity justify or God forgive?" He drew the consciences of his hearers out into the white light of the presence of God and in that Presence made an appeal to the nations to outlaw war.

Then came Secretary Hughes with his epoch-making address. Its contents have been heralded to the four corners of the earth. It was like a bolt out of the blue. Delegates that had come there ready—as they thought—to make great concessions found that their imaginations had utterly failed them in their previous thinking.

This opening session marked the renaissance of idealism. For three long years idealism has been lying prostrate with her face in the dust. In that daring proposal Secretary Hughes took her by the hand, raised her to her feet and bade her hold her head erect. The effect was electric. Men's imaginations were fired. Visionary ideals were transformed into pregnant possibilities. Suddenly hard-headed practical diplomats began to see visions and to dream dreams.

"All those who believe in God and love peace ought to join hands and work to make this world the Home of God." This golden sentence was coined by the famous Japanese woman eighty-nine years old, now visiting this country in the interest of peace, Madame Kaji Yajima.

KAJI YAJIMA
Founder of the W. C. T. U. in Japan

Pessimism had hung heavy over the preparations of the conference. Secretary Hughes's bold stroke scattered the clouds and a new day of optimism dawned. Many a man who went into that meeting a pessimist came out a radiant optimist. Idealism and optimism became contagious and a divine daring possessed men's hearts and forced them to think in the terms of the impossible.

A SINGLE EYE

So far not a discordant note has been struck. Mr. Balfour in speaking of England said of the opening day that it was "a landmark in human civilization." He declared that the American proposition "takes hold of the dream which reformers, poets, publicists, even potentates have from time to time put before mankind as the goal to which human endeavor should aspire. This scheme makes idealism a practical proposition."

Baron Kato, speaking for the Japanese, handicapped by having to use a language which is foreign to him, spoke more tersely, but with no uncertain sound. He said, "Japan deeply appreciates the sincerity of purpose evident in the plan of the American government. She cannot remain unmoved by the high aims which have actuated the American project. Gladly accepting, therefore, the proposal in principle Japan is ready to proceed with determination to a sweeping reduction of her naval armament. Japan has never claimed, nor had the intention of claiming to have a general establishment equal in strength to that of either the United States or Great Britain. Her existing plan will show conclusively that she had never in view preparations for offensive war."

Many snags still lie across the path of peace, but Secretary Hughes's "bomb" has made a tremendous clearing. With Dr. Abernathy I believe that "God is in His Heaven and is making things right with the world. His great day is not in the past, but in the future."

Rev. H. W. Clough on Sept. 1 closed a five-year pastorate at Ripon, Wis. He has now accepted a unanimous call to the West Duluth, Minn., Church, after having been on the field a month as acting pastor. As a result of special services conducted by Dr. L. C. Clevenger which closed on Nov. 6, Mr. Clough baptized eight candidates on Nov. 13.

Rev. Howard A. Vernon, of the Cleveland Heights Church, Ohio, was a recent speaker at the Social Union banquet of the Akron Association, his subject being "The Voice in the Wilderness." The meeting was held in the First Church, Akron. The work at the Cleveland Heights Church is moving forward with much encouragement, congregations being steadily on the increase.

Who Used to Be Who Among Baptists

Sunny reminiscences of great and good Baptists who have passed over the river—The roll of masterful preachers and teachers in the denomination is a long one.—Our colleges have produced giants.

By W. SCOTT

I RECALL a statement of Dr. C. H. Watson of Boston made some years ago: "There is a word I am glad to see coming into more general use than formerly, the word 'appreciation.'"

He had in mind its use as a generous estimate of the character and career of one who had passed away, an appreciation unfortunately as a rule postponed until after death. Dr. Henson said once and probably more than once, "I would rather have a pound of taffy than a ton of epiphany." That is somewhat Hensonesque, but I remember him not merely as a humorist, but also as one mighty in prayer, a strong preacher and a benediction to his time.

We find, after all, if we are on the lookout, not a little of the spirit of appreciation among ministers and people generally. One day I was making the trip from Boston to New York and chanced to find a seat beside Dr. Shailer Mathews of Chicago. He had a farm in Maine and I had a small one in New Hampshire, and we raised our crops, picked and marketed our apples and estimated our gain or loss as we were seated comfortably in the car. Then our conversation turned to denominational affairs and the ministers. He remarked that he had never heard Dr. MacArthur speak a word of disparagement of any of his brethren. I think I told Dr. MacArthur about the remark, but, if not, he will read it here for I suppose he, like many others, is a reader of THE BAPTIST. My inference was that the remark was suggestive of the character of Dr. Matthews and Dr. MacArthur and reflected honor on both men. I think it is one of the reasons, not all, why both of these men are held in high regard by all who know them.

We Do Not Know Our Own

It has fallen to my lot to know more or less intimately many Baptist preachers and teachers from all parts of the country. Perhaps the reader will agree with me that as a denomination we are less interested in Baptist history and biography than we should be. Dr. Cathcart's Baptist Cyclopaedia, sometimes called the "Baptist Praise Book," is a useful and informing volume, but it does not furnish an interpretation of the character of the men whose lives are sketched, indeed, in such a work that could scarcely be expected. Dr. Calvert in his volume, "Men who have meant much to me" has produced a book worthy of wide circulation. The biography of President M. B. Anderson by various contributors and that of the Kendricks by Florence Kendrick Cooper are admirable. I remember Dr. S. Dryden Phelps, when editor of the Christian Secretary, excelled in brief biographical appreciations, as did Dr. Horr when editor of The Watchman. At the same time I hold the opinion that we have too little of the sort of reading which in brief space and fine literary form sets forth a worthy career. None, I think, can read Dr. John Brown's "My Father's Memoir," John Foster's estimate of Robert Hall. Dr. Clarke's memorial sermon on Dr. Brooks of Hamilton without emotion and profit.

How many of our notable ministers and members pass from us and are too quickly forgotten! Our indebtedness to such men we are ready to acknowledge, but the new generations have little to indicate their great qualities and worth. As I think of the conferences of and social unions of Boston, New York and Baltimore and the sessions of the Baptist Congress, now unfortunately discontinued, a large number of remarkable men rise in memory. The names of Armitage, Lorimer, Thomas, Hoyt, Ellis, Kenrick, Bright, Broadbent, Hatcher, Hiscox, Simmons, Burlingham, Peddie, Gillette, Martin, Brouner, Hutchins, Morehouse, Curry, Kerfoot, Greene, Rauschenbusch, Judson, Cumber, Johnson, Fox, Gallagher, Stone, Crane, Harper, Burdette, and many others are gratefully remembered. I have not liked the word layman, but among the members of our churches how many might be mentioned who in the beautiful phrase "rest with God."

So the backward look leads me to think how wise is the statement of Dr. Watson cited at the beginning.

A Mon o' Wecht

I might name many ministers and other members now living who seem to me to be among the real and true, that select company who, like Jesus, combine strength with gentleness and who, we say reverently, seem "not disobedient to the heavenly vision," but I venture to name only one. I can scarcely claim a personal acquaintance with Dr. Conwell, but I have been interested in his career as a biographical study. He is called the first citizen of Philadelphia, but I have thought him one of the first citizens of his time. A man who has built a great church, a university, a hospital, and is among the first preachers and lecturers of the day, and an author of merit, and withal unspoiled by the praise which in late years has come to him is, as Chalmers would say, "a mon o' wecht."

But I wished to add a word about the men in the Baptist denomination who have done much for education. It is noteworthy that the Baptist denomination has a strong hold on large numbers of people and, as we think, is in some ways strongly democratic, and yet it has produced not a few most eminent leaders in education. John Foster, one hundred years ago, in 1819, wrote his essay on "Popular Ignorance," a historic book in which he pleads with the ruling classes in Great Britain for the education of the masses. Francis Wayland, regarded as among the greatest of American college presidents and whose report of 1850 ranks with Talleyrand's report of 1791, should be better known among us. One might enlarge, if space allowed, on the contributions to education of Barnas Sears, M. B. Anderson, J. L. M. Curry, E. Benjamin Andrews and a goodly company besides of extraordinary men who served their own and later generations in our denominational and other schools.

How remarkable also is the history of our colleges, to name one only, Brown University. I have been surprised in reading its history to note its contribution of men of "light and leading" in education. Eliphalet Nott, called by some the greatest of American college presidents, received his degree from Brown. Horace Mann, Barnas Sears, J. B. Angell, E. B. Andrews, and others distinguished in the educational world, not to name many others living and departed, were from Brown. Probably all things considered no other institution surpasses the record of Brown University. Some qualified writer should set forth clearly but in no narrow denominational spirit the service which in this and other countries has been done by schools which owe their origin and ideals to the Baptist denomination. Let us not say we are proud of them for pride has no place in good thinking. Let us rather be devoutly grateful and appreciative for them.

I simply touch the fringe of a vast subject. May I add it has been one of the satisfactions of life to know a considerable number of the teachers in our Baptist colleges and academies. I know no equal group of men more worthy of respect, confidence and appreciation. In the current discussion of education under denominational auspices in our press and elsewhere I have met so little expression of warm appreciation of our educational leaders. A denomination which hopes to do much in evangelization and education must have in mind, in prayer, and in adequate moral and pecuniary support its preachers and teachers. Both have their sphere of service.

In the Public Eye

The preacher is much in the public eye and has the public ear. The teacher has neither. The preacher may fail as teacher and some have done so. The teacher may be no preacher. The one is akin to the orator; he deals in monologue, and goes on to the end with no interruption. The other is more intimate, must use the Socratic method, question and answer. Their methods of work differ somewhat and in consequence misunderstandings sometimes arise. Nearly fifty years ago Dr. Cutting called together the leading preachers and teachers of the Baptists for a week's conference in Brooklyn. It was a great occasion. I know of no similar later meeting among American Baptists. As a consequence in my judgment Baptist educational interests have suffered detriment, as they evidently do today. These two agencies of the church, the pulpit and the school, should be co-workers, free and brotherly, neither dominating the other. Where the preacher holds the stage unduly, we get the hierarchy, a result on which history has important suggestions. Addison in one of his essays says men of wit should be generous to one another. Mutual respect and appreciation is the call of the hour within and between Christian bodies, between nations and races the world over. Turning to a higher authority it may be allowable to suggest the careful reading of the twelfth chapter of Romans touching the diverse functions of the church which after all have one fundamental, comprehensive and unifying aim—to teach how best to live.

China Delegates

BY HERMAN C. E. LIU.

WITH the arrival of Dr. Chun Hui Wang and Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo, on Tuesday, Nov. 1, three of China's delegates to the Conference on Limitation of Armaments are now in this country, the other being Minister Sao-Ke Alfred Sze. To the regret of many, it is reported that Dr. W. W. Yen, China's capable Minister of Foreign Affairs, had to abandon his original intention to represent China at the conference, owing to pressure of affairs at home, such as the pending Shantung and Mongolia questions. According to Chinese papers, Dr. Chao-Chu Wu, the able son of Dr. Wu Ting-Fan, was appointed the fourth delegate but he was not likely to accept the appointment.

The Chinese people are undoubtedly happy to have these men of proved ability to be their spokesmen at a conference which is momentous for her destiny. It is significant to note that the delegates are all comparatively young in age and all had a Western education. No matter from which of the governments they received their appointment, they are to voice the genuine aspiration of the entire Chinese people and to defend the just rights of whole China.

Wang, Koo and Sze

Dr. C. H. Wang is perhaps less known to the American public than either of his colleagues. However, his profound legal knowledge and his personal integrity command the highest respect of his countrymen. A scholar of high standing at Yale a barrister at law in England, and an author of the standard English translation of German Civil Code, Dr. Wang began his official career with the beginning of the republic. He served in the provisional government in the capacity of the minister of foreign affairs and when the first republican cabinet was constructed he was the minister of justice. Subsequently he held in succession the posts of director general of the board of codification, research professor of law in Peking National University, and the chief justice of the supreme court. The last position he is holding now. In international affairs, Dr. Wang was China's delegate to the Commission of the League of Nations on the Amendment of the Covenant, and is now a deputy judge of the recently established tribunal of world peace.

To the American public Dr. Koo is a familiar person. His brilliant debating triumph in Columbia early attracted public notice. After receiving his degree in 1912, he immediately became the secretary of the president of China and later a councillor in the ministry of foreign affairs. In 1916 Dr. Koo was sent to the country of his education to represent the country of his birth. As minister to the United States, he was instrumental in furthering the good will and friendship of the two sister republics. At the Paris Peace Conference he effectively pleaded the cause of China. After his transfer to the Court of St. James, he represented China in the League of Nations and also in the executive council of the league. Now he is again one of China's defenders of her vital interests, shall we not expect the same valiant fight in Washington as in Paris?

Minister Sao-ke Alfred Sze is another Chinese of wide renown in the States. He was educated in America, receiving his degree from Cornell University. After his return, he had varied official experience as the director of Luhan and Northern Railways, the commissioner of foreign affairs and the holder of other important positions. In the first republican cabinet, Mr. Sze was minister of finance. From 1914 to 1921 he was China's minister to Great Britain—a position which he well used for promoting the understanding of the two countries. At the Peace Conference at Paris he was one of China's delegates. Since his transfer to the United States, Minister Sze has been indefatigable in winning for China the sympathy and good will of the American people.

Pastor Goes On to Glory

THE First Baptist Church of Cambridge, Ohio, has just passed through a sad experience in the sudden death of the pastor, Rev. J. H. Palmer. On Wednesday, November 2, he was taken seriously ill with an acute attack of appendicitis and was rushed to the Bethesda Hospital, Zanesville, where an operation was performed at eleven o'clock that night. But from that time, physicians held out no hope of his recovery because of serious complications, and on Sunday morning, November 6, word of his death came to his church.

REV. J. H. PALMER

Simplicity marked the funeral services of Mr. Palmer. As the body was carried into the church the voices of the children of the congregation, whom he loved, were heard in the distance singing softly, "My Jesus as Thou Wilt." Dr. W. S. Ayers of Westfield, Mass., the man who baptized Mr. Palmer, later preached his ordination sermon and all through the succeeding years was his devoted friend, conducted the services. A representative of the Cambridge Ministerial Association paid him a sincere tribute, as scholar, citizen, and a minister who placed Christ above all. Fred G. Boughton, secretary of Denison University and a former pastor of the church, told of Mr. Palmer's intense interest in education and of the help he had been to many boys and girls who were encouraged by him to seek higher education. Dr. Charles H. Stull of Marietta, who is in charge of the evangelistic work in Ohio, told how Mr. Palmer had thrown his whole soul into this work and was preparing to enter actively upon the state campaign when stricken. The tribute of his friend, Dr. Ayers was simple but came from an overflowing heart. He mentioned Mr. Palmer's steadfastness of purpose and his earnestness of endeavor. A male chorus sang "Asleep in Jesus"; the deacons and Sunday-school superintendent tenderly carried the body out and it was laid at rest in Northwood Cemetery.

Rev. John Hector Palmer was born May 8, 1876, at Summerside, Prince Edward Island, and married Lydia May Edgerton, who survives him, on May 29, 1906. He was the son of William and Rebecca Palmer, both deceased. He studied at preparatory schools in Maine and later entered Brown University from which he graduated. He took his seminary work at Newton and Hartford Theological Seminaries and later took a year's graduate work at Brown. He held the Biblical Greek Fellowship at the University of Chicago some time later. He was ordained in Roger Williams' church, the Old First Baptist, Providence, R. I., on May 14, 1906.

Mr. Palmer was always a strong leader in his pastorates. He had a vigorous grasp on his work, knew what the church ought to accomplish and made his churches realize the wisdom of his plans. He was fortunate in inspiring the co-operation of those with whom he labored. He brought to his work a spirit of broad culture and deep consecration. His breadth of view with his gentleness of spirit won the hearts of his people, while his firmness of conviction inspired confidence. He had conspicuous ability in business but tempting offers did not lure him aside from the one end to which he devoted his life. He felt the joy of a life which is commissioned from above and men felt that the power which sent him, claimed all there was in him.

Mr. Palmer's far reaching plans tended constantly to the upbuilding of the church and his pastorates were all characterized by a deepening missionary interest. He did not shrink from any hardship which might be involved in the attainment of his end. His death means the fall of a good soldier of Jesus Christ on the open battlefield.

Meeting Young People's Needs

BY FRANK O. ERB.

MUCH of the young people's work in our churches today is ineffective simply because we come to it from the wrong point of view. We make plans and prepare lessons only to find, very often, that the people for whom we plan and prepare are apparently unappreciative or ungrateful. What is the reason?

In brief the reason is this: We have been so busy with plans and teaching that we have not given first thought to the actual needs and problems of the young people themselves.

For instance: How few teachers prepare a Bible lesson with the idea of meeting some particular question or difficulty of their class! How few young people's devotional meetings are planned with the thought of giving the attendants an opportunity to think through and talk over some real question of their own religious lives! We simply think of teaching a lesson or preparing a meeting. We aim nowhere and wonder why we hit nothing.

A pastor in Michigan went fishing with a real fisherman. At the end of the day the fisherman had several fine muskallonge, while the pastor had a few small bass. The fisherman's remark was as true and as much to the point as it was blunt and ungrammatical. "Elder," he said, "the reason you don't ketch nothin' is because you don't fish fer nothin'."

Books for Parents and Teachers

BY HELEN B. MONTGOMERY.

IF we fail in our duty as parents and teachers, it will certainly not be for want of good counsel. There never was a time when so many and so good books were being printed in the interests of the child. Take a bunch which came to the office of Missions recently for review. Every one of them is thoughtful, every one helpful.

Training the Devotional Life, Weigle & Tweedy (G. H. Doran), is a brief, simple treatise, accurately described by its title. The very titles of the chapters make one long to find out what the authors have to say on such vital topics as The Meaning of Worship, Teaching Children to Pray in the Home, Teaching Children to Pray in the School, The Devotional Use of the Bible, The Memorization of Worship Materials, Family Worship, Church Worship, The Goal of Devotional Training.

A book intended for parents is The Parent and the Child, by Cope (Doran). This book is admirably fitted to be used by Mothers' Clubs as the basis of discussion, for questions follow each chapter and a list of books for supplementary reading is given. The book is indeed a series of problems, concretely stated, and taken up and some solution offered. Among the parents' problems discussed are disobedience, amusements, mischief, bad language, bickering, the use of leisure and of Sunday afternoons, the winning and holding of confidence. The following extract will illustrate the author's fresh and pungent way of putting things:

"A pessimist is simply a man who thinks that life is a business of finding out how many worms there are in every bushel of apples. It ought to be a way of finding the worth and joy in all things. It is a common fallacy that we exalt ourselves by tearing down all we can see; we only choke ourselves in the dust of this destruction. The most unhappy people in the world are the habitual regulators of others."

This is from the chapter on The Habit of Criticism in the Family.

In The Week-Day Church School (Doran), Dr. Cope discusses one of the liveliest topics in present-day religious education. This is not a book of theory. It is a survey of facts. We note first the desperate need for more religious education; next we learn what communities are actually doing to meet this need; then we discuss actual programs, and finally we discuss the principles that must underlie successful work of this kind. This is a book for every earnest community that does not yet have week-day instruction in religion to get, read, digest and apply.

One can hardly speak too enthusiastically about Weigle's Talks to Sunday School Teachers (Doran). Here are brought together twenty-four brief, illuminating discussions that originally appeared as articles in various Sunday school periodicals. They have all the freshness, informality and timeliness of the best in journalism; yet they have back of them the authority of the Yale University Professor of Christian Nurture. They are the writings of one who knows. The titles of the chapters are only attractive doors that lead into rich treasure houses. The Child a

A Russian Baptist Veteran

By N. J. POYSTI

ONCE Brother Vasilij G. Pavloff said that the history of the Baptists of Russia is his own history. He has a right to say so, and this short story of his life will serve as evidence:

He was born in 1854 in the Caucasus and converted at the age of sixteen. Just after his conversion he began to work for his Master. He was very eager for education and, as his parents were unable to send him to school, he began to attend the Jewish synagogue in order to learn Old Hebrew and German. He was for a considerable time in Hamburg, Germany, where he showed a great capacity for learning languages, of which at present he speaks twenty-five.

Under the Russian czars he was much persecuted and sent to prison more than thirty times. Many times he was exiled to Orenburg and Siberia for his zeal in spreading the gospel of Christ.

After the revolution he filled the pulpit of our church in Moscow as pastor. At present Brother Pavloff is in Siberia for a rest in his old age. We suppose that he praises the Lord for the present religious liberty in Russia. During the time of his activity he baptized thousands of converts.

One hundred millions of Russian people need such men.

(The short story told above was sent us by Rev. N. J. Poysti, pastor of the Baptist Church in Nikolsk-Ussurijsk, Eastern Siberia, in recognition of fifty years of Christian work just completed by Mr. Pavloff, of whom he speaks as the "jubilee, our oldest worker in the Baptist denomination in Russia." He adds, "We are certainly not responsible for our English," and so the editors have smoothed it out just a trifle. We hesitate to think what we might do if we tried to write a story in Russian.

REV. V. G. PAVLOFF

MR. AND MRS. N. J. POYSTI, BAPTIST WORKERS IN SIBERIA

Discoverer, A Boy's Loyalty, Breaking Old Ties, How Religion Grows, Learning by Doing, The Purpose of Questioning, Children's Lies, are only a few chapter headings that might be cited.

Fireside Stories for Girls in Their Teens, Eggleston (Doran), are stories with a purpose, stories that attract young girls, stories for real teachers to tell to live girls. They have proved that they will attract by attracting. These stories are not to be read, they are to be told.

Rev. Joseph H. Vatcher, of Sault Ste Marie, Mich., has accepted the call to the First Church, Port Huron, in that same state and will take up his work on Dec. 1.

Rev. Samuel Macauley Lindsay, pastor of the Hanson Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., has received a unanimous call from the First Church, Brookline, Mass., and his acceptance is expected. Mr. Lindsay has had a notable ministry in Brooklyn and his coming to Brookline is eagerly anticipated by Massachusetts Baptists.

The Roger Williams Church, Providence, R. I., observes the communion service in the evening instead of at the close of the morning worship. At the communion service held on Nov. 6 an attempt was made to have present the 107 people who have been baptized into membership during the year.

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for December 11

By JOHN A. EARL

PAUL WRITES TO A FRIEND
Philemon 1:8-21. Golden Text: Matthew 20:27
The Lesson Text

The letter of Paul to Philemon is one of the prison epistles which Paul wrote during his first imprisonment in Rome,—the others are Ephesians, Philippians and Colossians. It appears that Paul found in Rome a runaway slave called Onesimus who had defrauded his master, Philemon, in Colossae and absconded. Deeply penitent Onesimus makes a full confession to Paul, and proves by his subsequent service to Paul that his penitence is genuine. However, since he was a slave he must be returned to his master. The letter to Philemon was occasioned by the necessity of returning Onesimus to his rightful owner. As literature the letter ranks as a classic, and as an expression of Paul's tact in dealing with a delicate situation it is unexcelled.

The Lesson Taught

The problem facing Paul, the principles involved, and the practical way out are three of the things that may assist in showing that the Epistle to Philemon has its rightful place in the New Testament.

The Problem

The problem involved the delicate element of friendship as Paul was a friend to both Philemon and Onesimus. He must not fail to conciliate the friend who had been grievously wronged by the acts of Onesimus, and at the same time he must commend the offender to his master without denying or extenuating his guilt. The problem also involved a legal and economic element which further complicated matters. If the law took its course Onesimus would have to be punished. He had no rights before the law as a slave, and in spite of all that Philemon might wish to do in extending mercy, other slave owners around him might demand the full extent of the law for the returned slave. The problem was further complicated by the new ideas of Christian brotherhood which Paul passionately preached and practiced. How was he to harmonize his gospel of brotherhood with a system of human slavery? The problem was a real one demanding the most thorough treatment. He could not plead for human freedom without danger of precipitating revolution on the part of the slaves who made up half of the population of the Roman Empire and without bringing down upon the Christian church the heavy hand of the Roman government. How could he consistently save his gospel of equality of all men in Christ and yet send Onesimus back to the slavery from which he had run away? The letter to Philemon is the answer. A careful study of it will reveal the psychology of Paul as he wrestled with the problem.

The Principles

The first principle Paul followed in the solution of the problem is the principle of justice. He appeals to justice when he returns the slave to his master, saying, "Whom I have sent back to thee in his own person," adding that he would fain have kept him with him in Rome that he might minister to him in the bonds of the gospel, but he would do nothing of that kind without the consent of Philemon. The principle of justice is also observed by Paul in handling the problem when he says in the eighteenth verse, "But if he hath wronged thee at all, or oweth thee ought, put that to mine account; I Paul write it with my own hand, I will repay." The second principle which governed Paul in the case was the principle of appeal rather than the method of command. He tells Philemon that as an apostle he might command him to do that which was befitting under all the circumstances, but he waives that right and follows the principle of entreaty. He bases his appeal for Onesimus on the fact that he (Paul) is an old man and a prisoner (vs. 9), that Onesimus has been converted to Christ by him, and that now a Christian, Onesimus will be worth much more to Philemon than formerly (10-11). The third principle Paul adopted was the principle of brotherhood. It is the spirit of brotherhood rather than its outward forms which Paul seeks to incarnate in Philemon. Legally Onesimus is a servant. Paul makes that perfectly clear; but he also makes it emphatic that Onesimus is now by reason of his Christian life more than a servant,—a brother beloved (vs. 16). Paul regards Onesimus as his brother, and therefore he says to Philemon, "If you and I are brothers, then logically Onesimus is your brother since he is my brother" vs. 17). These are the three principles that will solve almost any social problem, domestic, industrial, ecclesiastical or international.

The Practical Way Out

Ideally the gospel of equality of privilege and opportunity for all races and conditions of men is universal and eternal; but practically it is not always workable. Paul himself recognized this situation when ideally he said, "In Christ Jesus there is neither male nor female, etc.," and then proceeded to place restrictions upon the female members of the church at Corinth. He preached with flaming conviction the truth that all men are free in Christ, and yet he exhorted slaves to be subject to their masters. Was he inconsistent? No, because he had to meet a situation which ideals would not fit, and hence while he cherished his ideals and proclaimed them he knew that the way out of many difficulties was the practical method of adapting himself to the conditions which existed and by tactful handling lead the people along to the gradual realization of the ideal. This is still the practical way out of many difficulties. Paper programs and abstract principles must always deal with the human element, and the human element always modifies the academic ideal and the abstract principle. A political league of nations is an academic ideal. A conference of the naval powers of the world held in the interest of disarmament is the practical way out. All social questions must be met in this way. Industrial conditions are far from ideal today as recent labor troubles in our own and other lands testify. But we shall make little progress if we insist that these conditions shall become ideal at once. While cherishing the ideal and teaching it with the passionate conviction of Paul in preaching his gospel of universal brotherhood, we must practice the same common sense that Paul manifested in dealing with the problem of human slavery. This is the way to social progress.

Nationality Nights

"Do you know who and what have made America the greatest country on the face of the earth?"

"Do you belong to the army of 'Lovers of Mankind'?"

These are only two of many important questions designed to be answered by a series of "Nationality Nights," which will be given during the winter and spring by the City Missions Society of New York, in direct charge of Dr. Charles H. Sears, executive secretary of the City Missions Society, and Miss Mary Comstock, secretary of Christian Americanization. The series offers a number of fascinating monthly programs, presenting the background, the history, literature, music, and art of foreign-speaking neighbors.

The first meeting of the series was "Italy to America" night, on Thursday evening, November 10, at the Second Avenue Baptist Church in New York, at which time the Italian Baptists of New York City presented a program, representative of the contributions of Italy to America. An Italian dinner at 6:30 was followed by an exhibition of Italian art and handwork, after which a beautiful pageant, "Italy to America" was presented.

Other programs will deal with the contributions to America of Czechoslovakians, Russians, Poles, Chinese, Hungarians, Estonians, Latvians, Swedish and Finnish neighbors.

One of the sentences in the President's Thanksgiving proclamation which should stand out before every Christian worker is this: "Opportunity for every great service awaits us if we shall prove equal to it."

Young People's Work

Topic for December 11

POINTS IN THE PLEDGE WE ARE LIKELY TO NEGLECT

Luke 9:57-62

Our Pledge

Relying upon Divine help, I hereby promise to be true to Christ in all things and at all times; to seek the New Testament standard of Christian experience and life; to attend every meeting, unless hindered by reasons approved by a good conscience, and to take some part in the service, aside from singing, if it is possible to do so with sincerity and truth."

1. Relying upon Divine help. The hurly-burly type of folk rely more upon self than upon anyone else. This is a characteristic fault of young people. We are well, we are strong, well fed, clothed, and have a comfortable home, why should we rely upon someone else? The Christian secret of a happy life is found by relying upon Divine help. How much more successful would our efforts be if we would only realize our utter helplessness to do the Master's work without help from above!

2. True to Christ in all things. Not just two or three, but all. There's the rub. Many young folks are quite willing to be true to Christ in most everything. How about the play life? How many settle the amusement question in an utterly pagan fashion? On Sundays, we are on dress parade. How about the common-place things through the week? Is there genuine loyalty when folks are not looking on? Does your heart ring true even though the crowd goes the wrong way?

3. The New Testament standard. My, how difficult! What is the New Testament standard of life anyway? There is but one real way to find out—study the New Testament. Give some time each day to studious inquiry. Is the Bible a closed book to you? Then how can you sign the above pledge and be consistent? We cannot excuse ourselves on the ground of ignorance. If we do not know, there is every opportunity for finding out. If you have gotten away from the old book, turn again to its pages. The old writer said: "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet."

4. To attend every meeting. To be sure we have the excuse, "unless hindered by reasons approved by a good conscience." You are in school and have some lessons to get, for you will have to recite the first thing Monday. What a splendid reason for non-attendance! But, you let that studying go in order to attend a frat party or class social on Friday evening and Saturday. If you did, you will have to tone your conscience down somewhat to approve this excuse. As a matter of fact, some young people haven't a very good conscience because they have "approved" at times when they knew they were wrong.

5. To take a part. A very simple matter, but you are not prepared. Why? You have had several days, or perhaps several weeks! You excuse yourself on the grounds that you have been busy, and yet you spent one or two whole evenings in "heel" culture or something of the kind. Taking part means more than simply mutilating a copy of Service for clipping and then reading them before the society. Young people must do some preparation on their own account.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Really this is a very comprehensive pledge and requires rather strenuous discipline to keep it. The pledge should not be signed unless the individual means to keep it.

American Education Week

A great many organizations, including the American Legion and The National Education Association are uniting in pressing the claims of education the week of December 4-10. The purpose will be:

"To arouse America to a fuller appreciation of the value of education for the making of better citizens and also to create a deeper and a more abiding interest in the children of America than we have ever had before."

"The foundation of every state is the education of its youth."

A Suggestion for School Week

The week of December 4-10 offers an unusual opportunity to "sell the high school." There are young people in every community who should go on to either high school or college. Take the matter up in your society and encourage such young people to go ahead. Write to the Institute for Public Service, 1125 Amsterdam Avenue, New York, N. Y., enclosing fifteen cents for the following pamphlets: "Your Money and Your Life"; "Come On, Girls, Let's Go"; and "Why Graduate." The opportunity is an unusual one. Let's take advantage of it.

More Men and Things

Home and Foreign Fields, the missionary organ of the Southern Baptist Convention says: "Do you know of a young man or woman who is contemplating a job after having finished the public school grades, rather than a higher education? If so, clip this paragraph and mail it to him or her. Recent carefully compiled figures show that of 33,000,000 whose school work stopped with the elementary grades, only 808 attained to places of distinction; of 2,000,000 who completed a high school, 1,254 became noted; while out of 10,000 college graduates, 5,763 reached distinction. Expressed otherwise, an elementary education gives one chance of success to 41,250 persons; a high school diploma brings the number to one in every 1,608; while a college education makes a noteworthy career possible to one in 173. And while figures are not at hand to furnish mathematical proof, it is a well-known fact that the denominational college most often furnishes the fortunate one of the 173. The place or a Baptist boy or girl is in a Baptist college."

What Are You Going to Do About It?

That's the question on every hand as regards the tithing and stewardship campaign. On request to B. Y. P. U. of America, 125 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill., or 408 Humboldt Bank Building, San Francisco, Cal., you can secure, free and postpaid, enough copies of any two of the following leaflets, to supply two for each member of your society or church: "What We Owe and How to Pay It"; "Thanks-giving Ann"; "Is Tithing Worth While"; "Is the Tithe a Debt"; "Obedience the Master's Test"; "Objections to Tithing"; "A Tithing Catechism"; "Does Tithing Pay"; "Does a Tenth Belong to God?"; "Mine and Thine"; "Reasons for Tithing"; "Talks With Money"; "Who Owns the World"; "How to Tithe and Why"; "Proportionate Giving"; "The Deacon's Tenth"; "That Tithing Sermon"; "Aunt Margaret's Tenth." Not more than two leaflets furnished in one order.

Sample Special

On request to either of the above offices, we will send free and postpaid a package containing samples of all leaflets, outline of plan for Tithers' League, etc.

From the States

New York:

Buffalo young people met on November 15th for a rally program at Delaware Baptist Church. Rev. A. C. Hanna of Kentung, Burma, was the speaker.

Ohio:

The young people of the Buckeye state have set up twenty-five goals for the year. Among them: 1, a good working associational organization in every association; 2, one or more rallies in every association; 3, continuation of gospel team work; 4, a campaign for securing 25 per cent increase in the membership of young people's societies; 5, a good working B. Y. P. U. in every church; 6, a good junior society in every church; 7, fifty standard senior unions; 8, ten standard intermediate unions; 9, fifty standard junior unions; 10 fifteen hundred tithers' league members; 11, two thousand daily devotion league members; 12, fifty Baptist Trained Leader's Course classes; 13, an evangelistic campaign with the slogan "Each one win one."

The Chimney Corner

Thanksgiving

BY MARTHA HASKELL CLARK

God be thanked for aced yield, and mile-wide harvest bending
Heavy for the reaping blades, waist and shoulder high,
Reach on reach of golden seas, shoreless,
and unending,
Where the furrow-clods lay dark 'neath
an April sky.
Lord, amid our lifted prayers, let us not forget
Little, tended garden-plots in humble door-yards set.

Little, tended garden-plots, smiling to the sun,
Sweet with dew, and dark with dusk,
small, and green and tried,
Ringed with fields, or city-grimed, bless them every one,
The little, tended garden-plots that through the countryside.

God be thanked for marbled wealth, and city pavements teeming,
Inland-set and clasped with hills, or fronting to the sea,
Mile on mile of lifted roofs against far sky-lines dreaming,
Cities old, and cities new, and cities yet to be.
Lord, before the sunset dies, let us not forget
Little, brave, love-built roofs, in lesser byways set.

Little, lamp-lit, builded homes watching through the night,
Toiling, friendly, stout of heart, for a nation's need.
Lonely hill-farm pricked with fir, clustered village white,
Grant them wealth of harvest, Lord,
from every scattered seed.

God be thanked for mighty men, visioned and high-hearted,
Hands to grip a nation's helm amid storm-
blinded seas,
Faith that sails a fearless course through hidden reefs uncharted.
God be thanked that we can breed such mighty souls as these.
Lord, before the embers pale, let us not forget
Loyal hearts and striving hands in lowly places set.

Simple hearts and humble hands, tolling day by day,
Dreamer-souls that keep the faith on sordid paths unknown,
Those who sow, but seldom reap, bless them, Lord, we pray,
Send full store of golden grain for every threshing-stone.

(—"Good Housekeeping.")

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

Sheaves for Ruth.

TWO women went up to the temple to pray on Thanksgiving Day, the one a self-made woman and the other a self-less individual. And the self-made woman sat and prayed thus with herself: "God, I thank Thee that I am not as other women are, helplessly dependent souls, with no money and no freedom and no time of their own; even as this poor woman ahead of me who used to be a classmate of mine in the old school days. O Lord, Thou knowest how I have made a way for myself in the distant city, unhampered by ties and the pull of thread-bare circumstances."

And the self-less woman would not lift up so much as her eyes to heaven, but clasped her hands upon her breast crying: "God be merciful to me a sinner." Yet I tell you this woman went down to her house justified rather than the other.

For as the self-made woman sat there in the temple she was feasting her eyes on the marvellous glory of the chancel decorations: "Someone knows what's what!" she thought, "even a person fresh from New York like myself thinks 'Fifth Avenue' when looking at that—" and she thrilled exceedingly over the exquisite table of piled-up fruits in blended shades of gold and scarlet with great clusters of grapes such as the spies of old might have brought back from the Promised Land. Setting off this gorgeous display was a magnificent background of tawny autumn foliage, the great boughs flanked by dull bronze bowls of gold chrysanthemums.

Even as she feasted her eyes a certain long-forgotten phrase sang itself into her surprisingly business-like brain: "The beauty of holiness, she caught herself repeating, while the words of a Thanksgiving solo completed her mood:

"For the beauty of the earth,
For the beauty of the skies,
For the love which from our birth
Over and around us lies,
Christ our God, to Thee we raise
This our hymn of grateful praise."

In a genuine burst of thanksgiving she wandered off along her own contented paths of thought, until with a start she caught her own name on the lips of the minister—

"And Ruth gleaned what the reapers had left."

Curious! She smiled whimsically that one of those primitive quaint Bible personages should bear the same name as herself, ultra-modern. Which led her again to the serene contemplation of herself: her pleasant bank account, her enviable niche in society, her perfect independence, her present leisure to indulge her aesthetic tastes. "Art, for instance," she mused, "think what sensations the mere sight of this chancel decoration has aroused in me. As for music—I wonder who, in this pokey place, could render an old hymn with such clear-voiced fervor? Then thank God, I'm awake intellectually. This minister, now—nice, keen, spiritual preacher he seems to be, the kind I approve of; quite evidently too good for this small-town church. He's depth chiseled into his fine face. Ought to be listening to his sermon, of course! Guess I'm so thankful already that I don't need anyone to hand me new reasons for gratitude. Mercy on us, suppose I were that poor Mary Carr ahead of me! How worn she looks; used to be such a dear dreamer of a girl. Suppose she's married. It's too bad—what has she got to be thankful for, I'd like to know?"

"And Ruth gleaned what the reapers had left," repeated the minister.

"What's it all about, anyhow?" she sighed, but even into her absorption certain phrases penetrated: "Producers and parasites," "half the world gleans what the other half has sowed and reaped in the sweat of its brow," "biggest contributions of the age traceable back and back and back to humble side streets and little small-town cottages."

"I wonder?" she debated, grudgingly; "what am I gleaming that the reapers have left?"

But at the end of the service she discovered from Mary Carr! For it was Mary Carr's daughter who had made the chancel decorations—not a haphazard arrangement: years of diligent study and persistent self-denial had given her her chance; it was Mary Carr's other daughter whose voice was now being the family objective. "Her father wants her to use it and use it and use it. He's made her see that it's a gift from God. Our only son had his talent, too,—languages; we're very proud of what he's doing in the Orient as a missionary.

"Tell me, who is your husband?" Ruth asked curiously.

"Oh, didn't you know? He's the pastor of this community temple. Years ago when he first came here and welded all our straggling half-dead churches into this one live beautiful house of God, I began to admire him, Ruth, and really—I've never stopped! My one burning regret is that I'm so inadequate myself, neither strong enough nor talented enough to help him or the children as I long to. I thought today in church, it's a real sin that I don't seem to get anywhere from year to year."

Ruth gasped: "You? You! Why, Mary, you were the whole sermon, dear! All the rest of us glean what's to be reaped after your abundant harvest is gathered in. Ah! Mary, today I'd rather be your unfashionable tired dreamer-self, with something rare to pass on into dependent lives, than to be my own prosperous but poor self-made tailor-made shell of a woman, gleaming where I've never sowed!"

"I never saw it that way before!" cried

Mary radiantly, "what a thing to be thankful for—that the religious handling of mere pots and pans and brooms and needles can eventually give some other soul a sheaf to glean!"

And she went down to her house justified.

The Young Reserves

The Runaway Pie

THE COOK was inclined to be cross. Partly because it was Thanksgiving time, and with every single one of the Smith aunts, uncles and cousins coming to dinner tomorrow she said she had her hands much too full, and she kept shoeing poor Tom away from the kitchen.

"You're under my feet all the time," she complained.

"Oh, no, I'm not! I'll be just as good as gold, honest Injun!" Tom promised, and sat on a chair by the stove as if he never meant to budge from it as long as he lived.

"Then mind you stay put!" she cried, and rolled out the pie crust to line the pie tins, and then covered this dough with pumpkin.

Umph! It makes your mouth water to think of all the things she made that afternoon. The kitchen was one grand mixture of spicy, delightful smells; and Tom sat in his chair as good as gold. Then came the trouble about the pie.

It was the first pie to come out of the oven, all nicely browned and sizzling just the tiniest bit. She put it on the window sill while she turned around to shut the oven door. Tom saw her do it. And she knew that Tom saw her do it. Yet when she turned back to get that pie it was gone. Absolutely gone.

"What did you do with my pie, Tom Smith?" she cried in loud disgust, "a fine boy you are, promising to be good and then practicing tricks on me like that!"

"Why, I never so much as touched that pie," Tom said in a very injured tone, "how could I, when I've just been sitting here all the time?"

"Yes," sneered the tired cook, "just sitting there! And are you going to make me believe, young man, that that pie developed legs, and hopped off the window sill and ran away? I've baked pies all my life, but never a runaway pie among them. Come, now, own up,—where is it?"

"Honest Injun, I don't know!" cried Tom, so innocently that Cook believed him, and they both rushed out the kitchen door expecting to find it lying flat on its face in the garden under the window. But never a sign of a pie was there!

"Somebody stole it, that's what!" Tom whispered, "and I'm going to find out who it was. Good-bye."

So quicker than a flash he rushed to the front yard, but there was no one in sight but the Rag Man, with his old brown sack over his arm, just as usual.

"Hello," shouted Tom, "have you seen a runaway pie?"

"A what?" the shabby man asked in surprise.

"A runaway pie? A nice new hot pumpkin pie?"

"No, no!" said the Rag Man; and then, without meaning to, he added a very painful "Ouch! Ouch!" And Tom saw him shift the old brown sack carefully over to the other arm. So then he knew: the pie was in that sack!

He looked at the Rag Man. And the Rag Man looked at him. Cold shivers ran up and down Tom's back; I really can't tell you how the Rag Man himself felt, but this is what he said in a very sullen voice: "Here's your pie, I snatched it for my little girl. She ain't never had any American Thanksgiving yet, poor kid. I sent to Poland for her last year, and she's trying something awful to be a real American. And she says one of the most American of all American things is Thanksgiving. She learnt about it at school, how the first people who ever came to America came in boats like she and I came, and so on Thanksgiving Day they ate pies and thanked God for being here. And I promised her that tomorrow we would eat pies and thank God, too, like all the other Americans. So when I saw your pie put out on the window sill it seemed sort of meant for me—"

"Oh, but you couldn't possibly thank God properly with a runaway pie inside of you," Tom said solemnly. "I'm almost sure my mother would want you to keep it, now. She's a very, very American person, and only last week I heard her saying at church before a whole roomful of ladies that these new Americans, like you—coming to our shores, could do exactly as much to make America great as the old-time Pilgrim fathers did. So you just keep the pie, and tomorrow why don't you come to our church to give thanks? That's the place to do it properly."

But the Rag Man held the pie out: "No, no, I couldn't eat pie that came from a church family,—I ain't got no sort of use for Christians. Not I! Here, take your old pie . . ."

"Oh, but it's too hot for me to carry," groaned poor Tom, miserably, "unless—unless you'll lend me the sack, too."

"Sure, take the sack. I'll stop for it next week sometime."

So Tom went marching back to the kitchen with the pie on top of the sack, to the great astonishment of his mother who stood talking to the cook. They said he was a perfect little hero to have found the pie, and brought it back so triumphantly. But Tom said no, he felt like a very, very horrid person to have spoiled the very first Thanksgiving that the Rag Man had ever started to celebrate.

Then he told his mother the whole story, and the minute she heard it she put that pie in a basket. She also put in a glass of cranberry jelly, some celery and nuts and lots of vegetables, and even a little chicken that grandmother had sent from the farm. Tom hurried to his own room and found a picture of Priscilla walking to church beside John Alden, beneath which was printed in big black letters:

"THEY GAVE THANKS IN CHURCH, AND EVER SINCE THEN THE CHURCH HAS GIVEN THANKS FOR THEM."

And he also found a little American flag to stick in the handle of the basket.

His mother had noticed on the sack the Rag Man's address; so after Tom had added his two little treasures, she slipped the wonderful basket inside the sack and took it on the street cars directly to the house where the Rag Man lived. And it is a fact that the very car wheels seemed to sing a little tune as they carried her along their shining tracks:

"Since he will not come to church,
Then the church must come to him;
Since he will not come to church,
Then the church must come to him."

Making Others Thankful

Said Old Gentleman Gay, "On a Thanksgiving Day

If you want a good time, then give something away."

So he sent a fat turkey to Shoemaker Price And the shoemaker said: "What a big bird! How nice!

And since such a good dinner's before me, I ought

To give widow Lee the small chicken I bought."

"This fine chicken! O see!" said the pleased widow Lee,

"And the kindness that sent it—how precious to me!

I would like to make some one as happy as I.

I'll give washwoman Biddy my big pumpkin pie."

And "Oh, sure!" Biddy said, "'tis the queen of all pies!

Just to look at its yellow face gladdens my eyes!

Now it's my turn, I think; and a sweet gingercake

For the motherless Finigan children I'll bake."

Said the Finigan children—Rose, Denny and Hugh—

"It smells sweet of spice; and we'll carry a slice

To poor little lame Jake, who has nothing that's nice."

"O, thank you! and thank you!" said little lame Jake,

"What a bootiful, bootiful, bootiful cake! And such a big slice! I will save all these crumbs

And will give them to each little sparrow that comes."

And the sparrows they twittered, as if they would say,

Like Old Gentleman Gay, "On a Thanksgiving Day,

If you want a good time, then give something away."

Our Own Folks

Detroit's Christian Workers' Institute

By A. H. FINN

The Detroit Baptist Union, in cooperation with the American Baptist Publication Society, has just concluded the most remarkable Christian Workers' Training Institute ever held in the territory of the Northern Baptist Convention. It was held in the Woodward Avenue Baptist Church and its fine institute buildings and was duplicated in the Christian Center on Russell Street, recently dedicated for the Negro group, so largely Baptist, in Detroit as elsewhere.

A Great Faculty

The faculty included Rev. Thos. B. Frizelle, National Director of Institutes and Summer Assemblies of the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Dr. H. S. Myers, of the General Promotion Board, New York; Miss May Huston, Associate Secretary of the Department of Missionary Education of the Northern Baptist Convention; Dr. Warren P. Behan, National Director of Correspondence Study Division of the American Baptist Home Mission Society and American Baptist Publication Society, of Philadelphia; Miss Lillian Bromley, State Missionary Education Secretary for Michigan, Detroit; Dr. Owen C. Brown, Editor Adult Publications, American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Mrs. R. J. Hutton, State Director of Elementary work for Michigan Sunday School Association, Detroit; Dr. H. E. Tralle, Editor Judson Training Manuals, American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Rev. M. G. McGorrell, Director for Young Peoples work for the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Dr. J. A. White, General Secretary B. Y. P. U. of A., Chicago; Miss Meme Brockway, National Director of Elementary Work for the American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Rev. E. R. Bartlette, Dean Dept. of Religious Education, of the Detroit School of Religion, Detroit; Dr. W. J. Sly, Director for Work among New Americans, American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Dr. J. Foster Wilcox, National Director of Brotherhood Northern Baptist Convention, New York; Dr. H. F. Stilwell, Supt. of Evangelism for American Baptist Home Mission Society of New York; Dr. S. Z. Batten, Secretary of Social Service work for American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Dr. W. E. Chalmers, National Secretary of Religious Education, American Baptist Publication Society, Philadelphia; Dr. F. B. Bachelor, Kalamazoo College, Kalamazoo; Dr. H. C. Gleiss, Superintendent Detroit Baptist Union, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Finn, Associate Director Department of Week Day Religious Education, could not come and her place was taken by Rev. M. Banning of Toledo, O. The Dean of the Institute and the one who conceived and carried the ambitious plan into reality was Rev. A. V. Allen, Director of Religious Education for the Detroit Baptist Union.

Dr. Myers gave wonderfully illustrated devotional and missionary addresses. Miss Hulston's subject was "The Kingdom and the Nations." Dr. Behan had two courses—"Foundation Truths of the Christian Faith" and "The Baptist." Miss Bromley taught "From Survey to Service." Dr. Brown gave two series on "Training the Devotional Life" and "Adult Class Work." Mrs. Hutton taught "Primary Methods." Mr. Banning had the course in "Week Day Religious Education." Miss Brockway gave two series of addresses, "Dramatization of Bible Stories" and "The Church and its Juniors." Dr. White discussed "B. Y. P. U. Methods." Dr. Sly led the study in "The Leadership of New Americans." Mr. Bartlett gave a course in "Sunday School Evangelism." Dr. Tralle gave two series on "Story Telling" and "Sunday School Evangelism." Dr. Bachelor led the study in "Church Efficiency." Dr. Wilcox gave the course in "The Adolescent Boy and Brotherhood Work." Dr. Stilwell discussed "Personal Evangelism" while Mr. McGorrell had the course in "Leadership of Young People."

Fed Body and Mind Together

Following the afternoon study hours and class room work, supper was served in the dining room of the church and following the evening class sessions there was held a mass meeting in the great auditorium of the Woodward Avenue Baptist church. On Monday evening, Dr. Wilcox gave his illustrated lecture on "The Church and the Conservation of Youth." On Tuesday night, Dr. Samuel Batten gave his gripping lecture on "A World of Brothers." Wednesday evening Dr. Tralle lectured in his inimitable manner on "From Whence Geniuses." Thursday evening Dr. Bachelor gave his illustrated lecture on "Christian Education" and on Friday evening Dr. Brown, following the Missionary Motion pictures on "Alaska," gave a searching talk on "After the Institute—What?"

Not only were Detroit Baptists, white and colored, largely represented but churches in the state sent their pastors and generous delegations. The program opened Sunday afternoon, November 13, in the Woodward Avenue Baptist church and the Christian Center with Miss Brockway's engaging address on "The Prophet and Mary Mix-up," and the members of the faculty introduced. Several spoke from the pulpit and Bible Schools of Detroit Baptist churches. The registrations were in the vicinity of 2,500 with hundreds of others reached outside the class rooms.

It has been a tremendous impetus toward higher ideals in religious education in the church and the Bible school and a new consecration for more effective service in every department of the church's work. If just such an Institute could be reproduced in all our great cities the current year, its value in our denominational life and the kingdom of our Christ would be beyond measure. Go and do likewise.

Wisconsin News and Notes

By ROBERT W. SHAW

Dr. A. LeGrand, our state superintendent, has called a meeting of the State Board for Tuesday, November 29. Besides the usual business to be attended to at this time it is hoped that the "Continuation Campaign" for Wisconsin will be set up. Dr. H. A. Heath and Secretary W. H. Bowler will be present to assist in this. Invitations have gone out to all the pastors of the state to be present if possible in order to get at first hand all the information concerning our great work, and the program by which it is proposed to do it. They have been asked to bring along the laymen too. It is hoped that this opportunity for free and frank discussion will help to a better understanding of things in this state.

Our Differences

The things that have agitated the Baptists of the North for the past two years can be reduced to two. Principally all the Baptists can agree with the Des Moines confession of faith. That is not the issue, but the issue has been about the point of emphasis. When one group of Baptists have hesitated to contribute their money because they have felt that some of it would go to the support of men in the larger work of the denomination who were not doctrinally sound, the other group has misunderstood their point of emphasis. But when the second group saw some of their money going to support missionary pastors who would not lead their churches into denominational cooperation in the New World Movement, they too have been misunderstood when they insisted that co-operation was the big thing. Now that we are beginning to realize just what the differences are, it is a good piece of strategy for all to get together and talk it out and over. We are going to do that in Wisconsin, and we believe that it will only help further cement the movement which began at our convention in Beloit.

In Milwaukee

The Milwaukee City Union has taken a big step forward. It is now proposed to employ a city missionary who will give part of his time to the Christian center work being developed in the present South Church field, and the rest of his time to extension work. It is hoped that several Sunday schools will be opened soon in the growing sections of the city.

The West Allis Church has recently opened a mission Sunday school two miles west of their church in a growing section. The attendance on the first Sunday was encouraging. The Grace Church is making a study looking toward the same thing. They have a fine group of men who will put over anything they undertake to do.

Pastor A. Soltys of the Christ Polish Church dedicated a new parsonage on Monday evening, October 21. Mr. Soltys is doing a big work, and his church is filled every Sunday evening. The Catholic priests have made it difficult for him to secure a home for any length of time, but this new arrangement will help him, not only in his work but give him a better spirit with which to approach the work among 80,000 Poles.

Pastor H. C. Carnell of Antigo has accepted the pastorate of the Bay View Church. He is a fine man and we welcome him to large opportunities in this church.

Out in the State

Four of the leading women of the Barren Church were recently killed in an automobile accident. Dr. W. D. Hulbert, field worker of the convention, officiated at the funeral services.

Rev. S. R. Dunlop, who recently resigned at West Dallas and Hillsdale, has accepted the pastorate of the Omro Church.

Rev. Kirby Chapman, who recently became pastor of our church at Marinette, is laying the foundations of a great revival meeting.

H. W. Bardenwerper was smiling the other day. He is the business manager of our convention, and the smile was produced by the receipt for a check for $500 with which to purchase an annuity bond. When the annuitants die the money automatically passes into our $200,000 endowment fund. Such checks will make any of our treasurers smile.

Boston Letter

BY CHARLES H. WATSON

A Noteworthy Schoolmaster

We have just been startled by the sudden death of Mr. Frank V. Thompson, the superintendent of our Boston schools. He was stricken down in his early prime, when the work of most men is just begun. But the emphasis that death puts upon life shows us that his is a record of vast accomplishment. He was an enthusiast, and favorite, with educational forums. When fresh from academic training he attracted attention. He seemed almost a boy, but had the grip of a strong man. He became master of the most dreaded and difficult school in the city. At once he announced to the sullen gangs of foreign boys confronting him, that he was there to teach and not to flog: that in every police station there were clubs and cat-o'-nine-tails for the disobedient, but that schools were built by the government for the young people to study in. They were to learn—he to teach. Very simple thing that, yet his unrelenting insistence upon it brought him success in his school of hoodlums, and everywhere else. Finally our whole common school system came to his terms.

His Chief Obstacle

Strangely enough, what most embarrassed him was not the neglected children, but the policeman, the janitor, the school committeeman, the politician, afraid to lose their jobs. Everywhere Thompson preached that government provided schools for discipline and duties; and that teachers were "magistrates," and instead of being crushed by offenders, were to hand them over to their principals, and he to the civic authorities. That word "magistrate" especially caught the foreign consciousness. Schools were an integral part of the commonwealth—different from such incidentals as "slumming" and "welfare houses"—and were never for the coddling of the incipient loafer and law-breaker.

He claimed that Americanization consists of the law-abiding temper, and that education is democracy's best tool. Its liberty must never mean license, indifference, or ignorance, but sense of responsibility. Good citizenship must begin in the kindergarten, and there must be no back-wash anywhere.

Thompson was profoundly devout—a man of patriotic and spiritual stature. He seeded the educators of the nation with his principles, and transformed thousands of teachers by lifting from them the incubus of "discipline" and setting them free to teach. "Give him a good beating!" said many an irate, but baffled parent. "No," said Thompson, "the policeman will attend to him; I am a teacher! Your son will be haled into court as a disturber of the public peace, and fined." When parents had to pay for disturbance it acted like magic.

Doctor Walter Calley

Dr. Calley's address to our ministers on recent impressions received in England, France and Germany was delightfully characteristic of the man. It was sweet in spirit, just in measure, large in grasp, eloquent when his Christian nature was speaking, and confident that a less belated application of the principles of Jesus to these tangled world matters was the only way of the nations out of their tragic troubles. The seriousness of the Englishman, deepening into depression and pessimism; the temperamental resiliency and pluck of the Frenchman, and the dogged determination of the German, were vividly set forth: also the hatred too evident in France and Germany. Apropos of this, Brandes, the great Danish critic, speaking of the folly and waste of hatred, says that it is the native good sense of the Englishman that saves him from it. He adds that to hate those with whom you differ is small and silly. Will the nations learn the truth of that?

Officially Dr. Calley is in retirement from the pastorate, but not from the ministry, nor from practical, dependable Christianity. He is serving the First Church, Brocton, temporarily, and they are loving his wise head and warm heart.

Happenings in the City

Boston's pre-dominant interests now are three: the "armament" question, the prosecution and disbarment of certain legal officials and predatory lawyers, and the approaching city election. The first question of the three has us all enthralled—more so than a few years ago we were on "preparedness." Since then we have learned something. There is now a vast on-going propaganda for limitation of armaments in which men, women and children have a part. All the pulpits are aflame with it. In Tremont Temple Church, that congeries of institutions, one of the biggest of them is the great Brotherhood class lead by Past-master Lockrow, the men's man. They had an Armament Day on the 6th with a fiery and statesmanslike address by Dr. John H. Randall of New York. The air was electric with responsiveness as he faithfully analyzed the pessimism and hopefulness on the subject. But strongly he swung over the emphasis on the ground well of demand everywhere for sanity and peace, that even politicians and imperialists would have to hear. The Brotherhood unanimously sent a flat-footed resolution to Washington.

And the Ministers Also

Their meeting the next day was all alive and energetic on this burning question. They were happy in their chief speaker, Mrs. Lucia Ames Mead. Surely fullness is a prime qualification. She had it—the accumulation of many earnest years as an antagonist of war. She bristled on every side of the subject, especially under the fire of many questions. Think of the impression of that woman's mighty conviction, and masterly utterances, upon more than a hundred ministers! We appointed a committee to send our mandate to Washington. Limitation of armaments is the enthralling question, and only Marshal Foch will divert us for a time when he comes. Yet in him, true soldier as he is, our enthrallment will grow upon us.

To make the day complete, Dr. A. W. Beaven of Rochester, N. Y., the orator at the annual "Ladies' Night" of the Social Union, was on the same line, as he spoke of "The Churchman Facing the Future." The causes of the world's present disaster are so clear that our leaders become convinced and definite about the future. Avoidance of a worse disaster is imperative, and the way we must take plain enough for fools. That was the conviction Dr. Beaven created. Well may our prophets become bold in the awful clarity of the dark future before us unless Christian reason displaces heathen madness. It was a good forum for such a message—500 men and women, the cream of our churches.

Something Rather Puzzling

Wide attention was attracted by a published program of the "Unity Church"—a spiritualistic body that meets in Jordan Hall, of which Rev. F. A. Wiggin is the psychic pastor. He announced actual sermons from leading ministers long since deceased, he being the psychic messenger. Dr. Geo. C. Lorimer, it was claimed, is the first preacher. Joseph Cook is to be the next. It must be admitted that there was nothing in the whole service that was offensive even to a hearer like the writer who was there with deep doubt, and perhaps strong prejudice. The entire atmosphere was full of devoutness and propriety, and the unusual performance taken quite as a matter of course by 250 well appearing people. The sermon was built upon a text, was well constructed, and expressed with chaste and undemonstrative earnestness, in the main, the preacher's eyes closed. One perfectly familiar with Dr. Lorimer would never have detected him in the preaching, except as the announcement would make him suspect in some of the "messenger's" attitudes that he had heard and observed the great preacher when he was with us.

Well, what about this? Is it humbug? Is the "messenger" really sincere, but self-deceived? Or is it one more psychological puzzle? Anyhow the spiritualists got Christ's gospel in its wholesome reality; and we may be certain that Joseph Cook, if the messenger really hears him, will stiffen that gospel up with dogma. As an old friend and admirer of Dr. Lorimer, the writer must echo the verdict of the correspondent of the New York World who was present—"Dr. Lorimer was not as eloquent as he used to be!"

Syracuse Stewardship Campaign

October 30 was the climax of a month of stewardship training in the First Baptist Church of Syracuse, New York, and the results justified the careful planning and the enthusiastic work which filled the weeks. Rev. Bernard C. Clausen used the Sunday mornings of the month for a series of "Stewardship Sermons," on such themes as "The Acid Test of Discipleship," "A Modern Parable," "Money," "The Zero Hour"; the Wednesday night meetings were given over to stewardship discussions which were concluded by a masterly address on October 26 from Prof. William Gear Spencer of Franklin College on the theme "Jesus and Money"; a series of arguments by mail were dispatched to the entire mailing list of the church week by week, with a complete pamphlet of information on the campaign in the form of an imaginary conversation at an every-member visitation call with questions and answers, under the title "Good Afternoon." Meanwhile a board of strategy of five young business men and women had organized for the detail planning, and had called to their aid one of the leading advertising specialists of the city, who became so enthusiastic about the work that he begged to be let in on any other such campaign where he was needed. A committee of 200 had been drafted and organized, and through the whole month they met for supper discussions on Monday nights, taking up such subjects as "The Technique of the Budget," "The Organization of the Forces," "The Psychology of the Approach," "The Spiritual Objectives and the World Field." Last Sunday this committee had dinner together in the banquet hall of the church, and after making their own pledges (every committee member pledged and most of them greatly increased their amounts), they deployed under direction to all sections of the city, purposing to make 1,200 separate calls before nightfall.

The results to date are as follows: Last year there were 1,120 current expense pledges netting a weekly total in pledged amounts of $425. The first 700 pledges in this campaign brought the total pledged amounts to $500, with at least 550 prospective pledgers still to be heard from. Corresponding interest was manifest in the benevolent pledges. It is a matter of rejoicing in the city that the program of this church need not be curtailed by hard times, but that even in the midst of the depression substantial reductions in the mortgage may be effected.

Nebraska Convention

The annual session of the Nebraska Convention, at Norfolk, Oct. 8-13, reached a high mark as to attendance, program and inspiration.

Mr. McGorrell, at the B. Y. P. U. sessions, Dr. Stillwell at the Pastors' Conference on Evangelism, Dr. Axlung of Japan, and Dr. Fred Palmer, state secretary of Colorado, all made a profound impression on all by their splendid, inspiring presentation of truth.

The coming of Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery attracted many to the meeting and all who heard her were greatly blessed by her fearless, kindly presentation of our denominational situation. Her appeal was greatly strengthened by the address of Dr. J. Y. Atchison, our able general director, who gave an address on the New World Movement, conducted a round table and met the pastors for a conference. Those who caught his beautiful Christ-like spirit felt a new enthusiasm for the cause. Great causes are visualized and made vital by great personalities, and all felt that we are fortunate in having such a president and general director as we have.

One of the great sessions was that given over to Grand Island College. The new president, John Mason Wells, won the hearts of all and not for many years has confidence and enthusiasm in relation to the college been so marked as now. His addresses were scholarly, and presented with power and ability.

The convention finances were in fine condition, the balance being on the right side in every fund and plans laid for large missionary work in the days to come. Several state pastors took part in the program and those who heard them understood why their churches are proud of them. If their regular sermons are up to the convention samples their people are to be congratulated.

The spirit of unity, love, energetic determination and spiritual fervor made many put the convention down as the best in years.

At the meeting of the new board, Rev. F. W. Benjamin was elected director of small town and country churches, a place of great responsibility in a state predominately rural. His whole experience is such as to prepare him for effective service.

The convention was most appreciative of its new secretary, Dr. Fowle, expressing by public vote and personal message their love and confidence in his administration.

All were thankful to THE BAPTIST for letting us have Dr. Cleaves for several of the sessions. He spoke to the young people and to the pastors, in addition to speaking to the general meeting on "The Place of the Denominational Press in an Aggressive Church Program." He made friends for our paper both in public address and in privately mingling with the people.

The New Constitution of the Illinois Convention

By D. T. MAGILL

The new constitution is designed to give expression to a new purpose in the work of the state convention. The purpose seeks to unite the association, as such, more vitally to the convention. It also seeks to make the association a more vital force in its own field and in denominational enterprises.

The constitution recognizes the difference between the convention which is an annual, temporary but recurring body and the board of managers (formerly the board of directors) which is a continuing, and in the eyes of the law, a permanent body. The constitution has made a fundamental change in the composition of the board of managers. It is now to be constituted largely on the basis of representation. Each association (eighteen of them) is entitled to elect one representative on the board each year; each city mission organization (two of them) is entitled to elect one member of the board each year; the Woman's State Mission Society is entitled to elect six members of the board each year. In addition to the twenty-six representatives the board will have fifteen members at large, five being elected each year for a term of three years. The board will have forty-one members which is four less than formerly.

The constitution recognizes a difference between the board as a board of managers and the working force that will carry out the policies which the board has determined upon. The constitution has grouped this work into eight departments as follows: extension and conservation, promotion and finance, religious education, woman's work, rural work, laymen's activities, the ministry, co-operation and fellowship. Each of these departments is headed up with a director, some on salary and some without salary, who with the district superintendents and the general superintendent form a cabinet which is to meet monthly.

The constitution seeks to make it easy to follow a procedure which will secure the greatest efficiency in the work of the convention. The general superintendent in his cabinet will be in counsel with his field workers and the heads of the departments and will thus be in a position more easily to discern what is the necessary policy to pursue. He will bring the same to the board of managers, which, when accepted or modified comes to the cabinet. The cabinet will make the programs whereby it is to put into effect.

A Few Impressions of the New Jersey Convention

By CHAS. E. GOODALL

As I begin to jot down a few of my impressions of this great convention, I have a feeling that one must deal in superlatives if anything like justice is to be done to the ninety-second annual gathering of New Jersey Baptists.

The program sent out by the Newark office some weeks in advance gave promise of a host of speakers and topics rarely assembled at any previous convention. It was natural that the majority of the delegates should have gone with high hopes and as far as I could learn none went home disappointed. The president of the convention, F. Wayland Ayer, was heard to say more than once "that he had never known, in all his experience with New Jersey Baptists, a finer spirit" and this same sentiment was voiced by many an "old time delegate."

As one looks back attempting to find the cause for such a rare spirit it is difficult to pick any single force or factor that made possible the fine fellowship, the high degree of optimism and the firm determination to carry on our plans for the Kingdom. Perhaps the convention motto, "Our Best For Him," had something to do with it. It may in part have been produced by the opening address of President Ayer or Dr. Abernethy's challenge "To go beyond our present record—To always do more—To be like Paul, ABOUND." Some in trying to account for the best of all New Jersey's conventions give the credit to the New World Movement; not a few said that "the joyous Christian character of Dr. Holloway in his year's 'reign over us' and his co-operating with us had permeated all of us with a spirit of cheer and good will. Others believed that the devotional meditations, led by our beloved President Evans, had much to do in bringing us near to each other and the Father above. But whatever the cause every delegate agreed when the three days closed that each speaker and each topic seemed heaven-sent to hearten us for the greatest task yet before us—to "do our best for him" and win our dear old New Jersey to a New World standard of morality and life.

On the first afternoon the women met in the Chelsea Church. The reports of all work attempted in Americanization, White Cross, Children's World Crusade and the World Wide Guild, were most encouraging. The Home and Foreign Societies brought their share of a splendid year's achievements. The principal address was given by Mrs. Howard Wayne Smith on "Our Next Great Work." At the close of this session the women had a get-together supper.

On the same afternoon the pastors had their conference. The annual sermon was preached by the Rev. Frank MacDonald. Bro. MacDonald was in his finest and most winsome mood. Those of us who have known "Mac" since his student days always greatly enjoy the rare mingling of his rich Scotch accent with a brilliant humor and pathos to which he always adds a deep and earnest piety—in all of these he was not lacking on Monday afternoon. None of us went away disappointed. Surely after such a sermon we ministers will heed the word of the convention preacher and “boast in the Christ of the cross.”

As I look over the various sessions I do not think of any of them as featuring just one great phase of our work such as education or evangelism or of the New World Movement but rather of each session as co-operating with all the others in giving information concerning the Baptist advance—that is, what our churches and national societies had actually accomplished this last year, together with the presentation, from our trained experts of newer methods for a more efficient work in the days before and finally the inspiration for the greater task yet unaccomplished. These three great themes seemed to me to run through the whole convention and yet the machinery so necessary for successful convention building at no time evident.

Advance all Along the Line

For our Information we learned of advance in every department. Here are a few of the items: The expenditure of $65,520 for state work; the purchase and opening of the International Theological Seminary at East Orange, a school devoted to the training of our foreign-speaking pastors under the leadership of men like Pres. Frank L. Anderson and Professor Mangano; the excellent growth of the Peddie School with its present enrollment of over 350 boys; the providing in part for the salaries of forty-one men and six women now doing missionary work in our state; the educational department having aided thirty-one students, seventeen of these being in college, six in seminary; the Sunday-school work showing great advance—this department reporting the growth from eight to thirty-five teacher training classes; the vacation Bible Schools numbering eleven last year, are now thirty-four, giving a total of 4,422 boys and girls attending; the department of young people made mention of four junior conferences and a great growth in the summer assembly held annually at Hightstown in July. Three hundred and one delegates attended. 276 of whom stayed the full time and 200 were awarded certificates for faithfulness and attendance. At the assembly six young men decided to enter the Christian ministry and sixteen young people offered themselves for missionary service; the department of evangelism reported a great growth in local evangelistic services conducted by pastors and the passing of the professional evangelists in the New Jersey churches; there is a gain of 12 per cent in baptisms over last year twenty-three churches reporting one baptism for every ten of their membership. Over 60 per cent of our churches were engaged in special meetings during the Easter season and over 1000 were baptized on Easter day.

There are four other achievements that thrilled the hearts of all: The purchasing of our own convention building at 158 Washington St., Newark. The presentation to the convention of a unified and comprehensive program of activities and objectives, a plan in which all the departments and all our secretaries are able to co-operate. This program of advance was arranged after much prayer and deliberation by Secy. Holloway and his staff. Once more we New Jersey Baptists are being impressed by the statesmanlike leadership of Dr. Holloway. The third achievement is the magnificent support from all parts of our state to our New World Movement. Last year the churches contributed $162,000; this year $632,000 was given for missionary and educational work outside the local churches. Perhaps one of the wisest moves of our state board of managers during the year was the calling to our executive staff of Rev. J. Earl Edwards to take the oversight and leadership in our promotion work. It should be mentioned that the already increased pledges and the more thorough methods of collecting of the New World funds are but a small part of Mr. Edward's work so far. He has been laying some much-needed foundations which will bring accumulative values long after the particular movement is forgotten.

Just a word regarding the recommendations adopted by the convention.

First, those presented by the promotion board:

1: That we approve a continued effort in achieving the New World Movement by definitely seeking to enlist every member as a supporter of the local church budget and of the New World Movement, this to be secured through a careful and prayerful plan and thoroughly executed “Every Member Canvass.”

2: That we put forth every effort within our power to secure $1,500,000 in additional pledges before May 1, 1922. We have pledged $2,700,000, $1,000,000 cash to be paid by May 1, 1922, on our total pledge. This will bring us into line with the principle and plan of the $20,000,000 a year allotment, adopted by the Northern Baptist Convention at Des Moines.

3: We recommend the suggested unified plan of advance with objectives for the local church, our state and The New World Movement. In doing this, the board of managers will take this as its working program, and we recommend all of our churches to adopt this and adapt it as far as possible to their local needs. This program of unified activity, covering every phase of denominational life in New Jersey, has been planned by and for our state, and we request that it be given a hearty reception by our people.

Will Standardize the Ministry

A recommendation from the report of the committee of the standardization of the ministry: “The convention will decline to engage or continue to employ any missionary, or aid any church in the support of a pastor, who after Jan. 1, 1922, may be ordained without having met the requirements of the convention. A permanent convention committee consisting of one from each association and to serve for one year shall constitute the committee on pastoral education and ordination.” This last recommendation is one long needed and is expected to do away with the easy manner in which so often those totally unprepared for the Christian ministry have been ordained in our state.

In giving my impression of the inspirational addresses at the convention I am at a loss where to begin and fear if I start it will be a long story for I have no desire to omit any. I do wish we might have them all word for word, but I cannot attempt that here for while the editor of THE BAPTIST is my friend I know he will soon call time if he has not already done so.

Dr. Franklin's title: “The Terrifying Responsibility of Saving the World” is in itself worth thinking about. These are some of the things for which our foreign secretary pleaded: “An atmosphere of brotherhood,” “The Church to keep Christ at the center of its thought and activity,” “A single standard of righteousness among the nations,” no use asking Japan to get out of China if we do not ask the white nations also,” “America first if it is the ‘First to the Rescue.’”

Dr. Carter Helm James: “Personal evangelism is the introduction of a soul to Jesus.” We cannot delegate to others personal evangelism. The classic texts are “He brought him to Jesus,” “Go, as ye go preach.” “To be a personal evangelist one must be a great believer, a great lover and a great strategist.”

Dr. Holloway: “The minister is in a centrally significant position. If America is to be saved it is through the evangelistic Protestant churches. The preacher holds the keys to the situation. God's noblest contribution has been the contribution of the greatest preachers or prophets. The printing press cannot supplant the preacher. Let us guard the door of entrance into the ministry—keep out the morally lax and emotionally superficial.”

Baptist Week in Cleveland

The second week in October was notable in the life of Cleveland Baptists. During this week all of the churches in the city united in a series of meetings in the Euclid Avenue Church to consider the whole work of the whole church. The union of all the churches for one week in earnest consideration of every phase of church life and activity, the fellowship of the churches during this week, and the united prayers of the churches produced a deep impression and was of immeasurable value. The attendance was large, the messages were of a high quality, and the spirit of prayer and devotion grew from beginning to end.

Three causes contributed to give significance to this week:

1—The thought of preparation was kept constantly in the foreground. The week was planned to secure preparation for better work in the Sunday schools and among the young people, for the deepening of the spiritual life, and for the furnishing of inspiration for the beginning of the evangelistic work of the year. The meeting was held early in the fall in order that all the churches might gain impetus for the beginning of their fall and winter work. The meeting was planned to help, to start, and to quicken the churches in their work. Such a purpose running through the week produced unconsciously a deep impression upon the life of our churches.

2—Baptist week in Cleveland was made significant through the service rendered by some of our denominational leaders. Dr. Raffety and Miss Brockway, Miss Jesse Burrall, Dr. Otto, Prof. Anderson, Dr. Stillwell and Dr. Chambers brought to our churches just the light and inspiration that was needed. Not only were the addresses of high inspirational value, but the element of conference was given a large place in their work. Opportunity was afforded for questions relating to the work and free discussion was evoked. This highly practical method produced most beneficial results.

3—Pre-eminence was given to the spiritual life in Baptist week in Cleveland. The devotional hour was led each day by Dr. John H. Strong. The heart of the whole week was reached on Wednesday night in “An Old Fashioned Prayer Meeting.” On this night Dr. Strong simply led the meeting without making an address, and for fifty minutes one after another led in earnest prayer. A new conception of the power of united prayer came to many members on that night, and back into the individual churches will go new power for the prayer life of the churches. The meetings came to a fitting close on Sunday evening, when Dr. Strong spoke to a thousand young people in the Euclid Avenue Church on "Friendship with Jesus," and then all united in a monster evangelistic mass meeting in the Masonic Temple. At this service Dr. Bustard preached to 4,000 people and many hundreds were turned away because there were not even standing room. Such a great throng pressing into a religious service produced a profound impression upon the life of our whole denomination in the city. The results of the meetings justified the faith of those who planned for them, and the expectation is that "Baptist Week" will become a part of our church life year after year and that it will have increasing power.—Alonzo R. Stark.

The Maritime Baptist Convention.

By A. C. CHUTE

This body met toward the end of October with the Brunswick Street Baptist Church of Fredericton, N. B.—an ideal church and an ideal city in which to hold a convention. The present pastor is Rev. G. C. Warren. The church has always been missionary in its character. It was founded in 1814, the year Maritime Baptists made their first contribution to foreign missionary work, and the year in which Baptists of the United States were organized, after Adoniram Judson's denominational change, into what became known as the American Baptist Missionary Union. From this church came our first foreign missionary, Rev. R. E. Burpee, who went to Burma in 1845. Rev. Arthur Crawley, was our second foreign missionary, and his son, Rev. F. D. Crawley, after oversight of this church for thirteen years, was twelve years in charge of the English Baptist Church at Moulmein in Burma. By this Fredericton church, Rev. E. W. Kelly, pastor at Rangoon, Burma, was licensed to preach. Another of its members long and faithfully served the colored people of the Southern States—Rev. Charles H. Corey. Another of its pastors was Rev. T. H. Porter, whose son, Rev. Henry Alford Porter, is in the pastorate at Atlanta, Ga. This gifted son of an honored father was in attendance at this convention, and conducted the devotional meetings preceding all the sessions, and delivered addresses of such power and so full of enrichment, that they cannot soon be forgotten by those who heard them.

Retiring President Speaks

The address of the retiring president, Dr. J. H. MacDonald, of Wolfville, the seat of our university, urged the strengthening of the theological department at Acadia, and also recommended a summer school for ministers at Wolfville. Rev. L. L. Fash, of the George Street Church, Fredericton, was chosen to succeed Dr. MacDonald as presiding officer.

The convention sermon was preached by Rev. Simeon Spidle of Acadia, upon "The Christian's Calling," a strong and fitting message.

The report of the governors of Acadia called attention to several notable things connected with the year gone. The enrollment of the college was the largest of any year in its history. At the three institutions the number exceeded 1000. The year would be remembered, especially by the loss sustained through destruction of the main building by fire. The new Memorial Gymnasium, erected to the memory of our students who had fallen in the late war, had been dedicated. The Million Dollar Campaign had been begun, but it was not just now being pushed owing to the unfavorable financial conditions. Reference was made to the loss sustained by the death of Dr. J. F. Tufts, for nearly a half century on the teaching staff of the university.

Passed the Five-Year Goal

The Five Year Program Committee could report that the financial goal, set five years ago, $100,000 for denominational work, had been passed; and also that the educational goal of 1000 students for Acadia had been exceeded. Advance in social service has been made by taking our place alongside the other religious bodies in the support of what is known as the Maritime Home for Girls. In respect to evangelism we have fallen considerably short of what was proposed. The address of Dr. De Wolfe, Chairman of the Five Year Program Committee, was a forceful appeal to attend more vigorously to this part of our obligation.

In reporting on the state of the denomination, Rev. R. O. Morse, editor of The Maritime Baptist, spoke especially of that shortage of ministerial students, giving as reasons for this, lack of prayer for laborers, lack of strong family religion, and lack of appreciation of manhood in the ministry.

The report of the Foreign Mission Board was presented by Rev. H. E. Stillwell. Eleven new missionaries have enlisted for service, seven for India and four for Bolivia, our two fields of labor. One hundred and ten missionaries now represent Canadian Baptists in this service. They are aided by over 700 native preachers, teachers, Bible women and medical assistants. Last year 1664 converts were baptized. Seven hospitals and eight dispensaries are maintained. The board shares with American Baptists in the support of the Theological Seminary at Ramapatam. The platform meeting in the interests of foreign missions was addressed by missionaries now on furlough. The address of the secretary of the Canadian Baptist Foreign Mission Board, Mr. Stillwell, was a ringing call to more heroic endeavor.

In home mission work the year has been a good one. About 70 per cent of the fields report baptisms. The number available for the manning of the fields has been inadequate. Rev. E. Bosworth presented the report of the Grande-Ligue Mission, showing that the year had been one of divine favor and encouragement.

Next year the convention will meet at Wolfville. Indeed that will hereafter be the fixed place of meeting every second year, provided no invitation comes from elsewhere in Nova Scotia, and in New Brunswick the alternate year, provided a suitable place can be found for it. The date of meeting will be prior to the opening in early autumn of the academy and seminary.

At the time of this writing we have just heard of the entrance of death into the ranks of our beloved missionaries in India. On Friday, Oct. 28, Mrs. R. E. Gullison passed to her reward.

Bates College

Dr. Clifton D. Gray, who entered upon his duties May 1, 1920, as third president of Bates College, Lewiston, Maine, is much pleased with the prospect for the year. The fifty-ninth year opened in September with the largest registration in the history of the institution—556. Several new members are added to the teaching staff, as follows: Dr. Walter A. Lawrence, a graduate of McMaster University and a recent doctor of the University of Toronto, succeeds the late Dr. Lyman G. Jordan as head of the Chemistry department. Mr. Chester A. Jenkins, a graduate of Dartmouth and for several years a teacher in the Huntington School, Boston, becomes assistant professor of Chemistry. Mr. Arthur L. Purinton, son of Professor H. R. Purinton, has been made secretary of the college Y. M. C. A.; Mr. Purinton is a graduate of Bates in the class of '17 and has for the last three years been "Y" secretary in Beverly, Mass. Mr. Angell Mathewson, a graduate of Hamilton College, N. Y., becomes instructor in Freshman English. Mr. C. Floyd Whitcomb comes to Bates from the University of Maine as instructor in French and Spanish. Mr. Raymond A. Watkins, a graduate of Colgate University, is the new assistant director of Physical Education for the men. Professor Fred E. Pomeroy, head of the department of Biology, has been made Dean of Men. Miss Lena M. Niles, director of Hygiene for the women, has been appointed Acting Dean of Women for the year. Professor Samuel F. Harms, with Mrs. Harms and their daughter Dorothy, is spending the year in Madrid, preparing himself for the position of head of the Spanish department. On September 27 Dean Shailer Mathews of the University of Chicago gave the first lecture of the year in the George Colby Chase Course, upon "The Validity of American Ideals."

Bacone College

Bacone College, Bacone, Oklahoma, our only school for American Indians, entered upon the forty-first year of its career September 7, when the opening exercises were held in the chapel of Rockefeller Hall. An impressive religious service was conducted by President B. D. Weeks, and the address was delivered by Miss Alice M. Robertson, woman congress-woman from Oklahoma. Of all the speakers who are heard from time to time at Bacone none receives a heartier welcome than Miss Robertson, and her presence at the opening exercises was especially appreciated by the students and faculty. Few persons know and love Indians as Miss Robertson. Born in an Indian Mission of parents who gave their lives to missionary work among the original Americans, an Indian missionary herself, her words served as an inspiring influence to members of the faculty and of the student body as they faced together the year's work.

Approximately 350 applications for admission to the school this year. Of this number only 218 could be admitted. This number crowds the equipment of the school to its utmost capacity. Twenty-one different Indian tribes from five different states constitute the student body. If there were space in the dormitories where more students could be suitably housed they would be admitted, but until the equipment is enlarged considerably more than the present plans provide Bacone must continue to turn away from its doors each year hundreds of students who seek admission. A government official recently remarked: "Every Indian student turned away from Bacone means the loss of another citizen to civilization."

Several changes in the faculty are noted. Mr. Leon W. Perkins, of Bates College, is the new head of the science department, and vice-president of the school, Miss Grace Field, of Kalamazoo College, becomes head of the English Department, and Miss Mary Cook of Greenville, Pa., is the new head of the History Department. Miss Mary Frances White, of Los Angeles, is head of Home Economics.

The religious activities on the campus have been organized for the year. In the place of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A. a strong Baptist Young People's Union has been substituted and is doing most efficient work. Just recently a series of special meetings were held and thirty-eight students were baptized. Only three students in the entire student body are not professed Christians.

The Samuel Richard Memorial, new administration building, costing $158,000, is now in course of construction, and will be completed January first. A new boys' dormitory will be erected at once, money being provided by the Indians, but the school is sorely in need of at least two more dormitories.

Educational Institute in Akron

A religious educational institute held in Akron, October 23-26, under the auspices of the Akron Association, the Ohio Convention and the Publication Society proved to be one of the most helpful interesting and inspirational meetings ever held in the First Church.

The institute opened Sunday afternoon with a big mass meeting at which time all of the faculty were introduced to the Akron audience and Miss Meme Brockway gave her celebrated address, "A Visitor from Mars." Miss Brockway captivated her audience of over five hundred people with her charming manner of presenting her subject which not only made them see how ridiculous we run some of our Sunday schools, but also stimulated thought to do better things in the future.

Classes were held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday afternoons and evenings from 3:30-5:15. Two of our national societies were represented on the faculty and there were also two of our state workers in Ohio. Miss Brockway, Dr. H. Edward Tralle, Rev. Thos. B. Frizelle and Dr. Behan were from the Publication Society; Miss Bennett, who is district worker in Ohio and Indiana, represented the women's work; and Mr. Wilson A. Holmes, state director of religious education with Miss Nellie Dunham, children's work director, were present from the state office. Miss Brockway had a course on children's methods and one on story telling; Dr. Behan had the Bible Hour and a course on adult class organization; Mr. Frizelle—young people's society work; Miss Dunham—junior society work; Mr. Holmes—pedagogy and intermediate work; Dr. Tralle—principles of effective teaching and organizing the church for religious education.

Every church in the Akron Baptist Association had a good delegation present at each session. Many workers received a new vision of the work before them; others resolved to become workers in their church; and all received a great blessing from the feast that was so generously provided for hungry willing Christian workers in God's Kingdom. The total attendance was 2,347. Miss Miriam L. Hastings was chairman of the local committee on arrangements.

Rev. Wesley F. Disette, for several years pastor at South Haven, Mich., has accepted the call of the Temple Church, Chicago, and will begin work on Jan. 1.

Dr. Mullins and Mrs. Montgomery Speak at Stephens College

Dr. E. Y. Mullins, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, and Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, president of the Northern Baptist Convention, were the guests of Stephens College, Mo., November 6 to 9. During the three-days' conference the students of the college had the privilege of hearing inspirational addresses by Mrs. Montgomery and Dr. Mullins.

DR. MULLINS AND MRS. MONTGOMERY

For the first time in the history of American Baptists the presidents of the two great conventions appeared upon the same platform at the same time for the same purpose.

Mrs. Montgomery had already endeared herself to the hearts of all Stephens College students through the "discovery" of Miss Burrall. But her visit to the college and her enthusiastic talks on Christian life and the spirit of missions, together with her own gracious personality, converted admiration and esteem into cordial Christian affection.

Dr. Mullins preached the baccalaureate sermon at the college last June, but his presence with the students and faculty for three days this month brought him immeasurably nearer to them in spirit.

Woman's Board Meets

The executive board of the Woman's Baptist Mission Society of Michigan met Tuesday morning, Nov. 8. Owing to the president's absence, Mrs. W. P. Lovett, vice president, presided.

The resignation of Mrs. Z. Grenell, who has moved to La Grange, Ill., was accepted with regret.

Mrs. Bowen, after an absence due to illness, was in her place, for which all were glad. About $150,000 is our denominational objective for Union College fund. It is hoped to have Mrs. Wadsworth in Michigan after holidays. The Misses Grace and Martha Mills, who are at present working in the Philippine Islands, have been adopted by Central District for 1922. Mrs. Bowen emphasized the call to prayer each day at noon during the conference in Washington for limited armament.

Miss Howell, children's secretary-director, reported that Mrs. H. J. Osborne has been appointed associational children's secretary for Kalamazoo River and Mrs. W. Montgomery the same for Grand Traverse Association. A new band of Crusaders has been organized in Jefferson Avenue Church, Detroit, also one at Polish Mission, Detroit.

Miss Cooper is very happy about the opening of the negro center in Detroit. The women of the Detroit churches gave over $700 for equipment. Mr. Sherman Lister donated a fine Victrola. They now want records. The Detroit city missionaries are anxious to start the reading contest among their people, and $10 was voted to buy books for the same. Many cases of destitution are known to our missionaries. All wishing to help may communicate with them.

Mrs. Dorrance, chairman of the Christian Americanization committee, reported a meeting held the week before when Miss Brimson was present. It is hoped to have Miss Brimson in Michigan a month either in February or March. In the meantime it is hoped to have a strong committee in every church.

The field committee reported that Mrs. Hurd had been at Battle Creek and Rollin. Miss Alexander, Miss Bistor and Mrs. Smith spoke in two Detroit churches.

The Woodward Ave. ladies are pushing the reading contest. They have eight classes of young women lined up with the older ladies.

A motion was made by Miss Heaton and carried that the chairman of the national reading contest committee be communicated with and that she be requested to place THE BAPTIST in next year's list.

The White Cross committee reported that forty-eight churches participated during the year in sending forty boxes to Dr. Timpany's hospital, South India, valued at $620.79; two boxes to mother and four boxes to Alaska. There have undoubtedly been more boxes sent, but not reported.

JANET BURGESS, Cor. Secy.

Illinois Baptist Convention

By D. O. HOPKINS

The seventy-seventh meeting of the Illinois Baptist State Convention was held at a point as far north as any such meeting can ever be. The beautiful city of Rockford made this gathering possible. The meeting place was the newly erected building of the First Baptist Church. No building could be more adequate. There were rooms especially designated for the general superintendent, press reporter, district superintendents, for men and women to rest, committees, board meetings, banquets, etc.

With the exception of Monday night, when the Baptist tribes were coming from the east, south and west, the weather proved itself invigorating for men and women who are facing the Baptist task. More people drove in cars this year than ever before. These self-propelling vehicles proclaim Baptists are prospering and do not want to travel on a slow gait. The attendance at the meetings was large, although the registered delegates were not as many as last year.

It was a convention long to be remembered for serious thinking and serious action. People were present to transact business. Board meetings occupied the attention of its members day and night. It is an era of transition in convention affairs. Large changes will take place in the work of the state. The constitution was radically changed to meet the growing needs. The board of managers hereafter will be more representative of the entire state. Cabinet meetings will be held about eight times a year when the need of the whole state will be kept in mind as the working force of the convention plan their activities. This will deepen the fellowship of the workers and add to the efficiency of the work. A new general superintendent is anticipated in the near future to be the guiding hand in the making of this commonwealth Christian.

The sessions themselves were inspiring. Outstanding addresses were delivered. The two sermons preached by Dr. Truex of Mt. Vernon and Dr. Stair of Chicago were thoughtful, timely, and transparent. Dr. Williams in behalf of his race made an eloquent address. A vein of humor ran through his speech like a silken thread. His unusual large audience was captivated by the rich personality he possesses. Dr. Earl of St. Paul fearlessly presented the cause of Christian education. He was glad to be in Illinois once more. We were constrained to believe that education is a selective process. Concrete illustrations made his thesis illuminating. The address was characterized by the presiding officer "as something doing all the time." Mrs. George Caleb Moor, New York, represented the Promotion Board. She was given the closest of attention. She is a winsome speaker. If nothing else had occurred, it would have paid every delegate to attend just to hear the man and see the pictures. Dr. Vinton is a master artist. The pictures were par excellence. Our task as a people was visualized. This silent art and the persuasive voice reached the soul, and its latent powers, both through the eye and ear gate.

The president of the Northern Baptist Convention. What can be said about her?

She enriches the meetings. She has never yet been known to be uninteresting. Mrs. Montgomery unassuming, consecrated, with a spiritual horizon as wide as the world, dealt with the vital task of the denomination. She deplored dissension, and called for an united action. Service is bigger than creed. Mountains of division, doubt and indifference can be overcome by our faith.

One of the most impressive sessions was the Convention Night. The platform was decorated by those in the immediate service of the convention. Dr. Brand made his final report as the general superintendent. The year had been best in the history of the state. Over thirteen hundred people had been added to the churches through the efforts of the general workers and missionaries. A large surplus is in the treasury to begin the year's work. Each of the employees of the convention tersely reported the work of the year.

The board of managers presented to the large congregation resolutions in behalf of Dr. Brand. These were adopted by a loud acclamation. They spoke of his business sagacity, integrity, sacrifice, Christian spirit and love. The superintendent fittingly responded and thanked the delegates for their deep appreciation. Next to the Invisible Companion he beautifully paid his tribute to the one that has made possible the work of the twenty-three years of service. Mrs. Brand was led to the platform and extemporaneously made one of the best speeches of her life. The Doctor is still to be the secretary of the property which the convention owns. That Convention Night will long be remembered in the annals of our history.

The general banquet was largely attended and all the "toasters" made it brown. Dr. Potter was re-elected president; R. S. Carman, secretary. From Rockford we shall go to visit the saints at Centralia in 1922.

bor, Larrabee, Starboard and Hoyt Town one of his characteristic campaigns. His intention is to carry the gospel by personal visits into every home in the community. His earnest, brotherly and unflinching presentation of the gospel convinced and won many hearts.

CONNECTICUT

THE COMMITTEE ON MINISTERIAL STANDING appointed at the State Convention consists of Rev. D. B. MacQueen, Bridgeport; Rev. D. A. Pitt, Norwich, for three years; Rev. P. F. Wolfenden, Meriden; Rev. J. C. Stoddard, Putnam, for two years; Rev. J. G. Osborne, Mystic; Rev. H. B. Hutchins, Hartford, for one year.

REV. J. C. STODDARD is being greatly blessed in his work with the First Church, Putnam. On November 6 he baptized four converts; the following Sunday he baptized fourteen. Eight have been received by letter. Two Bible schools have been opened at Quadic and Pomfret Landing, respectively. These schools are being manned by workers from the First Church. The pastor personally cares for the work at East Thompson, in addition to his work in the city. The county Y. M. C. A. recently held a father and son banquet in the church, when 250 men and boys were present. Rev. Richard LaRue Swain is expected to deliver a series of lectures in the First Church November 27-December 1, with a view to "Meeting a New Need in a New Way."

FIRST, BRISTOL, held a farewell reception for Rev. and Mrs. H. D. Coe, October 28. Representatives of the church, and the mayor of the city spoke in the highest terms of Mr. Coe's work during his six years' pastorate. The church presented Mr. and Mrs. Coe with a purse of gold. Rev. R. Maplesden has become the stated supply of the church.

THE GERMAN CHURCHES held their New England Missionary Conference with the German Church in Meriden, October 30. Speakers were Rev. E. E. Gates, Rev. W. T. Thayer, Hartford; Mr. J. Luebeck, New Britain, and Rev. J. Kaaz, New Haven.

BLUE HILLS CHURCH observed its first anniversary on Wednesday, November 2, Baptist interests state-wide and Hartford-wise were represented by Dr. J. N. Lackey, Rev. W. T. Thayer, Rev. M. W. Schuh, Wm. J. Reid, Rev. H. B. Hutchins, Rev. H. J. White.

REV. WM. J. BARNES, Stamford, first began on November 6 a series of Sunday evening sermon-talks on "A Drama in Real Life."

EASTERN PENNSYLVANIA

REV. JOHN P. LAFFERTY has closed his work at the Olivet Church, Norristown, and will become pastor of a Union Church at Swedeland, where he is principal of the public schools.

IN RESPONSE to the request of President Harding, Crozer Theological Seminary observed Armistice Day as a day of prayer and conference. Special services were held led by Prof. E. B. Pollard. Addresses were delivered by Prof. Henry C. Vedder and President Milton G. Evans. At twelve o'clock there was a period of silent prayer after which Prof. Spencer B. Meesser led in an earnest petition for the blessing of God upon the Conference for the Limitation of Armaments.

BEREAN CHURCH, Carbondale, has extended a call to Rev. Frank Stanton of Salem, N. J. He has accepted and will begin his new work December 1.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Atlantic Coast

MAINE

CALAIS SECOND: The work of pastor and Mrs. W. S. Boardman is opening in a normal and very hopeful way. Every department, church attendance, Sunday school, young people's society, men's Bible class, the women's societies, etc., shows a gratifying and steady increase. This church was one of those that went over the top in the New World Movement and proposes to do its full share in every forward work. A very substantial contribution to "fill a ship in fellowship," was sent by this church. A strong force of Minute Men with Hon. Ashley St. Clair, lately of the Governor's Council, at their head will give good counsel from Sunday to Sunday as to the progress and business of the kingdom in the world. On Armistice Sunday the pastor preached on the theme, "Should the World Disarm?"

MILO: Evangelists Harry Taylor and his daughter Ruth have been conducting union evangelistic services in Milo for the past three weeks. Quietly, persuasively, but very clearly have the people been led to see the facts of their personal responsibility to God and man. As a result over 100 cards declaring a purpose to lead the Christian life have been signed, but Hon. E. M. Hamlin a great hearted Christian layman, who brings his great business ability into his constant service of the church, and his Christian principles into all his business, says that the signing of the cards is one of the lesser features in a work that has uplifted the whole community. Mr. Hamlin is manager of the mills and lumber operations of the American Thread Company. Pastor Frohock is giving a strong, constructive, wise leadership to the church that makes possible such fruitage as has been described.

BUCK'S HARBOR: Evangelist E. A. Davis has been carrying forward at Buck's Har-

CARMEL CHURCH, M. V. S. Gold, pastor, sent a box of clothing valued $195 for the needy ones of Europe. Pastor Gold has been with the church over four years. A number of good members have been added to the church. Repairs to the church property have been made at a cost of about $1,000. We have a good Sunday school and prayer meetings, and are doing what we can for the $100,000,000.—ALBERT BACON, clerk.

NEW JERSEY

MOUNT PLEASANT, Newark: Sunday, Nov. 6, Pastor Powell began the fifth year of his pastorate at Mt. Pleasant. The church was filled at the communion service, when four received the hand of fellowship. The years have been very successful, the membership has increased by nearly 300 members. The income of the church has increased five hundred per cent. An old mortgage of $30,000 has been cut in half and it is expected that the remaining $15,000 will be fully paid in the next two or three years.

MT. PLEASANT CHURCH launched a Pocket Testament League campaign, beginning Nov. 13, preparatory to an evangelistic campaign in the church, when Pastor Powell and Rev. Edmont P. Hains, cornetist, soloist, and choir leader, will hold a series from November 20 to December 4, inclusive.

WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

REV. W. A. WISSINGER, pastor of the Salem Church, is holding special evangelistic services in the church. Marked interest is being manifested and both pastor and people hope for an awakening of the church and many conversions.

CHARLEROI CHURCH, Rev. H. P. Woodrow, pastor, began a fortnight's evangelistic meetings, Wednesday, Nov. 9. Rev. Chas. E. Embrey of the Mt. Washington Church is assisting.

SEVEN NEW MEMBERS were received by the New Kensington Church, Dr. A. J. Meek, pastor, Sunday, October 30. The following Wednesday evening three were baptized, a mother and her two daughters.

RANKIN MISSION has recently organized a Boy Scout troop with twenty-five enrolled to date. The present building is wholly inadequate to care for that number and the board of education of Rankin generously offered the gymnasium of the public school one night a week for their use. Mr. Forest Winder, of the Wilkinsburg Church, has charge of the work.

DR. H. J. WHALEN, of Greensburg, began his series of lectures on Baptist history last Monday with the Duquesne Church, Rev. W. V. Bacon, pastor. Six lectures on six successive Monday evenings make up the course.

DUQUESNE has adopted as a goal for its evangelistic efforts for the year, the number equaling one-fifth of the membership.

BELLEVIEW, Rev. Chas. A. Decker, pastor, surpassed all its church school records, Sunday, October 30.

THE EVENING SERVICE, Sunday, Oct. 30, at the Donora Church, Rev. S. M. Smith, pastor, resulted in ten conversions.

MONESSEN, Rev. W. W. Anderson, pastor, reports 100 per cent present at the church school, Sunday, October 30, with a special offering of over $200. The Home Department presented a pageant showing all the types who can join that department and profit from it.

AT A SPECIAL MEETING of the congregation of the Memorial Baptist Church, Main street, on Sunday night the resignation of the pastor, the Rev. J. Dwight Roberts, was accepted at his own request.

NEW YORK

"Pioneering in Religious Advertising"

Ministers who come from the Rochester Theological Seminary are to have instruction in religious advertising. A course on Religious Publicity, with special reference to advertising and the relations of churches and newspapers, has been introduced into the program for the current Seminary year. In this respect Rochester Seminary is leading the way.

This course is to be given by Rev. Charles A. McAlpine, of New York, City, whose work in the field of religious publicity has been well known for several years. Mr. McAlpine is himself a graduate of Rochester and has had success in the pastorate and as executive secretary of the Baptist Missionary Convention of the state of New York. In the field of advertising he was publicity secretary of the Northern Baptists in their Victory Campaign in 1919, and has been director of advertising for the Northern Baptist Convention ever since its One Hundred Million Dollar Campaign was inaugurated. He is director of publicity for the American Bible Society, and acts as a general counsel in religious publicity.

Mississippi Valley

WEST VIRGINIA

PASTOR E. L. DAKIN at the Baptist Temple, Charleston, in the fertility of his resources is always on hand with something new and a little in advance of the crowd. One of his latest is a series of six conferences with men on vital themes. Another is the publication by the Young People's Council of a multigraphed type-written bulletin called the Handclaps.

OHIO

OBERLIN: Dr. J. W. Weddell gave the hand of fellowship to fourteen at his closing communion service with his church, most of them student associate members. One of them, Miss Grace Sweet, was the Chinese representative at the Des Moines meeting. She is now pursuing studies at the conservatory. Dr. Weddell, following Bible studies Nov. 8-11 at Toledo, closes his work here in Oberlin the middle of the month, accompanied by the prayers of his people. He goes to Marietta Nov. 16.

MARIETTA: Pastor Stull is called to the directorship of evangelism in the New Ohio plan of pastoral intervisitation, and Dr. J. W. Weddell of Oberlin has been asked to serve as acting pastor for the ensuing six months.

FIRST, MIDDLEPORT, is rejoicing over the greatest spiritual refreshing in its history, in a ten-days' evangelistic campaign conducted by Dr. Franklin W. Swift, of Rochelle, Illinois. Eighty decisions were made for Christ and church membership, two-thirds of the number being heads of families. At the church prayer meeting, following the campaign, 114 were present, twenty-five received for baptism, twelve on their experience and several letters and many more are to follow. The church was never so aroused.

ILLINOIS

FIRST CHURCH, Austin, Judson B. Thomas, pastor, celebrated its fiftieth anniversary, October 5-9.

EVANGELIST AND MRS. JONES EARL CORWIN began meeting with Pastor I. C. Lough at Muncie on November 14. This campaign will be followed by one at Pierston beginning December 5. They have some open dates after January first and pastors desiring their assistance should address them at Flora, Ill.

REV. J. C. ORANGER recently closed a successful pastorate with the Rock Island First Church. This church has now a membership of 600 and a Sunday school attendance of about 450. Mr. Oranger goes to the important field at Hammond, Ind. He has rendered an effective ministry in the direction of evangelism and his new field will offer splendid opportunities for the exercise of these gifts. His going is a loss to Illinois, but a gain for Indiana.

REV. R. B. FAVORIGHT of Jerseyville reports an attendance at the prayer meeting of 250. The service begins with a supper at 6:30; a chorus choir of forty young people and a junior choir of a similar number furnish special music. At the regular Sunday services the house is filled and the spirit of the revival recently held permeates all the work of this church.

A HAPPY FEATURE of the fall work of State Street Church, Rockford, is the outgoing of its first missionary, Miss Marion J. Tait, a graduate of DeKalb State Normal, the Chicago Training School, and the University of Chicago. She sails this month for Assam. The church organizations contributed work and money in providing her with her outfit and at a special church supper gave her a shower of not merely clothing and linens, but trunks, suitcase, typewriter, kodak, fountain pens, and pencils, writing case, metal vacuum and hot water bottles, tropical umbrella, etc. Every department of the Sunday school from tiniest tots up to adult classes offered their gifts. The church has voted to assume the entire expense of Miss Tait's home and field salary, steamer passage, outfit allowance, and language teacher, and has appointed her as its missionary pastor, on the paid staff of the church, and has publicly consecrated her in a most impressive service. Sunday evening, October 30, Miss Tait presented the challenge of the mission field to the young people. The church already numbers several volunteers in its membership.

WHEATON CHURCH for the second year opened the season's work with a one hundred per cent week. Every evening during the week some department of the church had special features. The two outstanding events were the parish supper at which nearly 300 sat down to well filled tables and enjoyed a fine program and the one hundred per cent Sunday when each service was crowded and inspiring. The Sunday school surpassed all previous records in attendance. Dr. Ford is finding this one of his most interesting pastorates.

BLOOMINGTON ASSOCIATION: Rev. O. P. Miles of Nebraska has accepted a call to the first Baptist Church of Clinton. This church has had many additions under its former pastor, S. B. Dexter, and is now one of the aggressive churches of the state.

NINE MILE ASSOCIATION in the southern part of the state at its recent meeting took action in the "most kindly and fraternal spirit" recommending that the Carbondale Church seek associational fellowship elsewhere. The Carbondale Church is the only one in the association which affiliates with the Northern Baptist Convention, hence this action. Doubtless it will soon comply with the suggestion.

REV. HENRY MOUNCE of Petersburg was recently called to become pastor at Oreana and is now on the field. The call carries with it an increase in salary of $200 more than this church has ever paid before.

REV. S. B. DEXTER has closed his work at Clinton and is now pastor at Lincoln. Rev. G. W. Kimball, the retiring pastor at Lincoln continues to live there and is engaged in community work.

MEETINGS were recently held at Union Chapel near Danville which resulted in reorganization of the Sunday school and arrangements for occasional service. Several were converted.

ONE MONTH after the dedication of the new church building, the North Shore Church of Chicago revealed its spiritual health. A goal of fifty new members for the first communion service had been set. The pastor, Wm. H. Jones, welcomed into the fellowship of the church fifty-five. "Now—watch us grow" is the church slogan.

BELLEVIEW, FIRST, Pastor J. H. Martin, assisted by Rev. J. B. Little, had special meetings with twenty additions.

WISCONSIN

GRACE CHURCH, MILWAUKEE. Annual meeting was held Oct. 1. It was the best in the history of the church. All departments gave most encouraging reports. The Young People's Union is most flourishing

Hudson Avenue congregation, Detroit, is about to build an $80,000 structure on Grand River Avenue. We are the only Baptist Church among 200,000 people. We need help and want 10,000 Baptists to send $1 each. Send to

Rev. Robert White, Pastor
4024 Euclid Avenue, W.
Detroit, Mich.

This Girl is a Wonder

Do you want more money than you ever possessed? If so, learn to make nut and fruit bonbons—the business will net you $90.00 to $300.00 per month. You can work from your own home; all who sample your bonbons become regular customers. Mary Elizabeth started her candy kitchen with $5.00 and has made a fortune. Cannot you do likewise? I will tell you all about the business and help you start, so you can become independent. Now is the psychological time to make big money, as sugar is cheaper and fine bonbons command phenomenal prices. Write today. Isabelle Incz, 43 Morewood Building, Pittsburgh, Pa.

and alive. Ten of our choice young people are in the state university of other institutions. The report of the treasurer showed all bills paid and a good balance in the treasury. About fifty new members were received during the year. Nov. 1 the church had the pleasure of dedicating a new pipe organ costing over $5,000. Another encouraging feature is that the church is paying nearly as much for the New World Movement as for church expenses. The prayer meetings are unusually well attended. The pastor, S. W. Phelps, is just beginning the fifth year of his pastorate with Grace Church. The women of the church recently surprised Mrs. Phelps by presenting to her a purse containing sixty one-dollar bills.

MINNESOTA

FIRST, ST. PAUL, John A. Earl, pastor: Miss Gertrude Bennetts and Mr. H. S. Westlund were united in marriage Oct. 12.

FIRST, REDLANDS, J. Fraser Langford, pastor, opened its fourth annual session of the school of missions with the greatest attendance of students in its history. On the night of October 16, at 6:15, there were 402 in attendance in all the classes on the opening night. This auspicious opening was prepared for by months of painstaking efforts on the part of the educational commission and the faculty. Dr. V. L. Duke, president of the University of Redlands is dean of the school.

GRASSTON dedicated a new church building recently with an elaborate program, large attendance, great interest, and a subscription of $1,800. Rev. John Franklin, coming from Meriden, Conn., has lately taken up pastoral work on this field.

KANSAS

MEADE has extended a call to the Rev. A. C. Downing of Whiting to become pastor. Meade is a splendid church, and offers a fine opening to a good man. It is hoped that Mr. Downing will accept.

PLAINS CHURCH has recently called Mr. Mundon from New Mexico; he is now on the field, the work is opening up in a fine way.

LIBERAL is growing. Pastor Pennington has been with them eight months. Thirty-five have united with the church; several men coming by baptism. They plan evangelistic services with the aid of Dr. D. P. Montgomery.

W. G. PUMPHREY, the missionary of Southwestern Association, is busy at the task. He has a great field with some wonderful opportunities for development. He is holding meetings in some of the most difficult fields with remarkable success.

J. E. MONTGOMERY, pastor of Bethel and Golden Plains, two rural churches of Seward Co., is doing a very fine piece of work. We need more such men in the open country.

KANSAS CITY, FIRST, in the fifty years of its history has occupied three different locations, and is now preparing to move to a fourth and permanent one.

ATCHISON: After finishing his chorus directing for the First Baptist Church, Singing Evangelist H. O. Echols will assist Evangelist Floyd John Evans at Valley Falls, in a union revival.

MICHIGAN

ESSEXVILLE, under the leadership of Lloyd J. Green, rejoices over fifteen conversions during special meetings recently held. The young people have organized B. Y. P. U. and the younger folks a junior union. Both organizations start out with high aspirations.

REV. E. R. ALLEN accepted a call to the Broadway Church, Bay City, and began his labors the first Sunday of this month.

REV. J. B. BOUWMAN, pastor at Marshall, has purchased a portable moving picture machine which will be used in various phases of the church program.

Rocky Mountain States

COLORADO

BETHEL CHURCH, Denver, Dr. E. L. Krumreig, pastor, is enjoying a good degree of prosperity and interest in all of its departments. Congregations are growing larger with each service, new members are added to the church. At the last City B. Y. P. U. Rally held at the Beth Eden Church our young people carried off the banner for the seventh time. It has been with Bethel ever since the coming of the present pastor to this church. On Nov. 6 the attendance at communion service was the largest in the history of the church, at the same service nine new members received the hand of fellowship and two others were received.

STERLING: Rally Day was observed with a great parade of all the Sunday schools in our city, headed by the Sterling Military Band. The Baptists had the largest number in Sunday school in the history of the church. On October 22 the church tendered the pastor Emanuel Payne and wife a reception in honor of their fifteenth wedding anniversary.

ARIZONA

REV. J. B. BELL, colored, has resigned the pastorate at Flagstaff. He will seek a lower altitude on account of his health.

AFTER A VERY SUCCESSFUL PASTORATE of fourteen months, Rev. T. E. Summers has resigned the pastorate of the church at Miami. He will probably be located within the state again in a short time.

TUCSON FIRST. The new addition to the church is completed and dedicated to the Lord's service. It provides more adequate room for the B. Y. P. U. service and for the pastor's Sunday school class which now numbers nearly a hundred.

TEMPE. The church, under the leadership of the pastor, Rev. E. M. Lands, is growing in interest and in members. In making a survey of the town for Baptists many were found who were not attending church and some attending other churches. Many of these are now at work in the Baptist Church.

Pacific Coast

WEST WASHINGTON

TACOMA, FIRST: C. Oscar Johnson, pastor, is holding services in the Tacoma Theater, while waiting for the completion of a new building.

SEATTLE, FIRST: A. M. Bailey, pastor, with a prayer meeting thermometer scaled for an attendance goal of 200, showed ninety present the first week in November. On the previous Sunday eighty-eight teams, representing 178 visitors, with forty-three automobiles called at about 500 homes.

MISSIONARY LUNCHEON: In honor of Miss Georgia Newberry of Seattle, who sailed for Japan Nov. 10 from Vancouver on the "Empress of Russia," Mrs. W. L. Thompson, of Seattle, president of the Columbia River District, entertained at a beautiful luncheon at her home on Wednesday, Nov. 2. Among those present were two guests who have just returned from Japan. There were twelve missionaries present, as well as other guests. The missionaries were: Miss Georgia Newberry, The Misses Rumsey, French, McCollough and Wagner of the Japanese Mission in Seattle; Misses Skiff and Snape of the Seattle Chinese Mission; Misses Coye and Hunderup, new missionaries at the Cosmopolitan Mission, Seattle; Miss Edna Shoemaker, of Huchow, China; and Miss Converse and Mrs. Briggs, of Yokohama. At Miss Newberry's place was a shower of gifts and messages, some dated to be opened on board the ship.

MRS. HENRY TOPPING, of Japan, who with Mr. Topping has been assisting in the Japanese work in Seattle for the past few months, was invited by the Japanese residents of Seattle to accompany as interpreter Mrs. Kaji Yajima, a Japanese woman eighty-nine years of age who is visiting this country in the interests of peace and bearing to President Harding and the members of the Conference on the Limitation of Armaments a petition signed by 10,000 Japanese women, asking for peace. Mrs. Topping accepted and is now in Washington, D. C., on this mission.

OREGON

BEND: Since coming of Rev. T. H. Beard in July, Sabbath school has almost doubled in attendance; the B. Y. P. U. has grown from an attendance of twelve to forty; prayer meetings average forty-five in attendance, and the building is filled to its capacity at almost every preaching service. The main problem is to find room for those who come. Plans are under way for a new building, to be started in the near future.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

THE CHURCH AT COALINGA, Rev. M. W. Coates, pastor, is much encouraged. Attendance at prayer meeting has grown to an average of fifty. Among those recently baptized was an old lady eighty-nine years of age. The pastor has recently organized a Men's Brotherhood and a troop of Boy Scouts.

AT COVELO, under the leadership of Pastor C. I. Ford, a revival is in progress. Eddie Young and August Hunderays are the evangelists. Twenty backsliders have been reclaimed, one of whom had been estranged from the church for thirty years, eleven have been added to the church by baptism, one whose letter had remained in "trunk" for thirty-five years, has been added to active membership. Thirty-two young people have offered their lives for definite Christian service. This is one of our churches whose full allotment to N. W. M. is subscribed.

THE CHURCH AT HEALDSBURG, Rev. W. V. D. MacCullough, pastor, has had thirty-three additions in his eight months' pastorate, ten by baptism, seventeen by letter and six by experience.

MISS AMY ACOCK OF JAPAN is spending November visiting the churches and women's societies in the state. She has a strong message and her work is being much appreciated.

REV. V. H. COWSEY of Corning has resigned after a three years' pastorate. He preached his farewell sermon Oct. 30.

WHEN THE CALL TO PRAYER for the Conference on Disarmament was sent to our churches, three of our Indian churches were the first to respond, sending in to the convention office their programs for prayer services on Nov. 11 and subsequent days. These were the churches at Auberry, Dunlap and Sycamore. One missionary writes: "My Indians are great to pray; their faith is so childlike."

DR. C. W. BRINSTAD, promotion director of the Northern California Convention, has recently instituted a campaign to round up the outstanding pledges and contributions for the big denominational movement for one hundred million dollars for the Northern Baptist Convention. "The Big V. Campaign" will be the designation for the effort and the slogan will be "Make it Yes instead of No in No-Vember." The "V" used in the name adopted has a three-fold meaning: five-year campaign; five-months clean-up, and $5 or multiple payments. The plan as announced contemplates having a number of prominent men and women out in the field who will select "group leaders" from the various districts of the convention, each of whom will have under his direction three to five churches as the case may be. These group leaders will in turn choose a "key man" to take charge of the efforts of the local church, and all together will co-operate in putting over the whole plan. The fund raised will extend the Baptist work in missions abroad and at home, assist colleges and schools, take care of ministers in their old age, help in the erection of new churches, and sustain the various efforts already promoted that are needing substantial aid.

THE CHURCHES under the leadership of Executive Secretary O. W. Brimstad are engaged in round-up campaign for pledges and payments on the New World Movement, with the slogan "Complete the Job by November 27."

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

TEMPLE CHURCH, Los Angeles, J. Whitcomb Brougher, pastor, is in unusual trouble: it is finding difficulty in providing seats enough for its crowd.

TEMPLE CHURCH, Los Angeles, J. Whitcomb Brougher pastor, announces that it is "out for a Bible school that will pass the 2,000 mark."

REDLANDS: In the First Baptist Church there is being held a six weeks' school of missions. It promises to be the best school of missions which has ever been held in this church. The average attendance to date is between three hundred and ten and three hundred and twenty. A number of the members of the faculty of the university are rendering very efficient service in this school. Miss Viola Hill, of Ningpo, China, a graduate of the University of Redlands, who is now on furlough at her home in Santa Ana, California, was present at the school of missions Sunday evening, November 13, to tell of her work before the University Class.

DEWITT P. WARD of Pasadena, Cal., will dedicate his new home and celebrate his seventieth birthday on Friday, Nov. 18. Mr. Ward gave sixteen years of Sunday school service in the Dakotas and nearly twenty-five in California. He is the pioneer missionary of the Publication Society, having been with it since August 1, 1888. His address is 1725 Garfield Ave., Pasadena, Cal., and he would greatly appreciate postcard greeting from his friends.

University of Redlands

The University of Redlands is well into its thirteenth academic year. The enrollment to date is larger than the enrollment for any previous year. The number enrolled at the present time is three hundred fifty-eight.

Before the middle of the summer all the places in the three dormitories for women and two dormitories for men had been engaged. Amounts for other dormitories were included in the askings from the New World Movement, and approved by the Northern Baptist Convention.

The temporary chapel building which was constructed three years ago, was thought to be sufficiently large for an assembly room for some six or eight years. This building is now overcrowded.

One wing of the fine arts group—which group is to be composed of two wings, with studios, practice rooms, and small recital hall, joined by colonnades to the college auditorium, or chapel—has been built. As soon as funds are available the second wing and the much needed auditorium will be constructed.

The full $100,000,000 being sought by the denomination is absolutely necessary if the university is not to experience an arrested development in its educational and missionary programs.

The faculty has been augmented by the addition of two new members. They are Frederick H. Billings, Ph.D., Professor of botany, and Edgar B. Van Osdel, A.M., professor of physics and astronomy.

The coming of these men and the completion last year of our Hall of Science has greatly strengthened the science department.

The Y. M. C. A. and Y. W. C. A. of the college have undertaken a larger program this year than in any previous year and up to the present they seem to be succeeding well in the carrying out of this program.

There is a large student volunteer band in the university. This, of course, is composed of those who have determined to dedicate their lives to work on the foreign mission field. In addition to these young people, there is a large number of others in college who plan to give their lives to distinctly Christian work on the home field, either as ministers or missionaries or Y. M. C. A. workers.

Gifts to Women's Colleges

In reply to questions with regard to gifts for our Women's Christian Colleges in the Orient, we would like to offer the following explanation:

A special interdenominational effort is being made by many Boards interested in these colleges in which Baptist women have so large a part. Our share authorized in the Survey and reaffirmed by our National Board at its annual meeting is $150,000. This is not apportioned to churches or women's societies nor is it planned to make a canvass of churches for this amount. The plan is that it will come through the individual appeal and inspirational meetings, both denomina-

Girls coming to Chicago should call at Dorothea Burr Institute

Business Girl's Home

4818 Michigan Avenue

Comfortable Rooms and Beds Home Cooking
Laundry Accommodation Reasonable Charges
Christian Influence Good Social Surroundings

tional and interdenominational, all leading up to College Day in the large centres and to the plans proposed by the committee in smaller towns. Pledges from all denominations will then be brought in with the hope of securing the conditional gift from the Laura Spelman Rockefeller

Memorial Fund. All these plans were made with other denominations and approved prior to the action of our Baptist societies in September, looking toward a continuation of the New World Movement and the special effort of the Baptist women to secure $6,000,000 of the $100,000,000. It is, therefore, out of the question to give up or delay the pledges for the colleges which can be completed quickly with prompt co-operation, and will count as designated gifts on the $100,000,000 and the women's $6,000,000 gift, which constitute the large objective of our denomination.

We are all deeply interested in these colleges as an essential part of our Woman's Foreign Work—as we look to our Baptist girls trained in them as our future Christian leaders. We must take care of them and our whole big task also in which they are included.

Mrs. H. E. Goodman,
Administrative Vice-President.
Mrs. Henry W. Peabody,
Interdenominational Representative of the W. A. B. F. M. S. and Chairman of the Building Fund Committee for Oriental Colleges for Women.

Obituary.

MRS. MYRTA GATES BLAICH

Myrta Gates was born at Breakabeen, Schoharie County, New York, July 20, 1862. The family came to Michigan in 1872, living at Grass Lake and at Chelsea. At the age of sixteen Miss Gates united with the Baptist church at Chelsea. In the year 1888 she was married to George Blaich, who survives her. In 1897 Mr. and Mrs. Blaich removed to Ann Arbor where they have continued to reside. After a lingering illness Mrs. Blaich entered the heavenly rest September 24, 1921. The funeral services were conducted by her much-loved pastor, Rev. J. M. Wells.

Mrs. Blaich was a thorough-going student of the Bible, eager for the inspiration to be drawn from its pages, a devoted worker in all lines of missionary activity, interested in whatever looked toward the upbuilding of the church and the Kingdom, a faithful Christian. Her memory will long be cherished by a large circle of friends.

Exchange and Service Department

BOOKS WANTED

WILL SOME ONE having a copy of Dr. Smith's history of the Baptists of the Middle West who is willing to donate it to the Baptist Historical Library please notify Dr. E. M. Stephenson, 1703 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

OPEN FOR PASTORATE

REV. WM. L. BRANDON, Braymer, Mo., is anxious to get in touch with a church where there is a chance to do constructive work with a people who want to be up and doing. Until then he wishes dates for revival meetings. His reason for resigning at Braymer was that the church building had become inadequate for the Sunday-school and young people's work and it did not seem possible to secure a new one.

CROUP OR WHOOPING COUGH
ROCHE'S EMBROCATION
Relieves promptly and safely. Effective in Bronchitis, Lumbago and Rheumatism.
W. EDWARDS & SON All druggists or London, England E. FOUGERA & CO.
90-92 Beekman St. N. Y.

OXFORD LARGE TYPE BIBLES

Older folks, and those with imperfect eyesight, appreciate the ease with which they can read an Oxford Large Type Bible. The styles on Oxford India Paper are especially desirable, being so easy to read and easy to hold. A few styles are listed here. Others are to be found in the Oxford Bible Catalogue, mailed upon request.

- 01607 [This size print] Bound in Keratol (imitation leather) limp, gilt edges, size 9 1/4 x 5 1/2 in. Has family record....$4.35
01608 [Same Bible as 01607] Bound in French Morocco leather, overlapping covers, red under gold edges.....$6.15
01605x [Same Bible as 01608] Printed on Oxford India paper only 3/4 of an inch thick. No family record.....$10.65
01561x [This size print] A clear type light weight Bible, Bound in Persian Morocco leather, limp, leather lined, red under gold edges. Printed on Oxford India paper, size 7 1/4 x 5 1/4 x 1 1/2 inches. $17.00

At all booksellers or from the publishers

Oxford University Press
American Branch
35 W. 32d St. New York

SAILORS NEED BIBLES

also the immigrants, the sailors and the poor may have Bibles in 53 languages, if you send your donation.

Every kind of Bible for sale, Scotch, Oxford, Bagster, Cambridge, Holman, Nelson, at special discounts

Write us about Annuity Bonds
NEW YORK BIBLE SOCIETY
5 East 48th St. (112th Year) NEW YORK

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Write for Booklet Z.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

IT IS A BURNING SHAME

that so many churches are without sufficient insurance and not properly safeguarded against fire.

Baptist Department

Mutual Insurance Corporation
furnishes protection AT COST

FIRE, LIGHTNING AND WINDSTORM

No assessments; easy payments; profits to policyholders; legal reserve for protection of policyholders same as stock company.

Parsonages, Homes and Personal Effects of Church Members also insured.

No agents. Deal direct.

National Mutual Church Insurance Co., 22 years old under same management. Address Henry P. Magill, Secy. & Mr. 1506 Insurance Exchange, Chicago, Ill.

SWORD OF THE SPIRIT

Which is the Word of God

Complete Help to Personal Work. Convincing Scripture Answers to Excuses. Quick Reference Index. Aid in leading others to Salvation and Guide for the Christian Life. Most recent book on these subjects. Practical, Scriptural, Scriptural, vest. pkt. size, 128 pgs., Cloth 25c, Morocco 35c, postpaid; stamps taken. Agents wanted. GEO. WENDLE, Manager Bible, Chicago.

PELOUBET'S Select Notes

The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons
By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1922

Price, $2.00 Net; $2.10 Delivered

W. A. WILDE COMPANY
120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.
Madison Terminal Building, Chicago

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10
ESTABLISHED 1858
THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

The large and enthusiastic response of the denomination to the appeal for clothing and other supplies for Europe, of which detailed mention is published elsewhere, has made it necessary for an official representative of the Foreign Mission Society to accompany the shipment and arrange for its distribution. At the last meeting of the Board of Managers this responsibility was assigned to Associate Secretary William B. Lippard and he was instructed to sail with the steamship "Esthonia" from New York on Wednesday, November 23. All the supplies of clothing, shoes, etc., for Poland, Latvia, Esthonia and Lithuania have been placed aboard this ship and will be unloaded respectively at Danzig and at Libau, where Secretary Lippard, in co-operation with Rev. K. W. Strzelec in Poland and Rev. J. A. Frey in Latvia, will arrange for their distribution.

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

MUSIC REVIEW

From the H. W. Gray Co., 2 West 45th Street, New York, N. Y.

Eight Old Christmas Carols, arr. by William Lester ($15).

From the golden store of hidden carol lore, the editor of this page has gleaned a set of eight melodic gems, dressed them in fittingly simple harmonic and instrumental vesture and issued them through this fine publishing house to add to the musical significance of the coming Christmas season so far as they are enjoyed and performed. All of the tunes are old—one dates back of the twelfth century, the most recent showed itself about the close of the sixteenth century. The beautiful melodies are arranged for two-part or unison choruses except the last two, which are available for chorus or quartet also; the accompaniments are effective on either a piano or an organ, or both. We are planning a "Candle-Light Carol Service" at my church—the First Baptist Church of Evanston, Ill., to be given about eight o'clock Saturday evening, Christmas Eve. The program will consist of the scriptural account of the coming of the Holy Babe read by Dr. Stifter; the music will consist of the above set of carols, the set of ten carols collected by Roy Murphy and just published by Summy, the set of "Five Old French Carols" issued by Carl Fischer, a lovely carol-anthem by West—"See, Amid the Winter's Snow"; my wife will sing my own "Christmas Lullaby" published by the White-Smith Co., of Boston; Miss Heide, my contralto, will sing Liza Lehmann's exquisite Breton Carol, "No Candle Was There, and no Fire," and several other solo numbers of like character will be given. The forces enlisted will be the regular solo quartet of the church—Margaret Lester, soprano; Ethel Heide, contralto; Stuart Dykema, tenor; and James Fiske, bass; assisted by a chorus of some thirty voices. Only candles will be used for the lighting; a reverent hour spent in such environment on this holy eve adds a picturesque touch to the whole Christmas season. I would like to see all the churches celebrate Christmas Eve in some such fashion; here is no need to be limited to any of the above-listed material—there is plenty to fit all tastes and needs.

A CAROL CANTATA

Since the publication some two months ago of my little article concerning music in the Sunday school, in which passing mention was made of some suggested carol material, quite a few letters have come to this office requesting more information as to the cantata by myself, built on some of the old carols, called "The Little Lord Jesus." Opportunely, from the publisher, Carl Fischer, Cooper Square, New York City, comes the appended circular concerning the work, which we take the liberty of reprinting.

"The Christmas folk songs of medieval France, the old noels, still live in the church music of our own day. Though the noels in France are to-day a thing of the past, though neither peasants nor townsfolk sing them, their naive beauty and charm have given them a new lease of life in the music of the church in this country. They represent, musically, if not always in their texts, a direct and tender intimacy of expression, a quality of devotion rarer in more sophisticated centuries. They reflect that spirit of devout gladness and joy in the Nativity which led one medieval writer to affirm that when Christ was born trees burst into bud and flowers blossomed amid the winter snows.

"Not only has the individual noel found a place in our Christmas music; it has also supplied thematic material for such modern Christmas 'mysteries' as those by Piere and others. From this to a Christmas cantata based on some of the most delightful and individual noel themes is but a step; and William Lester has taken it in his 'The Little Lord Jesus.' The composer has used this material in a free manner as a basis for the building up of his score, and in view of the spirit rather than the letter of the music. Then, much of the music is his own, and he has caught with genuine sympathy and artistic inspiration the keynote of his subject—the Nativity—and the devout joy of mankind in the coming of the Christ Child.

"Many of the old noel texts are not in accord with the Christmas spirit of our own day. The primitive medieval mind saw no particular harm in mingling with its description of the divine birth, accounts of little every-day happenings, anecdotes and rude jests; all without irreverent intent; yet which the higher ethics of our own times cannot help but regard as unseemly. Hence the compiler, drawing first and foremost on Holy Writ, has supplemented it with the beautiful verses of such religious poets as Milton, Dr. Byron, Phillips Brooks, Christina Rossetti and others, giving the lovely medieval melodies a textually valid expression from the standpoint of actual church use.

"The Little Lord Jesus" should commend itself to every church musician because of its real musical beauty; its poetic retelling in Scripture phrase and sacred verse of the Nativity story. It marks a departure from the conventional in the happiest sense of the word—a going back to the naive musical simplicity and charm of an earlier age, while at the same time giving a text expression spiritually true to the Christian ideals of our own day.

"Tuneful melody of contrasting character; an easy and natural leading of the voices, which makes it possible for a choir-master to get the best results from a willing choir; accompaniments which support and set off the choral movement; solo opportunities which give the individual singer every chance for effective rendering; are among the practical advantages of this noel-cantata. If desired, it may also be given in two parts, morning and evening."

REVIVAL GEMS

From the Judson Press (The American Baptist Publication Society) comes a little booklet of hymns by the above title. And the designation is quite fitting. Though well-printed and bound in stout paper covers, this collection of some seventy selections sells for the modest price of ten cents. While its title suggests its purpose as schemed by the compilers, Samuel W. Beazley, Harvey E. Cressman, Charles L. Major, and Wiley J. Smith, its varied contents and the intrinsic value of the same make it a valuable volume for use in young people's meetings, for prayer-meetings, and such like occasions where the more austere church-hymnal may look too "dressed up." This column recently has had several requests for such a collection as this, no doubt it will be widely used. It is a needed job well done, and it can be unreservedly recommended.

If you say, "Sirs, I would see Jesus," you will find Him in the Holy Scriptures you will find Him in every Christian experience in proportion as it is enlarged and true—yea, you will find Him in the very statement itself, for no man ever asked to see Him with the sincerity and earnestness of fire without the answer beginning the moment the question ended.

—JOSEPH PARKER.

AN UNPRECEDENTED

Free Trial Offer of Hymn Books

100 Copies of

The new "Ring of Song Books"

GLAD TIDINGS IN SONG

(Just off the press)

Compiled by 100 leading evangelists. Will be sent FREE, prepaid to any Church, Sunday School, Young People's Society or other religious organization.

For One Month's Free Trial

If not satisfied, you may return the books and we will pay the freight or express both ways. If satisfied, send us the money for the books.

Returnable Sample Copy Sent on Request

Cloth, 45c; prepaid, 50c. Limp, 35c; prepaid, 40c. Manila, 30c; prepaid, 35c.

Abridged Edition

66 pages, 107 hymns. Manila 15c, prepaid, 12½c, not prepaid. Limp Cloth 20c, prepaid, 17½c, not prepaid.

THE GLAD TIDINGS

PUBLISHING CO.

202 South Clark Street Chicago, Ill.

Beware of Contagious Diseases

THOMAS
INDIVIDUAL

COMMUNION SERVICE

SAVES 1/4 COST OF OTHER SERVICES

Clean and sanitary. Used by over 40,000 churches. Send for catalog and free trial offer. Thomas Communion Service Co., Box 494 Lima, O.

CHRISTMAS MUSIC FREE
HALL-MACK CO.'S

FREE SAMPLES TO SUPT. PASTOR or COM.

6 new, original Christmas S. S. Services

NEW PUBLICATIONS

Helper No. 9. Price, 20c. (25c for Helper and 3 services.)

Herod's Vision. A Song Story—Cantata. Price, 30c.

Victorious Christmas. A Song Story for the Sunday School. Price, 25c.

The Manger King. Choir Cantata by Dr. Adam Geibel, 50c.

Here Comes Christmas. Children's Cantata. Price, 25c.

Songs for Little Singers, No. 3. Price, 30c. All (except Helper) sent for examination.

Hall-Mack Co. } 21st and Arch Streets,
Adam Geibel Co. } Philadelphia, Pa.

Communion Ware of Quality

Best materials. Finest workmanship. Aluminum or silver plate. Memorial sets a specialty. Send for Catalog. Individual Comm. Service Co.

Room 344 1701-1708 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY CO.

Baltimore, Md.

CHURCH, CHIME AND PEAL

BELLS Memorials a Specialty

A New Christmas Service Free

We want you to see

THE GIFT OF LOVE, our new S. S. Service of merit. You will like it. Sent free. Our CHRISTMAS RECITATION BOOKLET, NO. 24 with cute songs, is the best ever. 15c.

WHEN THE KING CAME, a Pastoral Sketch for young people. Beautiful. No music. 12c.

CHRISTMAS FOLKS, a wholesome, amusing cantata for Sunday school or Day school. 12c.

HYMNS FOR TODAY, for Sunday school and Church, contains 20 Christmas hymns and two Christmas service programs. Sample copy sent for examination. Orchestrated.

Give us your address (or others interested) and we will mail free a new catalog of Christmas services, cantatas, recitations and dialogues, solos, duets, trios, quartets for women's voices, also men's voices, and anthems for mixed voices.

If interested in Sunday school orchestra music you should know what we have for you. Write.

FILLMORE MUSIC HOUSE

523 Elm Street, CINCINNATI, O.

The Ship That Was Filled In Fellowship

A Chronological Record of a Denominational Achievement

1921

April 12—Foreign Mission Board, on recommendation of Secretary J. H. Franklin, adopts plan fill a ship with clothing and other supplies to Poland, Latvia, Czechoslovakia and other sections of Europe.

April 21—Woman's Board, on recommendation of Miss Nellie C. Prescott, takes concurrent action and commits responsibility of enlisting Baptist women to the White Cross Department.

April 22—Mrs. W. A. Montgomery suggests the captivating slogan "Fill a Ship in Fellowship."

July 18—White Cross Circles in Baptist churches, under efficient leadership of Miss Helen Hudson, mobilize to collect needed supplies.

August 18—First announcements of the plan appear in the denominational press and in the September issue of "Missions."

September 9—Missionary V. G. Krause, at home on furlough from Bengal-Orissa, arrives in New York to take charge of assembling of supplies, baling and loading.

September 17—Special articles, stories of need and other announcements appear in denominational papers and during succeeding weeks.

September 24—Letter mailed to every pastor, explaining the plan, requesting his co-operation and forwarding shipping tags.

September 27—Foreign Mission Board rents temporary warehouse at 348 East 23rd Street, New York City.

October 3—First packages arrive at warehouse.

October 5—Baling machines installed and corps of helpers engaged.

October 17-29—Period of congestion at warehouse, with express trucks and mail wagons delivering hundreds of packages each day.

Interesting Facts

Estimated total shipment to November 23, 2,000 bales.

Estimated total weight 500,000 pounds.

Estimated total value at least $1,000,000.

Approximately 4,000 Baptist churches co-operated.

Approximately 10,000 separate packages and boxes.

Estimated total contents:

50 barrels of dolls and toys.

10,000 blankets.

45,000 pairs shoes.

50,000 cakes of soap.

65,000 men's garments.

175,000 children's and infant's garments.

200,000 women's garments.

Correspondingly large quantities of bonnets, mittens, stockings and other miscellaneous supplies.

The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce furnished a free warehouse to California Baptists.

The Union Pacific Railroad furnished free freight transportation to Omaha.

The Chicago and Northwestern Railroad furnished free freight transportation to Chicago.

The Erie Railroad furnished free freight transportation to New York.

October 20—Freight shipments begin to arrive in New York.

October 22—Foreign Mission Board, because of congestion, rents second warehouse and engages baling company to assist in baling accumulated supplies.

October 24—Record arrivals—1216 packages, barrels, cases, boxes, etc., in one day.

November 1-19—Period of final packing, baling and transfer to steamship pier of supplies for Northern and Central Europe.

November 23—Relief ship S. S. Esthonia of the Baltic-American Line, accompanied by Associate Secretary William B. Lippard, of the Foreign Mission Society, sails from New York to Europe.

December 5—Arrival and unloading at Hamburg. Conference with Baptist committees regarding distribution in Germany and arrangements for transfer to Czechoslovakia and Austria.

December 7—Arrival and unloading at Danzig for distribution in Poland under direction of Rev. K. W. Strzelec of Lodz and Secretary Lippard.

December 9—Arrival and unloading at Libau for distribution in Latvia and Esthonia under direction of Rev. J. A. Frey of Riga and Secretary Lippard.

December 10-31—Weekly shipments to Russia in co-operation with American Relief Administration.

December 15-24—Detailed distribution under personal supervision of local Baptist committees.

December 25—Christmas gratitude to Northern Baptists for this ministry in the spirit of Christ.

December 31—Detailed illustrated story of the achievement in January issue of "Missions."

The spirit in which Northern Baptists responded to this appeal: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Volume II

December 3, 1921

UNIVERSITY OF ILLINOIS LIBRARY

DEC 2 1921 Number 44

The Baptist

Univ of Ill Libr
Urbana Ill

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

Now, if Ever, Northern Baptists Need God

IF my people, that are called by my name, shall humble themselves," saith the Lord, "and pray, and seek my face,.....then will I hear from heaven."

Northern Baptists are humbled by the force of the difficulties they face. All of their pride and boasting are gone. What is left but that they shall turn to the Lord as never before in the full expectation that he will hear and work what man cannot do?

We have said that we are a mighty host. We have pointed with pride to our principles and achievements. We have wondered if anything were too great for us. And now we are reminded that "except the Lord build the house they labor in vain that build it." The Lord does not work apart from his servants. Neither may his servants work apart from him. He alone is our strength.

The world-wide program of the New World Movement is face to face with disastrous failure. We alone cannot achieve the ends sought. But "Is anything too great for me?" saith the Lord. Only ask in faith and it shall be done. "Whatsoever," says Jesus, "ye shall ask in my name, that will I do."

Let us go to prayer. Let us claim the promises of God and lay hold on them.

Let there be prayer in our homes, prayer in the secret place, prayer in our churches.

God and God's power is now our only resource. He will not fail us. We shall know that we have not failed him if, when his voice comes, "Who will go for me and whom shall I send?" we answer without demur, "Here am I, O Lord, and here are my resources: send me; use them."

Fresh from the Field

Dr. D. D. Proper, who for some years has been assistant secretary for the Home Mission Society, with headquarters at Omaha, Nebr., was transferred on Dec. 1 to headquarters in New York City, where he may hereafter be addressed. Dr. Proper has become so much a part of the West that his absence will be felt all along the line.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., has recently donated funds sufficient for the erection of a suitable building for the Intercollegiate Cosmopolitan Club of New York, which will serve as a home center for students, both American and foreign, and which will enable foreign students to meet with Americans in ways not at present possible. The building which will accommodate 500 students in residence and have recreational facilities for many times that number will be erected on lots which are opposite Grant's tomb. The object of the club is "the improvement of the social, intellectual, spiritual and physical condition of the men and women students from every land who are studying in the colleges, universities and professional schools in the city of New York."

A national conference under the auspices of the Colored Men's Department of the Y. M. C. A. will be held in Cincinnati, Ohio, Dec. 1-4. Leading speakers of both races will have part. The purpose is a more thorough consideration of the outstanding needs of the colored men and boys of America and of their relationship to the country and the world at large. It will be emphasized that only through a quickening of Christian effort, an increased and consecrated enlistment for the betterment of humanity on the basis of Christian brotherhood can the problems in hand be effectively dealt with. All indications are that this conference will easily be the largest and most representative of its kind. Inquiries may be directed to Dr. J. E. Moorland, 347 Madison Ave., New York City.

W. H. Baylor, superintendent of missions for the Maryland Baptist Union Association, Baltimore, Md., has issued an attractive little pamphlet with the title "Better Not, or Twenty Don'ts for Young Preachers." The following are the don'ts: Don't live beyond your income, don't be a stingy parson, don't preach your doubts, don't preach so much against things as for principles, don't be tempted on any occasion not to preach your best, don't be looking for a larger field—another call, don't flirt with other churches or threaten your own church, don't be a pessimist, don't deal in off-color stories, don't lose your temper in public, don't overlook the Bible when looking for texts, don't be jealous of your fellow-ministers, don't scold and don't deal in personalities, don't be professional, artificial or sensational, don't belittle little things, don't be lazy, don't neglect the sick and the sorrowing, don't betray a confidence, don't fail to keep your appointments, don't allow any one to dictate your messages, don't fail to pray. The pamphlet is even more suggestive than these titles indicate.

November 20 was Laymen's Sunday in most of the Unitarian churches of the United States and Canada. The Taft program is now being administered by the Unitarian Laymen's League, whose membership of 11,703 men in 251 chapters is solidity behind the religious and educational campaign for which 25,000 Unitarians subscribed $2,400,000 in the financial canvass of a year ago. Among the aims of the movement are to relieve ministers of as much responsibility for detail in the church work as possible, to do lay preaching in needy fields, to recruit the ministry, to increase ministers' salaries, to develop Sunday schools, promote Unitarianism among college students and to increase the membership of Unitarian churches 25 per cent. This movement is worth watching.

Dr. William Axling, for twenty years a missionary of the Foreign Mission Society in Japan and connected with the widely known Baptist Tabernacle in Tokyo, is in America on furlough. He has been rendering exceptionally valuable service in addressing conventions, conferences, rotary clubs, associations and individual churches. Recently by special invitation he had a long conference with the State Department at Washington, and on Monday evening, Oct. 31, he and Dr. E. M. Walne of the Southern Baptist Board, addressed a meeting of congressmen at which a representative group was present. On Thursday, Nov. 10, Dr. Axling, by special invitation, addressed the Officers' Club at the United States Military Academy, West Point, N. Y. Dr. Axling's work has proved to be so effective that the board of managers of the Foreign Mission Society at the meeting on Nov. 15 voted to extend his furlough until February, as Dr. Axling had originally planned to return to Japan late in November. He has proved to be an exceptionally popular speaker at rotary clubs throughout the country. Men who attend the meetings of such clubs are deeply interested in the great facts concerning Japan. Dr. Axling, by reason of his twenty years' residence there, is well qualified to present first-hand, authoritative information.

Dr. William C. Biting, of the Second Church, St. Louis, Mo., is to be the preacher at the University of Chicago on Dec. 11. Dr. Biting's popularity with the students is such that this has come to be something like an annual appointment.

Miss Esther W. Lindberg, one of our missionaries at Moulmein, Burma, was married on October 11 to William H. Roberts. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts, according to the announcement card which has just reached this office, were to be at home after Nov. 1 at 28 Alexandra Court, Calcutta.

Mrs. Jenna Kathan, wife of Charles Hewitt Grose, died recently at her home in Ballston Spa, N. Y., after a lingering illness. She was the beloved sister-in-law of Mrs. Justin A. Smith, Mrs. C. W. Eede, Mrs. J. W. Weddell, E. F. Grose and Howard B. Grose.

Rev. Robert L. Kelley recently completed four years with the First Church, Delavan, Wis., during which time 140 have been added to the church, seventy-five of them by baptism. The new year opens with much promise.

Rev. Edwin S. Stucker, of Ottawa, Kans., who is spending some weeks filling evangelistic engagements in Nebraska, has an open date beginning Dec. 4 and others after the holiday season. He will later assist Dr. Fulton at the First Church, Colorado Springs, Colo.

The Layman Company, 35 N. Dearborn St., Chicago, will until March 1, 1922, furnish postpaid all the tithing literature it publishes at 50 per cent discount from list prices. This is less than the cost of printing. For 20 cents there will be sent a package of twenty-two pamphlets comprising over 200 printed pages and containing articles by fifteen or more authors. In writing, give the denomination and mention THE BAPTIST.

Rev. Vaclav Kralicek, for twenty years pastor of the First Bohemian Church, Chicago, is now serving as field secretary for President Masaryk of the Czechoslovak Republic, who is also a Baptist.

On Nov. 19 an informal reception for Marshal Foch was arranged in New York by the Federal Council of Churches. A striking incident in connection with the reception was the presentation of the pulpit Bible from the Protestant church at Rheims to the Federal Council as a token of the appreciation of the French Protestant churches. The Bible was rescued from the church after the latter had been destroyed in the war.

The Tokyo Chamber of Commerce had adopted a resolution favoring the closing of all shops on Sunday. Japan is beginning to discover that men and women cannot profitably labor seven days a week. That discovery was written into God's law a long time ago.

One result of the present conference in Washington is to give the people of the United States a better view of the Japanese people as a whole. Undoubtedly there are in that country militarists who constitute a formidable force. But there is also a liberal party, which has large support among the people and which is constantly growing, which is against war and the causes of war and in sympathy with many of the things for which Christian America is striving. To get in touch with this element of the Japanese population is well worth while.

Rev. Marshall M. Smith, who for the last two years has been pastor of the Glenn and Ord Bend churches in California, has presented his resignation which will take effect the first of the year, after which he will be free either to take another pastorate or to do evangelistic work in Northern or Southern California. The Glenn Church exceeded its allotment in the New World Movement drive by $1,000.

A Chinese graduate student in the Newton Theological Institution has made a distinct contribution to Chinese Christian literature by translating into his own tongue Rauschenbusch's "Theology of the Social Gospel."

Fred B. Smith was on Nov. 2 given a farewell dinner in New York City on the eve of embarking on a world tour. Dr. Henry A. Atkinson, presiding, stated that Mr. Smith's tour had been undertaken in response to numerous invitations from distinguished church leaders of some of the great nations and that the specific objectives of the tour would be to advance the principles of international friendship in behalf of universal peace; to magnify the unique place and opportunity of the Christian church and its affiliated societies in the era of readjustment; to extend the ideals of a more united Christian church, and to conduct evangelistic services. Before returning to the United States in August of 1922 he will visit the Hawaiian Islands, Japan, Korea, China, Straits Settlements, Ceylon, India, Egypt, Palestine, Turkey, Greece, Bulgaria, Serbia, Hungary, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Latvia, France and England. Local committees are at work planning great conferences during the day and services for the evening.

(Turn to page 1388)

The Baptist

Vol. II      December 3, 1921      No. 44

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves
Associate Editor: U. M. McGuire
Committee on Publication:

REV. JAMES M. STIFLER      MR. PETER R. FINLAY
MRS. CLAYTON D. EULETTE      MRS. SAMUEL C. JENNINGS
MR. WM. AYER MCKINNEY

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts.

CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD.....	1386
EDITORIAL .....	1389
THE FINANCIAL SITUATION.....	1391
A PRIMER OF THEOLOGY, by A. H. Strong.....	1393
WHAT SHALL THEY READ?, by Francis C. Stifler.....	1395
THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE, by William Axling.....	1396
WITH BOOKS AND READERS.....	1397
PICKED FROM OUR BOOKSHELVES.....	1398
THE DEVOTIONAL LIFE.....	1401
THE CHIMNEY CORNER.....	1402
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1404
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK.....	1405
BULLETIN BOARD .....	1406
OUR OWN FOLKS.....	1407
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	1415

Our Fellowship Fund

For years good friends of the denominational weekly have sent sums of money to be used to provide papers for those who would otherwise be deprived of their weekly visits. Hundreds of individuals have been blest by this ministry. We have had unusual demands upon our fund during the past few months. Send THE BAPTIST any amount you can spare and we will administer it carefully and we believe wisely. We will send you the names and addresses of those who through your kindness are to receive the weekly visits of the paper they prize.

Killam's Kollum

Acts As Self Starter

"The Kollum should not be discontinued. I always find it hard to get started to reading THE BAPTIST. Killam's Kollum has acted as a self starter and has set me on my way through THE BAPTIST."—A College Student. Students, especially sophomores, ought to be at more serious business than reading denominational newspapers, unless taking a course in ancient history. Some mighty good folks seem to want us to make a paper perfectly adapted to become a part of the Baptist archives. It should be built, they think, with future historians rather than present-day humans in mind. Student, read Euripides.

Early Renewals

Have you renewed your subscription? Christmas is coming and we would like to have you pay up before you spend all your money. Another reason for early renewals is that our present office force can carry on the work without additional help which means without additional expense. Look at your date label. It may preach to you a little sermon and call you to repentance.

Will Help Bring Democracy

"I read this Kollum more carefully than some, yea many of the labored articles which prove to be my sin, in that I do not always do what the big men would have us little men do. Keep poking fun at the wise guys, heaping sarcasm on the inflated ones and sting the indolent into action and after another generation or two we will have some real democracy." A. W. Tandy, Mason City, Iowa. THE BAPTIST believes in democracy and will gladly do its bit toward its better day.

We Like Its Flavor

"Order the flowers. Forget the undertaker. For those who have no spice in their blood see to it that they have a column in mourning. The reason Killam's Kollum finds 'kickers' is that some people require exercise. Some people do not know when they are enjoying themselves." Signed F. A. Garlick, Chicago. THE BAPTIST is always glad when it can serve its great constituency in any capacity. If we can act as a buffer; if we can distract attention for a moment from the depressing conditions we face within and without our denomination, we feel that we have not lived in vain. We do not need a column in mourning for the unvarnished facts are serious enough for any mortal. THE BAPTIST presents the facts from week to week. It also endeavors to help its readers face their task with hope and with courage. Let us smile for we are engaged in the Lord's work and it cannot fail.

Fresh From the Field

(Continued from page 1386)

Rev. G. W. Wilson of the First Church, Cambridge, Mass., has accepted the call of the First Church, Canton, and began work on Dec. 1. Already after a few weeks during which Mr. Wilson supplied the church there is a marked awakening of interest. The young people have organized the "Canton Baptist Bible League."

Official announcement is just made of the autumn quarter registration at the University of Chicago up to Nov. 12. In the Graduate Schools of Arts, Literature, and Science there are 832 students; in the Colleges, 2,629—a total of 3,461 in Arts, Literature, and Science. In the Professional Schools there are 178 Divinity students, 247 medical students, 319 law students, 227 in education, 657 in commerce and administration, and 52 in social service administration—a total of 1,680. The registration in University College is 1,303. The total registration for the University in the autumn quarter is 6,118. In the summer quarter the attendance, which is the largest of the year, was 6,458, a gain of 1,050 over that of a year ago. During the year 1920-21, ending June 30, there were 11,385 different students in residence, and he made bold to say that "it was time for the leaders of the Anglican Church and the leaders of the Free Churches to arrive at some definite policy of intercommunion."

At the mouth of First Brook, near Mat-tawamkeag Lake in Maine, where Theodore Roosevelt used to go hunting, there stands a tree beneath which the late president liked to sit and read the Bible which he always carried with him. Learning of the colonel's habit, Hermann Hagedorn, a member of the faculty of the Roosevelt School for Boys in New Jersey, when on a trip to Maine recently, attached to the tree a small tin box containing a Bible. With the box is a request that all who pass that way stop long enough to read a few paragraphs of the Scriptures to follow the example set by their famous countryman.

The Hudson River Association North (New York), at its recent annual meeting passed the following significant resolutions:

Whereas, The churches of this Association are pleased to renew their expression of confidence in the program of the General and the State Boards of Promotion, looking toward the completion of our one hundred million dollar fund as our honest and adequate attempt to meet our obligations for the evangelization of the world in this time of unprecedented challenge, and whereas our national and local missionary societies are embarrassed by a lack of funds to carry on their work on a basis adequate to the demands made upon them, producing a situation that at times reflects unfavorably upon our great denomination,

Therefore be it Resolved, That we shall welcome from our State Board of Promotion specific plans and suggestions for the pledging of the thirty million dollars, balance of the one hundred million, especially welcoming a period of education in tithing which will not only elevate the standards of Christian stewardship but conserve the pledges already made.

And be it further Resolved, That we express our determination to follow the prophetic leadership of our president, Mrs. Montgomery, in every effort to consolidate the forces of our denomination in the doing of the task before us, and to this end we specially commend her recommendation to assemble for prayer immediately preceding our national convention in Seattle.

Promise of a corn crop of 3,152,000,000 bushels in the United States alone coupled with recent favorable reports on world wheat and rice crops suggests, says the Trade Record of the National City Bank of New York, that the world's supply of bread and meat will be little below normal despite the shortage in the wheat fields of Russia. A 3,000,000,000 bushel corn crop in the United States alone means probably 4,000,000,000 bushels for the entire world, for the United States usually produces three-fourths of the world's corn output. And this big corn crop with its means in turn an unusually big meat supply, especially pork, for a large part of the corn of the United States is fed to swine on the farms where it is grown and the meat thus produced distributed to all parts of the world in far greater values than that of the corn in the natural state. With the changed conditions of production and transportation in Europe resulting from the war, the demand of the world upon the United States for bread and meat has continued down to the present time and the promise of an abnormally large corn crop indicates that we shall be able to respond to the world demand for meat as well as breadstuffs.

At the time of the last presidential election, says Miss Ethel Ryan, missionary to the Hopi Indians, an old Navajo Indian woman went into Mr. Lorenzo Hubbell's store at Oraibi, ten miles from here, to trade. As she looked around she saw on the wall a large picture of Warren G. Harding, which she kept studying. Finally turning to Mr. Hubbell she began to talk and the following conversation took place:

Navajo—"Who that man? He have kind face."

Mr. Hubbell—"That is the man we hope to make the great white chief."

Navajo—"You make name for me. He have honest face."

Mr. Kopti, an artist, was in the store and carefully he blocked out the name. The Indian woman went home, only to return in about six weeks with a beautiful rug she had made with Harding's name through the center.

"Beautiful," said Mr. Hubbell, "how much you want for it?"

"Nothing," replied the woman. "You send it to the man with honest face."

The rug with its story was sent to the president, who must have been impressed by the simple confidence of this primitive woman, who, although uneducated in books, life has taught to be a keen judge of human nature.

Attention is called to two corrections which should be made in the article by Frank H. Robinson on "Recommendations of the Adjustment Committee," which appeared on page 1339 of the issue for Nov. 19. Recommendation number four should read: "That no solicitation of designated gifts is to be made without the full approval, as to objective and method, of the General Board of Promotion." Recommendation number ten should read: "This recommendation was to accept the adjustments made by the various groups in their askings as worked out at Indianapolis and to secure a more equal distribution of the funds, according to the necessities of each society."

The Pastors of Western Washington were invited to an evangelistic conference held in the University Church, Seattle, Nov. 1 to 3. Over sixty pastors registered. Dr. W. B. Hinson of Portland, Oregon, was the principal speaker. His addresses were searching and spiritually uplifting. The conference was largely in the nature of a spiritual retreat. Much time was spent in prayer and these sessions of prayer brought pastors very close to one another and to the Lord. A number of the brethren opened discussions on practical topics connected with evangelism. Their messages were helpful. The influence of the conference cannot help but send those who were present back to their work with greater faith and a deeper purpose to be faithful to the greatest task of the church—winning souls to Christ.

Rev. Judson B. Thomas, for twelve years pastor of the First Church of Austin, Ill., presented his resignation Nov. 6, at the morning service. Advancing years and a desire for a rest after an active career of forty-one years as a pastor were given as his reasons. Dr. Thomas' announcement came as a profound surprise to the members of the church. Those close to him know that the last three years have been particularly trying ones. The arduous task of taking care of a church membership numbering 900 has been undermining the pastor's health, resulting in his decision to take a much needed rest and give way to a younger man. It is his desire to retire from the local church on January 1, although efforts have been made to have him extend the time. Dr. Thomas has been as much an Austin institution himself as he has made the church. He is popular with all classes, a tireless worker and a good organizer. He has made the First Church one of the strongest on the west side. One of his latest efforts has been the opening of a new Baptist Church on North Austin Avenue, which has started with an initial membership of fifty-six. It was officially dedicated on Nov. 2 as the Judson Baptist Church in honor of Dr. Thomas.

Teachers Needed in Latin-American Schools

The schools of the Home Mission Society in Mexico and Cuba have been especially unfortunate this year in the sickness of important teachers.

Mr. Gresham who went to Cuba this summer to assist Pres. Routledge in our large school at Cristo was taken sick with an old trouble and was obliged to return to the United States soon after school opened. It is very doubtful if he will be able to return to work in the tropics.

Our theological school at Saltillo, Mexico, has about forty-two students, the largest number ever enrolled. Dr. Lacy, the professor representing the Foreign Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention, has been sick and away from the school most of the fall. Bro. Trevino, the president, has within two weeks been told that he must give up work temporarily on account of his weakened physical condition. Fortunately Dr. A. B. Rudd, our general missionary in Mexico and formerly president of this school, can step into Bro. Trevino's place temporarily, and fortunately, too, we increased and greatly strengthened the faculty of the seminary this fall by the appointment of Prof. G. F. McKibben, formerly of Denison University, Granville, Ohio, but at best the teachers will be overworked during the year.

But for the sickness of these brethren, the boys' school would have been opened in connection with the theological seminary this fall. The opening will have to be postponed for a year. At that time we shall need additional teachers for Saltillo.

The Baptist

The Denominational Crisis

WE ARE living in critical days for the denomination. The facts are fully set forth in the statement of the General Board of Promotion which immediately follows these editorial pages.

THE BAPTIST this week is full of important material. But if you have time to read only a portion of these carefully selected articles, read first this statement. Then read it again. And then go over it once more paragraph by paragraph until its full import sinks in.

The business situation in the United States is acute and has been for many months. That situation has its reflection in the denomination. There is a way out and only one. That way is that the people of our churches shall look upon the pledges they have made as solemn obligations, and PAY UP.

The Lord is a preferred creditor. We have no right to play fast and loose with his money. No man can easily cancel a pledge and then expect to have the Lord's blessing upon his life or work. And yet pledges are being cancelled and men have even been transferring New World Movement money to the expenses of the local church. This is not honest; no amount of juggling can make it honest.

We need to pray over this matter, pray as we have seldom prayed. But the prayer will be ineffective unless it brings us to see things as God sees them, unless it leads us to the vision of a world lying in the evil one, unless it makes us hear the call to help, unless from it we go determined to be the helpers of the Lord in the great world battle he is fighting. No amount of pious expression will save the man or woman who mistakes phrases for the dedication of his life and his pocketbook to the Lord's cause.

Northern Baptists are good stewards of their Lord. But they have not been seeing things just as they are. They have not realized the situation. Being hard pressed, they have withheld for a time the Lord's money. And now our great societies are up against the wall. They have practically exhausted their borrowing capacity. They already have debts beyond what is safe. The work must halt and even be greatly curtailed unless the money is received. Shall not the money come, brethren, and come now?

Northern Baptists are honest. What they pledge to man they will do. And what they pledge to God they will surely perform. But let there be no delay! Difficulties which were in the way of some of the brethren have been largely removed. Reasons for non-co-operation have been reduced to the minimum. New pledges, therefore, should pile in as the old pledges are being redeemed.

Let nobody think that this is a needless scare or that things will somehow come out all right, regardless of what they do. The situation demands the immediate mobilization of all our resources. Much that we hold dear is at stake. Work that has been built up in prayer and agony is hazarded. The help of every man, woman and child must be had.

Your prayers? Yes. Your energy in seeking new pledges? Yes. Both of these things are profoundly needed. But the money you solemnly pledged to the Lord and which is now due is the first need. Back up your prayer and your work by a payment before the sun shall go down on this day.

Religion Touches Statecraft

ALL observers are agreed that at the opening of the conference on the Limitation of Armaments, the spirit of the city of Washington was religious. The hearts of the people had been deeply stirred by the tribute paid to the "unknown" and that feeling was carried on through the prayer with which the conference was opened into the meeting.

That this religious feeling had a deep effect on the conference is beyond dispute. This has been remarked upon again and again by members of the foreign delegations. And they have spoken of it with appreciation and satisfaction.

Dr. Chas. S. MacFarland, of the Federal Council, declares that delegates have noted the influence of our churches in matters of world-wide import. One such said, "It is not so in Europe; we do not look or listen to our churches. It might be better if we did." That nation is unhappy in which the religious life of the churches is so negligible that statesmen take no notice of it.

Our religious leaders, as they have thought and spoken of this conference, uttering concerning it their hopes, have not indulged in glittering generalities nor have they evaded the big issue which is presented. But they have instead made it perfectly apparent that Christian work, especially foreign mission work, is impossible in a world dominated by Mars, and that the Christian people of the country are looking for real results from the present gathering. No honeyed words will protect leaders if the conference finally breaks up without having brought substantial relief to a weary world and given to it assurance that nations have made progress in learning how to live together without constant suspicion and fighting.

The heart of America is in accord with Christian ideals. That heart is now making itself felt. Naturally the devil is stirred up. Here are men and organizations which do not want peace, which thrive on rumors of war. They must be downed.

Let us keep up the agitation. A good beginning has been made. But it is only a beginning. Let us persist until it becomes evident that all future statecraft is to be compelled to take into account the ethics of Jesus. Why should a man or a church pray, "Thy kingdom come," and not use the golden opportunity which God has now placed in our hands?

Libeling a Few Thousand Ministers

WHETHER traducing the Christian ministry helps along any movement that is worth while may be debated by anybody who thinks he has ground for debate.

If Mr. George R. Kirkpatrick is correctly quoted, he has a decided personal opinion on the subject. In a recent speech he is said to have made the statement that on Peace Sunday, Nov. 6, 250,000 Christian ministers preached sentimental sermons in favor of peace and at the same time carefully avoided letting their people know the real causes of war. And his audience (it was a Socialistic party meeting), is said to have applauded the utterance heartily.

The fact is that thousands of ministers on that day took pains to explain the real causes of war and to urge the people to attempt the removal of those causes; and barring a certain fire-eating style of expression affected by Mr. Kirkpatrick, they pointed out the very causes on which he is accustomed to lay emphasis.

Now, either he is aware of these facts or he is not. If he is not, his lack of knowledge is of such a character as to disqualify him for safe leadership; but if he is aware of them and yet makes such a statement, his disqualification is still more serious and glaring.

Thousands of religious leaders and people are intelligently and effectively doing their best to Christianize social relations. Any cause whose spokesman finds it necessary to libel them and whose audiences applaud the libel, needs sadly to acquire either new principles or a new personnel.

Protestant Troubles on the Congo

BAPTISTS in America probably have the idea that governmental difficulties, so far as missions are concerned, have long since been straightened out on the Congo. The following item, taken from the Congo News Letter, will indicate that what we understand by religious liberty is hardly in force at present:

"Serious governmental difficulties are being encountered in Protestant mission work in both French and Portuguese territory. Our friends of the Swedish Mission have the money in hand for the opening of several new stations in French Congo, but because of these difficulties have found it necessary to curtail their work and close two of their established stations. All teaching and preaching must be done in French and missionaries are required to take a course and pass an examination in French before entering upon their work as missionaries. The natives as well are required to pass examinations and hold diplomas in order to become teachers of their own people. Likewise the Portuguese government has recently put serious limitations upon Protestant missionary work in their African colonies. Touring by native Christians in evangelistic work is prohibited. All school and church work must be done in Portuguese, all books intended for use in mission schools must be submitted to and pass the censorship of the government school boards and all teachers in mission schools must pass examinations before said boards. The teaching of Portuguese history is also required. While the Portuguese government claims to grant religious freedom yet it is evidently set upon discriminating against Protestant missionary work. There can be no serious objection to a requirement that Portuguese be taught in preference to other European languages, but there is serious objection to a requirement which forbids school and mission work in the native language. Such prohibitions do not result from what the Roman Catholic missionaries are pleased to call "denationalization," but from a long standing and deep seated desire to exploit the natives and use forced labor without fear and restraint."

The Pastor's Present

CHURCHES have been known upon occasion to make the pastor a present. And doubtless like individuals they are often hard put to it to know just what would be most appropriate. The difficulty is solved for all who will heed the suggestion being made by the Ministers and Missionaries' Benefit Board which appears elsewhere in this issue.

Every man wants to make provision for his old age. Few men, especially in the ministry, are able to do all they want along this line. Insurance is expensive and ministers' salaries are not large. Now the Benefit Board is offering Baptist pastors an opportunity far beyond what any insurance company can even suggest. But there is one great difficulty in the way, namely, the first year's payment, which is 6 per cent of the salary now being received. In succeeding years this payment is much reduced.

An increasing number of churches are making the payment of the annual premium on the pastor's pension a matter for the regular budget. A great many who are not ready for this can pay the first year's premium. No present could mean more for the future of the man of God who is serving the church or bring more peace of mind in the present.

We urge upon the churches the serious consideration of this matter. Make the pastor this year a present which will make his future secure. Pay that first premium on his pension. No Christmas gift could more firmly tie together the hearts of pastor and people.

* * *

The editors wish again to call particular attention to the articles which are coming each week from the pen of Dr. Axling in Washington. We have been reading the articles and estimates appearing in the daily press written by men whose names are household words. But none of them excel in insight, in interpretation and in illuminating comment these articles which are appearing in THE BAPTIST. We should be proud that we have in our missionary organization a man of this calibre, a man who can render so valuable a service. The weakness of many articles is that the writers know the Far East as a locality of which they have read and have often some axe to grind; Dr. Axling knows it from long residence and its millions are to him real people for whose upbuilding in righteousness he has given his life. Take time enough to read these articles thoughtfully and then pass them on to your friends.

The Present Financial Situation

OCTOBER 31, 1921 marked the end of one half of the period covered by the New World Movement Program. Eighteen months have passed since the intensive campaign for subscriptions to the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund. The churches of the Northern Baptist Convention have pledged amounts far surpassing all past records. Contributions credited on pledges during the year May 1, 1920 to April 30, 1921, including advance payments on pledges, equalled 92.6 per cent of the amount estimated to be due. Yet many, if not most, of the missionary organizations—city, state and national—find themselves in a perplexing and extremely critical situation at this time. Many are handicapped with very large debts; few can go forward in the program outlined in the Survey; some are facing the possible necessity of giving up a part of their present work. What are the facts and what is the explanation?

THE FACTS ARE:

First: From April 30, 1921 the total subscriptions to the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund for the entire period, including estimated receipts of $4,000,000 from legacies, matured annuities and income on invested funds, amounted to $52,758,191, or a little over one half of the total required to finance the program of work outlined in the Survey.

Second: The total amount reported as actually collected on account of the New World Movement from April 1, 1919 to October 31, 1921, or two and one half years, is $19,903,559 or 39 per cent plus of the amount subscribed. The reason that the percentage is not larger is that the receipts during the first year of the period were not yet on the basis of the New World Movement subscriptions, the intensive campaign having been conducted at the close of that year.

Third: The receipts for the first half of the current year, May 1 to October 31, 1921 have been $2,227,689 or 51 per cent of the total collections for the same period last year.

Fourth: Unless collections for the current year exceed the total for last year, more than one million dollars will probably be added to the deficits reported by the participating organizations on April 30, 1921. Four national missionary societies and the Board of Promotion reported on that date deficits totaling $2,500,000.

Fifth: A canvass of all organizations participating in the New World

Movement indicated that on October 1, 1921, actual borrowings from banks and other sources amounted to $2,829,000 as follows: National Societies and Boards, $1,379,000; General Board of Promotion for its expense account, $616,000; State Conventions, $72,000; City Mission Societies, $162,000; to discharge Interchurch obligations, $600,000 net.

Sixth: Unless the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund is fully subscribed and paid, all of the participating organizations will be compelled to cancel the projected development and expansion of their work as approved by the denomination in the Survey and unless the additional subscriptions of $30,000,000 sought for this year are secured, many organizations will be forced to actual retrenchment.

THE EXPLANATION IS:

First: The unified denominational program as set forth in the New World Movement is far the most comprehensive ever placed before the churches of the Northern Baptist Convention. Never before has the beneficence budget of the churches included the seven national societies and boards, the thirty-four state conventions, eleven standard city mission societies, fifty-two schools, colleges and theological seminaries, together with the Convention itself, the B. Y. P. U. A. and other general and special interests. Practically all of our giving for denominational objects has been brought together in one great enterprise with the result that the funds collected for our combined beneficence budgets must be distributed over a far greater number of interests than ever before. We are apt to compare the giving of our churches for the New World Movement with what was formerly given the seven national societies and boards only, forgetting that of the total asked for in the Survey 49 per cent is for these organizations and 51 per cent is for the other participating organizations. A table is appended showing the total Survey askings of the participating organizations and the amounts actually received to date.

Second: The expense of the General Board of Promotion necessarily made an abnormally heavy draft upon the receipts of the early part of the period. The Convention at Buffalo voted that the expenditure of the first year, including the non-recurring item of the cost of the intensive campaign, as well as the expense of the second year, should be a charge upon the collections of the year May 1, 1920, to April 30, 1921, because of the necessity of making re-payment to the bank from which the funds to meet these expenses had been borrowed. Of the total amount collected to October 31, 1921, the Board of Promotion has received approximately 8 per cent. For the reasons stated a much smaller amount will be required for promotion expenses for the remainder of the period.

Third: The Convention at Buffalo and again at Des Moines, voted that payments made necessary by the outcome of the Interchurch World Movement, which it was hoped could be met from receipts in excess of the One Hundred Million Dollars, should be provided for from the collections of the years 1920-1921 and 1921-1922, this action also being taken because of the obligation to repay funds borrowed from the bank and from other sources to meet the original guarantees. Of the total collections to October 31, 1921, 8.4 per cent has been devoted to this purpose. This expenditure is not properly chargeable to denominational promotion expense but represents the cost of an Interdenominational movement in which Northern Baptists shared generously with other Christian bodies in America.

Fourth: Just at the time that the survey was approved and the New World Movement launched, there came the climax of the advance in the cost of living, affecting practically every item that enters into the expense of conducting missionary and educational work both at home and abroad. Consequently the increased receipts of the participating organizations—and all have received larger sums for their work than ever before—were quickly absorbed in meeting this increased cost of maintaining the existing work. Not only was little or no advance possible, but even continuance on the old scale has involved many of the organizations in debts unprecedented in their history.

Fifth: Subscriptions to the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund, as already stated, are only a little more than one-half of the total. The several participating organizations on that basis could not expect more than about 50 per cent of their total needs as included in the survey. Those organizations whose approved askings in the survey were wholly or largely made up of operating expenditures were confronted with the impossibility of maintaining their work as conducted prior to the New World Movement on a pro rata distribution when only about 50 per cent of the total expectancy was available. Even those organizations which had included in the survey considerable amounts for equipment would find it difficult to provide for their operating budgets if all equipment needs were deferred. The Convention at Buffalo and again at Des Moines sought to relieve the situation by authorizing a distribution on a temporary basis modified from the survey percentages. It is evident that this temporary arrangement cannot be continued with safety and readjustments have now been made looking toward a re-establishment of the survey percentages as a basis of distribution of all funds so far pledged to the New World Movement. Previous inequalities of distribution will be remedied as soon as possible.

Sixth: Included in the total amount reported as already received on the One Hundred Million Dollar Fund are many gifts designated by the donors for particular objects not included in the operating budgets of the organizations receiving them. A notable example is a large part of the Jubilee Fund of the Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission Society which is made up of gifts designated for particular buildings and special funds assigned to the several districts long before the New World Movement was projected. In accordance with the general rules of distribution all such gifts are included in the pro rata share of the organization receiving them, thereby lessening the amount available for meeting the regular operating expenditures. These needs for equipment are indeed urgent, and the generous interest of the friends who stand ready to supply them is most gratefully appreciated. It is clearly manifest, however, that the imperative need of the participating organizations is for funds that can be applied freely to the operating budget and thus make possible the continuance of the existing work.

THERE IS ONE REMEDY

and only one, for this most perplexing, and, in some cases, acutely distressing situation in which our missionary and educational interests find themselves. The denomination at Denver in 1919 launched a program which must be completed before it can be effective. Only as the entire One Hundred Million Dollars is subscribed and all pledges are paid promptly and in full, can the program of advance be fully realized. The present attainment toward the goal will leave many of our organizations crippled and unable to maintain their existing work. We cannot afford to stop short of complete fulfillment.

In view of the facts outlined in this statement, the General Board of Promotion, at its recent meeting at Indianapolis, appointed a committee consisting of Emory W. Hunt, Max Schimpf, S. J. Skevington, Mrs. W. S. Abernethy, and Grant M. Hudson, to prepare a statement to be presented to the constituency. This committee, after a study of the situation, presented the following report, which was adopted by the board:

"A survey of our financial report reveals:

"1st: That there is reason for gratitude for what has been achieved. There is ground for conviction that our co-operation must continue; that we must not return to the old con-

THE GENERAL BOARD OF PROMOTION OF THE NORTHERN BAPTIST CONVENTION One Hundred Million Dollar Fund Statement of Budgets and Receipts—by Cooperating Organizations From May 1st, 1919 to October 31st, 1921

Name of Organization.	Indianapolis Revision, Survey Budget.	Receipts on Budget.	Balance Required by Apr. 30, 1924
1. American Baptist Foreign Mission Society.....	$ 17,263,766	$ 3,400,114	$13,863,652
2. Woman's American Baptist Foreign Mission society.....	6,044,305	1,631,642	4,412,663
3. American Baptist Home Mission Society.....	10,173,790	2,211,180	7,962,610
4. Woman's American Baptist Home Mission Society.....	3,542,503	795,288	2,747,215
5. American Baptist Publication Society.....	2,299,925	636,735	1,663,190
6. Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board.....	8,550,500	680,012	7,870,488
7. Board of Education, Expense Account.....	930,000	243,448	686,552
8. Board of Education, Schools and Colleges.....	30,010,000	2,758,533	27,251,467
9. State Conventions.....	12,075,279	2,996,888	9,078,391
10. City Mission Societies.....	4,974,932	1,036,767	3,938,165
11. Northern Baptist Convention.....	60,000	16,233	43,767
12. Baptist Young Peoples' Union of America.....	75,000	28,250	46,750
13. General Board of Promotion.....	4,000,000	1,590,169	2,409,831
Total Survey Budget.....	$100,000,000	$18,025,259	$81,974,741
Organizations not in Survey.
14. Interchurch.....	2,605,771	1,680,044	925,727
15. Foreign Speaking Peoples.....	136,875*	64,390	72,485
16. American Baptist Historical Society.....	15,000*	1,081	13,919
17. Federal Council of Churches.....	105,000*	3,282	101,718
	$ 2,862,646	$ 1,748,797	$ 1,113,849
18. Undistributed and unadjusted.....		242,306	242,306
Total Distribution of Receipts as per Schedule.....		$20,016,362	$82,846,284

No. 5, Sheet No. 7, Report October 31, 1921... year's budget—no increase.

* Budgets are for three or four years based on first Fund, balance is unadjusted credits and small item of ** Includes Co-operative Work Fund and Adjustment of undistributed cash.

*** Deduct.

dition of competition with the resulting confusion and irritation.

"2nd: That the present situation, due to the fact that our pledges have reached only half way to our desires and to the fact that economic conditions have made payments slow while expenditures of the work have been rising, gives us anxiety about the work at home and abroad. We cannot think of withholding appropriations which our workers have been confidently expecting without seeing the look of disappointment in their eyes and feeling the sinking of their hearts.

"But our 'extremity is God's opportunity.' We shall thank Him for the keen experience of need which has driven us to Him. Let us pray as if all depended upon Him and then let us throw ourselves into the plans which are placed before us as if it all depended on us. The call should be to unite in service. It is a matter of record that Baptist people have never had unity of any other sort.

"Nor is the outlook as dark as it could be painted. The economic conditions are not permanent. We do not usually make our financial forecast from the receipts of May to October.

"The future is 'as bright as the promises of God.'"

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

V. INTERPRETATION OF SCRIPTURE

ONLY the believer's union with Christ gives him possession of Christ's Spirit, and enables him properly to interpret Scripture. This is only to say that he who inspired the Bible can best explain its meaning. Let us grant at once that there is a wisdom higher than the wisdom of this world, a "wisdom among those who are full-grown," as Paul declares, though it is "God's wisdom in a mystery" (1 Cor. 2:6, 7). Our experience of union with Christ enables us to understand Paul's theology, as no merely critical or literary art could do. For Paul takes Christ's own point of view. He is lifted up with Christ into God's eternity. For a time he possesses the normal independence of the human spirit, and its freedom from the limitations of space and time. Paul can see all human history unrolled before him; can see long processes condensed in their causes: in Adam's one act of sin all humanity is involved; and in Christ's atonement are included all satisfaction to the divine holiness and all provision for the salvation of men. As our Lord could truly say upon the cross: "It is finished" (John 19:30), Paul could also say: "Through one act of righteousness the free gift came unto all men to justification of life" (Rom. 5:18). So I hold that the only key to Paul's meaning, and to the meaning of the entire Scripture, is to be found in Christ, as the pre-existent Word of God, and as God manifested in space and time. As we are creatures of space and time, God in Christ has made himself a creature of space and time, in order that we may know him, love him, and be like him. Whatever Christ is or does, God is and does. In Christ, God himself dies for us, a sinner; for death is only his change from one form of being to another, or from bodily to spiritual manifestation. In Christ's cross, I see myself, as part of the whole redeemed church, to have paid the penalty of sin, and to have emerged from death forever; so that I am now risen with him, and seated with him in "the heavenlies," which are only the antechamber of heaven itself (Eph. 1:20; 2:7; Miscellanies, 1:460-471).

Let me sum up what I have said by repeating the words with which I began: The written word is the expression of the eternal Word. It is, like the eternal Word, the revelation of God in human forms and methods, but so pervaded by the divine Spirit that, when taken in its entirety and when properly interpreted it is superior to all merely human teachings. Scripture teaches not how the heavens go, but how to go to heaven; it does not teach us physical science, but it "makes us wise unto salvation" (2 Tim. 3:15). With this understanding of its object, if I can only find out what is the testimony of Scripture, I have a divine guide for my earthly way and I can replace my guesses by certainties. But it needs the same Spirit of Christ that inspired it to teach me its true meaning. It was not given for scholars alone, but for common men; and common men as well as scholars have the promise of the Holy Spirit. So the general consent of believers as to the meaning of Scripture is of more account than the surmises of critics, and the creeds and hymnology of the church are a better guide to truth than are all the conclusions of philosophers. God has "magnified his word above all his name" (Ps. 138:2) by making the Bible, in its unity, a sufficient and authoritative rule of faith and practice. Men may mistake God's meaning; the Bible corrects their errors. Christ is "made unto us wisdom" (1 Cor. 1:30), and his wisdom is better than all the wisdom of this world.

What then is the Bible? It is the personal message of the personal God to each one of us as persons, and by our personal treatment of it we are to be judged at the last day. I cannot shift my personal responsibility upon the critics and hide behind their utterances. When Jenny Geddes in Old St. Giles of Glasgow threw her three-legged stool at the minister who was introducing a papal liturgy, she was only asserting her duty to interpret the Bible for herself. That Bible carries with it its own demonstration of genuineness and authority. In it we see the pictured struggle of the eternal Word to express himself in human methods and forms, beginning with childlike teaching addressed to the infant race, conveying truth by symbol, type, ritual, legislation, as men were able to bear it, stemming the time of evil by providential interposition and apocalyptic prophecy, furnishing the key to all the past by the incarnation of the Word and his completed atonement, with promise of a completed understanding of that atonement through the teaching of his apostles. What Jesus "began to do and to teach" (Acts 1:1) he finished by the work of Paul and of John, so that we have through them "the faith once for all delivered unto the saints," so that to this completed Bible, in the foresight of Christ, the last of its chapters might close with a warning appropriate to the whole: "If any man shall add unto them, God shall add unto him the plagues which are written in this book" (Rev. 22:18, 19).

As Christ's atonement was finished upon the cross, so his teaching was finished in the works of Paul and of John, for they were only organs of the posthumous Christ. What Jesus himself taught when here in the flesh was only the introductory lectures of his theological course, to be expounded and explained after his death and resurrection, by his apostles. To them, then, we must go to learn the full meaning of his teaching. "Is the teaching of Paul or of John as authoritative as that of the incarnate Jesus?" "More so!" we reply, for what Paul and John taught was the posthumous teaching of the Lord himself. So the earlier utterances of these same apostles are to be interpreted by the later. Paul's "God sent forth his son" (Gal. 4:4) is to be explained by Paul's fuller statement in Ephesians and Colossians, and the fourth gospel is to be regarded as Christ's own rendition of his acts and words when here in the flesh. The deity and pre-existence of Christ assure to us the historicity of the gospel according to John; while the human methods of Old Testament teaching find their sufficient explanation in the limitations of him who "emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men" (Phil. 2:7). Neither Athanasius nor Augustine, Martin Luther or John Calvin, John Bunyan or John Knox have ever been able to add one jot or tittle to the truth contained in Scripture, but have rather gloried in the fact that they were only media for its circulation.

We may, therefore, well believe that the superintendence of Christ makes the written word, with all its literary and human shortcomings, a complete and final expression of the eternal Word, and gives it unity, sufficiency and authority as our rule of faith and practice (see Miscellanies, 1:251-260; 288-303; 478-493).

In all this chapter on the Interpretation of Scripture I claim to make Christ himself my sole authority. If there is philosophy here, it is a philosophy that antedates any philosophy of this world, though all that is genuine in modern philosophy is only a partial rediscovery of the

Prayer of the Aged

By DWIGHT E. MARVIN

Heavenly Father, I thank Thee for the long life that Thou hast given me, for the joys that have brightened the years, for the love that has enriched my fellowship with others and for all the gifts of Thy providence and grace. Abide with me now in old age and sanctify the days with Thy companionship.

When memory reopens the past, may no vain regrets cast a shadow over my soul, for Thou hast forgiven my sins, Thou has overruled my wayward impulses, Thou hast kept me from the evil of my own misdoings and Thou art now giving me assurances of Thy love.

Suffer me not to be depressed because of growing infirmities and waning powers, nor to be impatient with changed conditions and new ways, but help me to bear the burden of years with a quiet and restful spirit and a cheerful courage.

Enable me to maintain at all times an unwavering faith in Jesus Christ with a hope full of immortality.

May my heart be kept warm in the love of children and in sympathetic regard for the aspirations of those who are older. Keep me from outgrowing or losing sight of my own childhood and youth with its abounding joy and glowing hope.

When I near the end of my earthly life, and things of time and sense begin to fade, give me a holy confidence in the future and open my eyes to see Jesus as my Redeemer and Lord.

This I ask in His name. Amen.

philosophy which Christ has taught through Paul and John. So I hold that in a larger view of Christ, as he is revealed in Scripture, is the only means of reconciling our fundamentalists with our higher critics. I would prefer the word "literalists" to the word "fundamentalists," for the trouble with the so-called fundamentalists is that they are not fundamental enough; they do not get down to the rock-foundation, the omnipresent and eternal Christ, who has supervised in past ages the evolution of Scripture so that it represents himself in all the forms of human composition. The trouble with the "higher critics," so-called, is that they are not high enough to see that same eternal and omnipresent Christ who in Scripture represents himself as the only life and light of men. They can spell, but they have not yet learned to read. They can, with a telescope, see a fly on a barn-door a half-mile off, but they cannot see the door. They analyze the rind of the orange, but they throw away its contents. They need to look at the Bible as a whole, and to see in it the organizing and unifying Spirit of Christ. Personal experience of union with Christ would lift them out of the region of petty criticism into a larger and sounder judgment, and would enable them to see the written word as the final and complete expression of the eternal Word of God. Reconciliation between these two sincere but imperfectly informed parties in controversy can come only through a new surrender to Christ. "For He is our Peace, who made both one, and broke down the middle-wall of partition, that he might create, in himself, one new man, so making peace" (Eph. 2:14, 15).

Your Pastor's Christmas

By P. C. WRIGHT

YOU are thinking about helping your pastor to become a member of The Retiring Pension Fund provided by the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board. It will work this way: Suppose his age is forty. He has therefore twenty-five years to co-operate to age sixty-five. Suppose his salary is $2,500. His first year's dues will be 6 per cent of $2,500, that is, $150. This may be paid in one sum, or in semi-annual installments adding 1 per cent, or in quarterly installments adding 2 per cent for interest.

The board has voted that for the present year it will reduce the dues of second year membership 65 per cent. On this basis your pastor's dues for the second year would be only $52.50. It is not expected that they will be more than this any year to age sixty-five. His total payment therefore for the twenty-five years of membership would amount to $1,410 on this basis.

At sixty-five his pension would be 25/35ths, or 5/7ths of one-half of $2,500—assuming that you do not reduce his salary. On the other hand, if you increase his salary, his pension will be correspondingly greater. On the present salary he would receive $890 annually from sixty-five on. In other words, on an investment of $1,410, in a period of twenty-five years, he would receive at sixty-five and annually thereafter $890, which at 5 per cent is the income on $17,800.

Nor is this all. In the case of men who enter the membership in middle life the board reserves the right to add a supplemental grant in addition to the $890 at the time the member actually retires from salaried activity.

Can you make your pastor a better Christmas present than to start him in such a participation?

Write and ask us how it would work out in the case of your pastor. Address The Ministers and Missionaries' Benefit Board, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

What Shall They Read?

"Some are mystics and some are dogmatists; some relish theology and some do not. Some delve deep and others skim the surface." All are good but tastes differ.

By FRANCIS C. STIFLER

SINCE of the making of books there is no end it is necessary for Dr. Eliot and others to suggest lists that have ends, of books that will help. Religious books flourish in great variety and number for the same reason that many restaurants thrive in one city block—because people's tastes are different. Some are mystics and some are pragmatists, some relish theology and some do not. Some delve deep and others skim the surface. But in spite of all these varieties of taste and predisposition there are certain principles which if observed by pastor and people in the use of religious literature will work mightily for the straightening of the personal and corporate life in the local church.

Mr. Layman, A Word, Please

The first of these principles might be one that is for the pew alone. It is this, Read more religious books, Mr. Layman. Count up the list you have read in five years. None since Hankey's "A Student in Arms"? What? You did not read that? And you are still missing books just as good. Drop into the book-store in your town and look the proprietor in the eye as you ask him to show you his books on religious topics. He will not think you are queer, for there is a large demand for religious books. And he will tell you which books are selling the best. Make a list of these and look them over. Then talk with your pastor about them. Make a start. For here is the fact. You are reading daily papers and trade journals and magazines that are dealing with world affairs and for the most part the presentation you find there if not un-Christian, is at least un-religious. Take the question of Japan. Many popular voices in the press would make you think she were bent solely on war. Read the little booklet of Dr. Axling, our statesman missionary in Japan, entitled "On the Trail of the Truth About Japan." Your pastor has it, for every pastor was sent a copy by the General Board of Promotion. Do more reading of religious books.

Second—for pastor and people alike, read big books, not big in paper and ink, but big in ideas. Some of the biggest books, like the Epistle to the Galatians, are the shortest in reading matter. Read authorities. There are not many profound theological works appearing just now. The world is in too frothy a state. This is hard on the preacher, for he should read one such book, or two, each year.

For the busy layman and the busier housewife who may not be able to bring to their reading so much of technical equipment books like Babson's "Religion and Business," written in lay language, is a splendid stimulus. For more devotional study use Mr. Fosdick's trilogy of wonderful little handbooks, "The Meaning of Prayer," "The Meaning of Faith" and "The Meaning of Service." No devotional books since Pilgrim's Progress have had a greater sale. Or for books of a different sort for devotional use, those by F. W. Boreham have met a world-wide need. And the biggest seller of the present season is Swain's "What and Where Is God." Its very title reminds us of Ralph Trine's "In Tune with the Infinite" which has run through scores of editions. Read books with big ideas.

Another principle that should stand by itself is that all of us should read more biography. Every American woman should read the Life of Alice Freeman Palmer, Lincoln and Gladstone. Yes, and "The Americanization of Edward Bok," for men—at least one good biography a season. It is great for our wills when they grow flabby to read biography.

Read for One Another

A fourth principle is this: Pastor and people should read for the sake of each other. It is very easy to build a wall of books between the pulpit and the pew. A wise pastor will listen to the suggestions that come to him from his people. If they are all reading "Main Street" he should. If a certain book, obscure it may be, has reached a worshipper's heart, the pastor may use it as a trail into that heart himself. And when the pastor runs across a popular untechnical treatment of some great spiritual theme he should advertise it among his people.

There recently came to hand from the Revell Press a little handbook by Prof. F. B. Oxtoby of Huron College, South Dakota, entitled "Making the Bible Real." It is a veritable primer but if every member of a given church should read that book, the preacher could say twice as much in his half hour sermon each Sunday morning because his people would be intelligent in certain fundamental Biblical backgrounds. If every pastor could prescribe a single course of reading for his people in preparation for each Sunday—a new day would come in our churches. At least a step can be taken in this direction.

The fifth principle might be suggested in the language of 1 Corinthians 3:20 and 21. It is not Paul or Cephas or Apollo. It is Paul and Cephas and Apollo. All things are ours. Read all sides. If your bent is conservative read what the liberal has to say. If you are liberal, know the conservative viewpoint. Does not a good measure of our denominational uneasiness come from our disposition to look at truth from only one angle and to listen to no type of teacher but one? Read all sides.

Read Intelligently

And finally, read the Bible intelligently. In every home there should be at least a one volume commentary or dictionary, either Hastings or Dummelon's, or Peake's. Or better still, many have found great stimulus in reading familiar New Testament passages in one of the modern translations—Moffatt's, or Weymouth's or the Twentieth Century New Testament. Some day some wise publisher is going to print the King James and one of these New Testaments side by side on the page. No more usable commentary for the average busy layman could be found.

Among other books that are helping just now might be mentioned the works on church efficiency by Dr. Agar. Every church should have a set of them. On the highest spiritual plane they interpret for every type of Christian worker the details of his task. Charles R. Brown's "The Religion of a Layman" is a most stimulating study of the Sermon on the Mount. Dr. J. J. Ross' "Thinking Through the New Testament" is meeting, if judged by its sale, a nation-wide need, and Lyman Abbott's "What Christianity Means to Me—a Spiritual Autobiography" is one of the great books of the year.

Wilmette, Ill.

The Washington Conference—China in the Limelight

By WILLIAM AXLING

SENSATION NUMBER TWO

THUS far surprise has followed surprise in the Conference. The method of procedure as anticipated by the agenda has been shattered. Delegations that came with a cut-and-dried program have had to do some swift maneuvering in order to keep their place in the line. In the opening session Secretary Hughes moved off with such speed in opening up the question of disarmament that he had the delegates all panting for breath in their effort to keep up with him.

In the second great question before the Conference—problems of the Pacific and the Far East—China naturally loomed large in the background, but only in the background. It was expected that much would be said about China, but evidently China herself was not expected to say much. International courtesy demanded that she be invited, but there seemed to be a feeling on the part of some that her role should be that of an interested on-looker; not an active participant.

However, when this question was brought up for discussion and the delegates were politely saying to each other, "after you Alfonso," out stepped China and took the center of the stage.

A NEW CHINA TO THE FORE

Minister Sze, the ranking member of the Chinese delegation, in presenting China's case threw Oriental ways to the winds and in the blunt, bluff straight forward ways of the West presented China's proposals. Neither did he resort to China's traditional policy of playing one nation off against another. He appealed to the consciences of the nations represented and not to their passions and spirit of national rivalry. He summoned the delegates before the bar of justice and asked them to at one and at the same time look China and their consciences squarely in the face.

He did not whine about Japan and single her out for an attack—as is the fashion in many quarters these days—fearlessly he pointed his accusing finger at every man around that table and said, "Thou art the man." In no uncertain terms he invited England, Japan, France, American commercial interests, in fact, the whole bunch, to the penitent's bench and urged them to change their ways.

In ten brief points he demanded that they observe China's territorial integrity and her political and administrative independence. He objected to outside nations making treaties between themselves that affect China without making her a party to the agreement. He denounced treaties that in the past have been forced upon China against her will. He asked that as soon as China is worthy of it extra-territoriality be removed and she be made in deed and in truth the mistress of her own house. He offered to apply the "open door" principle to all of China. He suggested that some permanent international agency be established whose responsibility it shall be to see that these broad principles are actually lived up to by the nations in their relations with China.

It was a masterly presentation and made from a high plane. It appealed to that which is highest and best in men and in nations. It had in it the tone of a nation which feels that it has been outraged. It was vibrant with the note of a people who are coming to an understanding of their just rights. It had the ring of a nation coming to a consciousness of its true strength. It hit home hard.

THE NATIONS ON THEIR KNEES

Almost immediately one penitent advanced to the bench. France, in Indo-China alone, holds a territory populated by twenty million people. She holds Kwang Chowan under lease. In the south of China she claims Kwansi, Yunan and Kweichow as her "sphere of influence." In response to China's presentation the French delegation at once put itself on record as "desiring to aid China in realizing her aspirations, territorial, political and commercial." France offered to give up Kwang Chowan if England will give up Wei Hei Wei and Japan withdraws from Shantung. She announced herself as willing to surrender extraterritorial privileges if the other powers would do the same, "whenever China can give adequate security and justice to foreigners." She declared herself as in favor of open dealings of the Powers with China and against secret negotiations. Indo-China, however, having come under French control from Annan and not from China direct does not come under consideration; according to Colonial Minister Sarraut, who spoke for the French delegation on this question. Up to date this is the most outspoken and finest reaction that has been made public.

England who holds Wei Hei Wei, claims the vast and rich Yangste valley as her "sphere of influence" and has covered it with her railroad concessions, has intimated that she has no strong objection to giving up Wei Hei Wei and other territory in China held in a similar way. She declares that she stands ready to perpetuate the "open door," give up extra-territorial rights when China is ready for that step and to do everything possible to "rehabilitate China and enable her to resume her proper place in the hierarchy of the world." Italy, Holland and Belgium who are not directly related to this question stand with France.

The Japanese delegation has declared its willingness to accept the ten points laid down by Minister Sze "as a basis for discussion." Sensitive over the fact that her oft-repeated declaration that she would withdraw from Shantung has not been taken by many at its face value, she points to that declaration as indicating her attitude toward that part of China's proposals. Baron Kanda, speaking as a member of the delegation, says, "What Japan wants is a stable and prosperous China. We ask for no special privilege there, simply for equal opportunity for all. We sincerely wish to see China work out her own salvation. We want to trust her as a grown personality and patiently give her time to solve her own problems."

Many will be ready to charge Japan's cautiousness in dealing with this question to the fact that in recent years she has been the greatest sinner in her dealings with China. Doubtless for Japan to accept China's ten points would mean an absolute about face in her policies toward her neighbor across the Yellow Sea.

But there are other reasons that cause her to be cautious. As nations, England, France, America and others represented in this Conference will move on out to their destiny's goal no matter what happens in China. Not so with Japan. Japan's future as a nation is inseparably tied up with China. If it is true that Japan can make or break China it is equally true that China has it within her power to make or break Japan. Their interests are absolutely one. Japan's whole future as a nation depends on a right solution of the Chinese problems. Staring the Japanese delegation in the face as they consider this question are sixty million of their nationals, millions of whom must be fed by means of the new industrial order which Japan is inaugurating and which depends for its success on the raw materials and the trade which China alone can provide. And when a nation is seeking for a solution of problem with which its destiny is linked, it cannot fail to move forward with caution. Her reaction to China's appeal, however, is clear. She too stands in penitent's line.

The American delegation's attitude is made clear in the following resolutions which were presented by Mr. Root:

(1) To respect the sovereignty, the independence and the territorial and administrative integrity of China.

(2) To provide the fullest and most unembarrassed opportunity to China to develop and maintain for herself an effective and stable government.

(3) To use their influence for the purpose of effectually establishing and maintaining the principles of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations throughout the territory of China.

(4) To refrain from taking advantage of the present conditions in order to seek special rights or privileges which would abridge the rights of the subjects or citizens of friendly states and from countenancing action inimical to the security of such states.

One would like to hear the American commercial interests, with their exploiting concessions in China which often play havoc with the nation's integrity and independence, declare their attitude in the face of China's appeal.

CHINA'S NEW DAY

All of the eight delegations attending the Conference unanimously adopted Mr. Root's resolutions. Thus great progress has already been made toward the solution of this question which was so freighted with danger.

China's hour has struck. Within her own national life, young China is forging to the front actuated by new ideals and possessed by a new spirit. The three main representatives of China here are young men. All are American trained. Minister Sze is a Cornell man, Dr. Koo is a Columbia man. Dr. Wang, the third delegate, and Dr. Chi, chief adviser to the delegation, were both trained in America.

Here in Washington it is an open secret that Ex-Secretary of State Robert Lansing is a paid adviser to the Chinese government. Dr. Paul S. Reinsch, Ex-American Minister to China, is also here doing trojan service in China's behalf. But even granted that China's delegates have superb coaches you can't get results like that unless there is significant stuff in those who are being coached.

In China's relation to the outside world, the nations, sick of selling their souls for sordid spoils, stand ready to brother her in her hour of need. China's golden age lies not in the past, but in the future.

With Books and Readers

Books That Have Helped

Discriminating readers open their private libraries to THE BAPTIST and tell about some books they have read with interest in recent months.

DIVINITY PROFESSOR FINDS THESE INTERESTING

I have selected three books which I believe would be of general interest, the reading of which puts one in touch with important phases of religious thought today.

1. "Progressive Religious Thought in America," by Prof. J. W. Buckham, of the Pacific School of Religion, is a very suggestive study of some of the great leaders of religious thought during the past generation. It is an excellent introduction to a consideration of the questions of our own day. I was impressed by the fact that some of the greatest men were pastors, who evidently found time to study as well as to administer their churches.

2. "The Pulpit and American Life," by Prof. Arthur S. Hoyt, of Auburn Theological Seminary, is a beautifully written, sympathetic study of preaching and preachers in America. It makes one feel the greatness of the preacher's vocation. Especially encouraging is his verdict that preaching today is holding its own in strength as compared with former times.

3. "Modern Premillennialism and the Christian Hope," by Prof. Harris F. Hall, of Garrett Biblical Institute, is a remarkably well-balanced and able discussion of one of the prominent issues in modern Christian thinking. His careful scriptural study, his illuminating historical survey, and his fine constructive interpretation make it extremely valuable for all who want to know the significance of the doctrine of the Kingdom of God.

The University of Chicago.

GERALD BIRNEY SMITH.

MRS. MONTGOMERY NAMES NINE

I am glad to supply a list of books that have interested me:

"The Jews of History," Glover (Doran), a reverent, sane, fresh and suggestive study of the great life of all time.

"What and Where Is God?" Swain (Macmillan), a book that will bring light to more problems and settle more questions than any recent book I know.

"The Mirrors of Downing Street," by a "Gentleman with a Duster" (Putnam), deliciously vivid and irreverent studies of the great and near great in the England of today.

"Outwitting Our Nerves," Jackson (The Century Co.), a sane study of the applications of psycho-analysis to practical uses.

"I Believe: Sermons on the Apostles' Creed," Kennedy (Doran), a series of thought-arresting discussions of the great affirmations of the Apostles' Creed. This is a tremendously vital book; each chapter begins with a question and ends in affirmation.

"The Girls' Year Book" (Woman's Press), one of the most charming collections of selected daily readings from the New Testament, together with real prayers—a choice gift for a young girl.

"Alcohol and the Human Race," Hobson (Revell), a real treasure house of the facts about alcohol. Ought to be the basis of concerted and consecutive treatment by the pulpit. A book no leader can afford to miss.

"Childhood and Character," Hartshorne

(The Pilgrim Press), a wonderful book for teachers and parents. It brings the tested results of modern psychology and pedagogy to bear on the character development of children; gives real help to parents in solving the problems of religious education.

"The Science of Power," Kidd (Putnam), a really big book; one that should be read in these days of world reorganization. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY.

CHICAGO PASTOR LIKES SOLID FOOD

H. G. Wells, "Outline of History." The other day my brother picked up my copy of Wells' History with the remark, "I guess I'll try to find out a bit more about what I am, and why!" That suggests the value of this History. History is the record of the origins and experiences of the race; and what we are, either as individuals or as a race, is the result of inheritance and experience. Now, this History is the first thoroughgoing attempt ever made to pass in review the whole course of history, so that we may understand what we are, and why, and whither tending. It would be manifestly impossible to do such a thing with absolute scientific accuracy throughout, so that criticism on that score is quite beside the point. There is no question that this is a masterly effort.

Peake's "Commentary on the Bible." I haven't read it through yet, and perhaps never shall. But I have used it enough to know that it is the needed help to one who wants the results of our best and most recent liberal-conservative scholarship in usable form.

Richard L. Swain, "What and Where Is God?" Some serene souls, happily (perhaps) live untroubled by religious doubt. But those who have groped in that darkness will rejoice in this hand stretched out to lead to the undimmed Light. This book will help many to attain a profounder faith than can be the portion of one who has not gone through the dark places.

CHAS. T. HOLMAN.

PRACTICE, PROBLEMS AND PROSE POESY

Three books I have found interesting and helpful the past year are, "The Social Teachings of the Prophets and Jesus," by Kent; "How Jesus Met Life Questions," by Elliott; "The Home of the Echoes," by Boreham. The first sets forth the social ideals of the prophets, of Jesus and of the followers of Jesus. It is informing, practical and very readable. It can be appreciated readily without a lot of previous study on the subject.

The book by Elliott is one of the problem discussion series. It follows the life of Jesus chronologically. It discusses those problems which Jesus met which are not unlike problems each of us must meet. It is arranged for both personal and class study with topics and questions that are thought-provoking.

"The Home of the Echoes" is the latest of Boreham's collection of religious essays. They are treated in a way characteristic of the author. He takes the most common things ordinarily overlooked by the most of us and makes them tell a lesson of value.

These books are entirely different among themselves in character and contents, but alike in that they are refreshing and stimulating and within the range of understanding of all of us.

Topeka, Kans. CHAS. F. MATHEWS.

Best Sellers

CHICAGO HOUSE

List of best selling religious books, month of November, American Baptist Publication Society, Chicago, Ill.

- RICHARD LARUE SWAIN
"What and Where Is God?" .....$1.50
SHERWOOD EDDY
"Everybody's World" ..... 1.90
FRED A. AGAR
"Modern Money Methods" ..... 1.00
ROGER W. BABSON
"Making Good in Business" ..... 1.25
T. R. GLOVER
"Jesus in the Experience of Men" .. 1.90
H. E. TRALLE & GEO. E. MERRILL
"Planning Church Buildings" .... 1.25
JAMES S. KIRTLEY
"You and Your Church" ..... 1.25
JAMES ASA WHITE
"Our B. Y. P. U." ..... .75
H. E. TRALLE
"Story Telling Lessons" ..... .75
CHARLES R. BROWN
"The Religion of a Layman" ..... 1.25
CHARLES J. MAJOR.

PHILADELPHIA HOUSE

The following we find to be the list of the best selling books in our Philadelphia store:

- "I Believe," Kennedy; Doran, $1.50.
"Modern Money Methods," Agar; A. B. P. S., $1.00.
"What and Where Is God?" Swain; Macmillan, $1.50.
"By Paths to Forgotten Folks," Hayne; A. B. P. S., $1.25.
"Intention of His Soul," Simpson; Doran, $2.00.
"Friday's Footprints," Applegarth; A. B. P. S., $1.50.
"Making Good in Business," Babson; Revell, $1.25.
"Home of the Echoes," Bonham; Methodist, $1.75.
"What Christianity Means to Me," L. Abbott; Macmillan, $1.75.

It is impossible to tell you the best books at our various branch houses owing to the limited time that you must have this information at hand. It would necessitate me writing to the various houses for them to furnish me this information as the list varies from time to time and also it varies according to the different cities. If you desire it I could write them and furnish you this at a later date, or you might write them direct.

It is impossible to tell also just why the above books seem to be popular. Sometimes the reputation of the author and sometimes the subject matter makes a book popular and we have also found that sometimes a book has a great sale without either of the above qualifications.

H. E. CRESSMAN.

COLPORTER-MISSIONARY POPE organized a church in Rucker Canyon near Webb, Ariz., June 12. As a result of a meeting before the organization four were converted and were baptized. Rucker Canyon is the center of a large community of cowmen and ranchers and this is the only church organization for miles in any direction. The church has a live Sunday school. There should be a pastor for the Sulphur Springs Valley, including Rucker Canyon and Gleeson churches.

Picked from Our Bookshelves

President Taft Commends Three

The Life and Letters of St. Paul; David Smith, D.D.; Doran; $6.00.

This volume easily places Dr. Smith and Sir W. M. Ramsey as the foremost living authorities on matters pertaining to Paul. The book is written in a fascinating way, is remarkably comprehensive, gives the additional light which has come from recent archaeological discoveries, is modern in approach, yet constructive and conservative, and taken all in all, gives the best up-to-date life story and account of the writings of the most influential follower of the Lord Jesus Christ in the history of the Christian Church.

Concerning Jesus Christ, the Son of Man; William Cleaver Wilkinson, D.D., LL.D.; The Griffith & Rowland Press; $1.75.

Dr. A. H. Newman speaks of this book as one that "will probably be accepted by evangelical Christians as the best life of Christ ever written and which is, no doubt, a theological masterpiece." Strictly speaking, I prefer to follow the idea of the author himself, and say that he gives us "not a life," but rather a series of remarkably brilliant pen pictures and sketches of outstanding facts, principles, and incidents in the life of Jesus. The late Dr. Wilkinson, who during the last fifty years was undoubtedly the foremost critic in the English language of sermons and sermonizers, approaches the Son of Man only to do Him reverence and honor. He who so keenly saw both the strength and weakness of other great religious leaders pauses and has only positive statements to make concerning his supreme hero who was also the Son of God.

Menno Simons—His Life, Labours, and Teachings; John Horsch; Mennonite Publishing House, Scottsdale, Pa.

As a biographer, Dr. Horsch is something of a novice, but as a collector and compiler of facts concerning one of the most neglected parts of church history, he has placed every student for years to come under great obligation. This field is of peculiar interest to Baptists inasmuch as in many places our lines of investigation run parallel with and often merge into Mennonite history. Apart from the practice of immersion, which some of the Mennonite branches observe as faithfully as do the Baptists, their principles and the history of the same are so Baptistic that we are not surprised that at times it is hard to distinguish between some Mennonite and some Baptist churches. Dr. Horsch's contribution is by far the most valuable which has been made in this field of historical research for many years. He has collected not only many facts, but has collated many extracts from Menno Simons which put the reader in personal contact with that great light of the Reformation period. Geo. W. Taft.

For Bible Teachers

Thinking Through the New Testament, by J. J. Ross, Chicago; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; $1.50.

This volume in the main consists of lectures the author delivered to the classes of the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary. The contents are composed of a cursory study of all the books of the New Testament, each book taken separately. The study opens with a brief critical history of the book and its author and gives at a glance a digest of the book. Bible students will find the volume a helpful and exceedingly convenient reference work on the New Testament. The content, purpose and authorship of each book are at once spread before him.

Self-Help in Teaching, by Huber W. Hurt; The MacMillan Company, New York; $1.00.

Concise, analytical, suggestive, stimulating, it carries one rapidly over the field of modern pedagogy, with a simplicity of statement that puts the ordinary reader in possession of the essentials of successful teaching, whether in public or in private instruction, in church schools or secular schools. Vocabulary and syntax are a trifle lame in spots, but those spots can be overlooked for the sake of the general usefulness of the book, which is written for private reference rather than for class study.

Roads to Childhood, by Annie Carroll Moore; New York, George H. Doran Co.; $1.50.

A modest volume which will be invaluable to the librarian, the parent, the settlement-worker, the teacher—in fact, to every one who comes in contact with children. From a rich fund of knowledge gained in pioneer work with children at the New York Public Library and elsewhere, the author estimates the inherent value of an extensive list of books for the young, some by familiar writers, much comparatively unknown. And, by apt illustration or logical analysis, the precise use is indicated. Let no one get the idea that this is simply a technical volume for specialists. It is extremely interesting for its side-lights on general literature, its many clever characterizations, its clarity of style and thought and its interest of subject.

Making the Bible Real, by Frederic B. Oxtoby; Fleming H. Revell Co., New York. $1.00, net.

An elementary running sketch of the Bible, with maps and tables, the whole put up in a clear and lively style. Good sketches from which to prepare talks for Sunday school institutes and conventions.

Helps to Bible Study

A Dictionary of Religion and Ethics, edited by Shailer Mathews and Gerald Birney Smith; New York, The MacMillan Company; $8.

A convenient one-volume dictionary of about 500 pages, likely to be used by its possessor far more than many-volumed dictionaries. It attempts to set forth the results of modern study in the psychology of religion, the history of religions, the present status of religious life in America, Europe and the most important mission fields, and the important phases of Christian belief and practice. It covers both social and individual ethics. In its preparation about 100 specialists have cooperated.

We have read many of the significant articles in the volume. So far as we can determine it is not a volume of controversy or propaganda. The policy generally followed has been to have articles written by those in sympathy with the subjects in order that a sympathetic understanding may be had, if desired, by the reader. This is true, for instance, of the article on Christian Science, although we cannot help wishing that there had been some critical appraisal of its philosophy.

The historical viewpoint is followed. The question of the old or the new theology, in the common understanding of those terms, is not involved. The attempt is to set forth what terms mean and what men have believed or taught rather than what they should believe.

The volume is prepared for ministers, Sunday school teachers and general readers. It will certainly be found very valuable by such. If intelligently used it is bound to give largely increased value to the teaching in our Sunday schools.

From Genesis to Revelation, by Mildred Berry; New York, The MacMillan Co.; $2.00.

This volume will profit much from the especially high recommendation given it in the "introduction" by Dr. John Timothy Stone, a deserving tribute. It is the Bible content presented in a series of twenty-eight chapters, something similar to Dr. Smith's "Old and New Testament History," though not as elaborate and critical. The chapters are simple stories of the books, characters, and events of the Bible. They are free from all attempts at biblical criticism and interpretations. Here and there explanations are made.

Old Testament Prophecy, by Frank K. Sanders; New York, Charles Scribner's Sons; $1.25.

One of the concise handbooks of the "Life and Religion Series" for the use of individuals, Bible classes and colleges. A rapid survey of the prophetic material of Old Testament showing how the teaching developed until there came the interpretation of religion as a missionary enterprise. A book to be studied hand in hand with the Bible. From the modern standpoint, of course.

Great Leaders of Hebrew History, by Henry Thatcher Fowler, the MacMillan Company, New York; 280 pages.

Third in a series of Biblical history, it is prepared for high school students. As a story for reading, it is readable in a high degree, having the narrative quality that catches and holds the interest of the reader. It is organized, however, for use as a study book, with proper topical heading and with references for side reading. Its interpretation of the Bible is in the free modern style of the best universities. The young person who reads it or studies it in the high school will carry into life a new and vital interest in Bible history and in the Bible as a body of literature of the highest spiritual and practical worth.

Church and Pulpit

Modern Money Methods for the Church, by F. A. Agar; Philadelphia, The Judson Press; $1.

There is nothing better on this important subject. Both the working principles and the mechanical processes are discussed. Churches which have tried out the methods here discussed are most enthusiastic, as all such are bound to be. Every pastor should possess this manual.

The Roman Catholic Bible and the Roman Catholic Church, by Allen W. Johnston; Fleming H. Revell Co., New York; $1.25, net.

The author, a business man, attempts a courteous and temperate confutation of the doctrines of the Roman Catholic Church by quotations from the Douay version of the Bible which is accepted as authoritative by the Roman Church.

Planning Church Buildings, by Henry Edward Tralle; Philadelphia, The Judson Press; $1.25.

One of the Judson Training Manuals for the school of the church. We wish that every church intending to build would, through its committee, become familiar with the contents of this manual and would then get in touch with the Department of Architecture of the Home Mission Society. Things would then be done right. We should have buildings more beautiful in appearance and better suited to the work and worship of Baptist churches. Churches which are thinking of remodeling would also be greatly helped.

The Christian Preacher, by A. E. Garvie; Charles Scribner's Sons; $3.50.

One of those books on preaching which one reads many times and feels is a rich addition to his library. The author is both scholarly and reverent. The book contains three main divisions: The History of Preaching, The Credentials, Qualifications and Functions of the Preacher, and The Preparation and Production of the Sermon. We quote what one enthusiastic preacher has said of the volume: "Dr. Garvie magnifies the place of preaching in the life of the church. He relates the witness of the preacher to the worship and work of the church in a masterly fashion. He shows that God's revelation must precede and evoke our religion; that God is worshipped in the humble and obedient acceptance of His preached Word, and that God's approach in grace through His gospel must come before man's appeal to God in faith through prayer and praise. He emphasizes the inseparable relation between preaching and the work of the church. For instance: We cannot do rightly unless we know truly. God's will must be understood to be done. Pious efforts and charitable schemes may be without the guidance and control of the wisdom of God; but genuinely Christian work there cannot be without the instruction and direction which the preaching of the Word of God alone can give."

Jesus and Paul

The Origin of Paul's Religion, by Professor J. Graham Machen of Princeton Theological Seminary; published by the Macmillan Company, New York; $3.00.

"The religion of Paul was not founded upon a complex of ideas derived from Judaism or from Paganism. It was founded upon the historical Jesus. But the historical Jesus upon whom it was founded was not the Jesus of modern reconstruction, but the Jesus of the whole New Testament and of Christian faith; not of a teacher who survived only in the memory of his disciples, but the Saviour who after his redeeming work was done still lived and could be loved." In this statement is the author's conclusion, and it incorporates the thesis to which his long and elaborate argument is addressed. The book is composed of lectures delivered at Union Theological Seminary in Virginia.

Suppose now that you regard the "Higher Criticism," in matter, method and conclusion, as an invention of Satan to be avoided and abominated. Then suppose that one comes along who uses the data and methods of the "Higher Criticism" to confute the conclusions of the other "Higher Critics" and to sustain historically orthodox Christianity. Would you call his "Higher Criticism" also a device of Satan? Whether you would or no, here it is—a stimulating book for the studious pastor and for the scholarly layman.

The Galilean; the Permanent Element in Religion, by Nathaniel Micklem; London, James Clarke and Co.; $2.

An unique presentation of the character of Jesus the Christ, considering him in his home life, as a friend, a reformer, a teacher, and as a revealer (Son) of God. Whenever a devout student portrays the life of Jesus he usually reveals new colors in the divine character which had not been considered before by the average reader. This volume is a study of Jesus from different viewpoints that uncover graces and attributes which robe him in new attractiveness and dignities.

The Story of Paul, as Told by Himself, by Edward Leigh Pell; New York, Fleming H. Revell Co.; fifty cents.

This volume is one of a series by the same author in which we have the Life of Joseph, of David and other Bible heroes. In this volume Paul is made to tell the story of his own life in a colloquial manner as is recorded in the Acts of the Apostles; and a very interesting autobiography it is—only we could wish it were longer. It refreshes the memory of the adult reader and captivates the attention and interest of young readers. This reviewer read it all through, and never was tired a moment.

Paul the Interpreter of Christ, by Professor A. T. Robertson; New York, George H. Doran Company.

This popular author needs no titular letters nor official designations to introduce him to the reading Christian public. Possibly no American religious critical writer is better and more favorably known. He is scholarly, constructive, sane, free from exaggerated averments and expressions, and trustworthy in his many quotations and references. His erudition is beyond question. The present volume comes in an opportune time. The air is full of overments and hints that the conservative pulpit and the evangelical church are preaching and supporting a Pauline Christianity as distinct from the doctrines Jesus Christ declared. Prof. Robertson shows that Paul was but a pupil of Jesus; an unfold of his teachings and interpreter of his claims. The facts and great doctrines of Christianity discussed in the letters are shown to exist in germ in the teachings of the Master as reported by his biographers. We venture this criticism on the volume: it goes beyond what its title sets forth. We believe much more could have been pertinently and needfully written by so able an author on the title subject. The chapters on Paul as a church architect, his independence, statesmanship, pastor, patriotism, and center of Greek culture are very interesting and informing; but they are outside the subject presented on the title page.

What Jesus Teaches about Prayer, by Edward Leigh Pell; New York, Fleming H. Revell Co., $1.50.

We have read this book "from cover to cover" and have laid it nearby for re-reading at our earliest convenience.

The heart of the book is to show that according to the Master's teaching praying is not pressing for favors from God—not a congeries of petitions and pleadings—but the soul coming into harmony with God, and from that communion receiving what it needs from the Father. He discusses the old problems. If three-fourths of our preachers were to read this volume thoughtfully pulpit praying would be reconstructed; prayer meetings would be reborn and many doubts and misgivings about prayer would vanish. The style is lucid, terse, incisive, and epigrammatic. The language is almost monosyllabic.

I Believe: Sermons on the Apostles' Creed, by Rev. G. A. Studdert Kennedy, minister of St. Paul's, Worcester, England; Geo. H. Doran Company, New York; $2.00.

Not an elucidation of the famous creed, but each part of it is made a subject of a discourse or "sermon" in which the author with enviable freedom flings censures, criticisms and explosive epigrams. He accepts the "creed" with his own construction as to meaning and definitions, and these are certainly original in the historical theology of the "creed," but quite familiar in Unitarian and other "liberal" literature. The preacher is a master of terse expressions, catchy terms, and colloquialisms that discount Billy Sunday at his best.

Miscellaneous Books

The Romance of American Life and Progress, by Rev. Robert Lee Webb; Philadelphia, The Judson Press; $1.00.

A booklet of eighty pages. So wonderful have the growth and progress of the United States been in territory, population and wealth, and in the realization of political and religious ideals that they appear to the author a romance rather than a record of facts and events which they are. The little book is a congestion of a vast amount of information presented in cogent form. The prophet-author has a most optimistic vision of the future of the country as the very land of promise. A convenient vade mecum to a public speaker or writer.

Prodigal Daughters, by Joseph Hocking, New York; F. H. Revell Co. $1.75.

Outful sons and undutiful daughters! The tragedy of girls who in war-time have tasted freedom and cast off all parental restraint! It is told of England; is it true of America? Has the modern girl no innate modesty? Is she prepared to scrap all conventions? If so, what of the outcome? This story is clean and gripping, but also startling. The great question is, "Are the conditions pictured true to fact?"

By-Paths to Forgotten Folks, by Coe Hayne. Philadelphia: The Judson Press. $1.25.

Coe Hayne is a natural story-teller. He sees the dramatic possibilities of a situation and presents them with vigor and charm. That is why this volume of stories of real life in Baptist home mission fields is so interesting. He knows the Indian—Mono, Hopi, and Navajo; he has lived and worked with the frontier missionary pastor; he has looked with sympathetic eyes on the homely lot of the New Americans and has seen not merely the problems but the living people of Latin America. All these people, as he transfers them to his pages, are real people and the gospel with which they are touched is a living gospel. This book is recommended by the Department of Missionary Education for supplementary reading and study in connection with the book, "From Survey to Service," which is the adult home mission study book for 1921-22. It is also listed in the National Missionary Reading Contests. The Baptist commends it, whether for study or home reading. The stories are interesting in themselves and they throw light on our great home mission enterprise.

Immigration and the Future, by Frances Kellor; New York, George H. Doran Co.

This is not a book for the shallow-minded partisans. He who is the victim of his own prejudices and partisan politics had better let it alone. The resistless logic of its well-marshalled facts, the pungency of their statement, and the clearly-defined conclusions would too deeply stir up the mud-bottom of a shallow pool! Here is a book for thinkers. Would to heaven some of our loud-mouthed politicians who foolishly imagine that the race problem in this country is going to be settled on a basis of asinine appeals to racial hatreds and prejudices, and that in the meantime such friction can be safely used as a basis for political juggling for votes, would retire to some quiet spot and honestly study this book. Every honest American, every man and woman who feels the slightest responsibility of citizenship, every person who believes that a democratic state upon this continent must and shall endure free and undiluted by influences that endanger its institutions—all owe it to themselves to study this book, digest its contents, and act according to their honest conclusions.

This World of Ours, by J. H. Curle; New York, George H. Doran Company; $2.50.

If we are to be guided by inferences from passages in this volume, the author is a globe-trotter in the interest of prospectors and syndicates to discover promising fields for their ventures. He travels "the wide world o'er" along trails and by-paths widely different from the beaten tracks of the average traveler. He visits Australia, Klondyke, Jerusalem, India, China, the Archipelagos and Africa, South America and adjacent islands and presents facts, observations, histories and incidents that make the story-teller a charm. We are made to see "how folks live," black and white, and copper. There "is a lot of information" presented in a simple and colloquial style, and yet so vividly and graphically that the book is fascinating far beyond the ordinary book of travel.

The Jubilee Girl, by Arthur P. Hanks; Dodd, Mead and Co., New York.

The wild life and slang of the camp and of the tramp run all through the story, and this is the way it ends:

"A long tremulous kiss, and then they parted. Somewhere through the dusk a turtle dove was fluttering her epic of golden summers and hearts that beat for love. Then the moon! Over the hills and plains she rides and washes in silvery light the ghost-white tents of sleeping Camp Jubilee—an institution destined to perish."

Is further comment desired?

Three Golden Days, by William S. Walkley; Fleming H. Revell Company, New York; $1.25 net.

Here is one of the most interesting of children's story books. It warms the heart like Tiny Tim. Read it around the table to the family around the table in the long winter evenings. Pretend to be reading it to the children, for it was written for them; but the grown-ups will stop whatever they may be doing and will listen. And it will soften the hearts of all of them.

John Martin's Read Aloud Book; Dodd, Mead and Co., New York.

A collection of quaint, old-fashioned nursery rhymes and stories, illustrated with all sorts of fantastic pictures. A holiday gift that the little folks will like.

In the Eyes of the East; by Marjorie Barstow Greenble; New York, Dodd, Mead & Co.

One of the most fascinating books of travel we have read for a long time. A young girl, possessed of eyes that see and heart that feels, starts on a summer trip a heart that feels, starts on a summer trip. The story of the doings of this trio and of the things they saw, together with the romance that develops in the case of the writer, makes the book as thrilling as a novel. It is rich in details of Oriental life and especially of Oriental women.

Looking at Pictures, by S. C. Kalmes Smith; New York, Geo. H. Doran Co.; $1.75 net.

How can one get the most out of pictures? What is a good picture? Can any one develop an intelligent appreciation of the artist's purpose and a sound judgment of his worth, or is all this reserved for the expert? People who want to enjoy pictures and who feel lacking in knowledge will find this little book useful.

The New Poetry, an Anthology, edited by Harriet Monroe and Alice Corbin Henderson; New York, The MacMillan Company; $2.25.

In this volume are selections from the works of more than 100 writers, all new, some very new. Some of the poetry is good; for other one must cultivate a taste if indeed he is ever able to take it without a grimace. This new poetry "strives for a concrete and immediate realization of life," whatever that may be, and avoids abstractions. Certainly the words used are drawn from modern speech and most of the verse is marked by simplicity and directness. No poems published before 1900 are included. The collection is a good one to have at hand where you can pick it up when the mood is on. For this poetry is readable and some of it is decidedly significant. Whether it is as good as the poetry of the past, the reader must decide. But then—other days, other manners. At the same time it is well to remember that some poets today popular did not enjoy unbounded applause during the days of their greatest productivity.

Safed and Keturah, by William E. Barton; Boston, The Pilgrim Press; $1.25.

These parables have appeared in various periodicals and have been read with delight and profit by multitudes. This third volume of the collected essays will doubtless have the same glad welcome as the others. The Master used homely illustrations from common life to enforce his lessons. Few men in our day have learned to do this better and more wittily than has Dr. Barton.

The Intention of His Soul, by Hulburt L. Simpson; New York, Geo. H. Doran Co.; $2.

Volumes of sermons are numerous and all of them are read by friends of the preacher. Occasionally there is one which has a wider hearing. This is one of the latter. Sermons of the power and literary charm of those included in this volume are not common. Always related to life, vital in the best way, not preachy and yet not merely essays, they are certain to be relished both by pulpit and pew.

Maumbury Rings, by G. V. McFadden; George H. Doran Co., $2.00 net.

If you want a cracking good tale, crammed with lusty action, full to the brim with he-man adventure, with a most alluring heroine in the person of a horse-loving country maiden, Bathia Loverage, and her foil, the much-abused Demas Chaldecott, at first the humble rural schoolmaster, later the true heir to a rich earldom, with many vividly drawn villains, and a perfect museum of old English country types, get hold of this romance of the early part of the last century. Its close to four hundred pages will seem all too short, once you get enthralled with the tale, as you surely will. As plot and counterplot wind and unwind, with many surprising convolutions and side-paths, the interest becomes ever increasingly more intense, and builds up to a tremendous climax in the court scene, where the luckless schoolmaster is on trial for murder. But just as this point marks the deepest depth of his fall, so it also marks the end of his trials and troubles; we are given a most happy ending, and all the loose ends are carefully gathered up at the close.

Bible Types of Modern Men, A course of lectures to young men, by Rev. W. Mackintosh MacKay; Hodder and Stoughton, London.

It has been an unalloyed pleasure to read this volume. We have read a number of books containing lessons from Bible characters; but the characters still remained ancient history. We studied them as we have fossils and prints on the pages of paleozoic rocks. This author also takes a Bible character and gives a congested history of his life and conduct; then he has the gift of introducing this man to us in modern surroundings and dress until we are able to visualize and feel we have seen and known him as our neighbor. We love, criticize or condemn him for reasons we know. The addresses are presented in charming phraseology and most readable style. Not strange it has passed through four editions. It is a most helpful book to the minister, teacher, and lecturer for suggestions, illustrations and inspiration.

Touch-Stones of Success; The Vir Publishing Company.

A series of short essays, sketches, and papers on things that make for the success of the boy or girl in business or in any other career in life. The writers are selected from among the eminent men in public life: college presidents, editors, jurists, capitalists, lawyers, scientists, clergymen, engineers, artists, reformers, statesmen to the number of 160. To the public speaker, teacher, and preacher it is a magazine of ammunition; every page is "loaded" with the riches the best minds can give the publishers declare that "no book like this has ever before been attempted." It should have an index of subjects as well as of authors and writers.

The John Oxenham Book of Daily Readings; James Clark and Co., London.

An exquisitely presented little volume, gilt-edged and leather-bound, containing excerpts of the poetry of the famous bard for every day in the year. The poet's name is its best recommendation.

American Footprints in Paris, by Francis Boucher and Frances Wilson Huard; New York, Geo. H. Doran Co.; $2 net.

A guide book of an unusual kind. Localities mentioned include all the most famous spots in Paris, but they are always considered in their relation to American events or Americans who have lived in or near them. Data concerning Americans in Paris—consuls, writers, etc.—from the earliest to the present time is included.

Books Received

Words of the Faith, by Gavin Morton Walker, Meadville, Pa.

The Junior Church in Action, by Weldon F. Crossland; George H. Doran Company, New York; $1.50 net.

Life Beyond the Veil, (spirit messages received and written down) by G. Vale Owen; Books III and IV; George H. Doran Italy, by Sidney Howard; George H. Doran Co., New York; $1.50 net.

The Young Man From Jerusalem, by William G. Ballantine; Houghton, Mifflin Co., 4 Park Street, Boston, Mass.; an essay on the fundamentals of Christian living; 75 pages; $1.00.

White Gifts for the King, by Phebe A. Curtis; Meigs Publishing Co., Indianapolis, Ind.; suggestions for preparing and presenting the Christmas service of the same name; revised; 25 cents.

Snow Over Elden, by Thomas Mount; George H. Doran Company, New York; a novel; 250 pages; $2.00 net.

More Tish, by Mary Roberts Rinehart; George H. Doran Company; a dramatic story; 280 pages; $1.75 net.

To Him That Hath, by Ralph Connor; George H. Doran Company, New York; a new novel dealing with industrial relations; 291 pages; $1.75 net.

The "Berta Buck" Birthday Book, Dodd, Mead & Co., New York; with an apt quotation and spaces for memoranda or autographs for every day in the year.

The Infinite Artist and other sermons, by Frederick F. Shannon; the MacMillan Company, New York; $1.25.
(What we think of some of these books will appear later.)

The Devotional Life

What Constitutes One a "Christian"?

By R. E. NEIGHBOR.

THE answer that will most readily occur to the mind will be that of Paul to the demand of the Philippian jailer, "What must I do to be saved?" "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ," he said. And certainly we can neither advance nor improve on that. Everywhere the great Apostle stresses the value of faith as the sine qua non of salvation, as indeed it is. Nevertheless this answer will not be adequate unless we also understand what is faith's moral content and energy. For it is only then that it assures to the man who "believes" that kind of life (or conduct) which brings him into accord with the Christ in whom he believes.

Among ourselves a variant of the Apostle's reply to the jailer is often given in a phrase like this: The acceptance of Christ as saviour and lord. It is well, however, to remember what an esteemed pastor was wont to say, that Jesus could not be saviour unless likewise he were lord, i. e., master. Christ must control us if he is to save us. He cannot be the one unless he be the other. "Faith without works is dead"—as we all know; even as the soulless body is dead. And so the truth of the matter is that the Christian is pledged by his very faith to a life of loyalty to the personal Lord Christ in whom he believes and whom he accepts as an all-sufficient saviour. I therefore answer my own question as to what constitutes a Christian by saying that he is one who, in intention at least, is personally loyal to the personal Christ. These two personalities have come into such friendly relationship of mutual trust and confidence as issues in loyalty to each him. I believe in Christ and Christ be other—the one to Christ and Christ to lieves in me; I trust him and he trusts me. We know positively that he can be depended on to be always true and faithful; on the other hand, it is sadly confessed that we are not always so; yet we always ought to be, and we will so in intention.

There is an interesting and suggestive story in the fourth gospel of Peter's curiosity being stimulated by what Jesus had revealed to him concerning the manner of his death to inquire as to his brother disciple, "Lord, and what shall this man do?" Thus mere curiosity too often leads us to press into territories we had been wiser not to have sought to enter! But the Lord did not gratify Peter by telling him; on the contrary, He said: "What is that to thee? Follow thou Me." That was Peter's business, and his only business; and it gave him (as it gives any of us) all he could do.

We are Christian only as we follow

Christ in conscious loyalty hearing his voice above all other voices and singling him out in preference to all other leaders.

Yet strange to say this loyalty to Christ as essential to the Christian life is far from being practically realized. This is the common complaint. Perhaps it is not sufficiently emphasized. Certain substitutes are supposed to meet every requirement, e. g., loyalty to one's denomination, membership in the church, attendance at the preaching services and at prayer-meeting, baptism and the Lord's Supper, etc. These things being observed, conscience is at ease. So inadequate is the breadth (or depth) of our loyalty! A brightly-intelligent young woman recently told me she usually attended the Baptist Church, but that she was retaining her membership in the Methodist church because she had been sprinkled in her babyhood and, though she believed in immersion, she did not care to abjure her sprinkling as an infant. Another lady, reared in a different church, who afterwards united with a Baptist church on her husband's account, told me she never would deny the sufficiency (sic?) of her mother's baptism, or of her own into the church of her mother, no matter what the Baptists or even the New Testament itself might say regarding immersion. But I am not now specially concerned about baptism; I am concerned only about personal loyalty to Jesus Christ in the doing of his will so far as we ourselves may understand it. In such instances as the above, and particularly in the latter one, how much personal devotion to Jesus Christ is there as to one who has the right to control us absolutely in conduct and in life? Little enough surely, and possibly none at all.

Not only, however, in such things as these may we fail. For the requirement of Christ is on the entire life. The Christian spirit is to be manifest in business relationships, in home and social life, in political action, and in our most intimate affairs. All kingdoms are Christ's—not the geographical kingdoms only. There is no realm in which he is not to reign, no territory from which he is to be excluded. I wish that we might be so led to understand this, and so to feel its importance, as to put all life into his hands. It would solve all our many problems for us, for then there would be but one problem, viz, the discovery of his will. And when we were really ready to do it I think there would not usually be much trouble about discovering it.

Centuries of history witness to the fact that the triumph of Christianity has been retarded (to state it as mildly as possible) by the church's putting the major emphasis on the believing of certain doctrinal propositions rather than on the doing of Christ's will. It has written its creeds over his Beatitudes. It has forgotten how he made the knowing of the doctrines depend on the doing of God's will. And what a blunder was made! So I am constrained to ask, and to ask it in view of the present evangelical situation and of Mrs. Helen Barret Montgomery's fine address which I heard yesterday, whether doing is not as important as believing—although I would be among the last to deny the value of a correct belief. Are not the last five chapters of Romans as much an integral part of that epistle as the preceding eleven? Do not both sections belong to the one whole? And shall we not practice the one as honestly as we believe the other?

"Who are these?" asked the Seer of Patmos, and the answer was: "These are they that follow the Lamb whithersoever he goeth." Significant words! O that the distinguishing characteristic of the church as a whole, as of some individuals in it, might be a positive passion of loyalty to its Lord!

Indianapolis, Ind.

The Blessedness of Work.

Work is sweet, for God hath blest
Honest work with quiet rest;
Rest below, and rest above,
In the mansions of His love
When the work of life is done,
When the battle's fought and won.

Work ye, then, while yet 'tis day,
Work as Christians while ye may,
Work for all that's great and good,
Working for your daily food,
Working whilst the golden hours,
Health, and strength, and youth are yours.

Working, not alone for gold,
Nor for work that's bought and sold;
Not the work that worketh strife,
But the working of a life,
Careless both of good or ill,
If ye do your Father's will.

Working ere the day is gone,
Working till your work is done,
Not as traffickers of marts,
But as fitteth honest hearts,
Working till your spirits rest
With the spirits of the blest.

God to man beneath His heaven
Happiness in work has given,
And, when work on earth is o'er,
Rest with Him forevermore.

—GODFREY THWING, in The Living Church.

Suffering is a sort of touchstone where men of character are tested. Nor could there be any pity and compassion in the hearts of men if there were no suffering. Suffering and sacrifice go hand in hand.—E. D. LUCAS.

The Chimney Corner

Tied With Red Ribbons

THIS is the time of year when you and I sit down in our chimney corners to nibble the ends of our respective pencils as we stare forlornly at a certain familiar list of relatives, friends and Sunday school scholars,—and just because, to half the world December 25 has no more significance yet than December 26, and because as Baptist women we can't be content unless Christmas, 1922, finds more persons sharing the glory of this Day, therefore it occurs to me that it is quite within the power of each of us to give to those on our Christmas lists certain very simple but very effective gifts which may awaken in them the same eager desire to spread the great glad tidings. Surely none of us is forgetting the honorable responsibility that Baptist women have assumed to secure within this fiscal year new pledges amounting to $6,000,000, to apply on our denominational hundred million-dollar drive. It is something that will come knocking at each of our doors. Something to be taken in dead earnest! How delightful if we can pave our own way to success by filling Christmas stockings with gifts which may go far toward arousing a first responsiveness!

There are, to begin with, two very obvious gifts: first, our splendid magazine Missions, which grows more engrossing every month (no, that is not a pun on Dr. Gross's name!). Often a magazine which comes on Christmas Day tied with red ribbons keeps a little halo all its own during the remaining eleven months. Then second, instead of a Christmas card or calendar costing a quarter why not invest that same amount of money in the new "Book of Remembrance"? The charming new decorative green-and-gold cover makes it the kind of ornamental booklet any one would be proud to have lying around on a table, and who knows how the day by day calendar inside may grip the imagination? Especially if a note on the back of a Christmas postal could accompany it: "Julia dear—Aren't you amazed to see how many other delightful Baptists have birthdays on the same date as yours? Why don't you write and cheer them up—that's what I'm doing with those on my day!"

Then here are some scattered suggestions: A woman we know once gave away a number of those lovely soft leather Alaskan slippers, the kind with beads and fur on them, and inside each sole she slipped a story—rolled in a scroll and tied with red ribbon—which told about the country. For our Baptist use two splendid leaflets would be "Kodiak," by Mrs. Ransier (3 cents), and "Alaska" (totem poles, polygamy, slavery, etc.), (2 cents).

There is no reason why the same thing could not be carried out with distinctive gifts from other races. For instance, with Indian sweet grass baskets or Indian beadwork of any kind these leaflets would be a real addition, as the cover designs are exceptionally Indian in type, moreover, the leaflets are free: "Four Roads Out," "The Ingenuity of a Pagan Priest," "A Supreme Test," "The Crow Missions." With a piece of Mexican drawn work give that beautifully artistic yellow folder called "And There Was Light" (5 cents). With Chinese embroideries or workbags give "How Long Must I Wait" (2 cents), or "West China Cameralogs" (10 cents); or with Chinese incense burners which are so often in the shape of temples or heathen gods give either "How Chinese Children Learn to Worship Idols" (2 cents) or "Moss-Covered Idol" (1 cent); or with Chinese lily bulbs give "Just Girls" (5 cents) or "Ah-Ti, the Girl Who Dared" (2 cents), by Mrs. Montgomery. With Japanese lunch dollies or table runners give "Missions in Japan" (10 cents) or "Mme. Asa Hirooka, a Japanese Banker" (1 cent), with a Japanese parasol or fan. If you can add here and there a delicate touch of water color to the pictures in these leaflets you will enhance their attractiveness—or a Christmas seal affixed front and back dresses them up into a wonderfully holiday mood. All the literature mentioned in this article may be ordered from "Literature Bureau, General Board of Promotion," at the nearest of these four addresses: 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City; Ford Building, Boston, Mass.; 2969 Vernon Avenue, Chicago, Ill.; 506 Columbia Building, Los Angeles, Cal. You may also obtain a free "Joint Catalog of All Literature," from which other selections may be made.

This department is conducted by Miss Margaret T. Applegarth. Communications to her may be addressed in care of THE BAPTIST.

In the teens comes an age when a young girl begins to take pride in decorating her room, and for her a "cretonne library" will be very suitable, by which is meant covering any of the following paper-bound books with cretonne to match curtains or cushions of said room: "Ann of Ava" (50 cents); "The Moffats" (50 cents); "A Noble Army" (35 cents). Apply mullage with a brush to front and back of book, after which lay it in place on a piece of cretonne cut same size as book covers. Smooth out any wrinkles, trim edges and keep under heavy weight until mullage dries.

But the crowning joy of all, as always, comes in gifts for children! It is to be hoped that 5,000 of the Baptist parents who have read this far will sit right down and subscribe to "Everyland," that beloved magazine of world friendship for boys and girls which our own Mrs. Peabody started over ten years ago. It will be welcome news all over the country that she has again resumed the editorship and beginning with the Christmas number—in that inimitable way of hers—will create a monthly treat which every boy and girl should share! It is to be one dollar; order from Miss May Leavis, West Medford, Mass.

Then there are dolls, dolls, dolls! Let a little girl once mother a family of world dolls, and one fancies she will "just naturally" grow up to mother the actual world family. At any Japanese store you may buy very reasonable Japanese dolls, with parasols, fans, lanterns, etc. Be sure to buy two dolls, however, so that the smaller one may be a baby fastened on the back of big sister! A very beguiling series of stories with charming pictures should be bought to accompany the dolls, "Plum Blossom Stories" (5 cents). There is also a set of splendid colored Japan Picture Cards sold in sets of twelve cards each (20 cents for the dozen), with a story on the back of each card. We would suggest mailing these, one card every other day, as long as they last, and follow them up by such leaflets as "Shouter Sans Backbone" (1 cent), "The God who Could Not Get Up On the Shelf" (2 cents) and "Home Life in Japan" (3 cents). The subtle beauty of this "continuation" scheme is that the child will be utterly thrilled at the importance of something in the mail—and the mother of the child will be quite as interested!

Other dolls may be dressed at home, or certain object lesson sets are procurable at Lit. Dept., Woman's Presbyterian Board of Foreign Missions, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. These are on Japan, Africa and American Indians. They cost $1.50 apiece and each set includes two dolls in costume, a model home, quaint utensils illustrating every-day life and a book of stories explaining everything. From this same address you may order for 75 cents a set of seven Chinese rag dolls to be stuffed and a book of stories telling about the dolls. Personally it seems to me we can always gain a double interest in these dolls of other races when an American doll of the same size is also given, dressed to be "Mrs. Missionary" or "Miss Nurse." For 10 cents such a little doll may be bought at any store, and easily dressed. A tiny toy trunk full of small pill bottles, small Bible pictures, a little Bible, small pads and pencils, will suggest an infinite variety of playtimes to the new little "mother." Use the same continuation plan as for Japan, sending postals and leaflets every few days with suggestions—anything and everything you see, to make the new playthings seem the most desirable of gifts! Consider also the fascination of dressing a number of little 10-cent dolls as immigrants, with little checked aprons, shawls over their shoulders, scarves tied over their heads. A simple playhouse may be made from a stout hat box placed on its side with shoe boxes arranged to fit snugly inside, tier on tier, to form the tenement house where these dolls are to live. For stories to tell about the characters which may suggest ways of playing with the dolls give: "The House with the Steeple" (free) and "Dis-covering America" (free).

Sunday-school teachers may give small boys very attractive little white yachts which may be bought at any store for 25, 15 or even for 10 cents. Divide the class into three equal groups and print on the bow of each white sailboat one of the names of these three real Baptist boats: (1) "Fukuin Maru" of Japan, (2) "Robert G. Seymour" of America, (3) "Henry Reed" of Africa. Appropriate stories to accompany these boats are, respectively: (1) "Little White Ship of the Inland Sea" (free), (2) "On Remote Waterways with Gospel Cruisers" (free) and (3) "Belgian Congo Cameralogs" (10 cents). There should be follow-up stories sent before New Year's: (1) "Log of the Gospel Ship"

(5 cents), (2) "Co-operative Contacts with Frontier Fields" (free) and (3) "Witch Doctor of Africa" (3 cents). A further continuation of interest would suggest mailing each week for several weeks some of the graphic hand-painted postals for sale by our Literature Bureaus at 15 cents a dozen. There is a special printed list of these cards which are to be ordered by number. For your convenience the following especially good cards on Japan about the Fukuin Maru would be suggested: numbers 19, 22, 35, 36, 37, 60, 63, 64, 65. For Africa and the Belgian Congo the following: 30, 31, 48, 49, 67. Needless to say after this "onslaught" of ships and sails and sealing wax, the boys will enjoy spending the five closing minutes of Sunday school discussing their respective fleet of ships. And this entire scheme is within the means of the most slender purse; while only God himself can tell the far-reaching mile-wide influence of the things we tie with red ribbons for Christmas, 1921.

The Young Reserves

A Kimono from Japan— for You!

DID you suppose for one moment that way across the whole Pacific Ocean there are people in Japan who read our Young Reserve columns? Well, there are! For we've had a letter from one of them. Indeed we have! A letter with real Japanese postage stamps on the envelope and curly-kew lettering over the back. And it was from a gentleman who sends us the most thrilling announcement: namely, that there's a kimono over in Japan dangling its quaint empty sleeves while waiting and waiting for the Baptist boy or girl under twelve years of age who will earn it.

All up and down America I seem to hear you saying: "Why, I'd like a kimono!" "Hurrah—how can I earn it, though?"

Well, you have to do about the nicest thing possible it seems to me:—just paint two pictures of polite little Japanese personages, and then answer a set of six questions!!! Now, doesn't it begin to sound as if YOU really stood a fair chance of poking your arms into those quaint dangling empty sleeves? Of course, it does!

This is the whole plan in a nutshell: our splendid (and oh! so busy) missionaries in Japan have written a small book telling what they've been doing in that land of cherry blossoms and jinrikishas this past year. Their book has an awfully nice cover, I think, with a Jap-O-Lantern bobbing cheerfully across the front of it, while some fascinating Japanese lettering says something which I simply can't read —although I've tried and tried! The name of this book is "Japan Annual, 1921," and it is brimful of pictures—two of them on page 28 are the jolliest little friends imaginable. What you will have to do first of all is to buy this book, of course, but as it only costs a quarter, you won't mind spending it when there's the prospect of that kimono! This is the way to order it, by writing to:

"Literature Department
General Board of Promotion
276 Fifth Avenue
New York City.
Dear Sir:

Enclosed please find 25 cents in stamps for which kindly send to above address 1 copy of "Japan Annual, 1921," and oblige

Yours very truly,

(Your own name here, of course.)"

I can see you watching for the postman to bring it to your door! One minute later and you will be turning to page 57 to find the department headed "Something for Our Young Readers." Over the page appear the very simple directions and the two pictures of Masami Sam and O-Hana San to be colored in your daintiest way. There are also those six questions to be answered. Not hard questions, really. Just the kind that will be fun to search through the annual for!

The best part of it is that you are to send your answer to Japan, enclosing the two pictures, of course; and it will be straight from Japan to you that that kimono will come—provided that you send something worthy of winning it. Now who will be busy first, I wonder?

Parlez-vous Japanese?

SINCE you may be wearing a Japanese kimono some time in the near future, I thought you might like to learn to say a few sentences in the language of that country—to startle your friends!

Hai means "yes."

Dozo means "please."

Arigata means "thank you."

Yo-ro-shin means "thank you."

These are not so hard to remember, but suppose you had to say "What is this?" with all these words: Kore wa nani to moshi masu ka? Really quite a mouthful.

isn't it? Bateren is the word for father; Okkasan for mother, and Ko for child. San after a name means Mr., Mrs., or Miss. Sensei is the way to say teacher.

And this long sentence is a Bible verse which you will find in John 3:16: "Sore, Kami no seken wo itsukushimi—tamau koto wa, subete kare wo shindzuru mono wa horobidzu shite, kagari naki inochi wo uken tame ni, sono hitori umareshi ko wo tamayeru hodo nari." Wouldn't you just love to be able to say that to some Japanese person and watch the wonderfully surprised look of pleasure creep over their faces?

That Voice of Yours

YOU in whose veins runs the fire of loving,
For people, for plants, for little animals,
For rocks and earth, stars and the elements,
You have a secret Voice, always singing.
It is never still. It runs with your haste
And idles in your silence. It is everywhere.
O you, for whom this passionate Voice sings
And will not be silent, think now of those
For whom no voice sounds. Of those who toil
Without the singing voice,
And live in a world which has not yet come through
Into your world.
O—can you not hear that the song your Voice is singing
Is the song which is to bring that world of theirs
Into the light which must light all men?
Why else do you imagine that this Voice is singing?
Why else do you imagine that the fire of love
Runs in your veins?
—ZONA GALE in The Christian Century.

They Climb This in Japan

My first is the opposite of many.
My second sounds like the seventh letter in the alphabet.
My third is an exclamation.
My fourth is an abbreviation for mamma.
My whole is a mountain in Japan.

They Kneel Down in This in Japan

My first is settling a debt.
My second is another name for a heathen idol.
My third begins the alphabet.
My whole is a Japanese temple.
"The little children of Japan
Wear mittens on their feet,
They wear no hats at all to go
A-walking on the street.
And wooden stilts for overshoes
They wear out on the avenues."

Religious Education

International Uniform Lesson for December 18

PAUL'S LAST WORDS

2 Tim. 4:6-18. Golden Text: 2 Tim. 4:7

By JOHN A. EARL

The Lesson Text

This letter to Timothy is acknowledged to be the last letter Paul wrote. After his first imprisonment probably he went to Spain in his zeal to carry the gospel as far west as possible. There is no reliable evidence that he ever reached the British Isles. During the reign of Nero when persecution broke out against the Christians, Paul was arrested and taken to Rome. It was during this imprisonment that his letters to Timothy were written.

The Lesson Taught

As the title of the lesson is "Paul's Last Words," it is fitting that his last reflection, his last request and his last reaction should inspire the teacher in presenting this lesson.

Paul's Last Reflection

The great apostle, awaiting martyrdom in a Roman prison, reflected on his past, his present and his future. First, he takes his stand in the present and writes, "For I am already being offered, and the time of my departure is come." There is a calmness and confidence in these words which the thoughtful reader cannot escape. Paul looks death in the face with the same triumphant faith which years before led him to write, "O death, where is thy sting, O grave, where is thy victory?" Again he is practicing what he preached to the Romans, "For I am persuaded that neither death, nor life * * * shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." He uses two Old Testament figures to describe his impending death, viz., a drink offering and an exodus. Literally he says, "I am now being poured out," the idea being that his blood like a drink offering is about to be poured out as a sacrifice to God, and that with the shedding of his blood he will pass out of his Roman bondage into the liberty of the children of God by an exodus as definite as the exodus of the Israelites out of Egypt.

Then looking back over his Christian career he graphically describes his life and service in three picturesque phrases, viz., a fight, a race, a trusteeship. By the first figure he emphasizes his struggles with his own sinful nature, his fight against the tendency in his day of making the Christian church another form of Judaism and his battle with pagan immorality among believers in Christ. By the second figure, a race, he sets forth his progress in the Christian life and the satisfaction which is his as he reaches the end of his earthly career in the consciousness that he never turned back. By the third simile he describes himself as a steward or trustee charged with the responsibility of keeping a sacred trust, the faith, probably meaning by the faith the gospel and its vital principles.

His last reflection in the prospect of death looks forward beyond the shambles of the Roman arena to the crowning day when the Lord shall place upon the immortal brow of Paul and all others who have loved his appearing the unfading laurel wreath of righteousness. In Paul's view the crowning day did not come immediately at death.

Paul's Last Request

Paul's last request was threefold. He asked for companionship, for physical comforts and for occupation. Luke was with him, and he certainly appreciated the companionship and ministry of the "beloved physician." But he wanted Timothy and Mark. Paul was a social being. Like his Lord in Gethsemane he prayed that his three closest friends might be with him, Luke, Timothy and Mark. His desire for the presence of these friends in Rome was intensified by the growing terror due to bloody persecution which was making Demas and others flee. No longer in his own hired house as in the first imprisonment but shivering in the cold of a Roman prison, he asks for the cloak left at Troas. Unable to stand the monotony of idleness, he directs Timothy to bring the books and especially the parchments. These requests simply show that Paul was not unnerved and rendered helpless by his terrible circumstances. He was the same Paul always, "having learned in whatsoever state he was therewith to be content."

Paul's Last Reaction

Paul's last reaction has to do with the sordid worldliness of Demas, the Judas-like treachery of Alexander the coppersmith, and the bloody persecution of Nero to which he evidently refers in the words, "I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion." He has no expressed censure for Demas. His reaction breathes sorrow and disappointment and a sense of personal loss as he puts the cowardice of Demas in three words, "forsook," "loved," "went." "Demas forsook me, having loved this present world, and went to Thessalonica." There is a volume in the three phrases. Paul's reaction with regard to Alexander the coppersmith is pronounced and positive. Feeling keenly the evil which Alexander has wrought against him personally, Paul warns Timothy to beware of him, while committing the evil-doer to the just judgment of God. But Paul can never stop with a negative note. Even with unhappy reactions working in his mind on account of Demas and Alexander and Nero, Paul will not permit such reactions to embitter his soul or obscure his fine optimistic faith. Therefore he closes his letter with a grand Amen in the words, "The Lord will deliver me from every evil work, and will save me unto his heavenly kingdom: to whom be the glory for ever and ever. Amen." Thus drops the curtain on the earthly life of Paul.

New Life in the Devotional Meeting

By FRANK O. EBB

Editor, Young Peoples' Publications, American Baptist Publication Society

The value and interest of a devotional meeting are usually measured by the time and intelligent preparation that have been given to it. A devotional meeting that "falls down" is commonly a failure because those responsible for it imagined that it would run itself.

Prepare. Begin at least three weeks in advance of the date of the meeting. Make a complete program including the numbers of the hymns to be sung, the passage of Scripture to be read, surprise element to be provided, discussion topics to be considered, and who is to do each. Last minute preparation is unworthy of the Lord. Careless preparation will reveal itself at every point.

Advertise. Use all the skill possible in writing the pulpit notice. Make it brief. Make it different. State the topic in your own words. Suggest some vital relation which this topic bears to life. Do the same thing in Sunday school. Use a bulletin board. Make posters. It pays to advertise.

Leader. Sometimes an individual; better to have several persons responsible with one as chairman. The group method is good. Use an entire committee at times. Invite a Sunday school class with its teacher to lead occasionally. The World Wide Guild will put up the best missionary meetings. Once in a while have the Sunday school superintendent. Use the pastor occasionally. An outside speaker is rarely advisable. Indeed any of these single adult leaders is likely to cultivate laziness on the part of the young people, and laziness needs no cultivation.

Topic Presentation. Let it be sometimes by an address or by several short addresses. Sometimes make it a Bible study with everyone participating. Occasionally write a series of discussion questions on the blackboard and let the members discuss them as they please. At times give out in advance (several days in advance) questions or topics to be discussed at a given time in the meeting. Try to do something a little different each time.

The Open Meeting. Assist timid or immature persons by suggesting in advance a helpful line of thought. Let discussion topics be presented throughout the meeting.

Young People's Work

Topic for December 18

CONSCIENCE: TEACHING IT, QUICKENING IT, OBEYING IT.

Proverbs 20:27; Acts 4:13-20; Rom. 2:15; Cor. 8:7-13.

Conscience: The word conscience is derived from the Latin "conscientia" (consciousness). It is not found in the Old Testament, and was never used by our Lord, but as employed by St. Paul "it is the inborn sense of right and wrong, the moral law within our hearts, which judges the moral character of our motives and actions, and approves or censures, condemns or justifies accordingly. This universal tribunal is established in the breast of every man, even the heathen. It may be weakened, perverted, stupefied, stifled, and hardened in many ways, and its decisions are more or less clear, just, or imperative, according to the degree of moral culture."

Teaching it: Conscience needs teaching. Conscience is that moral instinct which tells us to do right; but what that "right" is, just what particular obligations we shall feel, what particular ideals shall move us, is left to be determined by experience. One man's conscience will permit him to do what another man's conscience will tell him is morally reprehensible. Conscience needs to be informed. On the one hand, one's conscience may be infected with morbid scrupulosity, so that a possessor will torment himself with useless questions which have no moral value whatever. Such were the "weak" faith who, if they ate meat offered to idols, because of their weak consciences offered defilement. Yet they need not thus have vexed their souls. The idols were nothing, meat offered to them there suffered nothing. If they ate they were neither better nor worse morally; what is, the mere fact of eating had no virtue or vice in it. Their consciences needed enlightenment. On the other hand, the multitudes of people who do in good conscience what must be in God's sight evil. In such a spirit Paul persecuted the Christians, and stood by approving while Stephen was stoned.

The education of conscience is part of the whole educational process. Instruction, training, social experience, all have their places. The one infallible way to teach conscience is to be loyal day by day to the measure of light and guidance therein granted.

Quickening it: How shall we keep our consciences quick, tender and responsive? Conscience is notoriously dulled and hardened in many. Sympathy with our brethren and fellowship with Christ is the way! These weak brethren of whom Paul speaks are clearly seen by the mature and healthy mind to be cultivating scruples about trifles. Yet, what should be the Christian's attitude? Should he ride rough-shod over them? Nay, "through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish for whom Christ died?" "Take heed lest this liberty of yours become a stumbling-block to them that are weak!" We can never go wrong by excess of charity. Moreover, in this course of self-abnegating conduct, the disciple will discover a wonderful companionship with his Master. For he it was who supremely bore the infirmities of the weak and pleased not himself. No one's conscience can be dull in such a fellowship.

This page is for all Baptist young people's organizations. Send news items on activities, organizations, plans and methods of work for publication in THE BAPTIST to James Asa White, General Secretary, 125 N. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Obedying it: And the Scripture's teaching is that conscience must be obeyed. A Christian must follow his conscientious conviction even though his conscience be imperfectly enlightened. "To him that esteemeth anything to be unclean, to him it is unclean." You must not do what conscience tells you is wrong, whatever be the abstract merits of the case. You must do what conscience tells you is right. But you also must keep conscience tender and assure its progressive enlightenment until it becomes indeed the very "candle of the Lord" in the spirit of man. And by obedience it will become so. For "if any man will do His will, he shall know."

The Woodlawn Way

REPORTED BY MISSES EUNICE EDDY AND ELIZABETH COSSUM

The B. Y. P. U. of the Woodlawn Church of Chicago has always been an A1 society. Our meetings were well attended. At least so we thought until we found out how many young people we could crowd into our room for a service. We had good leaders. Unusually good, as a rule. The young people of the society were most willing to take their turns in leading the devotional thought of the society, and they did it with skill, enthusiasm and genuine Christian devotion. Year after year we achieved the standard of excellence in competition with the other societies of Chicago. We were active, too, in city missionary work, to which we gave prayer, time, and money.

Falling Behind.

But we fell far short of the ideal society—hopelessly short. We were not making new Christians. We were not accomplishing the primary end of the B. Y. P. U.—that of bringing people to Christ and to the church. There were absolutely no definite results along the line of soul-saving. We found, too, that there were hundreds of young people in the church whom we never reached, in whose programs the B. Y. P. U. had no part. And there was seldom a stranger among our attendants. For many of our young people this short session from 6:30 to 7:30 took the place of the evening service, and people coming to church were met by throngs of young people leaving the church as the evening service opened. And the young people's service was a great deal like a peaching service. The leaders put forth splendid thoughts—practically exhausted the subject of the evening, so that at the time for testimony there was the prolonged silence so painful to all, broken at last by one or two of the old faithfuls.

Our pastor never blamed us for our shortcomings. He said it was the fault of the system. Young people crowded into an hour on Sunday evening had no time for development; no time to make the meetings interesting and helpful and attractive. We must have more time in order to remedy the shortcomings we felt must be overcome to justify our existence.

Pastor Gets into the Game.

We could hardly but agree a change was needed, but it was our faithful and loving pastor who worked out the plan for our new society. We never could have worked out such a system for ourselves, and we even had difficulty at first in recognizing the wisdom of his suggestions. It all seemed so impractical and useless. The plan was to transfer the meeting to the mid-week, where we could meet at eight o'clock and have an hour's devotional meeting followed by a social period of an hour and a half, the social varying from week to week, and including two evenings for circle games, relays, etc.; one musical program in which our own young people and guests should take part; one informal evening, with no plan except conversation with strangers and friends. Whenever a fifth night in the month occurred, our pastor was to invite in some excellent speaker who should give us a broader view of the world. Refreshments were to be served at each meeting.

Some Said: "It Can't Be Done."

It sounded like an elegant plan, if we could only get it started. But with the numbers we then had, the undertaking looked ominous; and so many of our folk said they could not come on a week night. The choosing of a night for our meeting would be an impossible task, we thought. There were bound to be some of our faithful ones who could not attend. Every evening mentioned met with loud opposition. And if we made the change, how would that help us to build up the weak points of the union? How could we save souls? How could we reach more people? How could we make our meetings more interesting than the various lures of a week night? Then, too, we felt sure that the young people would not come to the

(Turn to page 1411)

A Conference Prayer

Offered at the opening of the Conference on Limitation of Armaments, Nov. 12, by Dr. W. S. Abernethy, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, Washington, D. C.

"Almighty God, we thank thee for the coming of this eventful day. We have seen it from afar and now we rejoice that it has at last dawned. May it bring untold blessings to a troubled world. O Thou Omnipotent One, as in other days, we believe that thou dost guide in human affairs. Thou hast made of one blood all nations that dwell upon the earth and, though we are of many races and many tongues, yet the interests of the few are the interests of the larger number.

"May we feel assured that the welfare and happiness and prosperity of the human family are inexpressibly dear to thy heart.

"We pray for clear vision, or we shall grope blindly for the light and lose our way.

"We pray for hearts lovingly sympathetic to human distress wherever it may exist, or we shall sink into the depths of a miserable selfishness.

"We pray for minds willing to believe that the strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, or we shall miss the great joy of service.

"We pray for the forward look, or we shall be overwhelmed in hopeless pessimism. Give us the ability to think clearly, to judge fairly, to act wisely. Help us to think less often of our rights and more often of our duties and responsibilities.

"We pray at this hour on behalf of a world in sore need. Thou art not unmindful of the sufferings of thy people. The cries of multitudes of widows and orphans have come up before thee, O God. We have had our terrible baptism of blood. There is hunger and pestilence and unutterable anguish. God forbid that the woes of these years should ever again be visited upon the earth. Can it be that thou hast permitted us thus to suffer in order that we might turn from our own devices to thee and acknowledge thee as king of our lives and our destinies? Out of the depths we cry unto thee. Save us or we perish.

"May we walk softly and humbly before thee this day and throughout the fateful days of this great conference. May we be intent on knowing thy will; and, knowing it, may we have the courage to do it. And may it not be that the findings of this conference shall be so wise, so far reaching and so beneficial that all mankind may take new hope and fresh courage? And to thee shall be the praise and the glory forever and forever. Amen."

The Fellowship Ship Sails on Time

The S. S. "Esthonia" of the Baltic American Line sailed from New York harbor Wednesday afternoon, November 23, with large quantities of supplies in her hold for the suffering peoples of Northern Europe. Associate Secretary W. B. Lippard was aboard the vessel, in charge of the shipment. Officers of the "Esthonia" manifested a very keen interest in Mr. Lippard's mission, and established cordial relationships with him immediately.

Several friends were at the ship to say farewell to Mr. Lippard and to bid him godspeed on his mission of fellowship. Among them were Editor H. B. Grose of Missions; Missionary V. G. Krause of Bengal-Orissa, who has been in charge of the warehouse and the shipping arrangements. Miss Helen Hudson of the Woman's Board, who organized the White Cross Societies in the Northern Baptist Convention for the splendid effort to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship." Foreign Secretary James H. Franklin, Mr. Mornay Williams, Vice-Chairman of the Board of Managers of the Foreign Mission Society, Miss Helen Clark of the Woman's Society, and also several other representatives of the staff at 276 Fifth Avenue. Coe Hayne also was present with his camera.

As Mr. Lippard went up the gang plank and his name was called, one of the officers exclaimed: "Why man, for two days I have been receiving letters and telegrams for you!" All of the telegrams were read before the ship sailed. Some of them were as follows:

"Maine sends fellowship to follow on ship."

"Rhode Island wishes you godspeed on your errand of mercy. Kindest greetings from the state of Roger Williams to our brethren across the sea. Our prayers will follow you daily."

"May those to whom you bear greetings have the joy we feel in this expression of fellowship. God bless you."

"Convey to European Baptists greetings from Minnesota Baptists."

"May God's love overshadow and protect you on the splendid mission of mercy on which you are starting. Kindest greetings of Michigan Baptists to our brethren in the stricken lands. Our prayers go with you."

The commander of the "Esthonia," Captain Christianson, went below and came back with the report that our supplies aboard his own vessel, which are for distribution in Poland, Latvia, Lithuania, Esthonia and Russia, filled nearly three-fifths of the ship's regular cargo space. Lying at another dock was the S. S. "Oropesa," of the Royal Mail Line, on which the supplies were being placed for distribution in Austria, Czechoslovakia and Germany.

The "Esthonia" is due to make a brief call at Cuxhaven, near Hamburg, on December 4, when representatives of Baptists in Austria, Czechoslovakia and Germany will meet Mr. Lippard and receive instructions regarding the shipment of supplies on the "Oropesa," designated to their countries. The "Esthonia" then proceeds through the Kiel Canal into the Baltic Sea, and is due at Danzig December 6, where Rev. K. W. Strzelec and others will receive the large shipment consigned to Poland. The vessel is due at Libau December 8, where Rev. J. A. Frey, of Latvia, and representatives of Esthonia and Lithuania are to meet Mr. Lippard. The American Relief Administration (Mr. Herbert Hoover, Chairman) has cabled one of its representatives at Riga to meet Mr. Lippard at Libau and to take charge of the supplies which are to be distributed in Russia. In Russia the distribution is to be made by the American Relief Administration among the people who appear to be in greatest need.

Clothing is still coming in to the European Relief Warehouse, 348 East 23rd Street, New York City, which will be kept open several weeks longer. Those who were late in making shipments still have an opportunity to send supplies into Russia. All the clothing and other supplies received after this time will be sent into Russia for distribution there in co-operation with and with the aid of the American Relief Administration.

An Americanization Pageant

On the evening of November 10 a most interesting Americanization program was successfully carried out in the Second Avenue Baptist Church in New York City. It was the first of such a series planned by the Baptist City Mission Society of New York. Miss Mary Comstock, Americanization Secretary for New York City, and Rev. Antonio Gallopi, assistant to Dr. Mangano in the International Baptist Seminary, were in charge of the pageant which they had co-operatively prepared. Mrs. Mabel Farnham Mangano gave considerable time in assisting in the preparation and conduct of the pageant, and in securing from John Wanamaker's an exhibit of Italian furniture, including a chair that was over three hundred years old.

Rev. Raffaele Mingioli, pastor of the Second Avenue Italian Baptist Church, and his people co-operated with the committee in a most enthusiastic and efficient manner in the preparation of the dinner preceding the pageant and in the conduct of the program itself.

The first part of the pageant represented Italy bringing her gifts to America, thus helping to make America greater and nobler. The famous Garibaldi hymn and the Star Spangled Banner were sung.

One of the most delightful features of the evening was the music, instrumental and vocal, by Miss Carbonari, a member of the Italian Church at Judson Memorial. For her solo her teacher, Prof. Fontana, played the accompaniment.

The Bersaglieri, four in number, gave a scene in costume prepared by the Rev. Luigi Buffa of the Fordham Italian Church. Superintendent Sears, of the Garden City Mission Society, gave a short address explaining the purpose of this series of meetings in helping our Baptist constituency to become better acquainted with the contributions made by the various nationalities to our higher American life. The plan is a novel one and the future entertainments should have a large attendance not only on the part of our foreign speaking Baptists, but more especially from our English churches. Miss Comstock and her assistants are rendering a unique service to the denomination by these high grade Americanization entertainments. FRANK L. ANDERSON, President, International Baptist Seminary.

Our Own Folks

Connecticut Baptist Anniversaries

DANBURY, once famous for the "Danbury Hat," and still noted far and near for its "Annual Fair," is located at the extreme southwestern section of the state, in the foot hills of the Berkshires, "beautiful for situation" whither the Baptist "tribes went up." The Baptist house of worship in Danbury is one of the finest in the state, architecturally.

The hospitality of the church and city was wholeheartedly spontaneous, because of the thoughtful interest of one Ellis Gilbert, pastor of the entertaining church. Mr. Gilbert settled with the church in 1917. Through his strong and wise leadership the church is doing a constructive piece of work for the community and the kingdom of God.

What Fine Men!

Thus, under the most favorable circumstances, was held the ninety-eighth annual meeting of the Connecticut Baptist Convention, probably the most epoch-making in the long history of the convention.

At two p. m. on Monday the ministers met in their fortieth annual conference. What a fine body of men; devoted, forward-looking, undaunted, facing heroically our denominational task. The president, Rev. A. F. Purkiss, having moved from the state, Rev. E. E. Gates, pastor-at-large, presided. "Why Men Sleep in Church" and "The Teaching Function of the Church" were the essays presented, respectively, by Rev. E. Farley, Suffield, and Rev. D. B. MacQueen, Bridgeport. The essays were most favorably received, calling forth a somewhat animated discussion. The new officers elected for the ensuing year were: president, D. B. MacQueen; secretary, Rev. F. F. Wolfenden, Meriden.

An informal reception to ministers' wives and widows was held in the church parlors at 4:45 p. m. on the opening day of the anniversary. The hostesses were Mrs. Ellis Gilbert and Fannie H. Fairclough. At the same time the board of trustees of the state convention were convened in annual session to review the work of the past year, and plan for the work of the new year.

On Monday evening Rev. Clifton D. Bray, president of Bates College, Maine, spoke on "Christian Leadership for the New Day" before the Connecticut Baptist Education Society, assembled in its one hundred and second annual session. Dr. Bray convincingly pointed out the outstanding elements necessary in the new-day leader. "One who thinks straight," "sees visions" and is capable of "sustained enthusiasm." Officers elected for another year were: Rev. Herbert Judson White, Hartford, president; Rev. B. N. Timble, Meriden, secretary; Mr. Fred B. Bunnell, New Haven, treasurer.

Tuesday morning brought New England's best sample of an autumnal day. The sun-kissed glory of the surrounding hills reminded convention goers from whence came their help. Large congregations were in attendance at all the sessions. At ten o'clock President J. N.

Lackey, called the convention to order for the fifth consecutive time. After devotions conducted by Rev. W. J. Barnes, Stamford, the address of welcome by Mr. Charles K. Gillette, and the usual formalities, President Lackey delivered his annual address, and with statesman-like vision emphasized among other things, a campaign for law enforcement, the placing of our churches squarely behind the idea of an association of nations for world peace with a fitting program leading up to Armistice Day celebration, the creation and fostering of a denominational consciousness with a world outlook and the acceptance of our state denominational goals in the interests of the New World Movement. Other periods of devotion were conducted by Rev. J. L. Schoeppler, South Norwalk; Rev. J. E. Harris, Norwalk; Rev. F. S. Clark, Rowayton, and Rev. W. M. Richardson, Bridgeport.

After the appointment of committees, Rev. A. B. Coats, laid before the convention the report of the board of trustees. Marked features of encouragement were noted in the report. Among other things, the fact that there were 1152 received into the churches by baptism last year; the largest number since 1908, the attention was called to the social settlement center opened in New Haven, in the supporting of which the convention shares together with the New Haven Baptist Social Union and the A. B. H. M. Society. It was pointed out in the report that the convention was approaching the one hundredth anniversary of its organization. The appointment of a special committee was recommended. A strong committee was later appointed to arrange a suitable anniversary program for 1923.

Greatest Year in History

Unusual interest was shown in the report of Mr. Charles E. Prior, treasurer. Financially, the past year was the greatest in the history of the convention. Mr. Prior's report showed a balance in favor of the convention amounting to $580.18.

Mrs. J. D. Rough reported for the committee on the union of the woman's missionary societies within the state, after which Rev. Edgar R. Hyde, Middletown, preached the annual sermon on the topic "The Christian's Debt to His Day and Generation," based on Rom. 1:14-15.

The session of the afternoon was given over to reports. Interest was centered in the report of the pastor-at-large, and the reports on evangelism and the "State of Religion in the Churches" by Rev. James McGee, New Haven, after which the newly organized Woman's Baptist Mission Society of Connecticut held its first annual session. The speakers were Miss Anna L. Prince, Burma, and Miss May Covington, Central America. The new society has behind it fifty years of organized woman's work, as represented in the three conferences of W. B. F. Society and the W. B. H. Society in the state. The new organization adopted a constitution expressing loyalty to the national parent organization, as well as the state convention and the General Board of Promotion, through the State Board of Promotion. The first action of the new society, after prayerful consideration, was to vote the adoption of the plan for raising the $6,000,000 by the women of the North toward the completion of the $100,000,000 campaign. Committees were appointed and plans made for associational meetings early in November to line up the women of the state. The officers elected: president, Miss Mary L. Howard, Hartford; first vice-president, Mrs. A. L. Mulloy, Waterbury; second vice-president, Mrs. C. S. Carter, Ansonia; foreign secretary, Mrs. J. B. Kent, Putnam; home director, Mrs. W. T. Thayer, Hartford; recording secretary Miss E. Louise Carey, Hartford; treasurer, Mrs. A. I. Ward, New Haven; member-at-large, representing the General Board of Promotion, Mrs. J. D. Rough, Norwich. At the closing session of the day, "Our Baptist Work in Europe" was visualized by means of the stereopticon, after which Rev. H. B. Sloat, director of promotion, presented his report. The address of the evening was delivered by Rev. F. L. Anderson, Newton Theological Institution, on the topic "The Witnessing Church." It was characteristic of the erudite professor: original, forceful, timely and searching. If put into effect it means "a complete revolution" in the program of our churches. Given a Christian experience each member of every church should be always bearing witness to the fact of Christ in the individual life, and the possibility of his presence in every life for all of life.

Two Significant Resolutions

On Wednesday, the morning session was given over largely to the consideration of the work of the department of religious education. Rev. W. T. Thayer, director, presented an exhaustive report of the year's work. After the report of the commission by Rev. W. T. Aiken, Torrington, Rev. Gilbert N. Brink, Executive Secretary of the American Baptist Publication Society, spoke on the topic, "The Publication Society and Northern Baptists."

Judge E. K. Nicholson, Bridgeport, followed with a paper on the subject: "Nationalization or Federalization—Which?"

The closing session of the afternoon was occupied with routine matters. Of especial interest was the report of the committee on resolutions prepared by Rev. D. P. Gaines, Rev. E. Scott Farley and Miss Rosa O. Hall. The report voiced among other things, the purpose of Connecticut Baptists to complete the "Unfinished Task" of the New World Movement, to make suitable use of Sunday, November 6, to promote interest in world peace, to emphasize the teaching ministry of the church, to voice our unqualified sanction of the Volstead Act and of the Willis-Campbell Bill, now before the United States Senate, to endorse and urge the immediate passage of the proposed constitutional amendment prohibiting sectarian appropriations, as per House Resolution 159. Two resolutions were presented from the floor and favorably acted upon. Rev. M. R. Foshay, New Haven, presented a resolution endorsing the action of Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, president of the Northern Baptist Convention, in requesting that there be no pre-con-tion conferences at Seattle in 1922. Rev. E. R. Hyde, Middletown, presented a resolution—"opposing the acceptance or holding by state or national societies trust funds to which theological tests may be attached."

Chicago Baptists Astir

The Chicago Social Union

The Baptist Social Union of Chicago held its first meeting of the season on Tuesday evening, November 15. The meeting place was the Hamilton Club. The remodeled building of this club furnishes

The newly elected officers: President, Rev. J. N. Lackey; first and second vice-presidents, Mr. C. P. Walker, New Haven, and Mrs. A. L. Mulloy, Waterbury; secretary, Rev. A. B. Coats, Hartford; treasurer, Mr. C. E. Prior, Hartford.

worth-while life. He took the five principles which Marshal Foch declared had governed him, and under the illuminating analysis of Mr. Clausen their application became comprehensive. The principles are these: 1, supreme command; 2, training admirable facilities for a meeting place for such a social and inspirational function as the meetings of the Social Union are meant to be.

The spacious dining room on the ninth floor was filled with an eager group of Chicago Baptists when the sound of the gavel in the hand of President C. R. Holden called the meeting to order. After partaking of a dinner that resembled dinners served in the good old pre-war days, some necessary business was transacted. The new pastor of the First Church, Rev. Perry J. Stackhouse, was introduced. He responded briefly and pointedly and expressed his pleasure in having this opportunity to face and meet the problems of Chicago.

The main part of the evening's program was an historical survey by Judge Jesse R. Baldwin and an address by the brilliant young pastor of the First Church, Syracuse, N. Y., Rev. Bernard C. Clausen.

Judge Baldwin gave a brief sketch of the forty-four years' history of the organization and the principal speakers and addresses made during the period. He asserted that originally the organization was made up of laymen only—that in the mind of the originators this was to be an institution that the ministers were not to "run!" Evidently the laymen found themselves lonesome or lacking in something for in the evolutionary process of the Union's growth the women have been added to the membership as have also the pastors!

The address by Mr. Clausen was as outstanding and striking as his reputation had led his hearers to anticipate. In a speech that sparkled with humor, but which was filled with substance he gave to Chicago Baptists his conception of a for supreme command; 3, morale more important than material; 4, there is only one way to be beaten and that is by giving up the fight; 5, when being pushed back, attack!

Rev. Francis Stiffer for the program committee announced that the speaker at the February meeting would be a Baptist leader who has come into national prominence in connection with the U. S. Labor Board, former Governor of Tennessee, the Hon. Ben. W. Hooper. His appearance before the Union will insure a large assembly.

The Newest Baptist Church

The newest Baptist Church in the Chicago Association is the Judson Baptist Church located at Austin Blvd. and Berkshire, Oak Park.

Early in the spring of 1920 a committee was appointed by the Austin Baptist Church to look over the rapidly developing residential section around Austin Blvd. and Division St. This committee decided to seek the cooperation of the Austin Swedish and Oak Park Churches. Committee representing these three churches sought the help of the Baptist executive council. Three lots were secured on the corner of Austin Blvd. and Berkshire Ave.

On Children's Day, June 12, 1921, a portable building was placed on the lots of the executive council and dedicated.

Rev. Albert H. Gage, director of religious education, was asked by the council to take charge of the work. The next Sunday a modern departmental Sunday school was started. The beginners' department had three scholars, the primary department four and the junior department three. Now there is a school of more than one hundred, meeting in one room of a portable building, but having all the officers and departments of a modern school with graded lessons through the junior department.

A temporary organization was formed which carried the work until Wednesday evening, Nov. 2, 1921, when fifty-nine letters were deposited from eight different churches, a constitution, covenant and articles of faith adopted and officers elected. The constituency list will be left open until Dec. 2, by which time it is confidently expected that there will be at least seventy-five resident, active and contributing members.

Detroit Doings

BY ALBERT H. FINN

The New Christian Center

The first Christian Center for Negroes initiating from Baptist resources—the American Baptist Home Mission Society and the Detroit Baptist Union—was opened in Detroit on Oct. 20-30. It is true there is a fine institution of similar character in Pittsburgh, but the Baptists were invited to take over after it was established as a community center. Mrs. E. W. Moore, who is superintendent of the Pittsburgh house, and her able husband, Rev. E. W. Moore, who is director of Negro work of the Home Mission Society, came and lent their inspiring personalities to our Detroit event.

The new center is located at 1718 Russell Street, between Catherine and Sherman Streets in the very midst of the downtown Negro congestion, and is in direct charge of Miss Alexander, an appointee of the Women's Home Mission Society and a very efficient trained worker. Miss Harriet Cooper, head of the women's work of the Detroit Baptist Union, has given much of her time to this new departure and largely through her influence the women of our white Baptist churches furnished the building, making it possible to take up at once active service along domestic science, Bible school and young people's work. The Second Church presented a fine gymnasium outfit to the new center.

Other denominations and the civic authorities have evidenced a keen interest in the new enterprise. At the opening service, when W. Sherman Lister, president of the advisory council of the Detroit Baptist Union, presided, addresses were given by Dr. H. C. Gleiss, superintendent of the Detroit Baptist Union; Dr. Pearson, executive secretary, Detroit Council of Churches, and Dr. Gantz, of the Presbyterian group. Mrs. Moore delivered the principal address.

Saturday morning a session for ministers was held with Dr. T. J. Villers, presiding, when addresses were made by Dr. Gleiss and Rev. E. W. Moore and Evangelist Stough.

Saturday afternoon a reception was given to the ladies of the white Baptist churches. Miss Cooper, Miss Alexander and the women of the Negro churches acting as hostesses.

Saturday evening there was an enthusiastic young people's rally, Robt. W. Harris presiding. Rev. R. L. Bradby, superintendent Advisory Council, Rev. A. V. Allen, director religious education, Detroit Union, and Rev. E. W. Moore, delivered addresses.

Sunday afternoon there was a woman's rally with Miss Alexander presiding. Mrs. E. W. Moore was the principal speaker.

Last week the new Christian Center was almost exclusively engaged in the Christian Workers' Conference which was a replica of the conference held in the Woodward Avenue Church. This has been an outstanding event and has been largely attended by the members of our Negro churches. Many evidences of appreciation have been given and Rev. R. L. Bradby, who gives much of his time to the Negro group and its upbuilding, is delighted with the work accomplished.

Dr. Villers, of the First Church, is busily engaged in the ingathering following four weeks of special meetings led by Dr. Stough, of Wheaton, Illinois. The meetings were largely attended.

The Detroit Baptist Union, at its last quarterly meeting, voted to extend its area of operation to fifteen miles of the city limits. This is in agreement with the Detroit Baptist Association, whose area is coterminous. A division of labor has been agreed upon. This will allow the Detroit Baptists to better care for the rapidly developing suburbs that are virtually a part of the city proper. The Michigan Convention has aided in this desirable adjustment.

The Detroit Baptist churches are deeply interested in our New World Movement and the result of the recently held meeting of the General Promotion Board in Indianapolis, the stewardship leaven is working and the whole program adopted at Des Moines is expected to be carried out.

The greatly needed new house of worship for the Royal Oak Church is already in process of erection. This high-class residential suburb of Detroit has one of the oldest churches in Michigan—organized in 1839—which has seen many ups and downs, but today under the inspiring leadership of Rev. Geo. E. Dawkins it is emphatically up. When completed the property will be worth approximately $100,000. The new building is located opposite the high school on Main Street. The work will be rushed.

The Kansas Baptist Convention

The meeting of our Baptist forces in Kansas October 10-13 was exceptionally good. Attendance broke past records, an intense interest was manifested from the opening of the conference on fundamentals, Monday forenoon until the last word of the convention Thursday night.

The series of addresses brought by Dr. Joshua Gravett of Denver and Dr. J. J. Ross of Chicago were unusually helpful, both because of their inspiration and their splendid uplift. Dr. J. B. Smith of the First Church of Wichita preached the annual sermon on "Christ's Contribution to the World."

The reports presented to the convention by the board of directors, by the standing committees, and by the special committee on Ottawa University had been prepared with great care. Some of them are documents of unusual merit.

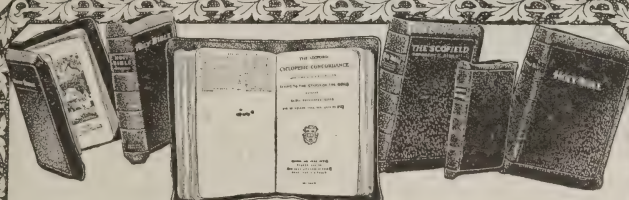

The report of the board of directors showed that ninety-six different workers had been employed by the convention and the organizations with which it has co-operated. These included the general workers, the field forces, the pastors and special missionaries. Not all data was at hand, but it was evident that the number of baptisms and additions to the churches resulting from the labors of convention workers far exceeded that of any preceding years.

The convention accepted the proposition from the American Baptist Home Mission Society to take over the church edifice accounts and agreed to maintain "The Home Mission Edifice Fund," in keeping with the terms of that proposition. Report was made on trust funds amounting to $9,341.62 and permanent funds amounting to $15,835.52, with other property holdings. The board of the convention is projecting plans for safe investment of its funds and constructive work in its church edifice department.

The department of promotion traced its activities of the year, analyzed graphically the relation of the churches to the New World Movement, and reported the receipts by months. It was shown that while a great part of the constituency had not yet entered the New World Movement and while many churches now counted as in the movement have made but a small start toward their share of the financial collections, our offerings for benevolence are practically three times what they were before the New World Movement began. The convention voted heartily to cultivate enlarged immediate offerings, and to carry forward urgently its part of the One Hundred Million Campaign.

Not in a generation have our people come up to convention with as much intensity of feeling. Three crises of discussion seemed inevitable. They gathered about: a confession of faith, a constitutional amendment, and the condition of our school. The battle of tracts that broke out before the meeting began brought its shock to us all, but possibly helped to clear the atmosphere. As the days passed we had definite evidences of God's gracious leadership and special proofs of the patience, fidelity and good sense of our brethren.

In the midst of the meetings the following resolution was submitted and after ardent discussion adopted with but few dissenting votes: Resolved—"That in view of the great program now before our denomination and the tremendous cry of need which comes from a needy world, we carefully refrain from any course which is at all likely to engender strife or cause division within our ranks; That we reaffirm our belief in and adherence to our historic Baptist beliefs, especially as expressed in the New Hampshire Confession of Faith, upon which our churches

The Gift Supreme - an OXFORD BIBLE

Put real Christmas joy into the heart of some one by the gift of one of these beautiful Oxford Bibles. Here is the gift, suitable for young and old, that will be prized always. It has a value that is far beyond its price. It shows your high regard as nothing else can.

Oxford Children's Bibles

02145 With 32 black illustrations. Keratol binding .....$2.20

02153 With 32 colored illustrations. French Morocco leather binding ..... 2.70

03325 With Children's helps, 32 engravings. Keratol binding ..... 2.85

5181 With 4,000 questions and answers, 32 black and colored illustrations and helps ..... 4.00

02957 With 116 black and colored illustrations... 5.95

Oxford S. S. Teachers' Bibles

04403 Minion type, French Morocco leather binding .....$4.00

0623x Same, printed on Oxford India paper..... 7.00

04453 Minion black-faced type, French Morocco leather binding ..... 5.00

05453 As 04453, with words of Jesus Christ in red..... 5.25

0773x As 04453, printed on Oxford India paper .....7.65

05453x As 05453, printed on Oxford India paper..... 8.35

04523 Long Primer self pronouncing type, French Morocco ..... 5.50

0923x As 04523, printed on Oxford India paper... 9.65

Oxford Large Print Bibles

01607 Small Pica type, Keratol binding, limp ....$4.35

01608 Same type, French Morocco binding ..... 6.15

01605x As 01608, printed on Oxford India paper...10.65

01561x Pica type, Persian Morocco leather binding, limp, printed on Oxford India paper...17.00

Oxford Pocket Bibles

All printed on Oxford India paper and bound in French Morocco leather

0113x Pearl black-faced type .....$3.50

03028x As 0113x, with references ..... 3.65

01254x Nonpareil black-faced type ..... 4.00

01182x Nonpareil type..... 4.15

01328x Minion type ..... 4.25

Scotfield Reference Bibles

Helps on the pages where needed

53 Minion Black-faced type, French Morocco.$6.00

55x Same, printed on Oxford India paper..... 8.25

155x As 55x, with concordance .....10.25

73 Brevier Black-faced type, French Morocco. 7.75

75x Same, printed on Oxford India paper.....10.50

175x As 75x, with concordance .....13.00

At all booksellers or from the publishers

Oxford University Press American Branch
35 West Thirty-second Street New York City

Cook Academy Takes New Start

COOK ACADEMY ORCHESTRA

Front row (seated) left to right—C. Smith, G. Lawton, D. Miller, G. Eaton, L. Sadler, A. Parce, M. Brush, L. Cummins.
Back row (standing), left to right—Prof. Paul Vickland, A. W. Blair, K. Gardiner, G. Gomez, A. Lawson, C. Sydney, R. Hodges, C. DeSoto, E. Raymond, J. Velasco, W. Vickio, M. Conde, B. Gere, W. Ball, W. Wood, J. Parker.

Cook Academy at Montour Falls, N. Y., has been remodeled and equipped at an expense of nearly $80,000, and reopened this season with 120 students (not counting music students), and a faculty composed of Principal Bert Cate, Vice-Principal L. W. M. Wilson, Rev. Walter C. Mason, Merrill C. Wiseman, Winthrop D. Follansbee, Dominic De Francesco, Paul Vickland, George Hanford, Miss Frances McDowell and Mrs. D. DeFrancesco.

At the present writing there are eighteen in the Cook Academy Orchestra and six in reserve. Public performances have received heartiest approval. An exchange concert with Keuka College takes place before Christmas. Plans are under way for the orchestra to play in Elmira, N. Y., and other points.

Any society or church wanting the services of an orchestra of this size or part of the number can secure them by meeting their traveling expenses.

The Cook Academy Football Team is doing splendid work and winning games against strong teams in a way that is arousing favorable comment everywhere. The boys are developing a powerful machine and their play is hard and fast. The Cook spirit is the spirit of hard play and clean play and the present team is lifting this ideal to a high plane.

An attractive schedule of concerts will be prepared that the communities about may enjoy the performances. An exchange of attractions has been arranged with

COOK ACADEMY FOOTBALL SQUAD

Front row (seated), left to right—Boyce, Salmons, Lee, Sydney, L. Sadler (Captain), W. Vickio, Wood, Hubble, Moore, Petty.
Middle row (kneeling), left to right—Raymond, Conde, Updike, Settimo, Morton, Danley, Griffis, Pike, Savettiere, Williams.
Back row (standing), left to right—Prof. Follansbee (Coach), Rodriguez, Parce, Haller, Hern, Cummins, Eaton G., Hand, Ball, Feagles, Prof. DeFrancesco (Graduate Manager).

have been established and most of our pastors have been ordained."

The report of the special committee on Ottawa University was a thorough going document bringing data from three sets of questionnaires with opinions from former students, present students, members of the board of trustees and the faculty. The report expressed confidence in the moral and religious atmosphere of the school and in its teachings, and religious faith and life. It set forth the denominational attitude of the trustees and faculty, the relation of the school to the state convention and made many practical recommendations. It is the first masterly study of our educational situation for a number of years and will accomplish much toward the establishment of confidence. The convention appointed a committee which, in co-operation with a similar committee from the college, is requested during the year to work out plans for a closer co-operation, investigating the possibility and advisability of denominational control through the state convention.

Much interest was shown in the Sunset Home and Hospital of Concordia, Kansas. This is a worthy institution that has been built up and maintained by the Swedish Baptists of this section. A proposition to join with the Swedish Baptists in the development of an enlarged institution was considered favorably and a committee appointed to study plans and report.

Keuka College so that the Keuka Glee Club performs at Cook and the Cook Orchestra performs at Keuka.

The dining room service has received the hearty approval of every boy in school. Each room is steam heated, electric lighted, with hot and cold water and equipped with all the furniture needed.

The Y. M. C. A. under capable management is ministering to the spiritual needs and ably seconding the Bible instruction.

Rev. W. H. Cox is actively at work in Newberg, Oregon, and the congregation is growing. Old debts are being liquidated. The pastor will commence a special series of meetings about the middle of December.

Pres. Arthur E. Bestor of the Chattanooga Institution, with Mrs. Bestor has been since late in September in Europe. The plan was to spend a little time in England and France, then go across central Europe by Berlin-Bagdad railroad to Constantinople and by coasting steamer to Beirut. Here they will join some members of the faculty of the American University for a trip through Palestine, then go on to Egypt, and thence by sea to Italy. Mr. Bestor will return home, sailing from Naples early in February, while Mrs. Bestor and the children will remain in Europe until May or June. Mr. Bestor is president of the Baptist Social Union of New York City.

The climax of the convention program came with our honored speakers. Mrs. Helen Barrett Montgomery, president of the Northern Baptist Convention brought great inspiration. She delivered a message to the women, brought a strong denominational address before the convention Wednesday night, and made earnest appeal for unity, prayer and advance on Thursday. Dr. J. Y. Aitchison, general director of promotion, brought two timely messages, conducted two conferences on the New World Movement and impressed all with his manly qualities and with our obligation to go forward in the One Hundred Million Campaign and in our service to Christ throughout all parts of the world.

Our people returned from Topeka with appreciation of our large tasks and better united for advance. The next meeting will be held at Hays, in the western part of the state.

The Woodlawn Way

(Continued from page 1405)

Sunday evening service if they weren't attracted first by B. Y. P. U. on Sunday night.

A Try Out.

But with all our misgivings, we followed our pastor and decided to try it out for a year. The year is now over, and we wouldn't change back to the old order any more than a butterfly would crawl back into a cocoon. The problems of the change and the weaknesses of the old society have alike been untangled and overcome. We are not perfect; but we are happy. More people have been brought to Christ and his church in the last year as a direct result of the B. Y. P. U. than in its whole previous history. The membership and attendance have increased over 100 per cent. We now have an active (we mean really active) membership of 150, after having dropped the names of all whose attendance had been so irregular as to warrant such action. Our average attendance, without visitors, is eighty-five. We never have a meeting in which there are not new faces. Scores of young people of our church and community never think of going elsewhere Thursday evening; they all find some way of evading studies and other engagements on our B. Y. P. U. night. And there's no way of getting acquainted like chatting over a refreshing glass of frappe or a popcorn ball. Of course there's a friendly atmosphere in the Woodlawn Church. People love to come to our meetings. And when they are interested in the society there is no difficulty in obtaining a response in testimony of Christian experience or B. Y. P. U. loyalty. Attendance on the evening services Sunday and Wednesday has been increased manyfold. We love our union and our church more and more. We are proud to invite our friends to visit us. We know we will have something enjoyable to offer them.

A Home Run.

Our new president has set before us three maxims of utmost importance to the success of our society. The first is work; the second is Work; and the third is WORK! We are working, and we are succeeding. We thank God and our pastor for leading us on into increased joy and service in the Kingdom of Christ.

Church News by States

IN each state the director of promotion is an agent of THE BAPTIST. Unless some other person has been designated, as in a number of states, news items intended for publication should be sent to him. This does not deny the privilege always belonging to churches of sending matter direct to the office. In either case condense your material. Unless reporting some unusual event, make no item longer than six or seven printed lines. You can save our blue pencil.

Pacific Coast

WESTERN WASHINGTON

THE MANY FRIENDS OF REV. FRED BERRY, director of evangelism for Western Washington, will be pained to learn of his serious illness. He has been obliged to give up his work for the present and is at the hospital under treatment. He appreciates greatly the many expressions of sympathy on the part of his friends and the assurances of their prayers.

REV. C. R. ENGEL has accepted a call to be Baptist Church at Snohomish and began his work Nov. 1.

REV. E. M. BOLLINGER, of Dayton, Wash., has accepted a call to the church at Raymond.

JAPANESE WOMAN'S HOME, Seattle: Under the leadership of Mrs. G. F. Holt, supt. of White Cross work, the women's mission circles of Seattle and vicinity gave a shower to the home Nov. 15. A list of articles needed at the home had been furnished the women and different circles indicated what they would do. The missionaries were hostesses and presented an interesting program, assisted by some of the Japanese women. Tea and Japanese cakes and confections were served by the Japanese women. The attendance of women from the different churches was large. The donations were generous, providing most of the things requested and many others. The missionaries in charge of the home are Miss Florence Rumsey, Miss May Herd, Miss Louise French and Miss Esther McCullough.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA

CHOWCHILLA: Chapel car Grace arrived Feb. 20, 1921. Rev. and Mrs. E. R. Hermonist held meetings resulting in forty converts and reconsecrations. A church was organized with sixty members. A new building was started at once. It has been completed with equipment and lots at a cost of $8,000. The church was recognized November 6, and the building dedicated. The building is in mission architecture and seats 350 people.

"Talks" With Young Folks

READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS

Hugh T. Kerr

Children's Gospel Story-Sermons

A new Volume of Talks to the Young. Drawn from history, mythology, the daily newspapers, biography and fiction.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

Children's Story Sermons.....$1.25

Children's Missionary Sermon-Sermons.....1.25

S. D. Chambers

Author of "If I Were You"

To Be or Not to Be

Brief Talks with Children and Young Folks aims at helping the children to right decisions—to determine whether they will, or will not, acquire certain qualities calculated to either make or mar their characters and lives. $1.25.

Dudley Oliver Osterheld

What the Wild Flowers Tell Us

Nature Talks with Young People. Each fascinating story draws a moral and spiritual lesson from the flower subjects, all suggestive of many highly desirable qualities of mind and heart.

Illustrated, $1.50.

W. Russell Bowie

Sunny Windows

"Every pastor has here a rich mine for use in speaking to the children."—Christian Advocate. $1.25.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

The Children's Year.....$1.25

Wade C. Smith

Author of "The Little Jets," etc.

"Say, Fellows!"

With irrefutable logic Wade Smith demonstrates in these "Bible Class Talks" the lasting satisfaction and the abiding happiness which form the rich heritage of every man who elects to follow the gleam. $1.25.

P. E. Burroughs

Author of "The Present-Day Sunday School"

Building a Successful Sunday School

Dr. Burroughs writes out of a large experience, and his suggestions and plans of management are of an unusually valuable sort. $1.50.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

The Present-Day Sunday-School.....$1.50

Robert F. Y. Pierce

International Illustrator

Blackboard Efficiency

A new book by the author of "Pictured Truth" and "Pencil Points." Dr. Pierce's work is so simple that any teacher can draw the pictures, yet wonderfully helpful in bringing out the essence of the lessons. Illustrated, $1.25.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR

Pencil Points.....$1.25

Pictured Truth.....1.25

REVELL'S
AT ALL BOOKSTORES
BOOKS

Fleming H.
Revell Company
New York, 158 Fifth Av.
Chicago, 17 N. Wabash

RIVERSIDE, First, Richard E. Day, pastor, begins the next year with 706 members and a local budget of $6,655. It raised last year for all purposes $21,006.45. Total enrollment in the Sunday school is 686.

CLOVIS: Former Pastor Jas. A. Brown closed his work in June. During the last year of his work the church received forty-five additions, twenty-seven by baptism, and paid for local expenses $2,500 and for benevolence $3,000. Vernon H. Cowser is the new pastor.

LONG BEACH: The members of the God's Pilgrims' class of the First Baptist Sabbath school met at the church in the afternoon to celebrate the eighty-sixth birthday of their beloved teacher, Rev. L. M. Whiting, who for about seventeen years has had the supervision of this class. The majority of those present had reached their three score years and ten and several had stepped over the eighty-year line, the sum total of the ages aggregating 1,432 years, the oldest being ninety-six years and the youngest thirty-six.

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA

ALAMEDA: Members of the Baptist Church were the visitors in the attendance contest held as a part of the rally of the Alameda Sunday School Association held in the First Congregational Church.

Eighty-five members of the Baptist Church were present at the rally. The First Presbyterian Church was second.

Rocky Mountain States

ARIZONA

THE CHAPEL CAR "GLAD TIDINGS" is now in Arizona. Missionary A. B. Howell and wife will have charge. The car will do work for the Mexican people. It is now located in Douglas and will work along the Southern Pacific and Arizona Eastern railroads. Brother Howell was for many

Mounds Park Sanitarium

Earl and Thorn Streets

Midway Hospital

Snelling and University Avenues

Merriam Park Hospital

(FORMERLY COBB)

Inglehart and Cleveland Avenues

DEPARTMENTS

General Surgery Medicine
Neurology Obstetrics
Eye, Ear, Nose
and Throat

SAINT PAUL, MINNESOTA

TRAINING SCHOOL FOR NURSES

LABORATORIES

Radium Blood Chemistry
X-Ray Basal Metabolism
Serology Pathology
Electrocardiograph

30 to 50%

Selling the Baptist Calendar Is Making Money Easily

WHO MAY SELL?

Sunday School Classes—Women's Societies—Boys' and Girls' Clubs—any person or group—and do what good you will with the money.

IT WILL SELL ITSELF IF YOU SHOW IT

Send your order now, many will buy for Christmas Gifts.

Calendar Department
General Board of Promotion
276 Fifth Av., New York City or

Literature Bureaus
700 Ford Bldg., Boston, Mass.
504 Columbia Bldg., Los Angeles
125 No. Wabash Ave., Chicago

years a missionary in Cuba so he is well prepared for the work. The first meeting held at Bisbee resulted in twenty-five professions of faith. The car is now at Naco, where the outlook is most encouraging for the organization of a mission. The services are largely attended and the Mexicans are exceedingly interested.

THE FOLLOWING PASTORS have recently resigned: Rev. Geo. M. Lehigh, First Church Phoenix, has accepted the pastorate of the First Church Olympia, Wash.; J. Lawrence Bell of Mesa accepted the pastorate at Nogales; E. J. Dunlap, Chandler, begins the pastorate at Prescott; C. P. Morris from Prescott, on account of broken health, has moved to Denver, Colo., where he hopes to regain his health that he may continue his work in the state; H. C. Horton has resigned at Young and as yet is not located.

THE FIRST CHURCH, PHOENIX, has called the Rev. E. H. Shanks, of Clinton, Iowa, to become its pastor. Bro. Shanks comes to the church after a successful ministry in Erie, Pa., and in Clinton, Iowa, and as general field secretary of the Layman's Missionary Movement in Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia, and more recently pastor at large of the Iowa Convention. Bro. Shanks is on the field and hard at work.

THE CALVARY CHURCH, PHOENIX, has called Rev. Sam P. Gott of Jackson, Mo., to its pastorate. He has accepted and will be on the field early in the month.

REV. E. J. DUNLAP has accepted the call to the pastorate of the First Church of Prescott and has begun his ministry on that field.

THE REV. F. E. HAWES of Marion, Ohio, has accepted the call of the First Church of Mesa and has begun his pastorate.

EVANGELIST CARL BASSETT will come to Arizona to begin work under the auspices of the Home Mission Board. His work will begin in Tempe, Nov. 27, assisting Pastor Lands. Other meetings are in waiting for him.

THE REV. LEM R. CARTER of Seminary Hill, Texas, has become pastor of the church in Safford. Bro. Carter is a recent graduate of the Southwestern Baptist Seminary of Fort Worth.

THE REV. R. P. POPE has resigned as colporteur-missionary and will move to California. We regret to lose Bro. Pope from the state. He has done a splendid ministry among us and he is loved by all who know him. He has recently undergone medical treatment in El Paso, Tex. We hope that he may have a permanent cure for his trouble of long standing.

Mr. S. S. Superintendent:—Purchase a sample of these Snowden Lessons and show it to your teachers.

SNOWDEN'S SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS

Improved International Uniform Series, 1922. By REV. JAMES H. SNOWDEN, author of "The Personality of God," "The Coming of the Lord," etc. $1.50.

"This very attractive and handy volume covers in 329 pages the entire course of the International Uniform Sabbath-school lessons for the coming year. The Bible text is printed in the Authorized Version, as it should be, in all due respect to conservative opinion. From six to eight pages are taken for each lesson. Sound views are presented and valuable instruction. The arrangement is artistic and pleasing. The volume is light and easily carried in the pocket or hand."—The Herald and Presbyter.

"Snowden's Sunday School Lessons for 1922, is a real find for the busy Sunday school teacher. There is none of the obvious padding that makes the usual comments on the lesson so trying; the matter is clear, condensed, direct."—The Baptist, Chicago.

"We have recommended it for adoption by the teachers of our Sunday School."—Rev. A. T. Fowler, North Orange, (N. J.) The Baptist Church.

"A valuable aid to the Sunday School teacher because of the author's essentially conservative grasp of the fundamental principles of the Christian Religion."—The Methodist.

"The expository style with practical applications of this book is our beau ideal of popular, Bible study and teaching. A teacher who masters Dr. Snowden's matter will do enduring work in his class."—Record of Christian Work.

A Dictionary of Religion and Ethics

One Volume

Edited by Shailer Mathews and Gerald Birney Smith

with the co-operation of almost one hundred students.

The volume is intended for ministers, Sunday-school teachers, and general readers who are interested in religion not as technical students but as those who wish to acquire accurate and compact information of the latest developments of study in the field. It will be an especially useful reference book for public and Sunday-school libraries. $1.00. Send for Circular.

The Promise of His Coming

An Interpretation of the Idea of the Second Advent.

By Chester C. McCown. $2.50.

Dr. McCown is not one more controversialist out for a partisan victory in the feud between pre- and post-millennialists.

ITEMS FOR YOUR NEXT ORDER

Scott: The New Testament in the Twentieth Century.....	$1.00
Simkhovich: Toward an Understanding of Jesus.....	2.00
Williams: The Prophetic Ministry for Today.....	1.75
Shannon: The Infinite Artist.....	1.25
Machen: The Origin of Paul's Religion.....	3.00
Paton: Spiritism in Antiquity.....	3.50

THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

64-66 FIFTH AVENUE

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.

Enduring Investments

By Roger W. Babson. $1.50

In Part I, different forms of stock and bond investments are considered with their relative degree of endurance.

In Part II, instead of stock and bond investments, human souls, Christian educational institutions and various forms of benevolences are emphasized as the only truly enduring investments.

Also RELIGION AND BUSINESS, Ninth Printing. $1.50.

The Fundamentals of Christianity

By Henry C. Vedder

Professor of Church History, Crozer Theological Seminary. Cloth, 12 mo. $2.00.

It is the main object of this book to convince its readers that the future belongs to a Christianity that will determine its doctrines, program and methods on the authority of Jesus alone.

COLORADO

REV. A. A. LAYTON, having closed his work at Anaconda, Mont., now lives in Denver. He is prepared to supply vacancies and do evangelistic work to a limited extent.

GREELEY: REV. D. I. Coon is just beginning his fifth year as pastor of the First Baptist Church. In this four years nearly 350 new members were welcomed into the church. About twenty were received at the monthly celebration of the Lord's Supper last Sunday. During the past year the $12,000 mortgage against the church was paid off and this evidence of indebtedness burned at the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the church. A school of missions was put on so successfully as to inspire plans for another one this year. Among those recently received into the church is Rev. Brewer G. Boardman, who is making his home with his son, Prof. L. G. Boardman of the college. He has been kept busy supplying various churches.

AN UNPRECEDENTED
Free Trial Offer of Hymn Books
100 Copies of the new "King of Song Books"

GLAD TIDINGS in SONG

(Just off the press)
Compiled by 100 leading evangelists
Will be sent prepaid, to any Church, Sunday School, Young People's Society or other religious organization.

For One Month's Free Trial
If not satisfied, you may return the books and we will pay the freight or express both ways. If satisfied, send us the prepaid price for the books.

Returnable Sample Copy Sent on Request
Cloth, 60c, prepaid; $45.00 a hundred, not prepaid; Limp, 40c, prepaid; $35.00 a hundred, not prepaid; Manila, 35c, prepaid; $30.00 a hundred, not prepaid.

Abridged Edition
96 pages, 107 hymns
Manila, 15c, prepaid; 12 1/2c, not prepaid
Limp Cloth, 20c, prepaid; 17 1/2c, not prepaid

6 Books by Dr. W. E. Biederwolf
"Unvarnished Facts About Christian Science," 20 cents. "Spiritualism," 20 cents. "Mormonism," 20 cents. "Russellism," 20 cents. "Adventism," 20 cents. All five for 75 cents.
Dr. Biederwolf's new book of sermons, "The Man God Tried to Kill," 75c.

The Glad Tidings Publishing Co.
202 S. Clark St. Chicago, Illinois

CHURCH FURNITURE
Pews, Pulpits, Chairs, Altars, Book Racks, Tables, Communion Outfits, Desks—EVERYTHING. The finest furniture made. Direct from our factory to your church. Catalog free.
DeMOULIN BROS. & CO., Dept. 17 GREENVILLE, ILL.

WANT ADS
You will get results through the Want Columns of THE BAPTIST. Rate is 6c per word per insertion; cash with order.

$10. Is your preacher getting less than 20.00 a week? I will give $10.00 towards raising his salary. Give present salary and amount overdue. F. M. Barton, 701 axton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

Fountain Pen. For $2.00 we will send you a first-class self-filling Fountain Pen and we will send The Expositor to your pastor 4 months as your Christmas Gift. F. M. Barton, 701 Caxton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

132 page Homiletic Magazine sent to any pastor who will agree to examine same, return it if not pleased, or send $1.00 for months subscription. The Expositor, 701 axton Bldg., Cleveland, Ohio.

Evangelist Nygren and assistants. seventh season. Members I. E. A. Your ate may be open on our calendar. For references etc., write: David F. Nygren, 55 N. Clark St., Chicago, Ill.

For Sale—A Good Stereopticon, 400 candle power bulb, 40 ft. wire and carrying case, 25.00. Rev. A. W. Stephens, 205 Church L., Evansville, Wis.

Mississippi Valley

MISSOURI

PALMYRA CHURCH and community have enjoyed a real revival in the past few weeks. Dr. D. P. Montgomery and his son Floyd, song leader, aided twelve days; the pastor preaching three days before their arrival and three days after their departure. The spirit of prayer prevailed throughout the entire meeting. There were thirty-one additions to the church, twenty-four by baptism and seven by letter; ten were heads of families, eighteen were men and boys, thirteen women and girls. Many from other churches attended and one united with the Methodists. Just before the meeting, $81.60 was raised for song books; the first Sunday of the meeting $125.00 was procured for local expenses of the meeting, and up to date $346.50 has been collected for the evangelist and the singer, making a total of $553.10.

MINNESOTA

REV. GEORGE E. BURLINGAME has closed an evangelistic campaign at First and Swedish churches in Brainerd.

KANSAS

ATCHISON, FIRST, W. O. Shanks, pastor, assisted by H. O. Echols of Bloomington, Ill., singer, held a revival and welcomed more than fifty additions, mostly by baptism. The people presented Pastor Shanks a thank-offering of $550.

REV. SAMUEL ZANE BATTEN, Social Education Secretary of the Northern Baptist Convention, delivered a series of lectures on "The Christian Reconstruction of Industry" at the Kansas City Theological Seminary, November 21-25.

IOWA

AFTER TWO WEEKS of preaching in the revival campaign with First Church, Centerville, Rev. J. O. Staples, pastor, Evangelist John M. Linden, extended the first invitations Sunday, Nov. 20, and during the day there were ninety-three reconsecrations, nine promised church letters and fifty-one made decisions for Christ.

CALVARY, DAVENPORT: Dr. Houser closed the third year of his pastorate Sunday, November 13, and begins the fourth year under most favorable auspices. The local current budget is $8000; benevolences nearly $4000. Sunday morning audiences larger and the Sunday evening services are honored with the largest audiences in the city, passing the five hundred mark at times. Accessions to the church during the three years have been 299, 167 by baptism, sixty by experience, and others by letter.

ILLINOIS

A NEW CHAPTER in the career of the Wilmette Church began with the services on Sunday, November 13, held in celebration of the beginning of the use of the new building. Although it is yet incomplete, all the regular services of the church are now being held in the ground floor quarters. On the date of the celebration, the largest Bible school attendance in the history of the church as well as the largest morning congregation were recorded, and from all appearances there will never be a return to the former figures. The Wilmette Church is eight years old. Its new building when complete will represent an expenditure of $100,000. The present membership is 215.

Be a Modern Samaritan

A million consumptives are falling by the wayside! They need your helping hand.

You are a modern Samaritan when you Christmas Seal your Christmas mail. Through the accumulation of dollars received from the sale of these seals nurses and physicians are enabled to give their services to millions of stricken people throughout the United States.

Express the Yuletide spirit—constructively.

your Christmas Seal Christmas Mail

The National, State and Local Tuberculosis Associations of the United States

Van Duzen Bells
formerly Van Duzen & Tift
Guaranteed Genuine Bell Metal
Bells made of Copper and Tin.
Famous for full rich tones, volume and durability.
The E. W. Van Duzen Co.
Buckeye Bell Foundry
CINCINNATI, OHIO
Est. 1837 428-434 East Second St. Send for catalogue.

Harry W. Jones
CHURCH ARCHITECT
Minneapolis

INDIANA

GARY, ROUMANIAN: This little band of Roumanian Baptists has held together splendidly, and has worked faithfully all through the trying period of the war and since, suffering all the fluctuations of membership due to coming and going between the old country and this, and to the industrial depression in this steel centre, but the church has maintained a fine work and is in a most hopeful condition with about forty members, a Sunday school with an average attendance of about seventy and a live B. Y. P. U. Rev. Ilie Trutza, the faithful and much beloved pastor, is a wise and efficient leader, and with the better facilities of the new building the work is sure to make even better progress among the many Roumanians of Gary. This building is erected from the edifice funds of the Indiana Baptist Convention, the Roumanians being given long time and an easy rate of interest upon it as a loan. The dedication is set for the first Sunday in December.

BICKNELL held a "father and son" banquet in its new Community Hall, with 450 at tables.

OHIO

MARIETTA: Dr. John Weaver Weddell, recent pastor of the First Baptist Church at Oberlin, has been appointed to relieve Dr. C. H. Stull as pastor of the First Baptist Church in this city, during the winter months.

MICHIGAN

REV. A. R. FERGUSON has accepted the call to the North Branch and Clifford churches, and the work is progressing under his leadership.

Owosso: October 9 was a day of jubilation for Pastor H. A. Waite and his people. Extensive improvements and entire renovation of the church have been made during the summer at a cost of $3,000, and this was rededication day. The walls are oil tinted, the floors covered with new velvet carpets, the oak paneling and pews are entirely refinished. Dr. Waite has accomplished a great work during his six years' pastorate—wiping out a debt of long standing and increasing the missionary gifts of the church manifold.

Atlantic Coast

NEW YORK

THE BAPTIST SOCIAL UNION City Mission Dinner will be held at the Hotel Astor (Broadway at 45th Street) on Tuesday evening, Dec. 6 at 6:30 o'clock. The principal speaker of the evening will be Dr. Frank Mason North, an outstanding speaker and leader (for twenty years in charge of Methodist city mission work in this city). Miss Edith Goebel, contralto (a member of the Tremont Church), will be the soloist of the evening and will sing two groups of songs. This is a notable Baptist social gathering of the year and it is hoped that the delegates to the City Mission Society and a great number of others from each church will be present.

MASSACHUSETTS

REV. MILES W. SMITH, for four years pastor at the Stratford Street Church, Boston, has resigned and has accepted the call of the Norwood Church, just on the fringe of Cincinnati, Ohio. Mr. Smith is one of the promising young graduates of Newton, and has already a high place among our pastors. In returning to work in his native city, he will bring to a strong church fine qualities of leadership.

NEW JERSEY

RIDGEWOOD, EMMANUEL, Thomas H. Sprague, pastor: Over 200 partook of supper at the thirtieth anniversary supper and annual meeting of the church on the 16th inst. From Nov. 1, 1920, to Nov. 16, 1921, sixty-five have been received by letter, fourteen on experience and ten by baptism, a total of eighty-nine. Over $15,000 have been credited to the church on account of the New World Movement. The pastor delivered the sermon at the union Thanksgiving service in the Methodist Church, six churches uniting.

MARYLAND

Mrs. H. F. GILBERT of Pocomoke gave two missionary addresses at the Maryland Baptist State Convention at Baltimore, Oct. 27-29. Mrs. Gilbert was stationed at Vanza, Congo Belge, under the Northern Board. She is detained in America on account of health conditions.

The Baptist

Should be preserved.
Bind your 26 copies as you receive them in a Dowst Expansion Binder
1 Binder $1.75
2 Binders $3.00

DOWST MAGAZINE BINDER
120-4 Ann Street Chicago, Ill., U. S. A.]

Write for this Booklet

It tells how to receive a generous income for life: regular, unchangeable, non-taxable. Investment absolutely safe. Your money helps a Christian enterprise.

Write for Booklet Z.

American Bible Society
25 Bible House
Astor Place, New York

"It is to Laugh"

Our Congo Missionaries believe that the disarmament idea should be extended to the mosquito, as this verse from the Congo News Letter might indicate:

"The skeeter is a bird of prey,
Which flies about at night.

About three-eighths of it is beak,

And five-eighths appetite,

And fifteenth-eighths or so is buzz,

And nineteen-eighths is bite."

A Scotch preacher who read his sermons asked an old Scotch woman whether she remembered something he had said in one of his discourses. Her answer was "Aye, mon, ye cannot remember your own stuff: what do you think we can do with you."

The archbishop had preached a fine sermon on the beauties of married life. Two old Irish women coming out of church were heard commenting on his address. "Tis a fine sermon his reverence would be after givin' us," said Bridget. "It is indade," replied Maggie, "and I wish I knew as little about the matter as he does."—Tit-Bits.

Bishop Bratton, at a dinner in Jackson, was genially patronized by a millionaire.

"I never go to church," the millionaire said, "I guess you've noticed that, bishop."

"Yes, I have noticed it," said Bishop Bratton, gravely.

"I guess you wonder why I never go to church, don't you?" the millionaire pursued. "Well, I'll tell you why, bishop. There are so many hypocrites there."

"Oh, don't let that keep you away," said Bishop Bratton, smiling. "There is always room for one more."—Detroit Free Press.

Adapted to the Needs of Each Grade

Peloubet's Graded Quarterlies

The advantages in the study of a uniform text are found in uniform family Bible study; a common subject in teachers' meetings; substitute teaching made possible; fresh texts and treatments each year; additional material found in PELOUBET'S SELECT NOTES and denominational and secular papers.

Teachers' Quarterlies

Very popular with progressive teachers, because exceedingly helpful in fitting the mind to present the lesson to the scholar with vividness and clearness that holds the pupil's interest.

Send for Sample Copies

W. A. WILDE COMPANY 120 BOYLSTON STREET BOSTON, MASS.
Western Office: Madison Terminal Building, Chicago, Ill.

Based on the New Uniform Lessons

Edited by Leading S. S. Workers

OUR MUSIC CORNER

CONDUCTED BY

WILLIAM LESTER

SOME CHRISTMAS MUSIC

From the Lorenz Publishing Co., Dayton, O.
The Light of the World—F. B. Holton ($60).

Choirs in the habit of giving cantata at Christmastide would do well to carefully consider this work. It is melodious, easy to read and to sing, devout in mood, and colorful as to content. The alteration of solo parts with the more massive choral sections is cleverly handled, and there is much variety of key and rhythmic outline. Orchestra parts are published at a moderate price.

From J. Fischer & Bro., Bible House, New York, N. Y.
The Holy Mother Sings — McKinney ($15).

Gesu Bambino—Yon ($15)
From out of a bulky assortment of splendid material from the above mentioned publisher I have chosen to review the seasonable Christmas numbers listed—the other titles can wait a more opportune time. The format in which they came for this occasion was that of arrangements for chorus of mixed voices; but both numbers are available in almost every practical form—solo, duet, unison chorus, and various versions for choruses of mixed, women's or male voices. The McKinney number is an arrangement of an old time German carol, of intriguing melodic outline. The harmonization and accompaniment figures are handled with a left touch; the sincerity of the naive melody will add to any Christmas service. As for the Yon carol, I consider it one of the most beautiful seasonal compositions of the past decade.

From G. Schirmer Co., New York, N. Y.
Christmas Song—A. Holmes ($66).

An exquisite simple carol for two-part chorus (or duet), by an Irish-French roman, who, during her lifetime in Paris, reduced much beautiful music. Evidently written in imitation of the old-time French Noel, the composer has to an ultimate degree achieved the eloquent simplicity of her model. Any Christmas service will be enriched by the addition of this number to the program. It is ridiculously simple when we consider its vitality and charm.

From the H. W. Gray Co., New York, N. Y.
Eight Old Christmas Carols—arr. Lester ($15).

Another result of my hobby riding: a series of eight beautiful old carol-melodies, furnished up with a new set of accompaniments and harmonizations, with eloquent texts by Sadie Marion Becker, an artist in that line. All are so set that they can be used as solos or unison carols; about half have an alto part added, so as to be adapted also for duet or two-part chorus, and the two last are so arranged that they will be usable for chorus or quartet. The melodies are all very old—two are from the 12th century, two answer to the 13th, two more date from the 14th, one from the Chester Mysteries responds to the 15th, and the most modern is the Austrian Carol of the 17th century! Melodies have to possess a vital stamina and charm of sincerity to last that long. The settings are of no particular difficulty; have tried to provide rich accompaniments, but not too ornate to be fitting to the finely-chiselled outlines of the everlasting melodies.

From The Clayton F. Summy Co., Chicago.
Summy's Collection of Ten Carols for Christmas—Selected by Roy R. Murphy ($10).

There are certain traditional carols, widely extant, universally loved, which should be in every choir library. Mr. Murphy, with the backing of this wide-awake publisher, has put under one cover a well-selected set including some of the most effective. Just a listing of the titles will stir childhood memories for many of us. Scanning the pages we find "The first Noel," "Good Christian Men, Rejoice," "We three Kings of Orient are," "What Child is this?" "Silent Night," "The Babe of Bethlehem," as well as the lovely "The Morning Star" of Bridge, and the newer "On Christmas Morn" by the Chicago organist, A. F. McCarrel. All in all, this is a splendid set of numbers, and should meet a wide demand for just such a collection.

From the H. W. Gray Co., New York, N. Y.
See, amid the Winter's Snow—West ($15)

On Wings of Living Light—Matthews ($15)

Two exquisite anthems for Christmas, worthy of inclusion on all the programs for this holy season. The first is for soprano solo and chorus of mixed voices (it is also issued in an arrangement for female voices alone). Charged with melodic beauty, it is a masterly work—certain to elevate and please a congregation, easy to do, and easy to listen to! The carol-anthem by Matthews is another gem, somewhat more complicated as to choral writing than the other number considered; but quite easy, capable of fine grades of dynamic shading, with a stunning climax-leap. Both these numbers are easily within the capability of any choir, whether amateur or professional, and equally interesting to both.

From the Lorenz Publishing Co., Dayton, O.
The Choir Leader for November.
The Choir Herald for November.
The Volunteer Choir for November.

Above are listed the three choir magazines issued by this firm. As is well known, the three volumes are scheduled to meet three differing needs—ranging from the untrained, volunteer chorus, to the experienced, trained choir able and anxious to perform some difficult selections. Each book contains excellent material adapted to the particular needs of its specialized field. In each book are four or five anthems, a pungent editorial page, and some reprinted or original articles having bearing upon the problems of the church-music field. The contents have to do with the Christmas season. The widespread and extensive sale of these volumes proves their value and their success in meeting a great need.

Holy Night—Lorenz ($66).
This colorful yet easy anthem is a free setting of Gruber's well-loved carol, "Holy Night." Mr. Lorenz has built effective superstructure upon this foundation. It is certain to score a bull's-eye.

CHURCH BELLS SCHOOL

Ask for Catalogue and Special Donation Plan No. 10

ESTABLISHED 1858

THE C. S. BELL CO., HILLSBORO, OHIO

Hudson Avenue congregation, Detroit, is about to build an $80,000 structure on Grand River Avenue. We are the only Baptist Church among 200,000 people. We need help and want 10,000 Baptists to send $1 each. Send to

Rev. Robert White, Pastor
4024 Euclid Avenue, W.
Detroit, Mich.

PELOUBET'S

Select Notes

The World's Greatest Commentary on the International Sunday-School Lessons

By AMOS R. WELLS, Litt.D., LL.D.

Its suggestions to teachers, its maps and pictures, are comprehensive and thorough, and all this material is presented in a form which can be easily and profitably utilized.

To every student its study is an inspiration.

Let us send you a pamphlet containing the first lesson taken from the volume of 1922

Price $2.00 Net: $2.10 Delivered

W. A. WILDE COMPANY

120 BOYLSTON STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

Madison Terminal Building, Chicago

FOR SALE AT ALL BOOKSTORES

VICTOR Portable STEREOPTICON

The PERFECT PROJECTOR for every need

SHIPPED ON TRIAL SPECIAL EASY TERMS

Hundreds of illustrated lectures for rent.

WRITE FOR INFORMATION

VICTOR ANIMATOGRAPH CO. INC.

215 VICTOR BLDG. DAVENPORT IOWA

HINNERS PIPE ORGANS

PIPE ORGANS

of any size or construction. Estimates cheerfully submitted. Also Reed Organs for Church or Home. Electric Organs blowing out fits for organs of any make. Write, stating which catalog is desired.

Hinners Organ Co., Pekin, Ill.

"Buy from Your Own House"

No Better Gifts Than Books

What is more appropriate for relative, friend or pastor; adult or child; lover of fiction, poetry, or serious reading; than a carefully chosen book? Let us help you in making your selection. Our Selected Books Catalog and Holiday Bulletin contains a list of the very newest and best books of all publishers—Fiction, Poetry, Humor, Biography, Religious Books, Children's Books, Greeting Cards, Calendars, and Holiday Novelties. Send for a copy today. It is free.

Modern Money Methods for the Church

By FREDERICK A. AGAR

The object of the author is to suggest ways whereby the local church may be delivered from unwise financial methods, and to outline a plan adapted to provide adequate financial resources for both the local and the wider Christian enterprise. "Giving is not a matter of legislation, but of life"; "Living and giving in a spiritual sense are synonymous." These two quotations show the atmosphere of this eminently practical book.

$1.00 net

The Withered Fig Tree

Studies in Stewardship

By EDWIN N. POTEAT

The author's purpose is to make clear the fundamental principles underlying the Stewardship movement and to furnish a basis for the organization of local leagues or groups of Christian stewards. Authentic personal testimonies reinforce the argument. The book is arranged for the use of classes, questions that will stimulate discussion and afford themes for debate being attached to each chapter.

$1.00 net

By-Paths to Forgotten Folks

By COE HAYNE

Mr. Hayne has not taken cross-sections of fact, he has transplanted it alive. His stories of home mission work bring us into immediate contact with the living factors of human interest. It is as if we visited the homes of Indians, Alaskans, Nicaraguans, ranchmen, and foreign-speaking people, and made personal acquaintance with them and with the men and women who are the hand and the tongue of Christian concern for them.

$1.25 net

The World Lighted

A Study of the Apocalypse
By CHARLES EDWARD SMITH, D.D.

A discussion characterized by great commonsense and striking insight. The interpretation is historical and yet it is broader than the historical. It is free from offensive literalism. The author steers remarkably clear of the absurd mixture of literalism and symbolism. Altogether it is the most rational interpretation that has yet appeared. In fact, it ought to be an open epochal book in the study of the Apocalypse.

$1.00 net

The Dutch Anabaptists

The Stone Lectures, 1918-1919
By HENRY ELIAS DOSKER

Professor Dosker has availed himself of the first-hand information concerning the Anabaptists of Holland contained in the scattered fragments of their own writings which survived the fires of the Inquisition. The origin of the Anabaptists, the stories of the radical and the conservative wings of their movement, their theology, internal conditions and views of life among them, and their latest history, are all amply set forth in a narrative that teems with elements of thrilling human interest.

$2.00 net

The Use of Projects in Religious Education

By GERTRUDE HARTLEY

A manual for parents and teachers of children and young people. Shows how to make religious education interesting by utilizing commonplace things in teaching. Tells how to vitalize handwork and memory work. It presents tested methods and illustrations of actual work by boys and girls in the Sunday school.

$1.00 net

Planning Church Buildings

By HENRY EDWARD TRALLE, M.A., Th.D., and
GEORGE E. MERRILL, A.I.A.

A book that is original and constructive. Shows how to plan for the adequate housing of a modern church program. Shows how to build beautifully and economically. Shows how to build for preaching, for worship, for teaching, for recreation, and for evangelism. Shows how to build for a small church or a large church. Shows how to remodel an old building. Illustrated with architect's plans.

$1.25 net

Principals of Christian Service

By HENRY F. COPE

A text-book in the Standard Course in Teacher-training, outlined and approved by the Sunday School Council of Evangelical Denominations.

A unit in the third-year specialization series issued by the Teacher Training Publishing Association, intended for use in the Adult Department. It presents in vigorous readable style a program of Christian service by adults, together with the reasons for the features of service described.

60 cents net

If you love dogs, you will enjoy reading the greatest dog story ever written

Beautiful Joe

By MARSHALL SAUNDERS

The life history of a dog as told by himself. The outstanding qualities of faithfulness, sagacity, and companionship are illustrated by interesting incidents in the dog's life. Underlying the story is a strong plea for kindness not only to dogs but to all dumb animals.

"Beautiful Joe" was rescued and owned by the author's family, and the entire charming story is founded on fact. This is a dog story that will never die or grow old.

Large 12mo. edition, Illustrated, $1.50
Small 16mo. edition, not illustrated .50

More than 750,000 have already been sold!

All Books advertised, reviewed, or recommended in "THE BAPTIST" can be supplied by our nearest branch

Established 1824

AMERICAN BAPTIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY
(THE JUDSON PRESS)

Philadelphia, Boston, Chicago, St. Louis, Los Angeles, Kansas City, Seattle, Toronto

"Use BAPTIST Lesson Helps"

"Order from Our Nearest Branch"

Volume II

December 10, 1921

Number 45

The Baptist

Published Every Week by the Northern Baptist Convention

MANNING HALL at Brown University, which the above picture portrays, is a good specimen of "Revival Doric Architecture." It was erected in 1824. The lower floor is used for the Museum of Fine Arts and the second floor is used for lectures and class meetings. Manning Hall is the third college building at Brown, the first being University Hall, erected in 1770, and the second, Hope College, erected in 1821.

Fresh from the Field

A few weeks ago it was reported in the denominational papers that a call had been extended to Dr. Hugh A. Heath, executive secretary of the department of conventions and conferences of the General Board of Promotion, to return to the general secretaryship of the Massachusetts State Convention, which he left to assume his responsibilities in connection with the promotional work of the denomination and which is again left vacant by the resignation of Dr. Obed J. White. It is now announced by the General Board of Promotion that Dr. Heath has decided to remain in his present position. While Massachusetts will find it difficult to fill his place, Dr. Heath's decision is one of the greatest importance for the whole work of the denomination. He has, for more than two years, been directing the activities of the department of conventions and conferences, and the experience which he has gained and the contacts which he has made during this time will make his services invaluable to the Board of Promotion in the carrying out of the important plans for the raising of $30,000,000 during the present fiscal year. The Board of Promotion and the whole denomination are to be congratulated on Dr. Heath's decision.

Five urgent calls for folding organs to be used on Latin American fields have been received by the American Baptist Home Mission Society. The current budgets do not make provision for these instruments. It is hoped that five persons will furnish the organs or the cash for their purchase listing these items as belonging to a class which may be called the emergency kingdom needs. $50 is the cost of an organ alone. President Rutledge of Cristo College, Cuba, writes: "We are in great need of a baby organ for our work at Songo. It would add greatly to the interest of the church services there when our students go up on Saturdays and Sundays." Due to the opening up of new mission stations in Mexico four folding organs are needed in that republic.

Rev. Louis J. Velte of the Tabernacle Church, Chicago, surprised his congregation on a recent Sunday by presenting his resignation. Mr. Velte came to this pastorate after the close of the war and has given his best service to this field. During most of this time he has been the secretary of the Chicago Minister's Conference and is beloved by all the Baptists of the city who know him.

Rev. Edward C. Kunkle, for more than five years the successful pastor of the First Church, West Chester, presented his resignation Nov. 23, in order to accept the invitation to become the director of the board of promotion for the Metropolitan area of New York, his new work to begin Jan. 1, 1922. Mr. Kunkle will take to his new position a rich pastoral experience which will eminently qualify him for the work. He is an alumnus of Bucknell University and the Divinity School of the University of Chicago, and has served pastorates in Kenosha, Wis., and Scottsdale, First Church, Wilkesbarre, and First Church, West Chester, in Pennsylvania. He was a chaplain in the American forces overseas during the war. His West Chester church was the first in eastern Pennsylvania to go "over the top" in meeting its New World Movement quota.

Robert Lowe Fletcher, commercial traveler who has become noted in his writing of hymns, books and lectures, recently visited the First Church of Greenfield, Ohio, where Dr. Hofmeister ministers. Prof. Fletcher is in his seventy-first year and has known Dr. Hofmeister through his entire ministry. He occupied the pulpit Sunday morning and directed the choir at night and then lectured Monday evening.

Dr. Warren P. Behan, at present connected with the educational work of the American Baptist Publication Society, has accepted a position as professor of Bible in Ottawa University (Kansas), and will enter upon his work there at the beginning of the second semester, Jan. 31, 1922. Dr. Behan made a profound impression at Ottawa last summer at the summer assembly and the trustees feel that his acceptance of this post will mark a large advance step in the work at the university. Besides the Bible, he will teach courses in religious education, intended to fit young people for various forms of church work, and in Baptist history, designed to familiarize young people with the facts which will stimulate denominational loyalty. Dr. Behan's wide experience and ability will make him invaluable in this position to the Baptists of Kansas and neighboring states.

A cablegram has been received by the Foreign Mission Society announcing that the party of West China missionaries, which was detained at Shanghai on account of political disturbances in the interior of the country, has now safely passed Chungking, a city about twelve hundred miles up the Yangtze River. In all probability by this time all the members of the party have reached their respective stations.

A cablegram has been received announcing that Secy. P. H. J. Lerrigo was planning to sail from Congo on Nov. 27. This means that he will probably reach America some time in January. Our people will await with interest his story of his experiences and observations in Africa.

The executive committee of the World Brotherhood Federation at a meeting held in Prague, during the recent third World Brotherhood Congress, re-elected Dr. Charles L. White, executive secretary of the Home Mission Society, as one of the vice-presidents of the World Brotherhood Federation for the ensuing year.

Since the return of Dr. Rolvix Harlan from an extended itinerary in England and European countries in the interest of the World Brotherhood Movement, he has had many calls to deliver lectures which are interpretations of Europe's conditions. In connection with the Conference on Industrial Relations, conducted under the auspices of the Boston Federation of Churches, Dr. Harlan was engaged to ad-

Merry Christmas, Pastor!

The following letter, dated Nov. 21, has been received by the Ministers and Missionaries Benefit Board. Comment upon it is entirely superfluous. It carries its own message to all our churches:

"I am sending you our minister's application for membership in the Retiring Pension Fund. His salary is $1,200 and the parsonage we count as another hundred. We are giving him this as a Xmas present this year, so if you will kindly send the certificate for him to me we will be glad to have it to give him then.

"P. S. Our church is very small, only six male members interested; two more members who are not interested."

dress two of the larger Baptist churches in Boston. Three subjects discussed by him are, "Can Europe Turn the Corner?" "Christianity in Europe," "Religion in England."

An interdenominational religious publicity conference was conducted Nov. 20-21 at Norwich, Conn., by Rev. Chas. A. McAlpine. One of the immediate results will be a co-operative effort to be carried on for several months by the churches, one feature of which will be the insertion of a half-page advertisement in the daily papers on Saturday mornings and evenings. The main purpose will be to give a religious message, the announcement of church services being secondary.

After four years in business at Mount Tremper, N. Y., Rev. Raymond P. Ingersoll has returned to the pastorate and began work with the Wurth Street Church, Kingston, N. Y., on Oct. 1, succeeding Dr. A. K. Fuller, who retired from active service because of ill health. The work has opened encouragingly in all departments, and Mr. Ingersoll expressed much pleasure in being again in the active pastorate.

Rev. Walter J. Sparks has been engaged in recent months in a campaign to raise funds for Brandon College, a Baptist school in Manitoba. The work began in discouraging condition owing to the financial depression and the fact that in the Brandon district there had been crop failures for five successive years. Yet funds have been pledged beyond expectation. The people of Brandon alone gave more than was asked originally for all Western Canada. Now the will of the late William Davies provides $100,000 for the college on condition that a similar sum be raised in a given time. Inasmuch as this is for endowment and the money previously raised is for new buildings, a new campaign has been necessary this fall. Despite another poor crop the amount is more than half pledged and expectation of complete success is had. Later the amount needed for buildings will be completed. Brandon College is trying to care for 400 students in buildings originally intended for half that number. With new endowment and equipment its service will be greatly enlarged.

Miss Mary Margaret Gleiss, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. H. C. Gleiss of Detroit, Mich., was married on Nov. 25 to Mr. Frank B. Sack. The young people will be at home at 2820 Connecticut Ave., Dormont, Pittsburgh, Pa. Miss Gleiss was active in church work in Detroit in the Hudson Avenue Church as leader of the juniors, teacher of a class of girls and in charge of grading new scholars. She was associational director of the World Wide Guild, active as a member of the city executive committee of the B. Y. P. U. and vice-president of the local B. Y. P. U. Mr. Sack is active in the Temple Church, Pittsburgh, as a Sunday-school teacher, officer in the B. Y. P. U. and the choir. He also is one of the officers in the associational B. Y. P. U. in Pittsburgh and a leader of young people's work.

At a recent meeting of the advisory board of the First Church, Minneapolis, the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "Be it resolved by this advisory board of the First Church: That we express to our pastor, Dr. W. B. Riley, our commendation and appreciation of his outstanding leadership among the preachers of this country in his upholding of the Bible as the divinely inspired Word of God; in his great success in the organiza-

(Continued on page 1420)

The Baptist

Vol. II      December 10, 1921      No. 45

THE BAPTIST, founded in 1919, is published every Saturday by the Northern Baptist Convention at 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Illinois. Entered as second-class matter February 4, 1920, at the post-office at Chicago, Illinois, under the Act of March 3, 1879. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, Act of October 3, 1917, authorized February 4, 1920.

Managing Editor: Edgar L. Killam
Editor: Arthur W. Cleaves

Contributing Editors:

PRES. GEORGE E. HERR      PROF. WILLIAM LYON PHELPS
MRS. HELEN BARRETT MONTGOMERY      MRS. BERTHA GRIMMELL JUDD
PRES. LEONARD W. RILEY      REV. FREDERICK E. TAYLOR
REV. S. W. CUMMINGS      PRES. JOHN W. BAILEY
HON. CARL E. MILLIKEN

RATES: Single subscriptions, $2.50 a year; church clubs equal to 10 per cent of church membership, $2.00; single copies, 10 cents. In foreign countries the postage is $1.04 extra; in Canada, 52 cents extra. CHANGE OF ADDRESS: Both old and new addresses should be in our hands at least two weeks before the change is to go into effect. Always give key number as it appears on your label. REMITTANCES: Should be made payable to THE BAPTIST. Acknowledgment made through change of label date.

ADVERTISING: Rate per agate line, 30 cents; full page (420 agate lines), $125.00. No time or space discounts. CORRESPONDENCE relating to subscriptions should be addressed to THE BAPTIST, Subscription Department, 417 South Dearborn Street, Chicago, Ill.

BRANCH OFFICES: The office of the state director of promotion in each state is an office of THE BAPTIST.

Table of Contents

	Page
FRESH FROM THE FIELD .....	1418
EDITORIAL .....	1421
A CALL TO COURAGE, by John Y. Aitchison .....	1424
WHAT WILL SANTA CLAUS BRING THEM? .....	1424
A PRIMER OF THEOLOGY—THE ATONEMENT, by A. H. Strong .....	1425
FORMER DEVIL WORSHIPERS CELEBRATE SILVER WED- ding .....	1427
READY FOR THE BIG PUSH IN STEWARDSHIP .....	1428
THE WASHINGTON CONFERENCE—III, by William Axling .....	1429
BAPTIST STATUS AND PROSPECTS IN DENMARK, by Peter Olsen .....	1430
A PICTURE STORY OF THE FELLOWSHIP SHIPMENT .....	1431
THE BULLETIN BOARD .....	1433
THE CHIMNEY CORNER .....	1434
RELIGIOUS EDUCATION .....	1436
YOUNG PEOPLE'S WORK .....	1437
THE OPEN FORUM .....	1438
OUR OWN FOLKS .....	1439
OUR MUSIC CORNER .....	1447

The Referendum

The editor prepared a card of thanks copied from a death notice appearing in a Chicago daily as follows: "We desire to thank all the friends and neighbors who assisted us in the death and burial of our husband and father." This notice was signed by the weeping widow and the children. We felt that with slight adaptation it would probably fit our case. We find, however, an overwhelming vote in favor of the retention of the Kollum for the purpose for which it exists. We hoped to be able to give in this issue an analysis of the vote, but our force has been so busy with subscription receipts that it is impossible this week. The subscription receipts for November, 1920, were $1878.34; for November, 1921, $4160.45.

Killam's Kollum

Only Publisher's Page

Kind reader, do not labor under any misunderstanding as to the nature of this page. It is not an editorial page. It is not built for our serious minded folks. If you belong to this class do not torture your righteous soul by tarrying here. Turn over the page, and there you will find material suited to your needs.

Let the Thought Perish

One of our subscribers, a really good man at heart, urges that the Open Forum be reopened in THE BAPTIST. This sounds like a contradiction in terms. He suggests one change over our former policy. He says: "I would like to have the editor of Killam's Kollum comment on each contribution." Have a heart, my brother. You know not what you ask. The editor would not last a month. While THE BAPTIST is always glad for suggestions (we are glad most of the time), the suggestions should be of a humanitarian nature. It ought to be said here and now that the editors have always favored the Open Forum. From every part of the country there is an insistent demand that it be restored. It is restored.

A Christmas Suggestion

"What shall I get them for Christmas?" Thous- and of times this question will be asked this month. Get a useful gift. In these times of suffering and confusion we ought not to spend money for mere trifles and trinkets. Consider Missions and THE BAPTIST as gifts. For fifty-two weeks the latter will be brought to the door of your friend, a constant reminder of your thoughtfulness and good will.

Does Not Need Monkey Glands

"There's so much punk and dry rot in the best of denominational papers—including THE BAPTIST of course—that a juicy streak is appreciated. The — without its joke column and news from back home would be intolerable. Have a heart for us humans who don't need monkey glands but who want papers badly enough to pay for them and read them. Enlarge the Kollum." This subscriber whose name is Jeremiah lives in Detroit, Mich. We are sincerely glad that the brother says, "Pay for them and read them." We find that it is much easier to get the money if you get the reading. Our subscription receipts for the first fifteen days of November are more than 100 per cent greater than for the same period in 1920.

Augustus H. Strong

By GEO. W. TAFT

AUGUSTUS HOPKINS STRONG, the son of a well-known publisher and Baptist leader, Deacon Alvah Strong, was born in Rochester, N. Y., 1836, and died in Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 29, 1921. He belonged to vigorous New England stock, one of his ancestors being Stephen Hopkins, the most independent trained thinker of the "Mayflower," who for the statement of his convictions about civil and religious liberty was compelled to flee from England for his life. He was graduated from Yale in 1857 and from the Rochester Theological Seminary in 1859. He was converted during his junior year in college. After studying in Europe and for a short time supplying the North Baptist Church in Chicago, he took his first pastorate in Haverhill, Mass., being ordained in 1861. In 1865, he became pastor of the First Church of Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained until 1872 when he was called to Rochester Theological Seminary as president and professor of systematic theology. He occupied this place for forty years and then became president emeritus. When he began his work at Rochester, the seminary was young, poorly equipped, and meagerly endowed. When he retired, it was well housed, largely endowed, and in many respects the foremost Baptist theological seminary of the world with its graduates doing large things for God in many lands.

Dr. Strong as a teacher was a classroom king and during the many years of his prime, was probably not surpassed as an instructor by any theological teacher of his generation. His pupils whom he trained to think eventually belonged to many schools of Christian thought, and like him, were independent of other men's trammels; but when it came to a passion for truth, as it is in God, revealed through Jesus Christ, he was a veritable father in Israel whose sons, both at home and abroad, for a generation filled almost as many positions of theological instruction and leadership as did those of all his fellow Northern Baptist theological contemporaries combined. Most of his students followed him in his loyalty to the authority and integrity of the Bible. A few did not.

As a denominational leader, the president of the Foreign Mission Society, and of the General Baptist Convention, and as a member of many important commissions and committees, he was one of the most influential and useful men of the past sixty years.

Dr. Strong as a writer and literary critic confined himself largely to theological and Biblical subjects and naturally appealed to an audience composed of ministers and thoughtful laymen, who recognized in him one of the most inspiring, virile and invigorating thinkers of the day. He was the author of many books, most of which were composed of series of essays or monographs. They were "Philosophy and Religion," "The Great Poets and Their Theology," "Christ in Creation," "Miscellanies," "One Hundred Chapel Talks," "Union with Christ," "Popular Lectures on the Books of the New Testament," "American Poets and Their Theology," and "A Tour of the Missions." The great work of his life, however, was his "Systematic Theology," which has gone through many editions and is now published in three volumes. In the making of this book, those followers of the Christ who influenced him most were Paul, Augustine, Calvin, Edwards, Finney and his own teachers, Porter, and E. G. Robinson; but when it came to putting theological thinking into a complete, concise, comprehensive, and systematic form, he easily surpassed them all and produced the greatest compendium and reference book of theology ever penned. Some one once spoke of him as "the master mechanic of theology," which characterization would be admitted did we also realize that a vital union with Christ so transformed and transfused him as a Christian and a student that his overwhelming passion was to think Christ and be at one with Christ. Objective though his system was to a great extent, he was so possessed by it that it became his subjective, living Christian experience. This element of power is one reason why his theology as a text and reference book has been so widely and permanently used in seminaries of the conservative order in many denominations and in many countries.

In conclusion, Dr. Strong was supremely a man of God, and the greatest heritage he has left Mrs. Strong, his two sons and his four daughters, his pupils and friends, is the remembrance of a man who walked with God. He is not, for God took him. All of these can unite with his younger son John who followed him in the ministry in saying, "I cannot do otherwise than exult. Father died in his strength like Moses of old. He stood for Christ, and has gone to a great reward."

The Legacy of a Life

By AUGUSTINE H. CARMAN

OUR denomination has been greatly blessed in some of its aged leaders, men whose personality and activity were invaluable to the end. One remembers such pastors as Lorimer, Henson and Edward Judson; such great teachers and administrators as Martin B. Anderson and Henry G. Weston; such missionary statesmen as were Ashmore and Morehouse still at eighty; and now another of our Baptist premiers, in the person of Augustus H. Strong, has passed gently from earth to the presence of his Master, having never abated his splendid effectiveness nor lost contact with the sweep of human affairs though his ninth decade was more than half finished. Within the very month of his death he delivered the five lectures on the William Cleaver Wilkinson foundation at the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary, with a lecture at the McCormick Seminary just before and one at the Divinity School of the University of Chicago just after that series, and in the same month he completed the series of masterly papers now appearing in THE BAPTIST entitled "A Primer of Theology." These constitute a notable valedictory.

Doctor Strong leaves not only his works but the rich legacy of his life to the denomination and especially to its young ministers. His latest years were characterized by a ripened sweetness of character and personality which might not be expected in the erudite scholar, logician and theologian. He won and held the affectionate reverence of a multitude of younger men who themselves are the moulders of character and ideals for other multitudes. His example to the ministry has been of incalculable value. His industry was enormous yet wisely applied to the time and point of advantage, for he knew the economics of human effort. He required of himself from early manhood a brief mid-day rest, and he used his vacations conscientiously. He had himself under control, a fine mechanism, able to direct his energies, to lighten or relax them with a splendid resiliency, and so kept himself fit through fourscore years of amazing activity. With him there never seemed to come the "sagging-moment" which a ship has in crossing the hollow of a wave. He came nearer functioning up to his full efficiency than almost any other we have known. Personal letters were almost always answered by him in the next mail. His life was a letter like those we so prized from him, legible as copper script, gracious in expression, without excess but never lacking the fitting word for the moment. He put this great mind and sensitive conscience back of his slightest effort—Christ was central in his living as in his theology and he could say of his Master, "His I am and Him I serve."

Fresh From the Field

(Continued from page 1418)

tion and conduct of the many Christian Fundamental Conferences held throughout the country, which conferences we believe to have renewed the faith of many preachers and laymen; and in his recent prompt public answer, given at the Minneapolis Auditorium on Sunday evening, Nov. 7th, to present-day destructive criticism."

The Annual Meeting of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America will be held Dec. 14-16, in the New First Congregational Church, Ashland and Washington Boulevards, Chicago. The general theme is "The Church and World Brotherhood." The first session will be on Wednesday afternoon, and thereafter sessions will be held at 9:30 a. m., 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. All sessions will be held in Carpenter Chapel with the exception of the closing open session on Friday evening. Seats will be reserved in the gallery of the chapel for Chicago ministers, denominational leaders and the laity.

One of the handiest volumes dealing with the Sunday school lessons for 1922 is "Crannell's Vest Pocket Lessons," written by Dr. Crannell of the Kansas City Seminary and published by the Judson Press. The little book is packed full of suggestion. The volume can be had of any branch of the Publication Society.

The Baptist

Are Baptists Overgrown?

THE Michigan Christian Advocate raises the question of size in regard to the Methodist Church. It acknowledges the inspiration of numbers, grants that a big church develops big men, recognizes that some things are done more effectively because the church is big, and then in all seriousness asks its question, "Is the Methodist church too big?"

In an age of big cities, big business, big programs, big wars, big everything, the question is certainly ridiculous. And yet listen to the dangers which the Advocate points out:

"1. The larger the church, the larger the percentage of shirkers. Too many members are problems instead of promoters, leaners instead of lifters, liabilities instead of assets. This non-combatant element, this non-participating group, this crowd camping at Ease-in-Zion, how does God appraise such a sector of an army? A Detroit layman said today, 'You are dead right. We have hundreds of competent people who have taken shelter in my own church, and do nothing but pay. We cannot smoke 'em out with dynamite.'

"2. There is that unseemly pride in mere numbers, and the resulting boasting that has given us a questionable rating among the other churches who call us the 'Methodist Statistical Church.' We really do love to think and talk in Methodist numbers of seven or eight or nine figures. Some of us forget that we did not make the church big, but most of us admit that all we are we owe to the church that set us going. Is the big car the most popular on the public highway? Nay, verily. Too many drivers of big cars are careless of the rights of others. Pride of size will never make us loved in the world. Babies are of more value than elephants, and size is something to be anxious about. Institutions sometimes need anti-fat medicine.

"3. Size almost invariably breeds ignorance. Methodist illiteracy increases with our numbers. We have a growing army of Methodists who do not know where they came from, where they are going or even where they are at, only a faint notion that they are on the way, carried along by the momentum of the big church. Years ago, a brother pastor in the U. P. church astonished me by his knowledge of his mission fields. But that church had only the work in India and Egypt. We stand appalled at our long battle line, and its mileage scares us away. The Advocate habit would make us wise unto Methodism, but half the folks never see an Advocate, and half of the other half are but half-and-half readers. Since faith now comes by reading, and since we do not read, a big section of our big church lives in blissful and unpardonable ignorance of what we are doing. They are nice folks, as fine as silk, but they are Methodistically illiterate, and mostly non-useable.

"4. Size always diminishes the need of sacrifice and reduces to the vanishing point any element of persecution. Methodism in America is now looked up to, where once it was looked down upon, and we have our full share of the best folks in the land. It is easy now to be a Methodist for the crowd is big and jolly, and we are rarely persecuted for righteousness. That always marks a danger point. Church history shows that we can stand up under persecution better than under prosperity. Will our own church be an exception?

"5. A big car is lovely when the motor purrs smoothly, but when a big machine stalls, it is all off, we are tied up for keeps, and likely the traffic is blocked also. For seven reasons, the editor drives a small car. One of those reasons is that if it stalls, he can shove it over into the fence corner and tinker it up while the rest of the world goes by. A big church stalled would be a pitiable sight. Our Methodist Church is so big that it is hard to mobilize. Ask Earl Taylor, who did it once."

Far be it from us to suggest that these things are true of the Baptist denomination. We, of course, shall listen with benevolent spirit to this confession of "those Methodists." And yet we are not certain that we wish to pray, "O Lord, we thank thee that we are not as other denominations." A little self-examination, a little heart-searching, a proper Christian humility, are always becoming. It may be that the evils of bigness have also assailed some Baptists. If so, out with them! "Lord, be merciful to us sinners and help us to set our house in order!" A big denomination, entirely surrendered to God, can be a mighty power in the world.

Give Where the Need Is Greatest

ALL children of our Sunday schools are asked to remember in their Christmas giving the children of the world.

Choosing Christmas gifts is not always easy. People have so many things already that one is never sure that they will like what we may select. Disappointment is not uncommon in both giver and receiver.

But there are in the world great numbers of needy children to whom it is a simple matter to give something which will both delight and serve them. Some of them are in Europe—many thousands of them, in fact. But others are found in the great cities of America. You may not know just where to look for them. But our Baptist Christian Centers can and will help, and you can have the assurance that any money given will be used just where it will do the most good.

Possibly some Sunday schools have made other arrangements. But those which have not will be glad to heed the request of the General Board of Promotion and make a special offering on Christmas Day for the children. Read the announcement made in another part of this issue. Ask your superintendent what he is going to do about it.

The money given will help the children, and that is good. It will count on the quota assigned to your church for the New World Movement, and that also is good.

Moreover, the task of getting it to the right people is not difficult for the money can be sent in through the regular channels marked as a Christmas gift.

Our churches did well last year, although there was but little time for them to get ready. The time given this year is not over-abundant, but surely it is sufficient to lead to greater giving than in 1920. So then altogether, let us remember the Christ child by ministering to some other children on His day!

Dr. McGuire Resigns

DR. U. M. MCGUIRE, who has been since March 1, associate editor of THE BAPTIST, terminated his relations with the paper on Dec. 1. The men with whom he has been associated desire to pay him a sincere tribute of affection and admiration. He is an ideal comrade and fellow-worker—strong in his convictions, earnest in his work and yet at the same time open to suggestion and argument and true as steel to those with whom he is associated. He came to THE BAPTIST from the editorship of The Baptist Observer, the state paper of Indiana, on March 1 and it is with the greatest regret that his colleagues see him go. He brought gifts of mind and heart which have been of great value to the Baptist host whom he has served with a sincere devotion. Dr. McGuire's intention is to take a much-needed rest during the winter months, visiting his children and doing some literary work to which he has long looked forward but for which his duties would never allow him leisure. We are sure that the goodwill of the constituency of this paper will go with him.

Is This a Sample of Baptist Culture?

THIS is the day of the Baptists." Such a remark has been common in the conventions of the last year and more. As men became explicit the idea in their minds seemed to be that in the twilight of the kings the one group of people which has the sure promise of the dawn is the group of uncompromising democrats of whom, in religion, the Baptists of the world are the representatives.

The opportunities of the present day in Europe and on the mission fields endorse the assertion. Baptists can enter into as large a future as they will prepare for now. The field is wide open.

But there is something nearer at home which equally warrants attention. President Harding is a Baptist and has been raised in the midst of Baptist traditions. Secretary of State Hughes is a Baptist, the son of a Baptist minister. Consider from the Baptist standpoint the things they have of late been doing.

Baptists are individualists in religion and life. They allow none to come between them and God save the one Mediator. Their churches are local democracies, each one a competent body in itself and subject to no other. Baptists are always jealous of overlordship and veer away from anything which looks like it. And yet they have their associations and other larger bodies in which they come together to discuss matters of mutual interest and to forward matters of common concern. They rejoice in such free friendly associations; they rebel against any leagues with powers of their own against which the individual may not stand.

Now notice what the President has been urging. He wishes an association of nations, an association which shall bring representatives of the nations together frequently for conference but which has no power of compulsion over any of the nations represented. Nobody shall have the right to coerce anybody. Out of these frequent meetings—and the President believes that these should be held annually—there shall come not treaties, but understandings and gentlemen's agreements. As Mr. H. G. Wells has put the matter, the question is "whether we shall adjust our international relations by constitution or by conversation." The President wants it done by conversations. He would apply his democracy to the world.

Is this an example of Baptist culture? Consciously or unconsciously the President has been applying the ideas which are his Baptist heritage to the foreign relations of the United States.

A Great Leader Has Passed

ON another page of this paper appears a tribute to Dr. Augustus H. Strong who suddenly passed into the life beyond on Nov. 29 at Pasadena, Cal., where he had just gone for the winter. Less than ten days before he had completed a series of lectures in Chicago and at lunch with the present writer expressed his interest in the various matters which he expected would occupy his attention during the winter. He was especially concerned with the attempt he has been making to present to our constituency a simple statement of theological matters which might serve as a unifying force among Baptist Christians. These articles will continue to appear for some weeks to come inasmuch as they were completed before their author's death.

Dr. Strong has been one of the great and influential teachers of his day. There are students all over the world who have been accustomed to look back to him with fondness and admiration. Multitudes of ministers who never studied under him and laymen without number also gladly confess their obligation to him. Blessed is any man who thus lives in the lives of those whom he has touched in the name of the Lord!

Probably the time has not yet come properly to evaluate his system of theology. But it is well to notice that at the center of it is a passionate loyalty to Jesus Christ and to the spoken Word which is his memorial and witness. If various elements in the theology are forgotten or lose their emphasis as time goes on, this element is certain to remain constant in all Baptist thinking.

That was a great generation to which Dr. Strong belonged. What a splendid line of heroes and thinkers it gave the Baptists! One cannot help wondering if the same kind of stuff is being used in the making of our present-day men and women.

* * *

Few things have touched the popular heart more than the cordial reception given our War President during the tribute paid at Washington on Armistice Day to the unknown soldier. As the fever of partisanship lessens, men and women are coming to see that Woodrow Wilson is as much a war victim as any man who laid down his life in France and are accordingly paying him the heart-felt tribute that belong to all such.

Editorial Comment

BULLY FOR BILLY!

Cleveland papers of Nov. 29 carry a vivid account of an attack on the previous night on the house of Dr. W. W. Bustard, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Church, the apparent intention being to take his life. Having received secret warning, however, he and his wife were not in the house. The attempt, made by five thugs, undoubtedly resulted from his activities during the recent municipal campaign in opposition to the candidacy of Fred Kohler for mayor and two speeches made later at the Masonic Auditorium. Dr. Bustard in these later speeches defended with vigor his methods and his purpose in the previous attack and declared that his church and ministry are dedicated from now on to the struggle for proper government in Cleveland, and invited all people interested in those aims to come to his church to hear him. Among other things Dr. Bustard said in his speech at the Auditorium are these: "A good many people seem to think we have a mushy-hearted old grandfather for God. Read your Bible. We've had too much love and mercy preached here. What this town needs is a little more hell and judgment." "A lot of people think political matters should not be discussed in the churches. And the trouble in a lot of churches is that the people go there and sing themselves to bliss—or blisters. Organized religion today lacks backbone. It has ossification of the brain on a lot of moral issues. When they come up organized religion maintains a diplomatic silence. But I challenge any man to prove to me that religion has no place in public life just as it has in private life. And my church is going to be a church with a civic consciousness." Spoken like a prophet of old! Some of his old-time friends, as they read this, will be likely to exclaim: "Bully for Billy!"

WORKING THE GOLDEN RULE

An ounce of practice is worth a pound of theory. One concrete instance of the real application of the Golden Rule to business is of greater value than scores of lectures by savants who would try to prove that Christ's ideals are not practical.

Arthur Nash, in a recent number of the American Magazine, tells of his experiment with a clothing business in Cincinnati. Wishing to play fair with his workers, he ventured at a time when business was none too good to put up wages to two and three times what the former owner had been paying. And he discovered to his delight that the increased production of his grateful employees so reduced manufacturing costs that he could easily compete with rivals who were holding their people down to starvation wages.

Goodwill in the employer soon showed itself in the employees. The day came when the high-wage men in his factory asked him to divide his profit-sharing bonus not by a percentage of wages, but according to hours worked, which of course gave equal shares to the less capable workers. At one time when work was slack the employees offered to lay off for four weeks so that the less fortunate idle workers in other factories might take their places.

There is a business "common-sense" which declares that the ideals of Jesus are not practical. That is purely a worldly wisdom. It knows mechanics far better than it knows men. Jesus understood men. He believed—yes, he knew—that they can be reached by kindness and fair play. He had no question of the working of the Golden Rule. Mr. Nash has found that Jesus is right, that unselfishness makes unselfishness in others. The organization of industry is not going to be right until a good many other men make the same discovery.

THE DEVIL'S WAY OF RAISING MONEY

Congressman Vincent M. Brennan, of the West Detroit district, recently made a bid for re-election by announcing his readiness to introduce into Congress a bill legalizing the manufacture and sale of full strength beer and light wines, placing on this liquor a four per cent tax, the proceeds of which should be used to finance a federal bonus for all ex-service men. He put out his suggestion in the hope of getting from the meeting of the American Legion assurance that such a plan "has the approval of the ex-soldiers." Of course they voted no such approval. No body of men who wanted to keep the respect of the country would do so. For the plan proposed is the devil's own way of raising money. He promised Jesus world dominion provided Jesus would compromise. So this congressman would offer men who fought for the honor of their country and the life of democracy money provided they would favor the virtual return of the saloon with all its evils. Nay, nay, brother, no honorable body could endorse such a proposal. But many of them will hereafter have an eye on the man who could hope so to bribe them.

"HOLD THE PHILIPPINES," SAYS WOOD

In their report to President Harding, Maj. Gen. Wood and W. Cameron Forbes urge that the Philippine Islands should remain in their present status until the people there have had time to absorb and thoroughly master the power already in their hands. They are convinced that for the United States to withdraw now would be disastrous for the Philippine people and dishonorable for the United States. They express fear that such withdrawal, under present conditions might leave the islands "a prey to any powerful nation coveting their rich soil and potential commercial advantages."

The people are reported as being happy, a reasonable number of officials are men of good character and ability, but there is a disquieting lack of confidence in the administration of justice and the people are not organized economically nor from the standpoint of national defense to maintain an independent government. The commissioners believe that a longer time is needed in order to make certain for their islands the kind of government the United States wishes to leave in them.

Perhaps it is no reflection on this report to say that it is about what has been expected from the time the commissioners were appointed. Both have had a past familiarity with the islands and are quite competent to make an intelligent investigation. Is there anything significant in the assertion that "we find everywhere among the Christian Filipinos the desire for independence generally under the protection of the United States. The non-Christians and Americans are for continuance of American control."

A Call To Courage

By J. Y. AITCHISON, General Director

GOD, and he alone, can lead Northern Baptists through the present crisis.

There is no relief except through his power. But our God is all-powerful. Our extremity is his opportunity. Our own wisdom, our own resources, are inadequate. The financial task we face is primarily spiritual. We can win the victory only through obedience to Jesus Christ, and we must win it. Let us recognize this fact. Let us move forward relying upon the promises of God. Then we cannot fail.

Every member of our churches should read "Half Way Through" which appeared in THE BAPTIST last week. It gives the facts concerning the financial situation. It also presents an explanation of the facts.

The table given below indicates that the New World Movement receipts for the first six months of the current fiscal year are $3,617,937 less than the amount required. As stated in "Half Way Through," the deficits reported from four national societies and the General Board of Promotion at the close of the year ending April 30, 1921, aggregated $2,500,000. Unless this year's receipts exceed last year's this deficit will be materially increased.

The following statement shows the financial condition of the national societies, boards and other organizations, participating in the New World Movement at the end of the first six months of the current fiscal year:

We call upon all our churches to face these facts with courage.

On the basis of the New World Movement pledges made previous to Nov. 16, 1921, the income for the year for all organizations participating in the New World Movement should approximate $12,500,000. The work has been launched and is being carried forward on the basis of these pledges.

A year ago the income for the first six months was nearly twice as much as for the same period this year. Immediate efforts must be put forth to secure full payment on pledges now due. Present world conditions summon Christian people to put first things first. The church must not fail to carry on her work.

We beseech pastors and church leaders in the light of these facts to summon all friends of the work to special prayer that God will lead us through this crisis. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; they shall walk and not faint."

1	2	3	4
Name of Organization	Required First 6 Months	Received First 6 Months	Balance Required For First 6 Months
A. B. F. M. S.....	$ 964,144	$ 437,214	$ 526,930
W. A. B. F. M. S.....	334,884	92,542	242,342
A. B. H. M. S.....	465,920	227,154	238,766
W. A. B. H. M. S.....	241,702	64,726	176,976
A. B. P. S.....	163,708	91,510	72,198
M. & M. B. B.....	145,550	121,858	23,692
Board of Education.....	100,000	18,475	81,525
Schools and Colleges.....	1,321,116 	388,816	932,300
State Conv. ....	792,812	626,515	166,297
Std. City Mis. Soc.....	277,745	275,450	2,295
Gen'l Bd. Pro.....	368,375	79,337	289,038
Other Organizations .....	1,074,044	208,466	865,578
	$6,250,000	$2,632,063	$3,617,937

*Operating Budget Only.

**This includes Endowment and Equipment Funds.

What Will Santa Claus Bring Them?

LAST year an appeal was made in our churches for a Christmas offering for the relief of the suffering people of Europe. Considering the shortness of time allowed the churches, the response was most generous. By vote of the Administrative Committee the General Board of Promotion is this year asking for a special offering from the Sunday schools. This offering should be made on Christmas Sunday. It will count for the church on the New World Movement Fund. The money should be sent in through the regular channels, designated as a Christmas gift. All sums received will be divided equally between the Home and Foreign Mission societies. So far as possible this money will be used for the benefit of the children of America and Europe who may be in need.

The Home Mission Society announces that money received from this special offering will be spent in the interest of work among the children touched by the Christian Centers in our great cities.

The Foreign Mission Society, in the following detailed statement, makes clear how its share will be spent:

1—Continued Support of War Orphans in France

Relief Director Rev. O. Brouillette in France has under his care the support of more than 800 French war orphans. A large part of the offering a year ago has been applied toward their support and similar appropriations must be made this year for the same purpose and would be taken from the relief contributions.

2—Maintenance of Foyer Work in the Devastated Region of France

Six foyers patterned after the idea of the Y. M. C. A. hut during the war have been erected by Mr. Brouil-lette from relief contributions a year ago and are now rendering valuable service to the inhabitants in the devastated areas during the period of rebuilding their homes and the recultivation of their farms. Various types of social service, entertainments and religious services are maintained in these six foyers and their continued maintenance must be provided out of similar relief contributions.

3—Food for Russia

The acute distress in Russia and the destitute condition of millions of people is sufficiently well known to Baptists. Through the American Relief Administration under the direction of Mr. Herbert Hoover the Foreign Mission Society is proposing to appropriate a substantial part of the Christmas Offering for the purchase of food drafts issued by the American Relief Administration.

(Continued on page 1427)

A Primer of Theology

By A. H. STRONG

VI. THE ATONEMENT.

WE have reached the point of view from which we must regard the Atonement. Let us strip the doctrine of all materialistic implications, and let us remember that God is essentially spirit. Apart from Christ, he has no form or body. As spirit, independent of space and time, God, with all his attributes of knowledge, love and power, can make himself manifest when and where he will. In Christ, the divine Being is present in every atom of the universe, in every pulsation of my body, in every exercise of my will, and in every movement of human history. The only qualification we have a right to make is this: the human will has granted to it a delegated power which can resist the divine will, and can use God's forces and impulses for the production of evil, as the motorman can direct, though he does not furnish, the force that propels his car. But Christ, as the life of the universe, is the life of humanity; so that the Redeemer is close at hand to redeem, by sharing with the sinner his guilt and misery, and by turning the sinner's enmity into love. There is a natural union of Christ with all humanity, which precedes and prepares the way for his union with all believers. Whatever is due to the sinner falls upon Christ, to whom he is joined by a tie of life so close as to free it from all charge of book-keeping or external transfer. When we give ourselves to Christ, and Christ gives himself to us, not only do all our needs become his, but also all his resources become ours. Since Christ is God, the whole Godhead died for me on the cross, as absolutely as if I were the only being to be saved. In receiving Christ, I make the whole Godhead my own, and can say: "Thou art my God." (Ps. 31:14). With these preliminary remarks, let us see what union with Christ implies in the way of atonement and of salvation. I sum it all up in saying that it implies giving and taking, on the part of God, and also giving and taking on the part of the believer.

When God interpenetrates our life with his own in Christ, he gives his all to us. The infinite One so joins us to himself, that all things become ours (1 Cor. 3:22), that is, "all godliness" (2 Pet. 1:13) "shall be things that pertain unto life and added unto us," if we "seek first his kingdom and his righteousness" (Matt. 6:33). In Christ, God gives himself to us, more fully than any earthly husband gives himself to his wife; endowing us with all his earthly and heavenly goods, and cleaving to us in a union which death cannot part. But in Christ, God takes, as well as gives. Think what is meant by love, and you will perceive that God must be an atoning Savior. For love not only gives its all to the object of its affection, but it so identifies itself with that object, as to share all its burdens and sorrows and sins. The whole weight of our guilt and penalty falls upon him who is our life, and he bears all for us. "Blessed be the Lord God who daily beareth our burden," says the Psalmist (Ps. 68:19). "In all their affliction he was afflicted," says Isaiah (63:9). But the New Testament makes this more plain, when it tells us of the Lamb of God, who takes, and so "takes away, the sins of the world" (John 1:29). Love not only gives, but also takes; gives all its own good, and takes all the other's guilt and pain and need. This is the Christian doctrine of the Atonement. God was in Christ, reconciling himself to the world, and the world to himself. "Him who knew no sin he made to be sin on our behalf, that we might become the righteousness of God in him" (2 Cor. 5:21). If critics had only seen the atonement as a fact of life, all their objections to its vicarious element, as a matter of book-keeping, would have vanished. If Christ is our life, if all we have and are is derived from him, and if he is God manifest in the flesh, but essentially independent of space and time, then the Atonement is a biological necessity.

But I have not yet exhausted the meaning of the Cross. The salvation of man as well as the suffering of God was "finished" there. The believer gives and takes, as well as his Savior. The whole appropriation of salvation by the redeemed was assured and condensed in that one act of God's righteousness. The Father saw our faith as a result of his work on our behalf. Predestination and human reception of salvation were joined together in one timeless event, that left no room for contradiction between them. And the faith that appropriates what Christ is and what Christ has done, is a giving as well as a taking, and a taking as well as a giving. We give all to Christ, in a complete consecration, and we take all from him, by an appropriating faith. So our salvation is delivered from the charge of an unmoral reliance upon the work of another, by showing itself to be the surrender of our very life to him who is the only source of moral life, to be moulded and fashioned into his likeness. So our salvation is relieved of the charge that it makes us the slaves of another will, by showing that it is the only way to make us free; since in union with Christ we receive the very fullness of God to energize and gladden us. By union with Christ, the principle of the atonement, in all its giving and taking, is inwrought into our hearts and lives, so that we, like Paul, "fill up that which is behind of the sufferings of Christ, for his body's sake, which is the church" (Col. 1:24).

The necessity of the atonement, however, cannot be fully appreciated, until we see its relation to the holiness of God. "It must needs be that Christ should suffer," said our Lord (Luke 24:26); and Paul tells us why Christ's suffering was necessary. It was in order "that God might himself be just," while at the same time he might be "the justifier of him that hath faith in Jesus" (Rom. 3:26). Let me repeat in this connection what I have already said. The fundamental attribute of God is holiness, of which justice or righteousness are only forms of manifestation. Holiness is not self-communicating love, but rather, self-affirming righteousness. Holiness limits and conditions love, for love can will happiness, only as happiness results from or consists with righteousness, that is, with conformity to God. All nonconformity to God in moral relations is sin; and sin is hateful in God's sight, for it is the enemy and destroyer of all purity and peace. He therefore attaches suffering to sin, as its proper penalty; though he himself shares in that suffering, because he is the Creator and the life of the sinner. Christ's suffering, during his earthly life and on the cross, was simply the expression of the age-long suffering of God; indeed, those few hours of agony could not of themselves have redeemed the race, if they had not been the revelation of an eternal fact in the being of God. Christ accomplishes his atonement through the solidarity of the race, of which he is the life, and so, is its representative and surety, justly yet voluntarily bearing its guilt and shame and condemnation as his own (Syst. Theol. 2:761). Christ, therefore, as incarnate, rather revealed the atonement, than made it. The historical work of atonement was finished upon the cross; but that historical work only revealed to men the atonement made both before and after by the extramundane Logos. The eternal Love of God, suffering the necessary re-acton of his Holiness against the sin of his creatures and with a view to their salvation,—this is the essence of the atonement. God has laid upon Christ the iniquity of us all, and with his stripes we are healed (Is. 53:5,6); but this is no external transfer of guilt and penalty, but the voluntary suffering of God himself in the person of his Son.

Christ must be an atoning, in order that he may be a cleansing Savior. Christianity, indeed, is summed up in the two facts: Christ for us, and Christ in us—Christ for us upon the cross, revealing the eternal opposition of holiness to sin, and yet, through God's eternal suffering for sin, making objective atonement for us; and Christ in us by his Spirit, renewing in us the lost image of God, and abiding in us as the all-sufficient source of purity and power (Miscellanies 1:53,54). Here we have the two foci of the Christian ellipse: given either one, with the smallest fraction of the curve, and you can describe the whole scheme of doctrine. Let me illustrate these two truths from our American geography. We have two great lakes, Erie and Ontario, and these are connected by the Niagara River, through which Erie pours its waters into Ontario. The whole Christian church throughout the ages has been called the overflow of Jesus Christ, who is infinitely greater than it. Let Lake Erie be the symbol of Christ, the preëxistent Logos, God revealed in the universe. Let Niagara River be to us the picture of this same Christ, now confined to the narrow channel of his manifestation in the flesh, but within those limits showing the same eastward current and downward gravitation which men perceived so imperfectly before. The tremendous cataract, with its waters plunging into the abyss and shaking the very earth, is the suffering and death of the Son of God, which for the first time make palpable to human hearts the forces of righteousness and love operative in the divine nature from the beginning. The law of universal life has been made manifest; now it is seen that justice and judgment are the foundations of God's throne; that God's righteousness everywhere and always makes penalty to follow sin; that the love which creates and upholds sinners must itself be numbered with the transgressors and must bear their iniquities. Niagara has demonstrated the gravitation of Lake Erie. For from Niagara there widens out another peaceful lake. Ontario is the offspring and likeness of Erie. So redeemed humanity is the overflow of Jesus Christ; but only of Jesus Christ after he has passed through the measureless self-

---

HE was better to me than all my hopes, and better than all my fears.

He made a road of my broken works and a rainbow of my tears.

The billows that guarded my seagirt path but carried my Lord on their crest;

When I dwell on the day of my wilderness march I can lean on his love for a rest.

—ANNA SHIPTON.

---

abandonment of his earthly life and of his tragic death on Calvary. As the waters of Lake Ontario are ever fed by Niagara, so the church draws its life from the cross. And Christ's purpose is, not that we should repeat Calvary, for that we can never do, but that we should reflect in ourselves that same onward movement and gravitation toward self-sacrifice which he has revealed as characterizing the very life of God.

I have said that there are two foci of the Christian ellipse: Christ for us, who redeemed us from the curse of the law by being made a curse for us, and Christ in us, the hope of glory, whom the apostle Paul calls "the mystery of the gospel" (Syst. Theol. 3:804, 805). The second of these still waits for my illustration. We need Christ in us, as well as Christ for us. How shall I, how shall society, find purification and healing within? Let me answer by reminding you of what they did at Chicago. In all the world there was no river more stagnant and fetid than was Chicago River. Its sluggish stream received the sweepings of the watercraft and the offal of the city, and there was no current to carry the detritus away. There it settled, and bred miasma and fever. At last it was suggested that by cutting through the low ridge between the city and the Desplaines River, the current could be set running in the opposite direction, and drainage could be secured into the Illinois River and the great Mississippi. At a cost of fifteen millions of dollars the cut was made; and now all the water of Lake Michigan can be relied upon to cleanse that turbid stream. What Chicago River could never do for itself, the great Lake now does for it. So no human soul can purge itself of its sin; and what the individual cannot do, humanity at large is powerless to accomplish. Sin has dominion over us, and we are foul to the very depths of our being, until with the help of God we break through the barrier of our self-will, and let the floods of Christ's purifying life flow into us. Then, in an hour, more is done to renew, than all our efforts for years had effected. Thus humanity is saved, individual by individual, not by philosophy, or philanthropy, or self-development, or self-reformation, but simply by being filled, in Christ, with all the fullness of God (Syst. Theol. 3:804, 805; Misc. 1:191-195).

In the Cross of Christ, therefore, we see God's whole revelation to men summed up, and thrust upon us for our reception or rejection. In that Cross are condensed and expressed his character of holiness and of love, his judgment upon sin and his provision for the salvation of the sinner, his suffering in and with his creatures and his sacrificial offering in their behalf. When God, in the person of his Son, dies of a broken heart for me, a sinner, I feel his appeal to my own heart unspeakably affecting. If I resist that appeal, I show myself to be the chief of sinners, and to deserve nothing but death. For Christ's Cross reveals not only the greatness of our sin and the greatness of God's love, but it opens to us the whole meaning of human history, the whole secret of the universe, the whole purpose of God when he laid the floor of the firmament with its mosaic of constellations, and bade the curtain of night and chaos to rise at the creation (John 3:16; 16:9; Eph. 1:10). Well may the apostle Paul say: "God forbid that I should glory, save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Gal. 6:14).

Former Devil Worshipers Celebrate Silver Wedding

Rev. and Mrs. Wm. Pettigrew receive as their gift "a movement toward Christianity en masse." For eighteen months the one topic of conversation in the villages is Christianity.

IT ISN'T every silver wedding that is a matter of consuming interest to some 20,000 persons or more. But when the Rev. William Pettigrew and his wife celebrated theirs on November 13, in Kangpokpi, Manipur, Assam, there was rejoicing all through the formerly head-hunting, devil-worshipping tribe of the Tangkhul Nagas. During that whole quarter of a century, except for their furloughs, Mr. and Mrs. Pettigrew had worked among this tribe, the only white people the Tangkhul Nagas had ever seen, serving them in the capacity of preachers, doctors, educators, translators, economists and parents-at-large.

So it isn't surprising that their silver wedding anniversary was marked by the greatest gift in the world,—a "movement toward Christianity, en masse," as Mr. Pettigrew characterizes it. The following extracts from a very interesting letter written recently by the missionary tells the story:

"Strange to say, this movement toward Christianity en masse, is due, as far as we can make out, to the issue of an order by the chief and elders of the most important village in this tribe, Ukhul, our old mission station. Of course, the preparation of the soil in the sowing of the seed of the Gospel for many years previous to this made ready the hearts of many, and gave them the opportunity they needed to throw off the shackles of demon worship which the missionary and his workers had preached against incessantly. But the order issued by the heathen chief and his elders discredited the most important feast of the tribe, the one that most touches the hearts of the people.

"This feast had to do with the removal of the spirits of the departed, and was carried on with great gusto and enthusiasm. From the outward appearance of the ceremonies in connection with it, the enthusiasm was not centered around the removal of the spirits so much as around the slaughter of animals, chickens, dogs, pigs and cattle for feasting purposes, as well as around the large quantities of "zu" (rice beer) drunk. Many families were impoverished through the expense incurred.

"Now has come the order to abandon this feast and refrain from any ceremony of this nature. The violation of the order is to be punished with the heaviest fine that any Tangkhul chief has ever attempted to enforce in any village, a matter of over 600 rupees for each delinquent. The most astonishing thing about this incident is the fact that the very chief who brought it about is now the most bitter enemy of the Christians, especially those of his own village, and the latest news is that he is trying to rescind his order, and bring the old regime back again. We have hopes that he will be defeated in this.

"But at any rate no sooner was this order given than the people of Ukhul began to think for themselves, and argue that if this, the most crucial of their beliefs, could be dismissed by the imposition of a fine, however large, there must be something radically wrong in their so-called religion. They concluded that the teaching they had heard of for years, believed in by a small body of their village people, must have something in it worth considering. In April, 1920, over forty were baptized by the pastor of the small church organized in 1902. Since then about two-thirds of that village, in other words about 115 houses, with nearly 600 souls, have come forward as enquirers, and will soon be baptized if they remain faithful.

"The villages around this important center were not long in hearing of the movement. It is no exaggeration to state that for the past eighteen months the one topic among all the villages of the tribe is Christianity. Owing to signs of greater and more intensive opposition to the truth, God is surely using this as a means of creating more and more interest in Him. Since our tour in those mountains, three large and important villages have come over entirely to Christianity, and quite a number have groups of believers forming half or three-fourths of the village community. We pray that we may all stand firm in the faith.

"Up to date we have a list of over 2,000 converts for the past year, and if we count in the church members, now numbering nearly 1000, and also the converts on the western hills among another tribe, the Thado Kuki, our Christian community in this native state of Manipur must number now nearly 3500."

What Will Santa Claus Bring Them?

(Continued from page 1424)

These are guaranteed by the Administration, furnish the best, safest and most reliable method of bringing food to the starving multitudes. Secretary Franklin is now in correspondence with the Administration regarding this and it is possible, subject to Dr. Franklin's decision, that fully one-half of the Christmas offering may be applied toward this emergency.

4—Freight Transportation and Baling Expenses in the Campaign to "Fill a Ship in Fellowship"

Approximately 4000 churches forwarded gifts of clothing and other supplies for our relief ship. More than 10,000 individual parcels, bags, cases, boxes and barrels were received at our warehouse. In response to our suggestion a large majority of churches forwarded remittances of 5 cents per pound to cover the cost of baling and freight. The expense has proved to be larger than we anticipated because we were obliged to engage a baling company to assist in the baling of freight shipments as the number of packages and the consequent congestion at our own warehouse became so great as to make it impossible for us to do all of the baling ourselves. Furthermore, a number of churches and individuals forgot to send their 5 cents per pound remittances. Since this entire enterprise was a campaign for European relief a part of the Christmas offering will be applied for this purpose.

5—Expenses of distribution of supplies in Poland, Latvia, Austria, Germany, Esthonia, Lithuania and Czecho-Slovakia.

Our churches will naturally not expect the Foreign Mission Society to use regular missionary funds to meet the slight distribution expenses upon arrival of the shipment of supplies in the various European countries unless absolutely necessary and accordingly a part of the Christmas offering will be devoted to meet such slight distribution expense in Europe as may be required. Most of this clothing will be distributed through the local Baptist churches and the expense ought not to involve more than the transfer from the ports of entry to the various churches.

Ready for the Big Push in Stewardship

Note: The material is presented in this joint statement in order that the constituency may follow either the plan of "The Baptist League of Christian Stewards" or the plan of "The Baptist Tithers' League."

EXPLANATORY NOTE

For a number of years the Baptist Tithers' League has been a regular department of the Baptist Young People's Union of America. The Union has also the Bible Readers' League and Life Service League as regular departments. A great many young people are not ready to sign an all-inclusive stewardship pledge, but they will take one step at a time. When they have taken these successive steps, they have reached intelligently what the all-inclusive pledge calls for. Wherever our young people can sign the general stewardship pledge, we urge them to do so.

"The Baptist League of Christian Stewards" is being promoted by the General Board of Promotion of the Northern Baptist Convention. The general stewardship pledge used calls for the giving of one-tenth as a minimum, but also includes the stewardship of time, talents, etc. This form of pledge should reach a great many of the older membership of the churches.

It is evident that there is a great field of activity with these ideas understood. These two departments are working in hearty accord. It is in fact one program with these two angles of approach. We urge co-operation everywhere by all concerned looking forward to the largest possible success.

AN OPEN LETTER TO BAPTIST YOUNG PEOPLE

The great denomination of which we are a part and of which we are justly proud, is just now girding itself for a great task in which we must have a large part. The achievement of raising more than fifty millions of dollars was a great one, but we set out for one hundred. When our nation and civilization were in peril, our nation called us to the colors, and we responded. Some of our comrades lie beneath little crosses in yonder battlefield. They gave to the uttermost. Now you are called to the colors. Your response must be whole-hearted and to the last measure of devotion.

1. The needs of our great societies and missionary organizations are inexpressably great. They are our representatives. They stand between us and our devoted missionaries far out on the battle line. Perhaps we have been waiting for the financial depression to pass. But our societies cannot wait. If you have made a pledge to the New World Movement, and are behind in payments, pay up now! Speak to your friends about it. Perhaps you could make a thank offering in cash, with the request to your church treasurer that it be forwarded at once.

2. The task of raising thirty millions of dollars in cash and in pledges between now and April 30, 1922, is almost an impossible one. But, remember, the soldier who has responded to the call of his country does not stop to count the cost. Many of our Baptist young people are blessed with good positions and splendid salaries. Let us in the strength of our youth stand up and be counted! Make a pledge yourself. Take it up with individual members in your society. Tell them that we simply cannot fail the Master now. Make it a matter of earnest prayer. Let the giving of the young people of your church stand out as a mighty challenge to the older members. Offer your services to your pastor and church for clerical and other help. Remember, the Master's command is to GO!

3. The education of our Baptist people to the place where they will give an adequate account of their stewardship is one of the big problems of the hour. Numbers of our people have been members of the church a long time, but we have not trained them. We call you to the very front line in this campaign. On this page you will note available materials. Send at once for a supply for immediate use. All the agencies promoting stewardship within the Northern Baptist Convention period shall have ended, and that is the way of Christian Stewardship.

The degree of our success in securing the adoption of a stewardship program that starts with the payment of a tenth of one's income into the Lord's treasury will be the measure of our guarantee that the $100,000,000 will be raised, and our ground of assurance that we shall carry on after the New World Movement period has ended.

Shall we not all by our hearty personal co-operation in this Christian Stewardship Movement insure the complete success of our larger Kingdom program?

GILBERT N. BRINK, for the National Committee on Stewardship.

STEWARDSHIP SPECIAL

We (The Stewardship Department of the General Board of Promotion and the Baptist Tithers' League of the Baptist Young People's Union of America) are now ready for the big push in stewardship activities. The following free literature is now available from the Literature Department of the General Board of Promotion, 276 Fifth Avenue, New York City, 125 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, and 313 West Third Street, Los Angeles, Cal.

1. "Does a Tenth Belong to God?"
2. "Thanksgiving Ann."
3. "Embezzlement"—Poteat.
4. "Prosperity Giving"—Agar.
5. "Being Just With God."
6. "Story of the Geneva Church." (How it was done.)
7. "The Experiences of Three Baptist Churches."
8. "Religion an Expensive Luxury."
9. "Sacrificial Giving."
10. Membership Application Blanks for "The Baptist League of Christian Stewards."

Send at once for sufficient quantities of any two leaflets to supply one for each family of your church and congregation. Samples of all leaflets will be included with first order.

Special Books

"Victory of Mary Christopher," 50 cents; "The Withered Fig Tree," $1.00; "The New Christian," 50 cents, may be ordered from the American Baptist Publication Society, 1701 Chestnut Street, Philadelphia, Pa., or any branch house.

BAPTIST TITHERS' LEAGUE

The following free literature is now available from the Baptist Tithers' League of the Baptist Young People's Union of America, 125 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Illinois, or 408 Humboldt Bank Building, San Francisco, California:

1. "How to Tithe and Why."
2. "Proportionate Giving."
3. "That Tithing Sermon."
4. "Talks With Money."
5. "Is Tithing Worth While?"
6. "Is the Tithe a Debt?"
7. "Reasons for Tithing."
8. "What We Owe and How to Pay It."
9. "Obedience the Master's Test."
10. Membership Application Blanks for "Baptist Tithers' League."

Send at once for sufficient of any two leaflets to supply one for each family of your church and congregation, stating whether or not it is your first order. Presidents of Young People's Societies may order any two in sufficient quantities to furnish one for each member of the Society.

Steps in Stewardship

The earth did not belong to my ancestors; they could not give it to me.

It will not belong to my children; I cannot bequeath it to them.

It does belong to God; He entrusts a share of its care to me. I am His steward.

Stewards are not required to be wealthy or brilliant; but they are required to be faithful.

The tithe is an acknowledgement that all I have belongs to God. I am His debtor. The tithe is not a free-will offering. It is a debt to God for His work. To withhold it is to rob God. By carefully observing stewardship in financial matters, I become a faithful steward of God's property. Stewardship includes the use of all talents for God.

One generation of Christians influences the coming generations and the number of Christian servants and Christian workers will increase.

One-tenth of the income received by each one hundred Christians, will equip for Christian service and adequately maintain at least ten who are called to devote all their time to God's service. —Exchange.

are together promoting this program. We simply cannot succeed without you. In this great forward step we should have a second slogan, "Together."

Affectionately yours,

